Near Winchester, July 20. Breckinridge divided his force at Berryville last night, sending Early to Winchester and the other division toward Millwood. I attacked and defeated Early to-day in front of Winchester, killing and wounding over 300 officers and men, and capturing four cannon, several hundred small arms and about 200 prisoners.

The Herald's Washington dispatch says the Secretary of State has determined to make a formal demand upon the British Government for the surrender of the pirate Semmes.

The World's Washington dispatch says the rebel loss in the recent raid will amount to 2000. Montgomery county, Md., is overrun with rebel stragglers. It is reported that the rebels did not go into the Shenandoah valley, but took the route this side of the Blue Ridge to Richmond.

Charleston is being vigorously shelled. Fort Sumpter has been subject to a very heavy fire from Morris Island.

All the troops had returned from the recent expedition.

Washington, July 24. The Government has received dispatches from Gen. Sherman announcing that on Friday the rebels, under Gen. Hood, massed a heavy force against his left wing, consisting of McPherson's division, composed of Logan's and Blair's corps, and made a desperate attack, gaining a temporary advantage. The enemy, after terrific fighting, in which a number of charges were made by both sides, were repulsed with much slaughter and driven into their fortifications.

Major General McPherson, during the battle, became separated from his staff and was killed by sharpshooters firing from an ambuscade.

The loss of Gen. McPherson is deeply deplored by the Government, and will fill the hearts of all loyalists with sadness and gloom.

After Gen. McPherson's death Gen. Logan assumed command of his grand division.

A later dispatch states that our forces had obtained possession of the elevated ground on the northeast of the town, and that siege guns had been mounted which command the place; also that the rebels were burning their stores preparatory to a retrograde movement.

Our troops buried on Saturday 1000 rebels who were left on the field within our lines, besides which the rebels buried many of their own dead near their works. It is estimated that their killed and wounded on Friday exceeded 6000. Our loss reached about 2500 killed and wounded.

New York, July 25. The Herald's Nashville dispatch of the 24th says Hood has been reinforced from Charleston and elsewhere. There is a strong belief that the rebels cannot get away from Atlanta.

CALL FOR 500,000 MEN.

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas, By an act approved July 4th, 1864, it is provided that the President of the United States may call for any number of men as volunteers, for the respective terms of one, two or three years for military service, and that in case the quota or any part thereof of any town, township, ward of a city, precinct or election district, or of a county not so sub-divided, shall not be filled, within fifty days after such call, the President shall immediately order a draft for one year, to fill such quota, or any part thereof which may be unfilled, and

Whereas, The new enrollment heretofore ordered is so far completed as that the aforementioned act may not be put in operation for recruiting and keeping up the strength of the armies in the field, for garrisons and such military operations as may be required for the purpose of suppressing the rebellion, and restoring the authority of the United States in the insurgent States,

Now, therefore, I, Abraham Lincoln, President of the United States, do issue this my call for five hundred thousand volunteers for military service, provided nevertheless that all credits which may be established under section eight of aforesaid act, on account of persons who have entered the naval service during the present rebellion, and by credits for men furnished to military service in excess of calls heretofore made for volunteers will be accepted under the call for one, two or three years as they may elect, and will be entitled to the bounty provided by law for the period of service for which they enlist, and I hereby proclaim, order and direct that immediately after the fifth of September, being fifty days from the date of this call, a draft for troops to serve for one year shall be held in every town, township, ward of a city, precinct, election district, or a county not so sub-divided, to fill the quota which shall be assigned to it under this call, or any part thereof which may be unfilled by volunteers on the said fifth day of September, 1864. [illegible]

Abraham Lincoln.

Another Sign Appearing.—In enumerating the characteristics of the last days, our Savior says "there shall be famines." It has been announced by the public prints, that, in Hungary, the harvest has failed for the last two years. The plains of the Theis, which, from their extreme fertility, have been called the granary of Hungary, are now little better than a desert. The numerous flocks and herds which compose the wealth of this pastoral people have perished. Townships which formerly possessed from 20,000 to 30,000 head of cattle, now have not 1,000 left. Many farmers, for want of fodder, have been obliged to slaughter their oxen, sheep and pigs, and good horses have been sold for 2f. or 3f. each. The excessive severity of the winter and sickness have further aggravated the sufferings of the people. At this moment starving multitudes are wandering about the country, men, women and children, pale and emaciated, to an extent fearful to behold.

Hog Cholera in England.—For several months past, says the Scottish Farmer, pigs have died in large numbers in various counties in England. The disease is the hog cholera so commonly prevalent in Ireland and America; though there appears to be a material difference in its form in different parts of the country. The inspectors of meat in the city of London have seized a very large number of carcasses, which were spotted throughout with extravasated blood. The skin was marked like the human skin in a case of typhus; the subcutaneous fat has been much discolored by patches of extravasated blood, varying in size from a pin's head to a crownpiece. The muscles have been similarly discolored, but greater ravages by blood transudations could be discovered in the heart, lungs and kidneys. Cleanliness and easily digested food constitute the best preventives.

The Drouth in Western Massachusetts.—The drought is still upon us, and its destructive effects are to be seen on every hand. Fields are drying up, crops of every kind are suffering severely, and speedy rain will save them only partially. The damage to crops can hardly be estimated, but it must be immense. The crop of potatoes will not be half an average one, and the second crop of grass will be exceedingly small. It is admitted by every one that this drouth is more severe than we ever before had in this region. Streams are drying up to the detriment of manufacturing interests, and the cry on every hand is for speedy and copious rain.—Northampton Gazette.

The Total Public Debt.—According to an official statement, the total public debt on the 5th of July was seventeen hundred and ninety-two millions, eight hundred and sixty-seven thousand and forty dollars and fifty-seven cents, against seventeen hundred and forty millions, thirty-six thousand, six hundred and eigty-nine dollars and fifty-three cents on the 28th of June, which shows an increase of fifty-two millions, eight hundred and thirty thousand, three hundred and fifty-one dollars and four cents, for week ending 5th instant. This important difference is mainly caused by requisitions made on the department for money to pay the troops on the first of the month.

Prices in the Confederacy.—The rebel Commissioners of Appraisement for the State of Virginia, after consultation, as they say, with prominent farmers, and the leading millers and business men of Richmond, have agreed upon a new schedule of prices, among which are the following:

"Wheat, $30 per bushel; flour, $150 a $168 per barrel; corn, $24 per bushel; corn meal, $25 50 per bushel; bacon, hog round, $5 per pound; lard, $5 per pound; peas and beans, $30 per bushel; Irish potatoes, $10 per bushel; beef cattle, $40 a $50 per one hundred pounds gross; sorghum molasses, $20 per gallon."

Examine Them.—A recent emission of spurious fifty-cent notes (the new plate) has been put in circulation. They can be readily detected by observing the following marks; They are an eighth of an inch shorter than the genuine; the words "fifty cents," which surmount the head of Washington, are very pale and indistinct in the counterfeit, while the letters are very black and distinct in the genuine. The bronze circle around the head in the counterfeit can hardly be seen, while the genuine is a deep color. The spurious, though indistinct in all its outlines, is darker than the original.—Philadelphia North American.

What the Rebel Pirates have Done.—The two rebel pirates, the Alabama and Florida, with their tenders, have succeeded in reducing our commercial marine nearly three-quarters within three years. In 1860 the total tonnage of the United States, exclusive of whaling and steam tonnage, was 5,219,181 tons. In 1864 it is in the neighborhood or 1,674,516 tons. That is, we have lost in four years, 3,544,566 tons—not of course by captures alone, but by the transfer of American vessels to foreign flags.

Defeat of the English in New Zealand.—The war in New Zealand is beginning to attract attention and excite uneasiness in England. The British troops have sustained a severe defeat, which presents some ominous features, and has given rise to curious surmises. On the 29th April Gen. Cameron attacked unsuccessfully a strong position held by the natives.

☞ It is stated that the rebels have carried off the railroad iron on the track of Manassas Railroad from the junction of that road with the Orange and Alexandria Railroad clear to Strasburg. The Warrenton branch of the Orange and Alexandria Railroad has been torn up, and the iron sent to Richmond.—Boston Journal.

ITEMS.

☞ The directors of the Sixth Avenue railroad, New York, have given orders that colored people shall hereafter be allowed to ride in all the cars of that company. There is now no railroad left in that city from which persons are excluded on account of their color.

☞ Flour rose in price in Washington last week to $20, and other necessaries of life in the same proportion. The markets were nearly destitute of provisions, owing to the devastation of the country northward.

☞ The loss by the great conflagration which has been raging in the lumber country, in the northern part of Wisconsin, will amount to $150,000. In many instances whole villages were destroyed.

☞ The rebels are about to recognize Maximilian the First. A letter intercepted by some of Sherman's soldiers states, apparently upon good authority, that representatives will shortly leave Richmond for Mexico.

☞ The Sultan has appointed two Christians members of the Grand Council, and others have been promoted to high official positions. This liberal tendency on his part is a mark of progress in Turkey.

☞ Miss Lucy Sinclair, belonging in Stratham, Mass., died in Lowell on Tuesday of convulsions caused by drinking too freely of cold water and bathing while in a state of perspiration. She was twenty-two years of age.

☞ At the grand reviews and parades of the French troops, two cries are invariably heard in the ranks: "Long live the Emperor," and "Down with England!" These cries are heard across the channel.

☞ It is proposed to erect a suspension-bridge over the straits of Messina to unite Sicily with the main land. The chains are to be of cast steel, and strong enough to support several railway trains.

☞ The rush of emigrants to New York is unparalled. Within twenty-four hours, ending at noon June 22d, five vessels came in, bringing 3234 passengers, all from Liverpool.

☞ There are now about 140,000 sick and wounded soldiers in the hospitals throughout the country. This includes all those in camp hospitals, of which there are about fifty thousand.

☞ The laborers on the wharves at Boston demand $4 a day, and those working for stevedors fifty cents an hour.

☞ The Crystal Palace at Sydenham has now been open ten years, during which time it has been visited by 15,000,000 people.

☞ Great preparations are being made for cotton culture in Mexico, Central America and the Sandwich Islands.

☞ The city of Atlanta contains about 20,000 inhabitants, 5000 having been added, by refugees and officials since the war began.

☞ The Illinois farmers are offering three dollars a day for harvest hands and can find no takers.

☞ The St. Louis papers report a severe drought in Missouri.

☞ No fewer than 40,000 Irishwomen are at this moment wandering outcasts in New York.

☞ Garibaldi has been elected Grand Master of the Freemasons in Italy.

☞ Kossuth's wife is suffering from a cancer. [illegible]

Meeting of the Advent Christian Association.

The 6th annual meeting of this Society will be held at Wilbraham Grove, commencing at 4 o'clock P. M., Tuesday, Aug. 23d, 1864.

A full representation from all churches co-operating with this Society, and a full attendance of preachers thus co-operating is desirable at this meeting. Questions too important to admit of neglect or indifference on the part of the churches scattered abroad, or of the ministry, will come before this meeting. Does the Constitution require amendment? Shall there be any change in the editorial management of the Crisis? To whom as officers of the Society shall we intrust the funds and various interests of the same for the coming year? These, among many others that will arise, are questions to be decided at this meeting. Let no trifling pecuniary consideration, nor loss of time, prevent a general gathering of the friends of this Association. Each church (i. e., society of believers in Jesus Christ) co-operating, is entitled to one delegate, and one additional delegate for every fifty members above the number of twenty-five members.

Remember ☞ That all delegates sent by churches to the Advent Christian Association must be furnished with written credentials, or forfeit their right to membership. ☜

H. F. Carpenter, Clerk.

Rutland, Vt., July 7th, 1864.

Meeting of the Board.

The Board of the Advent Christian Association will meet at Wilbraham Grove, Tuesday, Aug. 23d, 1864, at 9 o'clock, A. M. Punctual attendance requested. H. F. Carpenter, Clerk.

Wisconsin Annual Conference.

The "Advent Christian Conference" will hold its yearly session in connection with the Wisconsin Campmeeting, at Okee, Columbia Co., Wis., twenty miles north west from Madison, by the way of Sodi, beginning September 11th, 1864.

Let every church send delegates, and every minister be in attendance if possible; otherwise be sure to report by letter. Churches and ministers who have not yet united, should be sure to do so this year, that we may move in order and harmony, and consequently with greater strength for good. Delegates should bring letters of appointment from churches, and ministers with whom we are not acquainted should bring letters of commendation.

Letters may be sent to me at Baraboo, Sauk Co., Wis. W. Sheldon, Secretary of Conf.

THE CONSTITUTION

Of the Advent Christian Association as now revised and amended.

Art. I. This Society shall be known by the name of the Advent Christian Association.

Art. II. The objects of this Society shall be the promulgation of Bible truth and the promotion of vital piety by the formation of a Christian Publication Society for the issue of books, tracts and periodicals.

Art. III. The officers of this Society shall be a President, Vice-President, Secretary, Treasurer and nine Directors, who, together with the Editor or Editors, shall constitute a Board of Managers.

Art. IV. The members of this Society shall consist of all pastors and evangelists co-operating, and of delegates from churches* also co-operating, and of all officers of this Association. Each church shall be allowed one delegate and one additional delegate for every fifty members above the number of twenty-five members.

Art. V. The duties of the officers shall be the same as are usually performed by such officers. And the Board of Managers shall by means of Committees whom they shall appoint provide for the discharge of the duties indicated in the second article of this Constitution. A majority of the Board at any meeting duly notified and two-thirds present at any time without notice, shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business. The Board shall also fill vacancies occurring until the next annual meeting of the Society. The Board shall make annual reports of all funds received and disbursed, of business transacted, and of the condition of the various interests of the Society. The Board shall be chosen by ballot at the annual meeting of the Society.

Art. VI. The annual meeting of the Society shall be held at such time and place as shall be declared by adjournment of the Society, or appointed by the Board. Special meetings may be called by the Society, by public notice given at least three weeks previously, at the request of ten members, either preachers or delegates from the separate churches.

Art. VII. This Constitution may be amended by a majority at any regular meeting, when two months' notice of the proposed amendment has been given, or without such notice, by two-thirds of the members present at any annual meeting.

Art. VIII. The Editor or Editors of the World's Crisis shall be chosen by ballot at the annual meeting of the Advent Christian Association, or at any special meeting called for that purpose, provided six weeks' notice be given of the same through the columns of the Crisis.

Proposed amendment for Art. IV. now on the table:—"And each church living at such a distance that they cannot conveniently be represented by a delegate from among themselves, may note by written communication to the Secretary, or may select as their proxy any person whom they may designate, whether he reside among them or not."

Note. A church is defined in the words of Wesley, "A Society of believers in Jesus Christ."

Campmeeting.

There will be a campmeeting in Wolcott, Ct., commencing Sept. 5th, and continuing through the week and over the following Sabbath, on land owned by Bro. Hector Smith. This meeting will be in a beautiful grove near the highway, with an excellent spring of water on the ground, and with every other convenience desirable to make it an object for the brethren and sisters to come.

This is an entirely new field, and hopes are entertained that both preachers and brethren and sisters will come filled with faith that God will bless the effort to the saving of some. Bro. Smith and wife have stood almost alone in this place for twenty years witnesses to the truth of the Savior's speedy coming, and now ask the co-operation of the brethren while he makes this effort to benefit his fellow men.

We hope there will be a general rally of all the brethren and sisters from the surrounding towns. Come bringing your tents, and stay through the meeting. Brethren coming by Railroad east or west, will stop at Bristol. This is on the Hartford, Providence, and Fishkill R. R., where teams will be in readiness to carry passengers to the ground. Those coming on the Canal Road will stop at Southington, where they will find conveyance. Other arrangements noticed hereafter.

For the Brethren, Ralph Williams.

Campmeeting.

There will be a campmeeting in Savoy, commencing Aug. 29th, and continuing one week, on the old battle ground at Bro. Noah Mirick's. Horse keeping will be furnished by Bro. Mirick. There will be a victualing tent on the ground, where food can be had by the week or day, or single meal, or otherwise. As cotton cloth is so high, we do not expect brethren can get tents unless they have old ones. If you have tents, bring them; but come well provided with buffalos, quilts and blankets, and a place will be provided to spread them under shelter.

Come, brethren, let there be a general rally. Come with warm hearts, settle all difficulties, banish all hardness. Our campmeetings are almost done. Soon notice will be given from head quarters to go into camp on the new earth. No preaching brethren are engaged. We want all to come who love God and wait for his Son, and who will give meat in due season—the last crowning truths of the gospel. H. Hadlock, for the Church.

Notice.

Basket meetings will be held at the following places:

New Hartford, Butler Co., (as the brethren may arrange), Sunday, July 31st.

Three miles west of Forestville, Delaware Co., (as Wm. Smith may arrange), Aug. 7th.

These meetings are designed for two sermons in the grove, to commence at 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M. Each person is requested to bring a basket of provision, and provide himself with a seat. Let the rich dress in plain garments, so the poor will come and hear the gospel preached. Will the friends at the above places designate the spot, post up notices, and circulate the word all around? A collection will be taken up for home mission purposes, that the gospel may be preached in the highways and hedges. Peter S. W. Deyo.

Notice.

To the Brethren in Providence, R. I.—We have been informed [illegible]

To the Friends in the West.

Providence permitting, I shall visit Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, and perhaps Wisconsin, soon after harvest. Friends wishing a visit from me, who have not already written, will please write soon, that I may make out my list of appointments. If you write, I shall try to call on you; but if you do not, I shall not know where you are. I shall go with my team, and make first for Ogle Co., Ill., thence to Dayton, Mich. Address Peter S. W. Deyo, Strawberry Point, Iowa.

Notice.

There will be a meeting in the Western Tabernacle, in Chicago, to commence Aug. 9th, and continue over the following Sabbath. Eld. Miles Grant, of Boston, will be present, and give a series of lectures on Bible Christianity, and its great antagonist—Spiritualism—and other important subjects relating to the signs of the times. Further notice next week.—Voice of the West.

Meeting at Meredith Village, N. H.

If the Lord will, I will preach at the Town Hall, Meredith Village, N. H., where Bro. T. E. Lang may arrange, on Friday evening, Saturday afternoon, and over Sunday, Aug. 5th, 6th, and 7th.

Shall we see a general rally to this meeting? Pray for us. H. L. Hastings.

Conference.

The Maine Quarterly Conference of Free Sabbath Adventists will hold its next session at North Berwick, Me., commencing Thursday evening, Aug. 4th, and continuing over the Sabbath and first day. All lovers of truth are cheerfully invited to attend. Also, if it be His good pleasure, I will hold meetings, as brethren at Meredith Village and New Hampton may arrange, Sundays 14th and 21st.

S. C. Hancock.

Notice.

The Christian Easterly Maine Conference is appointed to be held at North Searsport, to commence Thursday, Aug. 18th, at 5 o'clock P. M., and continue over the Sabbath.

By order of managers, M. Young, Clerk.

Campmeeting in Wisconsin.

Probably our Wisconsin campmeeting will be held at Okee, Columbia Co., Wis., beginning on Sunday, Sept. 11th. Tents to be erected on Saturday, the 10th. Despite the hard times, we look for a grand rally. Particulars in time.

For the Committee, W. Sheldon.

Alton Campmeeting.

A campmeeting will be held at Alton, N. H., to commence Aug. 29th, and hold over the following Sunday. Also a meeting on the ground Sunday, the 28th. Particulars hereafter.

For the Committee, J. G. Smith.

Campmeeting.

A campmeeting will be held in Etna, Me., on the same ground where it was in 1863, to commence the first week in September. Arrangements will be made accordingly. More hereafter.

Israel Damman.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday Morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

THE END.

The [illegible] will surely come
 When He shall come to judge us all,
(And certain are it will be soon),
 The high, the low, the great, the small.

The world is full of bloody wars,
 And sin abounds as ne'er before;
The people disregard His laws,—
 Not always can such things endure.

A famine threatens now our land;
 The earth is parched with constant heat;
No prophet with his golden wand
 Appears our sickened eyes to greet.

When war and carnage, famine, woe,
 Have swallowed all, the end will come;
We say not when, but well we know
 The world must soon receive its doom.

For the World's Crisis.

O HOW I WISH I COULD PREACH.

How many times I hear brethren wishing they could preach. Well, perhaps you cannot, for the very reason that God has not called you to that work. But then there are other important stations in which you can do as much good as the preacher, perhaps more. One is, to sustain those ministers whom God has called to the work, by such means as God has given in your charge for that purpose. There are preachers who are willing to go into new places, the highways and hedges, and labor for the salvation of dying sinners, even "to-day"; if some of those brethren, who want to preach but cannot, would only give some of their means towards obtaining halls or other places, such as would accommodate those who would come to hear.

How many new places there are, where the people are perishing for the truth, where some good preacher would like to go and preach the gospel of the kingdom, but his scanty means will not allow him to hire a hall, at an expense of from one to three dollars an evening, to accommodate those who would like to attend the meetings! Dear reader, you may be living in one of those towns, with a "napkin" filled with from one hundred to ten thousand dollars laid away for safe keeping, for a rainy day, and wishing all the while that you could only preach so as to do good. Perhaps your "napkin" does not contain but twenty-five dollars, laid away to purchase some musical instrument, or some other more foolish thing for your fashionable daughters. Now just take your money and secure some suitable place for holding meetings; and God has ministers, poor as Lazarus, who are willing to offset the Lord's time, allotted them, against the money entrusted to your care, and labor with you for the salvation of sinners, trusting in the immutable promise of God, that they who do his will shall not want for any good thing.

Now let us stop a moment, and foot up the items according to Dan 12: 3. Suppose the meetings result in much good, and sinners are converted to God. Have you not been an agent in the hands of God in turning sinners to righteousness, just as much as the preacher? Certainly, and in like manner will you receive your reward. No matter what our work may be; if it is in harmony with God's word we shall receive our reward.

But then, here is another item which should not be lost sight of. When you send for a preacher, be sure and not send for one who has exchanged the gospel net for a sieve; for you may expect to hear about one half of his sermons on covetousness, and the other half on his own family sufferings, when he has been obliged sometimes to go to bed without a meat supper; or else has been obliged to live a number of weeks on plain, wholesome food, while some of the church have had all the luxuries of life. And just for a change, now and then, he may shake out of his old sieve some new hobby, which he obtained in some wonderful manner from somebody who heard somebody say that a discovery had been made, after years of hard study, that there were many places in the Bible where yes was meant, where it says no; and no was meant, where it says yes. And if you don't happen to give him enough of the filthy lucre to satisfy his worldly lust for gain, out of revenge he will try and prejudice the minds of other preachers from going to your place, because he was so wonderfully abused. Such preachers can do you no good, but will certainly do you much harm. They have lost their credit with God, and they are willing to cancel your debts with him by reducing your hundred measures of oil to fifty, and your hundred measures of wheat to fourscore, so that you as the Lord's debtors may take them in and listen to their starving appeals for such things as they need, which the Lord himself has promised to provide without putting his ministers to the trouble of begging for themselves if faithful to their charge.

ANOTHER MEANS

you have of doing good is this: send now and then some of the Lord's money in your hands to the office of the Advent Christian Publication Society, for such books and tracts as will prepare the minds of the people for the preaching of the truth. Facts are stubborn things. Every tract read is a sermon preached. I confess that I have been very much mistaken as to the vast amount of good there is being done by the circulation and reading of tracts. My impressions have been, that so many were destroyed, and so few of them read, that it was money and labor thrown away; but in this I was sadly mistaken. I have visited places the last year where the only light the people had was obtained from the reading of some tracts, which had been given them by some poor but faithful brother or sister seeking to improve upon the talents given in their charge, till the Master calls for them to come home. The preaching of the word, to people whose hearts have thus been prepared by the [illegible]

EXPERIENCE.

BRO. GRANT:—I feel that I have a duty which I would not longer defer. It is to acknowledge through the medium of your paper the faithfulness and mercy of my God in fulfilling his word of promise to me, who am seeking, though in much feebleness, to cleave to him by faith, even that faith of which disease is rebuked, and strength received direct from Him "with whom our life is hid."

Fourteen years ago last autumn, early in my life's morning, disease laid a strong hand upon me, and I fell prostrate beneath its power. For a time I struggled against it, used means for recovery, but in every attempt made for the recovery of my health I most effectually failed, while something assured me, "It is the Lord, let him do what seemeth him good." But nature yielded not readily, long, dark and severe was the struggle; yet the seeds of submission were being planted, and while I felt that all reasonable hope for other than a life of inability and suffering was taken from me, and I sought for temporary relief in the occasional use of simple remedies alone; hope began to speak of a great good that should come from all this, when these "former things" should have pased away. Yet it was not without a great striving that I obtained strength to endure the gradual subversion of all my physical, and the weakening of my mental, powers.

We think in wondering admiration of those powers of man by which great inventions are sought out. We read of the mightiness of those who have subdued kingdoms and ruled empires, but how does all this compare with that power by which we come to look calmly upon the work of the destroyer, as he takes from us, one by one, those mediums through which we receive our enjoyment of all good, bringing us slowly but surely to that place, where there is no "knowledge, device nor wisdom"? Ah, it compares as man's greatest capabilities compare with the power of Omnipotence, for by him alone do we thus "endure."

In the winter of '62 my voice became hushed by the violence of disease, and I felt that in the course of nature it would not be long ere it would be hushed by death. Nor did I so love the life which I had proved full of pain and anguish, as to refuse to enter the chambers of refuge if my Father bade me. No. There was rest there, sweet thought! But while thus wandering in the shadowy vale, my mind began to be drawn out in unwonted feeling, in behalf of those who discern not the "signs of this time," and who because of this and other errors, are rendering themselves liable to the destruction that cometh suddenly.

Finally my feelings became such that I felt I would, must live, and work in some way for the cause of truth, and for the first time, strange to say, since my loss of health, did I have liberty, freedom to pray for it to be restored. Now I was moved to pray constantly for it, and in answer came the assurance that I should live. There was not the shadow of an enticement to live in the thought of my earthly good. I shrank from the thought of going into the cold, wicked world, but I felt that it was truly God's will, that I should have life, health and that by faith.

I went to the word by which we are to try all things and read James 5: 15. I had ever been much in doubt of this healing by faith belonging to our time, but now seemed to see differently. Yes I had asked God for life, and he had shown me how I could have it; and could I draw back, refuse? Should I mock God? Nay, verily. I had put my hand to the plough, I might not look back, I would follow the guidings of the Spirit let the consequences be what they might, and I knew full well they would be most crucifying to flesh. But as I became willing to walk in the light, I felt the truth confirmed more and more to me, and felt finally that it would be a pleasure, in the presence of the world, to testify my faith in Christ as my healer.

Thus, after my faith and patience had been sufficiently exercised, a man appointed to do the work of the Lord, came, as by his order, and offered the prayer for the healing of the sick in full obedience to James 5: 15. From this hour I set aside all human helps, remedies, and looked wholly to my great Physician. Three months passed away, the work of the destroyer seemed to be still going forward, yet I was in a manner sustained, while faith wavered not. I knew the word could not fail, and often felt to rejoice in this testing of my faith. Twice the powers of darkness assailed with unwonted energy my frail bark, but Christ was there, and a great calm was spoken.

In the forepart of the month of December, 1863, I saw in the Crisis an extract taken from Guide to Holiness by "M. D. W.," in which the writer says that she never receives a blessing of any kind until she first believes that she does receive it. I turned to Mark 11: 24, and read, "What things soever ye desire when ye pray believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them." Also 1 John 5: 14, 15,—"And this is the confidence which we have in him, that if we ask any thing according to his will, he heareth us. And if we know that he hear us, whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petition that we desired of him." Quick as a lightning's flash I saw that I had erred in still believing that I should receive, after obedience, instead of believing that I did receive. (And was I not permitted thus to err for the trial of faith, and that by lapse of time it might not seem by the will or power of man.)

It was now winter. The cold increasing in strength; so feeble was I and had I been, as to clothe myself in flannels for two summers, to cover my head and face, and my neck and arms with double thicknesses of the same, suffering from a coldness that seemed the touch of death itself. And could I now in the confidence of faith cast off all these badges of invalidism, and trust the consequences? Could I? The way was plain, and, thanks be to God for the victory, faith conquered. I put on my long-unused bonnet and shawl, and walked out into the keen air (a summer breeze had caused me severe suffering just before) to the astonishment of all who beheld it. [illegible] being loosed.

To educate me from my previous position [illegible]

each season, and also that of a variety of labors unknown to me for more than fourteen years, feeling that the life I now live, I receive by faith daily, I am enabled to record, not only unshaken, but increasing confidence in my gracious Physician, knowing that if I hold fast the beginning of my confidence steadfast unto the end, he who hath commenced a good work in me will not leave it until fully completed. Praise be to him who hath all power in heaven and in earth. And here I pause and inquire for language best suited for the occasion, but as often feel lost in the depths of a silent, wandering joy!

Said one, on hearing my testimony on this matter, and believing it fully, "Do you not know what will be said of this?" Ah! did not I know? had I not left all to follow Christ in this? And now let me say, let infidelity scoff, unbelief doubt and waver, the humble shall hear thereof and be glad, and my soul shall make her boast in the Lord, and in the Lord will I rejoice all the day. And I call upon all who love our adorable Redeemer and Lord in sincerity, to offer up with and for me prayer, thanksgiving and praise, to him whose abundant mercy has been thus manifested toward me, the sinful, weak and frail; that God may be glorified and I be strengthened up in all things for the work before me, even that of testifying that God is true, and that not one of his righteous promises can fail to them who seek their fulfillment in his own appointed way. Praise, honor, thanksgiving and power be unto Him, the only and all-wise God, now and forever. Amen. CAROLINE HILL.

THY WILL BE DONE.

A wailing cry is in the air,
 Sighs borne on every passing breeze;
Over our land, once proud and fair,
 Rich blood is pouring out in seas.

Howl, daughters of America,
 Kneel on the blood-besprinkled sod,
And raise your voices night and day
 To supplicate an offended God.

In every house are first-born dead,
 Each mother's heart is dead with woe,
And why? The Eternal voice hath said—
 "Ye would not let my people go."

Raise up a Moses, gracious Lord,
 To lead thy ransomed people on,
America shall hear thy word,
 And say, Oh Lord, thy will be done!

For the World's Crisis.

MY WESTERN TOUR.—NO. 3.

My last was written on the morning of my arrival at Winona, July 5th, where I found a cordial welcome at the Burrage House (whose proprietor is a friend of mine), one of the hotels of the pleasant and thriving city of Winona, situate on the Waubeshau Prairie, some six miles in length by two in width, lying upon the Mississippi river, surrounded by high bluffs, which give to the place a beautifully romantic appearance. Here, among the five thousand inhabitants occupying this lovely spot are a few that love the "blessed hope," and look for the glorious appearing of our Savior Jesus Christ; and since Eld. Himes' late meeting at the Court House in this city, a greater interest is being felt among the people upon the inquiry, "What is truth?"

A hall has been hired, and regular meetings are hereafter to be sustained by the devoted few who "wait for their Lord" in this place and vicinity. Sister Rowel, who resides some six miles south of here, preached last Sabbath in the Court room to a large audience from these words—"The Lord is our lawgiver," to good acceptance, and is to preach in the same place three Sabbaths more; and although I was urgently invited to return from Utica and preach here on the 17th, yet I thought it not best to interrupt the labor of my Sister, who seems to have an "open door" of utterance in this place, as I learn that on July 10th the Court House was crowded to its utmost capacity, to hear her preach "Jesus and the resurrection." I hope that God may bless her labors abundantly.

In the afternoon I enjoyed a pleasant interview with Eld. Thomas R. Allen and family, at his pleasant residence in this city, while we discussed topics of interest, and he told me of his labors in the Carolinas, where he traveled on horseback with Eld. L. Osler in 1843, and scattered publications and lectured, and was acquainted with many devoted christians, who believed in the coming of Jesus as near, who are now, if living, in stern trial on account of the war and its cruel horrors. Bro. Allen's present wife accompanied Sr. C. S. Miner to Palestine, and resided there some time; and I had an account from her lips of many things of interest relative to the present appearance and condition of that land whose every mountain and plain is rendered sacred by association with Bible history, where Jesus performed his miracles, lived, labored and "died for our offences, and was raised again for our justification." She spoke of the awe that rested upon her as she trod the soil once pressed by Jesus' feet, and looked upon the very landscape scenery that his eyes once rested upon.

Bro. and Sr. Allen are very devoted christians. Their house is the weary pilgrim's home, where he may quietly rest, cheered by the voice of prayer and solemn song, made welcome by those who are themselves but pilgrims. May the God of our fathers bless them in their labor of love.

From Bro. Allen's I returned to rest for the night with my friend Burrage, where I was made welcome, and found the rest I sought and much needed. On the morning of July 6th I left Winona, and rode with Bro. Allen six miles west to Minnesota City (a city of oak trees), and there took the cars and passed up Rolling Stone Valley to Utica, which is twenty miles west of Winona, where I was greeted by much valued friends, some of whom were brought to Christ by my feeble instrumentality in Canada East, and were baptized by me. Our meeting was a glad one, and the joy I shared compensated in part for the grief I felt in leaving my friends east, and caused me to realize in a measure the thrilling joy of the final meeting of the saved ones when gathered home by Jesus at his coming. Dear brethren and sisters of the household of faith, let us be so faithful as to meet at last, [illegible] faithfully that she would return to the fold of Christ; and others that had been almost overcome by care and sorrow and trials incident to their situation, are being greatly revived, I trust permanently benefited. I hope this will reconcile my friends east to my temporary absence. Be true to the cause, one and all.

On the Sabbath, July 10th, I met my appointment in the south part of Utica, in a place where my beloved brethren Himes and Sheldon have held meetings within a few months past, which produced good results; and in connection with the labors of Elds. P. Ramer and Chas. L. Page, who were present to assist in my meeting, have caused the truth to be received by many. A large congregation were present, who gave good attention to the word, and between the sermons a Sabbath School and Bible class exercise was attended by a large number, which was quite interesting, superintended by Bro. Barrett, in which I participated.

After the close of the meeting, several manifested their interest in the truth and in my visit in a substantial way, not only by saying "God bless you; can't you preach to us longer," but by handing money to assist me to meet my traveling expenses. May that God who is able to make "all grace ABOUND," and who "loveth the cheerful giver," and will reward even the gift of a "cup of cold water" properly given, bless them abundantly, and make their beautiful fields of waving wheat produce a bountiful harvest. And the prospect for farmers in this section of the west is good just now, as the crop is very fair considering the drouth around them, and here even, and the present price of wheat, which is two dollars per bushel at Winona.

By a vote of the congregation, quite unanimous, I was requested to continue my meeting into the week during the time of my stay, preaching each day at about 6 P. M., to which I consented, and have, at the date of this, preached two evenings to good congregations for the season and place. The congregation and interest are increasing. Several earnest testimonies, confessions, etc., indicate a good prospect.

Last evening a youngerly man of talent, a husband and a father, who has enjoyed religion, and even preached the gospel, but was entirely backslidden, rose and confessed his backslidings, in part to remove obstacles out of the way of others, as he said, but also, as I think, to relieve his own feelings; and I hope that ere I leave he and others with whom I conversed will find "peace in believing, and joy in the Holy Ghost."

I do not know how long I shall remain, but expect to go from here to Hesper, on to Franklin, Iowa, to stop a short time, then perhaps down the river to Davenport, thence west by rail to Grinnell, on to Granville, and about July 31st be at DeKalb, Ill., to fill appointments as made by Eld. H. G. McCulloch in that vicinity; remaining until Aug 7th, thence to Lockport, Ill., to visit my brother, thence by Chicago, Union Mills, Ind., Buchanan and Kalamazoo, Mich., in which places I expect to preach, on through central New York to the Wilbraham campmeeting, and thence home to Stanbridge, C. E. Thus I propose, but God may dispose differently. I will trust him, and hope to be guided aright.

If there should be Adventists between Frankville and Granville, Iowa, who would like me to visit them, and a way for me to cross the country instead of going down the Mississippi, as above planned, they will please write to me immediately at Frankville, Iowa, in care of Jas. S. Walker, giving particulars, and I will do my best to call on them. I would prefer going that way. Write soon, and I will correspond with you on reaching Frankville. Brethren, "pray for me." C. P. FIDELITY IN LITTLE THINGS.

Great virtues are rare, the occasions for them are very rare, and when they do occur, we are prepared for them, we are excited by the grandeur of the sacrifice, we are supported either by the splendor of the deed in the eyes of the world, or by the self complacency that we experience from the performance of an uncommon action. Little things are unforeseen; they return every moment; they come in contact with our pride, our indolence, our haughtiness, our readiness to take offense; they contradict our inclinations perpetually. We would much rather make certain great sacrifices to God, however violent and painful they might be, upon condition that we should be rewarded by liberty to follow our desires and habits in the details of life. It is, however, only by fidelity in little things that a true and constant love to God can be distinguished from a passing fervor of spirit.

Let us remember that God looks in our actions only for the motive. God counts for nothing what is most dazzling to men. What he desires is a pure intention, true docility, and a sincere self-renunciation. All this is exercised more frequently, and in a way that tries us more severely, on common than on great occasions. Sometimes we cling more tenaciously to a trifle than to a great interest. It would give us more pain to relinquish an amusement than to bestow a great sum in charity. We are more easily led away by little things, because we believe them more innocent, and imagine that we are less attached to them; nevertheless, when God deprives us of them we soon discover from the pain of privation how excessive and inexcusable was our attachment to them. The sincerity of our piety is also impeached by the neglect of minor duties. What probability is there that we should not hesitate to make great sacrifices, when we shrink from slight ones?

But what is most dangerous to the mind, is the habit it acquires of unfaithfulness. True love to God thinks nothing small. All that can please or displease him is great. It does not produce constraint and weak scruples, but it places no limits to its fidelity; it acts with simplicity, and as it is not embarrassed with things that God has not commanded, it never hesitates a moment about what he does command, whether it be great or small. Those persons who are naturally less exact ought to make an inviolable law with themselves about trifles. They are tempted to despise them; they have a habit of thinking them of no consequence; they are not aware of the insensible growth of the passions; they forget even their own most fatal experience. They trust to a delusive courage, though it has before failed them, for the support of their fidelity. "It is a trifle," they say, "it is nothing." True; but it is a nothing that will be everything to you, a trifle that you prefer to the will of God, a trifle that will ruin you. There is no real elevation of mind in a contempt of little things; it is, on the contrary, from too narrow views that we consider those things of little importance which have in fact such extensive consequences. [illegible]

FASHIONABLE PIETY.

In instances not a few, as many heart-sick pastors will bear sad witness, religious parents become voluntary purveyors to the anti-christian propensities of their children. At that period of life when godly counsels and pure examples, and loving, but inflexible firmness, are most needed by the inexperienced youth, just about to look upon life in its more seductive dangers and aspects, do we often see parents, hitherto bright examples of consistent, fervent piety, suddenly transformed in their characters and views. Fathers, long remarkable for the gentle, beautiful dignity of their sway over the household domain, relax the strictness of their principles, and recognize no law higher than the inclinations of their children. Mothers, long known and reverenced for christian simplicity and fidelity, and even awful for their uncompromising opposition to worldly vanities, pleasures and conformities, contrive to back-slide when the time comes for their daughters to leave school, in order to introduce them into life with proper eclat. The poor young creatures, all decorated and prepared for immolation upon the altars of fashion by maternal indulgence or ambition, powerfully remind us of the children caused by the apostate Jewish parents to pass through the fire to Moloch.

The evil here referred to strikes us as one of fatal tendancy as well as of alarming and increasing magnitude, not only in our large cities, where fashion is supposed to exert the most potent influence, but in many of our formerly quiet country towns and villages are our christian families giving way to the spirit of the world, and opening their doors to amusements which have long since been placed under condemnation by all the spiritual piety in the land. It seems recently to have been discovered that cards, balls and operas, are in no way incompatible with a creditable profession of religion, and that they constitute innocent and salutary methods for the acquisition and display of such graces as most befit the sons and daughters of educated, opulent christian families.

We invoke the attention of parents to this overflowing fountain of corruption, which threatens to inundate the churches of all our pious denominations, and banish from among us the simplicity of our christian habits and the angelic purity of our christian homes. The example of such a fashionable piety is fearfully contagious, and calls for immediate, earnest interference. One of the most alarming symptoms of this spreading plague is the complacent approbation now and then accorded to it by a popular preacher. We desire none of his laurels, and we shall have a more quiet conscience for having raised this note of warning, whoever may sneer or anathematize.
—Dr. Olin.

OVER-DRESSING.

The over-dressing of American ladies in the streets, at hotels, and in the churches, is a subject of general remark among travelers from abroad, as well as sensible people at home, though to little purpose, it would seem, as at no period has the love of display been more conspicuous in our country. American women are slaves to dress; it is the bane of their life, aye, and of the male victims, too, whose lives are connected with theirs. Traveling trunks, almost as large as a small house, must be carried about, filled with all sorts of finery, for a summer jaunt to watering places, and for a winter visit to a city. The father or husband vainly remonstrates; flounced dresses and crinoline must have ample space, and there must be a variety, too, in the costumes. "Heaven save the ladies, how they dress!" may we well exclaim.—Why will they not become more practical? Does the most fastidious critic of female beauty admire a young lady in full toilet more than in simple dress? If beautiful, there is no need of ornament; if plain, she should appear without pretension. We have known ladies who have traveled through the continent of Europe with only a small trunk to contain their wardrobe, and they found a wonderful relief in not having "too much to wear."

FOR FARMERS.

When and how to prune Fruit Trees.

A tree has ever been looked upon as a fit emblem of enduring life. Would that those who assume the responsibilities of training and trimming fruit trees at the present day, could be led to feel that they were dealing with things of life, not only, but with live things, and shape their acts accordingly. Those familiar with budding young seedlings know very well that if they need any trimming, it must be done at the time, or but a few moments before the bud is inserted. If performed two or three hours beforehand, a reaction will have taken place in the usual quiet growth of the tree, and the bark will not so easily separate from the wood to receive the bud. If trimmed a few days before the time of budding, the living action will be found again ascendant, and the budding can be performed with the same ease as if done before being effected by the maiming. And who does not know that the proper time for depletion, if unavoidable, is during the most vigorous and elastic life actions? This principle applied to trimming fruit trees, would put a stop to the severe practice of pruning them during the time of dormancy, and cause that work to be done when the entire tide of vitality and growth is at its fullest flow.

Our Eastern friends for many years in the past have recommended to trim in February and March, while the trees were in the dormant state, and just before they start into the new life of early spring. Now, however, their best writers unite in condemning that practice, and advise to prune during the growing season only. If in a comparatively damp climate their counsel is correct, how much more so in our exceedingly dry and more exhausting atmosphere? The chief objections to late fall, and early spring pruning, are, the drying out of the wounded parts or points, before the circulation commences anew, and the escaping of the sap for a time after it begins to flow. Consequently, such wounds are very slow to heal over, and the exuding sap makes the tree look black and unsightly, for some distance beneath those wounded parts. On the contrary, if the pruning is delayed till the leaves have obtained their full size and power, the drying out and bleeding are prevented, and wounds made at that time very quickly heal over; for then, nature stands ready to administer from the tree's vitality the needed succor with its fast healing properties.

My own experience, drawn from close observation, and the light shed by excellent writers upon this subject, has led me to adopt the practice of pruning only from the middle of June to the first of September, and to trim but little at a time. If a severe cutting away is actually needed in one season, I should divide the infliction into three or four parts, at intervals of two or three weeks. [illegible] nature's laws are ruthlessly violated, by the thoughtless and inexperienced, who too often cut and [illegible] their choicest fruit trees, without mercy or discretion.—Bebee's Essay on Fruit Culture.

How to treat Trees injured by Mice.

If trees are severely injured, or even entirely girdled, they may yet be saved by making three or four clean, smooth cuts, across the girdle, just as you would cut to put on a patch bud-graft, but broader, and fitting nicely to them corresponding pieces cut from the same or another tree, as you would cut the bud from its scion; and it will aid you in the operation if a little wood is taken with the bark, so that you can ever so slightly interlock them with a short tongue as in grafting. Having put on two or more of these according to the size and necessities of the tree, bind them carefully and firmly, and cover them completely with a grafting composition, made of two parts pitch, two parts rosin, one part beeswax, one part tallow, and one part turpentine, melted together and boiled for half an hour.—American Home Garden.

Bouquets.

Flowers should not be cut during sunshine, or kept exposed to the solar influence, neither should they be collected in large bundles and tied tightly together, as this invariably hastens their decay. When in the room in which they are to remain, the ends of the stalks should be cut clean across with a very sharp knife (never with scissors), by which means the tubes through which they draw the water are left open, so that the water ascends freely, which it will not do if the tubes of the stems are bruised or lacerated. An endless variety of ornamental vessels are used for the reception of such flowers, and they are all equally well adapted for the purpose, so that the stalks are inserted in pure water. This water ought to be changed every day, or once in two days at the furtherest, and a thin slice should be cleanly cut off from the end of each stalk every time the water is removed, which will revive the flowers.—Farmer and Mechanic.

To Prevent Cattle from Jumping Fences.

The following singular statement was made at a late meeting of the American Institute Farmers' Club at New York:

"To prevent steers from jumping fences, clip off the eyelashes of the under lids with a pair of scissors, and the ability or disposition to jump is as effectually destroyed as Sampson's power was by the loss of his locks. The animal will not attempt a fence until the eyelashes are grown again. Of this we are informed by Samuel Thorne, the great breeder of Duchess Co., who assured us that he had tested it upon a pair of very breachy oxen. As it was of great value to him, he hopes it will be tried by others."

To prevent Mice from gnawing Harness.

It is said the mice gnaw that part of the harness where there is saltness occasioned by the sweating of the horse. This is thought to be proved in the following manner, as stated by a correspondent of the Prairie Farmer.—ED.

"I found that when I placed a tight box of salt on the girth near my harness, that the box was gnawed and the harness was not. Upon thinking the matter over, I came to the conclusion that it was the salt in the leather that they wanted, so I set a small open box of salt near my harness after that, and I have never been troubled with gnawed harness since. I told my neighbors of my discovery, and all report the same result."

PLEDGE OF THE TRY COMPANY

We, the Undersigned, hereby pledge ourselves to abstain from Tea, Coffee, Tobacco, and all Intoxicating Drinks as a Beverage.

"IT IS SO COLD."

"Johnny, dear, I wish you would fill up the wood-box. Put on your cap and tippet, and see how smart you can be."

"Oh, mother, I can't, it is so cold!"

Johnny drew up his shoulders with a shiver and moved his chair nearer the stove.

Mrs. Drew was very busy, and being called out of the room just then, did not insist upon an immediate compliance with her wishes. Johnny sat with his feet on the stove hearth, thinking what a dreary season was winter, especially when little boys were called upon to perform sundry unpleasant duties, such as bringing in wood, water, and the like.

Now shoveling paths in the soft, white snow was fun, that is, when one did it just for the sport of it; but when compelled to it, ah, that was another thing. The fact is, Johnny was slow in learning the lesson that labor with some desired good in view, was far better than the same amount of effort for mere pleasure alone. If "all work and no play" makes little boys dull and spiritless, so "all play and no work" often produces the same effect.

But to return to Johnny. While sitting by the stove, still shivering over his journey in prospect to the wood pile, a little playmate called in for him to go on a coasting frolic.

"Mother," he cried, forgetting the cold in his eagerness for sport "can I go coasting with Frank?"

"Oh Johnny, it is so cold!" and Mrs. Drew imitated so precisely her little boy's whining tone, with such a ludicrous shrug of the shoulders, that Johnny, who was a quick-witted child, burst out laughing.

"Mother, I see; the wood-box is to be filled first."

Johnny ran out, followed by Frank, and the box was soon heaped up with fuel for his mother's use.

"My son, you have been very quick in your application of my little sermon. Always remember, my boy, duty first and then pleasure. First the bitter and then the sweet. Although, to judge from your rosy cheeks and smiling face, your task has not been very bitter after all. Am I not right?"

"Mother, I was a lazy fellow, and am quite ashamed of myself. And if your wood-box stands empty again when I am at home, I guess it will not be on account of the cold."

And giving his mother a hearty kiss, Johnny ran away to play with his chosen companion, Frank Roberts.

How is it, boys? Shall mother's wood-box need replenishing while you are off coasting, without a thought of her comfort this freezing weather? You can save her tired feet many weary steps, and your little labors of love will impart a sweeter zest to your skating, coasting, and snowballing frolics.—Child at Home.

CLEANING THE LIPS.

No feature in the face of a child is lovelier than the lips, with rows of pearly teeth playing hide-and-seek behind them. But ah! sometimes mouths which look like rosebuds send forth words unfit for a mother's ear, [illegible] Some boys, who would not dare to take God's name in vain, say what is coarse and impure, forgetting that this, too, is a sin.

We knew a dear old lady, who, many years ago, taught a little private school in a certain town. Her heart was pure, and therefore her words were sweet. She loved the blessed Savior, and cared most tenderly for the lambs of his fold. She seemed to live in the little children's world, rejoicing and suffering with them. She had always something pleasant to say, and a flower or kiss to give, so that the scholars loved the schoolhouse next best to mother's room at home. [illegible] words while out at play. [illegible] used to take them to her lap, but, as Master Charlie was nine years old, she called him to the stand before her. Taking both his hands between her own, and looking into his blue eyes, she asked,—"Have you been using wicked words to-day, my dear?"

"I didn't swear," whimpered Charlie.

"Are you willing to go home and repeat all you have said in your mother's presence?"

Charlie hung his head, and colored deeply, and whispered,—[illegible]

"No, ma'am; because it would grieve her."

"And have you forgotten, my dear boy, that One who is far holier than she, has heard in heaven those naughty words which came from those lips to-day? I am afraid there is something unclean in your heart; but as I cannot reach that myself, I will ask God to do it. I can reach your lips, and as I am sure they are not fit to give your mother the good-night kiss, nor to say your prayers, I will clean them for you."

She then took from her desk a bowl of water, a tiny bit of soap, and a small sponge, and bidding Charlie open his mouth, she washed it well—teeth, tongue, lips, and all! She then wiped them dry with a soft napkin, and bathed his tear-stained face, on which she pressed the tear of forgiveness. This simple punishment, and the real sorrow of her who inflicted it, made a deep impression on the minds of her scholars. Charlie is now almost a man, but never since that day has an impure word escaped his lips. At the very thought of such a word, he fancies that he tastes soap, and that he hears again the gentle rebuke of his first teacher.

BOYS, WILL YOU READ IT—HEED IT? WILL EVERYBODY?

MY DEAR GEORGE:—I could have wept, the other day, when I saw you smoking a segar. Only fourteen years old, and already at work to poison your body and soul with tobacco! O, this is sad indeed! My dear boy, you see not what is before you. If you die you would be appalled; and you would fall on your knees, and entreat your Heavenly Father to save you from the wasteful, filthy, wicked practice of using tobacco.

Do not excuse yourself by saying that some great and good men use tobacco. The great and good men who do so are in danger of sinking into very little and very wicked men, before they die.

Tobacco and rum! What twin brothers! What mighty agents of Satan! What a large share of the American people they are destroying! I love my children; and because I love them, I had rather bury them, than see them defile themselves with rum or tobacco.

As Paul said to Timothy, so say I to you "Keep thyself pure." Be clean in your person, and be clean in your heart. But depend upon it, you can be neither, if you use tobacco.

THE EVILS OF TOBACCO.

It costs more than education or religion, the Army or Navy. It costs England and America a sum sufficient to support 50,000 ministers with a salary of $1,000; or more than 100,000 missionaries. The students in one college pay more than $6,000 for cigars yearly. It tends to idleness, poverty, strong drink, and the whole family of vices. It tends to debility, dyspepsia, palsy, cancers, insanity, delirium tremens, and sudden deaths. It weaves a winding sheet around 20,000 in our land, every year!

THE REMEDY.

1. Never use it yourself. 2. Banish it from your families and premises. 3. Purify the church. 4. Rebuke the manufacture and sale of it. 5. Look after schools, and save the young. 6. Sign and circulate this pledge: "I hereby pledge myself to abstain from the use of tobacco, in all forms, totally and forever."

THE THREE SIEVES.

"O mamma!" cried little Blanche Phillips, "I heard such a tale about Edith Howard! I did not think she could have been so naughty. One day—"

"My dear," interrupted Mrs. Phillips, "before you continue, we will see if your story will pass the three sieves."

"What does that mean, mamma?" said Blanche.

"I will explain it, dear. In the first place, is it true?"

"I suppose so, mamma. I heard it from Miss Parry, who said a friend of Miss White's told her the story; and Miss White is a great friend of Edith's."

"And does she show her friendship by telling tales of her? In the next place, though you can prove it is true, is it kind?"

"I did not mean to be unkind, mamma, but I am afraid I was. I should not like Edith to speak of me as I have spoken of her."

"And is it necessary?"

"Of course not, mamma, there was no need for me to mention it at all."

"Then, dear Blanche, pray that your tongue may be governed, and that you may not indulge in evil speaking, and strive more and more to imitate the meekness of your Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.—Lutheran S. S. Herald.

THE END.

We feel the time will surely come
When He shall come to judge us all,
(And certain are it will be soon),
The high, the low, the great, the small.

The world is full of bloody wars,
And sin abounds as ne'er before;
The people disregard His laws,—
Not always can such things endure.

A famine threatens now our land;
The earth is parched with constant heat;
No prophet with his golden wand
Appears our sickened eyes to greet.

When war and carnage, famine, woe,
Have swallowed all, the end will come;
We say not when, but well we know
The world must soon receive its doom.

For the World's Crisis.

O HOW I WISH I COULD PREACH.

How many times I hear brethren wishing they could preach. Well, perhaps you cannot, for the very reason that God has not called you to that work. But then there are other important stations in which you can do as much good as the preacher, perhaps more. One is, to sustain those ministers whom God has called to the work, by such means as God has given in your charge for that purpose. There are preachers who are willing to go into new places, the highways and hedges, and labor for the salvation of dying sinners, even "to-day"; if some of those brethren, who want to preach but cannot, would only give some of their means towards obtaining halls or other places, such as would accommodate those who would come to hear.

How many new places there are, where the people are perishing for the truth, where some good preacher would like to go and preach the gospel of the kingdom, but his scanty means will not allow him to hire a hall, at an expense of from one to three dollars an evening, to accommodate those who would like to attend the meetings! Dear reader, you may be living in one of those towns, with a "napkin" filled with from one hundred to ten thousand dollars laid away for safe keeping, for a rainy day, and wishing all the while that you could only preach so as to do good. Perhaps your "napkin" does not contain but twenty-five dollars, laid away to purchase some musical instrument, or some other more foolish thing for your fashionable daughters. Now just take your money and secure some suitable place for holding meetings; and God has ministers, poor as Lazarus, who are willing to offset the Lord's time, allotted them, against the money entrusted to your care, and labor with you for the salvation of sinners, trusting in the immutable promise of God, that they who do his will shall not want for any good thing.

Now let us stop a moment, and foot up the items according to Dan. 12: 3. Suppose the meetings result in much good, and sinners are converted to God. Have you not been an agent in the hands of God in turning sinners to righteousness, just as much as the preacher? Certainly, and in like manner will you receive your reward. No matter what our work may be; if it is in harmony with God's word we shall receive our reward.

But then, here is another item which should not be lost sight of. When you send for a preacher, be sure and not send for one who has exchanged the gospel net for a sieve; for you may expect to hear about one half of his sermons on covetousness, and the other half on his own family sufferings, when he has been obliged sometimes to go to bed without a meat supper; or else has been obliged to live a number of weeks on plain, wholesome food, while some of the church have had all the luxuries of life. And just for a change, now and then, he may shake out of his old sieve some new hobby, which he obtained in some wonderful manner from somebody who heard somebody say that a discovery had been made, after years of hard study, that there were many places in the Bible where yes was meant, where it says no; and no was meant, where it says yes. And if you don't happen to give him enough of the filthy lucre to satisfy his worldly lust for gain, out of revenge he will try and prejudice the minds of other preachers from going to your place, because he was so wonderfully abused. Such preachers can do you no good, but will certainly do you much harm. They have lost their credit with God, and they are willing to cancel your debts with him by reducing your hundred measures of oil to fifty, and your hundred measures of wheat to fourscore, so that you as the Lord's debtors may take them in and listen to their starving appeals for such things as they need, which the Lord himself has promised to provide without putting his ministers to the trouble of begging for themselves if faithful to their charge.

ANOTHER MEANS

you have of doing good is this: send now and then some of the Lord's money in your hands to the office of the Advent Christian Publication Society, for such books and tracts as will prepare the minds of the people for the preaching of the truth. Facts are stubborn things. Every tract read is a sermon preached. I confess that I have been very much mistaken as to the vast amount of good there is being done by the circulation and reading of tracts. My impressions have been, that so many were destroyed, and so few of them read, that it was money and labor thrown away; but in this I was sadly mistaken. I have visited places the last year where the only light the people had was obtained from the reading of some tracts, which had been given them by some poor but faithful brother or sister seeking to improve upon the talents given in their charge, till the Master calls for them to come home. The preaching of the word, to people whose hearts have thus been prepared by the reading of tracts, is like the rays of the morning sun upon the swelling rose bud, all ready and waiting to bloom into life at the first dawn of daylight.

Now do not sit down and whine any more around the fireside, because you can not preach your own way, but preach just as the Lord would have you preach. Work as the Lord would have you work. Improve upon what the Lord has given you. Go from house to house, from shop to shop, and read [illegible] yourself to perishing sinners, who are too lazy to read themselves, and in the world to come you will certainly have your reward. From your Bro. in Christ,

EXPERIENCE.

BRO. GRANT:—I feel that I have a duty which I would not longer defer. It is to acknowledge through the medium of your paper the faithfulness and mercy of my God in fulfilling his word of promise to me, who am seeking, though in much feebleness, to cleave to him by faith, even that faith of which disease is rebuked, and strength received direct from Him "with whom our life is hid."

Fourteen years ago last autumn, early in my life's morning, disease laid a strong hand upon me, and I fell prostrate beneath its power. For a time I struggled against it, used means for recovery, but in every attempt made for the recovery of my health I most effectually failed, while something assured me, "It is the Lord; let him do what seemeth him good." But nature yielded not readily; long, dark and severe was the struggle; yet the seeds of submission were being planted, and while I felt that all reasonable hope for other than a life of inability and suffering was taken from me, and I sought for temporary relief in the occasional use of simple remedies alone; hope began to speak of a great good that should come from all this, when these "former things" should have passed away. Yet it was not without a great striving that I obtained strength to endure the gradual subversion of all my physical, and the weakening of my mental, powers.

We think in wondering admiration of those powers of man by which great inventions are sought out. We read of the mightiness of those who have subdued kingdoms and ruled empires, but how does all this compare with that power by which we come to look calmly upon the work of the destroyer, as he takes from us, one by one, those mediums through which we receive our enjoyment of all good, bringing us slowly but surely to that place, where there is no "knowledge, device nor wisdom"? Ah, it compares as man's greatest capabilities compare with the power of Omnipotence, for by him alone do we thus "endure."

In the winter of '62 my voice became hushed by the violence of disease, and I felt that in the course of nature it would not be long ere it would be hushed by death. Nor did I so love the life which I had proved full of pain and anguish, as to refuse to enter the chambers of refuge if my Father bade me. No. There was rest there, sweet thought! But while thus wandering in the shadowy vale, my mind began to be drawn out in unwonted feeling, in behalf of those who discern not the "signs of this time;" and who because of this and other errors, are rendering themselves liable to the destruction that cometh suddenly.

Finally my feelings became such that I felt I would, must live, and work in some way for the cause of truth; and for the first time, strange to say, since my loss of health, did I have liberty, freedom to pray for it to be restored. Now I was moved to pray constantly for it, and in answer came the assurance that I should live. There was not the shadow of an enticement to live in the thought of my earthly good. I shrank from the thought of going into the cold, wicked world, but I felt that it was truly God's will, that I should have life, health and that by faith.

I went to the word by which we are to try all things and read James 5: 15. I had ever been much in doubt of this healing by faith belonging to our time, but now seemed to see differently. Yes I had asked God for life, and he had shown me how I could have it; and could I draw back, refuse? Should I mock God? Nay, verily. I had put my hand to the plough, I might not look back, I would follow the guidings of the Spirit let the consequences be what they might, and I knew full well they would be most crucifying to flesh. But as I became willing to walk in the light, I felt the truth confirmed more and more to me, and felt finally that it would be a pleasure, in the presence of the world, to testify my faith in Christ as my healer.

Thus, after my faith and patience had been sufficiently exercised, a man appointed to do the work of the Lord, came, as by his order, and offered the prayer for the healing of the sick in full obedience to James 5: 15. From this hour I set aside all human helps, remedies, and looked wholly to my great Physician. Three months passed away, the work of the destroyer seemed to be still going forward, yet I was in a manner sustained, while faith wavered not. I knew the word could not fail, and often felt to rejoice in this testing of my faith. Twice the powers of darkness assailed with unwonted energy my frail bark, but Christ was there, and a great calm was spoken.

In the forepart of the month of December, 1863, I saw in the Crisis an extract taken from Guide to Holiness by "M. D. W.," in which the writer says that she never receives a blessing of any kind until she first believes that she does receive it. I turned to Mark 11: 24, and read, "What things soever ye desire when ye pray believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them." Also 1 John 5: 14, 15,—"And this is the confidence which we have in him, that if we ask any thing according to his will, he heareth us. And if we know that he hear us, whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petition that we desired of him." Quick as a lightning's flash I saw that I had erred in still believing that I should receive, after obedience, instead of believing that I did receive. (And was I not permitted thus to err for the trial of faith, and that by lapse of time it might not seem by the will or power of man.)

It was now winter. The cold increasing in strength; so feeble was I and had I been, as to clothe myself in flannels for two summers, even to my head and face, and my neck and arms with double thicknesses of the same, suffering from a coldness that seemed the touch of death itself. And could I now in the confidence of faith cast off all these badges of invalidism, and trust the consequences? Could I? The way was plain, and, thanks be to God for the victory, faith conquered. I put on my long-unused bonnet and shawl and walked out into the keen air, (a summer breeze had caused me severe suffering just before,) to the astonishment of all who beheld me, and NO EVIL PREVAILED; but, I was made to feel that the hand of God's power had indeed touched me, and my bonds were being loosed.

To educate me from my previous position of unbelief on this subject up to this faith that wrought out the great beginning of this work in me, was the work of many months; and now, after having passed the winter's cold, spring's trying changes, into summer's heat, enduring the fatigue of many miles travel in each season, and also that of a variety of labors unknown to me for more than fourteen years, feeling that the life I now live, I receive by faith daily, I am enabled to record, not only unshaken, but increasing confidence in my gracious Physician, knowing that if I hold fast the beginning of my confidence steadfast unto the end, he who hath commenced a good work in me will not leave it until fully completed. Praise be to him who hath all power in heaven and in earth. And here I pause and inquire for language best suited for the occasion, but as often feel lost in the depths of a silent, wondering joy!

Said one, on hearing my testimony on this matter, and believing it fully, "Do you not know what will be said of this?" Ah! did not I know? had I not left all to follow Christ in this? And now let me say, let infidelity scoff, unbelief doubt and waver, the humble shall hear thereof and be glad, and my soul shall make her boast in the Lord, and in the Lord will I rejoice all the day. And I call upon all who love our adorable Redeemer and Lord in sincerity, to offer up with and for me prayer, thanksgiving and praise, to him whose abundant mercy has been thus manifested toward me, the sinful, weak and frail; that God may be glorified and I be strengthened up in all things for the work before me, even that of testifying that God is true, and that not one of his righteous promises can fail to them who seek their fulfillment in his own appointed way. Praise, honor, thanksgiving and power be unto Him, the only and all-wise God, now and forever. Amen. CAROLINE HILL.

THY WILL BE DONE.

A wailing cry is in the air,
Sighs borne on every passing breeze;
Over our land, once proud and fair,
Rich blood is pouring out in seas.

Howl, daughters of America,
Kneel on the blood-besprinkled sod,
And raise your voices night and day
To supplicate an offended God.

In every house are first-born dead,
Each mother's heart is dead with woe,
And why? The Eternal voice hath said—
"Ye would not let my people go."

Raise up a Moses, gracious Lord,
To lead thy ransomed people on;
America shall hear thy word,
And say, Oh Lord, thy will be done!

For the World's Crisis.

MY WESTERN TOUR.—NO. 3.

My last was written on the morning of my arrival at Winona, July 5th, where I found a cordial welcome at the Burrage House (whose proprietor is a friend of mine), one of the hotels of the pleasant and thriving city of Winona, situate on the Waubeshau Prairie, some six miles in length by two in width, lying upon the Mississippi river, surrounded by high bluffs, which give to the place a beautifully romantic appearance. Here, among the five thousand inhabitants occupying this lovely spot, are a few that love the "blessed hope," and look for the glorious appearing of our Savior Jesus Christ; and since Eld. Himes' late meeting at the Court House in this city, a greater interest is being felt among the people upon the inquiry, "What is truth?"

A hall has been hired, and regular meetings are hereafter to be sustained by the devoted few who "wait for their Lord" in this place and vicinity. Sister Rowel, who resides some six miles south of here, preached last Sabbath in the Court room to a large audience from these words—"The Lord is our lawgiver," to good acceptance, and is to preach in the same place three Sabbaths more; and although I was urgently invited to return from Utica and preach here on the 17th, yet I thought it not best to interrupt the labor of my Sister, who seems to have an "open door" of utterance in this place, as I learn that on July 10th the Court House was crowded to its utmost capacity, to hear her preach "Jesus and the resurrection." I hope that God may bless her labors abundantly.

In the afternoon I enjoyed a pleasant interview with Eld. Thomas R. Allen and family, at his pleasant residence in this city, while we discussed topics of interest, and he told me of his labors in the Carolinas, where he traveled on horseback with Eld. L. Osler in 1843, and scattered publications and lectured, and was acquainted with many devoted christians, who believed in the coming of Jesus as near, who are now, if living, in stern trial on account of the war and its cruel horrors. Bro. Allen's present wife accompanied Sr. C. S. Miner to Palestine, and resided there some time; and I had an account from her lips of many things of interest relative to the present appearance and condition of that land whose every mountain and plain is rendered sacred by association with Bible history; where Jesus performed his miracles, lived, labored and "died for our offences, and was raised again for our justification." She spoke of the awe that rested upon her as she trod the soil once pressed by Jesus' feet, and looked upon the very landscape scenery that his eyes once rested upon.

Bro. and Sr. Allen are very devoted christians. Their house is the weary pilgrim's home, where he may quietly rest, cheered by the voice of prayer and solemn song, made welcome by those who are themselves but pilgrims. May the God of our fathers bless them in their labor of love.

From Bro. Allen's I returned to rest for the night with my friend Burrage, where I was made welcome, and found the rest I sought and much needed. On the morning of July 6th I left Winona, and rode with Bro. Allen six miles west to Minnesota City (a city of oak trees), and there took the cars and passed up Rolling Stone Valley to Utica, which is one of the best farming towns in Minnesota, twenty miles west of Winona, where I was greeted by much valued friends, some of whom were brought to Christ by my feeble instrumentality in Canada East, and were baptized by me. Our meeting was a glad one, and the joy I shared compensated in part for the grief I felt in leaving my friends east, and caused me to realize in a measure the thrilling joy of the final meeting of the saved ones when gathered home by Jesus at his coming. Dear brethren and sisters of the household of faith, let us be so faithful as to meet at last,

"Meet ne'er to sever,
Where love shall wreathe its chain
Round us for ever."

From Wednesday noon until Sabbath July 10th I spent in visiting former friends, going as far west as Eola, near Popple Grove, and south to the town of Fremont, having very pleasant interviews with them. I found that time had made changes with them all. One [illegible] but promised me most faithfully that she would return to the fold of Christ; and others that had been almost overcome by care and sorrow and trials incident to their situation, are being greatly revived, I trust permanently benefited. I hope this will reconcile my friends east to my temporary absence. Be true to the cause, one and all.

On the Sabbath, July 10th, I met my appointment in the south part of Utica, in a place where my beloved brethren Himes and Sheldon have held meetings within a few months past, which produced good results; and in connection with the labors of Elds. P. Ramer and Chas. L. Page, who were present to assist in my meeting, have caused the truth to be received by many. A large congregation were present, who gave good attention to the word, and between the sermons a Sabbath School and Bible class exercise was attended by a large number, which was quite interesting, superintended by Bro. Barrett, in which I participated.

After the close of the meeting, several manifested their interest in the truth and in my visit in a substantial way, not only by saying "God bless you; can't you preach to us longer," but by handing money to assist me to meet my traveling expenses. May that God who is able to make "all grace ABOUND," and who "loveth the cheerful giver," and will reward even the gift of a "cup of cold water" properly given, bless them abundantly, and make their beautiful fields of waving wheat produce a bountiful harvest. And the prospect for farmers in this section of the west is good just now, as the crop is very fair considering the drouth around them, and here even, and the present price of wheat, which is two dollars per bushel at Winona.

By a vote of the congregation, quite unanimous, I was requested to continue my meeting into the week during the time of my stay, preaching each day at about 6 P. M., to which I consented, and have, at the date of this, preached two evenings to good congregations for the season and place. The congregation and interest are increasing. Several earnest testimonies, confessions, etc., indicate a good prospect.

Last evening a youngerly man of talent, a husband and a father, who has enjoyed religion, and even preached the gospel, but was entirely backslidden, rose and confessed his backslidings, in part to remove obstacles out of the way of others, as he said, but also, as I think, to relieve his own feelings; and I hope that ere I leave he and others with whom I conversed will find "peace in believing, and joy in the Holy Ghost."

I do not know how long I shall remain, but expect to go from here to Hesper, on to Franklin, Iowa, to stop a short time, then perhaps down the river to Davenport, thence west by rail to Grinnell, on to Granville, and about July 31st be at DeKalb, Ill., to fill appointments as made by Eld. H. G. McCulloch in that vicinity; remaining until Aug. 7th, thence to Lockport, Ill., to visit my brother, thence by Chicago, Union Mills, Ind., Buchanan and Kalamazoo, Mich., in which places I expect to preach; on through central New York to the Wilbraham campmeeting, and thence home to Stanbridge, C. E. Thus I propose, but God may dispose differently. I will trust him, and hope to be guided aright.

If there should be Adventists between Frankville and Granville, Iowa, who would like me to visit them, and a way for me to cross the country instead of going down the Mississippi, as above planned, they will please write to me immediately at Frankville, Iowa, in care of Jas. S. Walker, giving particulars, and I will do my best to call on them. I would prefer going that way. Write soon, and I will correspond with you on reaching Frankville. Brethren, "pray for me."

FIDELITY IN LITTLE THINGS.

Great virtues are rare; the occasions for them are very rare; and when they do occur, we are prepared for them, we are excited by the grandeur of the sacrifice, we are supported either by the splendor of the deed in the eyes of the world, or by the self complacency that we experience from the performance of an uncommon action. Little things are unforeseen; they return every moment; they come in contact with our pride, our indolence, our haughtiness, our readiness to take offense; they contradict our inclinations perpetually. We would much rather make certain great sacrifices to God, however violent and painful they might be, upon condition that we should be rewarded by liberty to follow our desires and habits in the details of life. It is, however, only by fidelity in little things that a true and constant love to God can be distinguished from a passing fervor of spirit.

Let us remember that God looks in our actions only for the motive. God counts for nothing what is most dazzling to men. What he desires is a pure intention, true docility, and a sincere self-renunciation. All this is exercised more frequently, and in a way that tries us more severely, on common than on great occasions. Sometimes we cling more tenaciously to a trifle than to a great interest. It would give us more pain to relinquish an amusement than to bestow a great sum in charity. We are more easily led away by little things, because we believe them more innocent, and imagine that we are less attached to them; nevertheless, when God deprives us of them we soon discover from the pain of privation how excessive and inexcusable was our attachment to them. The sincerity of our piety is also impeached by the neglect of minor duties. What probability is there that we should not hesitate to make great sacrifices, when we shrink from slight ones?

But what is most dangerous to the mind, is the habit it acquires of unfaithfulness. True love to God thinks nothing small. All that can please or displease him is great. It does not produce constraint and weak scruples, but it places no limits to its fidelity; it acts with simplicity, and as it is not embarrassed with things that God has not commanded, it never hesitates a moment about what he does command, whether it be great or small.

Those persons who are naturally less exact ought to make an inviolable law with themselves about trifles. They are tempted to despise them; they have a habit of thinking them of no consequence; they are not aware of the insensible growth of the passions; they forget even their own most fatal experience. They trust to a delusive courage, though it has before failed them, for the support of their fidelity.

"It is a trifle," they say, "it is nothing." "True; but is it a nothing that will be everything to you, a trifle that you prefer to the will of God, a trifle that will ruin you. There is no real elevation of mind in a contempt of little things; it is, on the contrary, from too narrow views that we consider those things of little importance which have in fact such extensive consequences. The more apt we are to neglect small things, the more we ought to fear the effects of this negligence, be watchful over ourselves, and place around us, if possible, some insurmountable barrier to this negligence.—Fenelon.

FASHIONABLE PIETY.

In instances not a few, as many heart-sick pastors will bear witness, religious parents become voluntary purveyors to the anti-christian propensities of their children. At that period of life when godly counsels and pure examples, and loving, but inflexible firmness, are most needed by the inexperienced youth, just about to look upon life in its more seductive dangers and aspects, do we often see parents, hitherto bright examples of consistent, fervent piety, suddenly transformed in their characters and views. Fathers, long remarkable for the gentle, beautiful dignity of their sway over the household domain, relax the strictness of their principles, and recognize no law higher than the inclinations of their children. Mothers, long known and reverenced for christian simplicity and fidelity, and even awful for their uncompromising opposition to worldly vanities, pleasures and conformities, contrive to back-slide when the time comes for their daughters to leave school, in order to introduce them into life with proper eclat. The poor young creatures, all decorated and prepared for immolation upon the altars of fashion by maternal indulgence or ambition, powerfully remind us of the children caused by the apostate Jewish parents to pass through the fire to Moloch.

The evil here referred to strikes us as one of fatal tendency as well as of alarming and increasing magnitude, not only in our large cities, where fashion is supposed to exert the most potent influence, but in many of our formerly quiet country towns and villages are our christian families giving way to the spirit of the world, and opening their doors to amusements which have long since been placed under condemnation by all the spiritual piety in the land. It seems recently to have been discovered that cards, balls and operas, are in no way incompatible with a creditable profession of religion, and that they constitute innocent and salutary methods for the acquisition and display of such graces as most befit the sons and daughters of educated, opulent christian families.

We invoke the attention of parents to this overflowing fountain of corruption, which threatens to inundate the churches of all our pious denominations, and banish from among us the simplicity of our christian habits and the angelic purity of our christian homes. The example of such a fashionable piety is fearfully contagious, and calls for immediate, earnest interference. One of the most alarming symptoms of this spreading plague is the complacent approbation now and then accorded to it by a popular preacher. We desire none of his laurels, and we shall have a more quiet conscience for having raised this note of warning, whoever may sneer or anathematize. —Dr. Olin.

OVER-DRESSING.

The over-dressing of American ladies in the streets, at hotels, and in the churches, is a subject of general remark among travelers from abroad, as well as sensible people at home; though to little purpose, it would seem, as at no period has the love of display been more conspicuous in our country. American women are slaves to dress; it is the bane of their life, aye, and of the male victims, too, whose lives are connected with theirs. Traveling trunks, almost as large as a small house, must be carried about, filled with all sorts of finery, for a summer jaunt to watering places, and for a winter visit to a city. The father or husband vainly remonstrates; flounced dresses and crinoline must have ample space, and there must be a variety, too, in the costumes. "Heaven save the ladies, how they dress!" may we well exclaim.—Why will they not become more practical? Does the most fastidious critic of female beauty admire a young lady in full toilet more than in simple dress? If beautiful, there is no need of ornament; if plain, she should appear without pretension. We have known ladies who have traveled through the continent of Europe with only a small trunk to contain their wardrobe, and they found a wonderful relief in not having "too much to wear."

FOR FARMERS.

When and how to prune Fruit Trees.

A tree has ever been looked upon as a fit emblem of enduring life. Would that those who assume the responsibilities of training and trimming fruit trees at the present day, could be led to feel that they were dealing with things of life, not only, but with live things, and shape their acts accordingly. Those familiar with budding young seedlings know very well that if they need any trimming, it must be done at the time, or but a few moments before the bud is inserted. If performed two or three hours beforehand, a reaction will have taken place in the usual quiet growth of the tree, and the bark will not so easily separate from the wood to receive the bud. If trimmed a few days before the time of budding, the living action will be found again ascendant, and the budding can be performed with the same ease as if done before being effected by the maiming. And who does not know that the proper time for depletion, if unavoidable, is during the most vigorous and elastic life actions? This principle applied to trimming fruit trees, would put a stop to the severe practice of pruning them during the time of dormancy, and cause that work to be done when the entire tide of vitality and growth is at its fullest flow.

Our Eastern friends for many years in the past have recommended to trim in February and March, while the trees were in the dormant state, and just before they start into the new life of early spring. Now, however, their best writers unite in condemning that practice, and advise to prune during the growing season only. If in a comparatively damp climate their counsel is correct, how much more so in our exceedingly dry and more exhausting atmosphere? The chief objections to late fall, and early spring pruning, are, the drying out of the wounded parts or points, before the circulation commences anew, and the escaping of the sap for a time after it begins to flow. Consequently, such wounds are very slow to heal over, and the exuding sap makes the tree look black and unsightly, for some distance beneath those wounded parts. On the contrary, if the pruning is delayed till the leaves have obtained their full size and power, the drying out and bleeding are prevented, and wounds made at that time very quickly heal over; for then, nature stands ready to administer from the tree's vitality the needed succor with its fast healing properties.

My own experience, drawn from close observation, and the light shed by excellent writers upon this subject, has led me to adopt the practice of pruning only from the middle of June to the first of September, and to trim but little at a time. If a severe cutting away is actually needed in one season, I should divide the infliction into three or four parts, at intervals of two or three weeks. Besides, I am thoroughly convinced, that the knife is used far too freely, and nature's laws are ruthlessly violated, by the thoughtless and inexperienced, who too often cut and maim their choicest fruit trees, without mercy or discretion.—Bebee's Essay on Fruit Culture.

Remedy for Colic in Horses.

A friend of mine, on a visit with me, inquired about a fine horse I formerly owned, but which had died of colic, and said: "If you have another case of the kind, mix flour with water, (not very thick), and give him, if one bottleful does not cure, two will." Since then, having had an animal taken with colic, caused by change of feed, I used the above remedy, and it effected almost an instant cure. Others to whom I have recommended it have been equally successful.—Cor. Wis. Farmer.

How to treat Trees injured by Mice.

If trees are severely injured, or even entirely girdled, they may yet be saved by making three or four clean, smooth cuts, across the girdle, just as you would cut to put on a patch bud-graft, but broader, and fitting nicely to them corresponding pieces cut from the same or another tree, as you would cut the bud from its scion; and it will aid you in the operation if a little wood is taken with the bark, so that you can even slightly interlock them with a short tongue as in grafting. Having put on two or more of these according to the size and necessities of the tree, bind them carefully and firmly, and cover them completely with a grafting composition, made of two parts pitch, two parts rosin, one part beeswax, one part tallow, and one part turpentine, melted together and boiled for half an hour.—American Home Garden.

Nosegays.

Flowers should not be cut during sunshine, or kept exposed to the solar influence, neither should they be collected in large bundles and tied tightly together, as this invariably hastens their decay. When in the room in which they are to remain, the ends of the stalks should be cut clean across with a very sharp knife (never with scissors), by which means the tubes through which they draw the water are left open, so that the water ascends freely, which it will not do if the tubes of the stems are bruised or lacerated. An endless variety of ornamental vessels are used for the reception of such flowers, and they are all equally well adapted for the purpose, so that the stalks are inserted in pure water. This water ought to be changed every day, or once in two days at the furthest, and a thin slice should be cleanly cut off from the end of each stalk every time the water is removed, which will revive the flowers.—Farmer and Mechanic.

To Prevent Cattle from Jumping Fences.

The following singular statement was made at a late meeting of the American Institute Farmers' Club at New York:

"To prevent steers from jumping fences, clip off the eyelashes of the under lids with a pair of scissors, and the ability or disposition to jump is as effectually destroyed as Sampson's power was by the loss of his locks. The animal will not attempt a fence until the eyelashes are grown again. Of this we are informed by Samuel Thorne, the great breeder of Duchess Co., who assured us that he had tested it upon a pair of very breachy oxen. As it was of great value to him, he hopes it will be tried by others."

To prevent Mice from gnawing Harness.

It is said the mice gnaw that part of the harness where there is saltness occasioned by the sweating of the horse. This is thought to be proved in the following manner, as stated by a correspondent of the Prairie Farmer.—ED.

"I found that when I placed a tight box of salt on the girth near my harness, that the box was gnawed and the harness was not. Upon thinking the matter over, I came to the conclusion that it was the salt in the leather that they wanted, so I set a small open box of salt near my harness after that, and I have never been troubled with gnawed harness since. I told my neighbors of my discovery, and all report the same result."

The Children's Corner.

PLEDGE OF THE TRY COMPANY.

We, the Undersigned, hereby pledge ourselves to abstain from Tea, Coffee, Tobacco, and all Intoxicating Drinks as a Beverage.

"IT IS SO COLD."

"Johnny, dear, I wish you would fill up the wood-box. Put on your cap and tippet, and see how smart you can be."

"Oh, mother, I can't, it is so cold!"

Johnny drew up his shoulders with a shiver and moved his chair nearer the stove.

Mrs. Drew was very busy, and being called out of the room just then, did not insist upon an immediate compliance with her wishes. Johnny sat with his feet on the stove hearth, thinking what a dreary season was winter, especially when little boys were called upon to perform sundry unpleasant duties, such as bringing in wood, water, and the like.

Now shoveling paths in the soft, white snow was fun, that is, when one did it just for the sport of it; but when compelled to it, ah, that was another thing. The fact is, Johnny was slow in learning the lesson that labor with some desired good in view, was far better than the same amount of effort for mere pleasure alone. If "all work and no play" makes little boys dull and spiritless, so "all play and no work" often produces the same effect.

But to return to Johnny. While sitting by the stove, still shivering over his journey in prospect to the wood pile, a little playmate called in for him to go on a coasting frolic.

"Mother," he cried, forgetting the cold in his eagerness for sport "can I go coasting with Frank?"

"Oh Johnny, it is so cold!" and Mrs. Drew imitated so precisely her little boy's whining tone, with such a ludicrous shrug of the shoulders, that Johnny, who was a quick-witted child, burst out laughing.

"Mother, I see; the wood-box is to be filled first."

Johnny ran out, followed by Frank, and the box was soon heaped up with fuel for his mother's use.

"My son, you have been very quick in your application of my little sermon. Always remember, my boy, duty first and then pleasure. First the bitter and then the sweet. Although, to judge from your rosy cheeks and smiling face, your task has not been very bitter after all. Am I not right?"

"Mother, I was a lazy fellow, and am quite ashamed of myself. And if your wood-box stands empty again when I am at home, I guess it will not be on account of the cold."

And giving his mother a hearty kiss, Johnny ran away to play with his chosen companion, Frank Roberts.

How is it, boys? Shall mother's wood-box need replenishing while you are off coasting, without a thought of her comfort this freezing weather? You can save her tired feet many weary steps, and your little labors of love will impart a sweeter zest to your skating, coasting, and snowballing frolics.—Child at Home.

CLEANING THE LIPS.

No feature in the face of a child is lovelier than the lips, with rows of pearly teeth playing hide-and-seek behind them. But ah! sometimes mouths which look like rosebuds send forth words unfit for a mother's ear, unfit for the ear in heaven. Some boys, who would not dare to take God's name in vain, say what is coarse and impure, forgetting that this, also, is a sin.

We knew a dear old lady, who, many years ago, taught a little private school in a certain town. Her heart was pure, and therefore her words were sweet. She loved the blessed Savior, and cared most tenderly for the lambs of his fold. She seemed to live in the little children's world, rejoicing and suffering with them. She had always something pleasant to say, and a flower or kiss to give, so that the scholars loved the schoolhouse next best to "mother's room" at home.

They never had to be sent to school, but ran off cheerfully before nine o'clock, that they might speak to her before the little bell rang. She believed what Solomon said about the "rod of correction," but, in some way, she got along without using it very often. Once her heart was deeply grieved by hearing that a little fellow had spoken improper words while out at [illegible] failed to punish so many little ones, she called him to her lap, but, as Master Charlie was nine years old, she asked him to the stand before her. Taking both his hands between her own, and looking into his blue eyes, she asked,—

"Have you been using wicked words to-day, my dear?"

"I didn't swear," whispered Charlie.

"Are you willing to go home and repeat all you have said in your mother's presence?"

Charlie hung his head, and colored deeply, and whispered,—

"No, ma'am; because it would grieve her."

"And have you forgotten, my dear boy, that One who is far holier than she, has heard in heaven those naughty words which came from those lips to-day? I am afraid there is something unclean in your heart; but as I cannot reach that myself, I will ask God to do it. I can reach your lips, and as I am sure they are not fit to give your mother the good-night kiss, nor to say your prayers, I will clean them for you."

She then took from her desk a bowl of water, a tiny bit of soap, and a small sponge, and bidding Charlie open his mouth, she washed it well—teeth, tongue, lips, and all! She then wiped them dry with a soft napkin, and bathed his tear-stained face, on which she pressed the kiss of forgiveness. This simple punishment, and the real sorrow of her who inflicted it, made a deep impression on the minds of her scholars. Charlie is now almost a man, but never since that day has an impure word escaped his lips. At the very thought of such a word, he fancies that he tastes soap, and that he hears again the gentle rebuke of his first teacher.

BOYS, WILL YOU READ IT—HEED IT? WILL EVERYBODY?

MY DEAR GEORGE:—I could have wept, the other day, when I saw you smoking a segar. Only fourteen years old, and already at work to poison your body and soul with tobacco! O, this is sad indeed! My dear boy, you see not what is before you. If you die you would be appalled; and you would fall on your knees, and entreat your Heavenly Father to save you from the wasteful, filthy, wicked practice of using tobacco.

Do not excuse yourself by saying that some great and good men use tobacco. The great and good men who do so are in danger of sinking into very little and very wicked men, before they die.

Tobacco and rum! What twin brothers! What mighty agents of Satan! What a large share of the American people they are destroying! I love my children; and because I love them, I had rather bury them, than see them defile themselves with rum or tobacco.

As Paul said to Timothy, so say I to you "Keep thyself pure." Be clean in your person, and be clean in your heart. But depend upon it, you can be neither, if you use tobacco.

THE EVILS OF TOBACCO.

It costs more than education or religion, the Army or Navy. It costs England and America a sum sufficient to support 50,000 ministers with a salary of $1,000; or more than 100,000 missionaries. The students in one college pay more than $6,000 for cigars yearly. It tends to idleness, poverty, strong drink, and the whole family of vices. It tends to debility, dyspepsia, palsy, cancers, insanity, delirium tremens, and sudden deaths. It weaves a winding sheet around 20,000 in our land, every year!

THE REMEDY.

1. Never use it yourself. 2. Banish it from your families and premises. 3. Purify the church. 4. Rebuke the manufacture and sale of it. 5. Look after schools, and save the young. 6. THE THREE SIEVES.

"O mamma!" cried little Blanche Phillips, "I heard such a tale about Edith Howard. I did not think she could have been so naughty. One day—"

"My dear," interrupted Mrs. Phillips, "before you continue, we will see if your story will pass the three sieves."

"What does that mean, mamma?" said Blanche.

"I will explain it, dear. In the first place, is it true?"

"I suppose so, mamma. I heard it from Miss Parry, who said a friend of Miss White's told her the story; and Miss White is a great friend of Edith's."

"And does she show her friendship by telling tales of her? In the next place, though you can prove it is true, is it kind?"

"I did not mean to be unkind, mamma, but I am afraid I was. I should not like Edith to speak of me as I have spoken of her."

"And is it necessary?"

"Of course not, mamma; there was no need for me to mention it at all."

"Then, dear Blanche, pray that your tongue may be governed, and that you may not indulge in evil speaking, and strive more and more to imitate the meekness of your Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.—Lutheran S. S. Herald.

SUBMISSION.

"In your patience possess ye your souls."—LUKE 21: 12.

Be still, my soul! the Lord is on thy side;
Bear patiently the cross of grief and pain;
Leave to thy God to order and provide—
In every change he faithful will remain.
Be still, my soul! thy best, thy heavenly Friend,
Through thorny ways leads to a joyful end.

Be still, my soul! thy God doth undertake
To guide the future as he has the past:
Thy hope, thy confidence, let nothing shake,
All now mysterious shall be bright at last.
Be still, my soul! the waves and winds still know
His voice who ruled them while he dwelt below.

Be still, my soul! when dearest friends depart,
And all is darkened in the vale of tears,
Then shalt thou better know His love, His heart,
Who comes to soothe thy sorrows and thy fears.
Be still, my soul! thy Jesus can repay
From his own fulness all he takes away.

Be still, my soul! the hour is hastening on
When we shall be forever with the Lord—
When disappointment, grief, and fear are gone,
Sorrow forgot, Love's purest joys restored.
Be still, my soul! when change and tears are past,
All safe and blessed we shall meet at last.

Be still, my soul! begin the song of praise
On earth, believing, to thy Lord on high;
Acknowledge him in all thy works and ways,
So shall he view thee with a well-pleased eye.
Be still, my soul! the Sun of life divine
Thro' passing clouds shall but more brightly shine.

MAN AS HE WAS, IS, AND IS TO BE.

BY JOHN P. BELT.

NUMBER SEVEN.

ALL TO BE JUDGED.

It has been already shown that the Scriptures clearly teach that all, both good and bad, will be made to appear before the judgment-seat of Christ to receive their reward for the things done in the body. But inasmuch as a modern class of believers have been led into the notion that temporal "death is an eternal sleep to the wicked," I wish to examine that point a little further. In the first place, it is assumed that the future judgment on the wicked dead is but a figure of speech, and not to be a personal transaction. This conclusion is the result of having confounded the executive judgment with the judicial. I am well aware that the prevailing idea has been, and to a great extent still prevails, that the human race will all undergo a judicial trial before the judgment-seat of Christ, after the general resurrection of the dead. But this view is not sustained anywhere in the Bible. The fact that the general judgment is introduced in Revelation 20, is no proof that a judicial trial will take place after the termination of the intervening one thousand years between the first and last resurrections. The term judge is used in different senses by all the sacred writers; and the one sense should never be confounded with another.

1. It is used in trying cases according to law and evidence. In this sense it should be understood and applied in Rev. 20: 12, which reads, "And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened; and another book was opened, which is the book of life; and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works."

2. To execute judgment. In this sense it is used and understood in John 5: 26, 27,—"For as the Father hath life in himself, so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself; and hath given him authority to execute judgment also, because he is the Son of man." It is also used in the sense of rule and government.

The entire representation of the position of Jesus Christ in the judgment at the last day, is that of executor of judgment. Therefore, "we must all appear before the judgment-seat of Christ; that every one may receive the things done in the body according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad." Hence the absurdity of placing the executive proceedings before the judicial trial. At the great and final day of retribution, God the Father is the presiding judge, when all the dead stand before him. "His throne was like fiery flame, and his wheels as burning fire. A fiery stream issued and came forth from before him; thousand thousands ministered unto him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before him. The judgment was set and the books were opened." Dan. 7: 9, 10. Then the destiny of all, at that time, is unalterably decided according to their deeds which are recorded in the opened books, which is in harmony with what Jesus said at his first coming, "The words which I deliver unto you, the same shall judge you at the last day." Hence the character of all is formed in this life, which is to decide their destiny in the future life.

In Dan. 7: 13, 14, the position of the Son is shown, "I saw in the night visions, and, behold, one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of days, and they brought him near before him. And there was given him dominion, and glory and a kingdom." This is in harmony with what Jesus also said to his disciples, "The Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his works." Matt. 16: 27. In this representation the position of both Father and Son is distinctly recognized. The Father is presiding judge, who then invests the Son with executive power. This is the time of which Enoch prophesied, saying, "Behold the Lord cometh with ten thousand of his saints, to execute judgment upon all, and to convince all that are ungodly among them of all their ungodly deeds which they have ungodly committed, and of all their hard speeches which ungodly sinners have spoken against him." Jude 14, 15. This whole matter is definitely settled by Jesus Christ in Matt. 25, which presents both the judicial and the executive proceedings. In this is seen the reward of both the good and the bad.

The twenty-fifth chapter of Matthew clearly proves that the rewards are for the deeds done by both classes in this life. Hence the conclusion is based on the impregnable ground that the inheritance of the saints is not given, nor is the doom of the wicked awarded until the time when the books are opened and the sea and the graves give up the dead which are in them, inasmuch as every man is then judged according to his works which are recorded in the books. Then is the time when the wicked of all ages will be cast into the lake of fire, "which is the second death." Therefore the natural or temporal death which had consigned them to the graves cannot be their eternal doom. For when they are taken from the grave and stand before the great white throne, they are then made to live again, or there would be no force in the language which denotes the second death in the lake of fire.

From the Scriptures which I have noticed, together with many others which might be quoted, I am compelled to believe what Jesus taught when he declared that "the hour is coming when all that are in the graves shall come forth; they that have done good unto the resurrection of life, and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation."

It is urged by those who deny that the wicked dead will live again, that the language used by Christ as recorded in Luke 20, is conclusive evidence of their theory that none but the righteous dead will be raised from their graves. But a strict examination of what Christ said in answer to the question propounded to him by the Sadducees which Luke has recorded, shows that the argument of Christ was not designed to disprove the general resurrection of all who had died, whether good or bad. The point at issue was concerning a case where seven brothers had, during their lifetime, married the same woman, after the death of each successive brother, in accordance with the law of Moses; all of them having finally died, and last of all the woman also being dead, the inquiry was, whose of the seven should she be the wife in the resurrection? The error of the Sadducees which Christ confuted was relative to that point, which he told them originated from their "not knowing the Scriptures, nor the power of God;" for he said unto them, "The children of this world (age or life) marry and are given in marriage; but they which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world (age or life) and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry, or are given in marriage; neither can they die any more; for they are equal to the angels; and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection." Luke 20: 34, 35, 36.

Now let the question propounded be kept in view, and there need be no difficulty in the narrative; nor in the answer which Jesus gave to them, which he confines, in the main, to what is involved in the inquiry. He first shows, not the undying nature of all who will be raised from the dead, but such only as are accounted worthy to obtain that world and the resurrection from the dead; thereby showing that the two events are not identical, for it does not necessarily follow that the fact of being raised to life again, makes such an individual worthy of eternal life.

The law of Moses was only temporal, and had reference to the marriage ceremony under the temporary economy, which was to pass away and be succeeded by a better and more enduring state. The Sadducees greatly erred in supposing that the Scriptures indicated a continuance of the marriage obligations in the life to come. It was this error which Christ confuted, by showing that his chosen ones would be raised to die no more, being then equal with the angels, and would neither marry nor be given in marriage in that state of endless life. That this is the meaning which Christ meant to convey to them is confirmed by what he immediately added, "Now that the dead are raised, even Moses showed at the bush, when he calleth the Lord the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. For he is not a God of the dead, but of the living; for all live unto him." The promise was made to Abraham, repeated to Isaac, and again renewed to Jacob, of an everlasting inheritance in the world to come, which they, with all such as are accounted worthy to obtain that everlasting possession, will receive when they are raised up from the dead and are made immortal. That class will be the sons of God, who will live unto him.

It was to show this fact with definite clearness that our Savior was so particular in coupling the two events together. The wicked dead will not be raised to die no more; for they are to die the second death. They are not heirs to the promise of an everlasting possession; therefore they will not live unto God; consequently they will neither marry nor be given in marriage, for they will "be stubble; and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch." That day has not yet come, and all the wicked are not yet burned. And to gather all the tares to be burned, they must first be raised for that purpose.

Then again an objection is urged against the doctrine of a general resurrection of the dead, which is founded on what is said in the prophecy of Isaiah concerning certain wicked lords or powers that had oppressed the people of God, which reads as follows: "They are dead, they shall not live; they are deceased, they shall not rise; therefore hast thou visited and destroyed them, and made all their memory to perish." Isa. 26: 14. This is claimed to be one of the positive texts of Scripture in reference to the state of all the wicked dead. Hence they rely on it with the fullest confidence as overwhelming testimony that the wicked dead will have no future retribution; much less a resurrection to life.

But the whole connection in which this prophecy and song stands shows that a misapplication is made of where and when this text is to apply. The saying is found in a song which will be sung at a time and in a place which the prophet has designated. Beginning with the twenty-fifth chapter, the prophet is praising God for the wonderful judgments that are narrated in the closing verses of the twenty-fourth. He then pours out a song of praise for the deliverance of his people. Then he continues his prophecy, saying, "In this mountain (where the Lord of hosts is to reign before his ancients gloriously) he will destroy the face of the covering cast over all people, and the veil that is spread over all nations. He will swallow up death in victory, and the Lord God will wipe away tears from off all faces; and the rebuke of his people shall he take away from off all the earth. When will death be swallowed up in victory? Paul says it is "when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality.

The song is not then to be sung until all wicked powers shall have been destroyed and the saints are made immortal and are standing with the Lamb on Mount Zion, with everlasting joys upon their heads. Then to whoever the text may refer, whether to dead tyrants who had oppressed the people of God, or to the devil who held the saints under his power and dominion in the graves, the song portrays victory over them all; for the second death has been visited upon them. They have now had an everlasting destruction from off the earth. Truly may it now be sung, "Lord, thou wilt ordain peace for us; for thou also hast wrought all our works in us. O Lord our God, other lords beside thee have had dominion over us; but by thee only will we make mention of thy name. They are dead, they shall not live; they are deceased, they shall not rise; therefore hast thou visited and destroyed them, and made all their memory to perish." But of the saints, they had been in their chamber or safe pavilion with their Lord while the indignation was pouring out in the punishment of the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity, and the earth was made to disclose her blood, and no more to cover her slain.

The saints, who had been dead in consequence of their former mortal state, have not only arisen from their dusty beds and made alive; but the healing leaves and fruit of the tree of life acts on them as the dew of herbs, and they grow up as calves for the stalls. All sickness and sorrow and pain inherent to mortality have now passed away, and there will be no more death, for the former things which were temporal are now superseded by the things which are eternal.

For this happy state let us daily strive, and be found, by patient continuance in well doing, seeking for glory, honor, immortality, eternal life, which the Lord our righteous judge will bestow at his appearing and his kingdom. Be ye therefore ready for the Lord is standing at the door.

THE SAME JESUS WILL COME AGAIN.

That Jesus Christ was here once in the flesh, so that the human family beheld him and conversed with him, no man pretends to deny who believes the Bible to be the word of God. But as regards his second coming, how various are their opinions. Some say he comes at death, others say he came in a Roman army at the destruction of Jerusalem. If they can believe the testimony of the first, why not of the second coming? The Bible is just as plain in one case as the other. In the first, only a part of the world saw him; but in the second coming every eye shall see him. Rev. 1: 7.

The Bible speaks of his humble form, and of his glorious body; in both cases he is described as being in shape as man. How vain it is, then, to try to make it appear that his second coming is not visible and future. He was seen to go away. The angels said he should come in like manner (visibly). Christ says, "If I go away, I will come again." Paul says he appeared once, "and unto them that look for him" he would "appear the second time" to save them. Such passages of Scripture are to the point. We have Christ's testimony, the angels', and Paul's. If our father were to set out in our presence for a foreign land, to prepare us a comfortable home, and should tell us, If I go to prepare a place for you, I will come again to take you there,—would we believe the truth was told us if, instead of coming himself, he would send a Roman army to slay and destroy us? All must say, No!

We believe Christ will appear personally, that his second coming is still in the future. Christ warns us to beware of false Christs and false prophets between his going away and his coming again, but does not caution us to beware of any after he comes. At his second coming all will know that it is he. There will be no mistaking; for all the tribes of the earth shall mourn when they shall see him coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. Matt 24.

We may conclude from the signs of the times his coming is nigh at hand, even at the door. Then at his coming the righteous will triumph over death and the grave, saying, "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? But thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."

Jesus will come himself,—the same Jesus that was seen to go up into heaven. After his resurrection he told unbelieving Thomas, "It is I, handle me and see. A spirit hath not flesh and bones as ye see me have." This same immortal Son of God, this same Jesus, is coming again the second time. We are commanded to look for him; and for all who love his appearing there is a crown of righteousness laid up in store. It is the crowning of all our efforts; it is our only hope.

"YE ARE THE BRANCHES."

Says Justice, "Cast away the branch
On which no fruit is found,
And suffer it no more to be
A cumberer of the ground."

But Love says, "Wait a little while,
Trim it with utmost care,
Perchance it may your toil repay,
And choicest fruit yet bear."

With love and mercy unsurpassed,
God waits to see the Spirit's fruit,
And not till there is no more hope,
Will he the worthless one cast out.

He suffers not a branch to stay
In Christ the living Vine,
Unless Faith, Love, and Purity,
Do with its leaves entwine.

He'll not destroy the tender plant,
E'en though the harvest be not great,
But purge it till its boughs are bent
Beneath their weight of golden fruit.

LUCY R. OTIS.

WHAT IS TRUTH?

Truth is like a smooth, limpid stream, on which the eye can rest with pleasure, as it can see every thing distinctly at the bottom. The foundation is a rock, and that rock is Christ. No lie is of the truth; he that is not with Christ is against him. He that gathers not with him scatters abroad. A man who cannot stand by the Bible, as the very word of God, cannot be said to have the truth. Truth will make us free. Truth is what we need in preference to cunningly devised fables. Truth alone will stand in the great burning day. Our religion is built upon the sand, if its support be merely on a human record of a divine revelation. A man that will go forth as a flaming herald with the Bible in his hand, thinking to convert the world with loose views of the inspiration of the Scriptures, methinks will be shorn of his power. A "prophet that hath a dream, let him tell a dream, and he that hath my word, let him speak my word faithfully. What is the chaff to the wheat? saith the Lord. Is not my word like as a fire? saith the Lord; and like a hammer that breaketh the rock in pieces?"

The church of Christ, if I understand the meaning of plain scriptural language, must be holy, without "spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing," cleansed "with the washing of water by the wood." Now how can it be said to be cleansed by the word, if it do not believe the word? The church of Christ must have faith in order to be "without spot or wrinkle." Faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the word of God. Where faith reigneth it declareth men to be the friends of God; but where unbelief reigns, it declareth them to be his enemies. Heb. 3: 18; Rev. 21: 8.

Faith believeth the word of God, but unbelief questioneth the same. Ps. 106: 24. What I ask is the word of God? Does it teach that man is immortal? Does the happiness of a saint commence as soon as they die? We read, "the dead know not any thing." But some will have it, Bible or no Bible, that happiness commences immediately after death; that happiness will not be deferred till the resurrection; but as soon as death has passed upon one, his soul will be swallowed up in life; that when we have once passed from this shore we shall be quickly wafted to the shore of immortality. Let me refer to Cor. 15: 12,—"Now if Christ be preached that he rose from the dead, how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead? But if there be no resurrection of the dead, then is Christ not risen. . . . Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." We could quote many more passages if it was necessary; but to a discerning mind, this text alone is enough to convince the seekers after truth. But if they will not hear Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead.

CHRIST'S REFUTAL OF SADDUCEEISM.

In Luke's account of the Sadduceeic objection against the resurrection and Christ's refutal thereof, he introduces the subject thus: "Then came to him certain of the Sadducees, which deny that there is any resurrection; and they asked him, saying, Master, Moses wrote unto us, if any man's brother die having a wife, and he die without children, that his brother should take his wife, and raise up seed unto his brother. There were therefore seven brethren; and the first took a wife and died without children. And the second took her to wife, and he died childless. And the third took her; and in like manner the seven also; and they left no children and died. Last of all the woman died also. Therefore in the resurrection whose wife of them is she? for seven had her." Lk. 20: 27–33.

This objection seemed to be levelled against the resurrection of the righteous, for those seven brethren represented the righteous, in that they kept the law of Moses. So if they could only have shown a good reason why the righteous might not live again, it would operate with greater force against the resurrection of the wicked. But their argument was worthless, in that they had no right to infer that matrimonial relations would be revived in the resurrection; so that the inference was sufficiently refuted by one of a contrary character; as in the reply of Christ, "The children of this world marry, and are given in marriage; but they which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry nor are given in marriage; neither can they die any more; for they are equal unto the angels; and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection." Vs. 34–36.

The resurrection of the unjust cannot be called "the resurrection from the dead," seeing that their resurrection comes last, and includes all that remain dead, and so cannot be "from the dead." It may possibly be a resurrection from death, but not from the dead; for the original of this phrase has the article and noun in the plural, and so means from those that are dead. So although "there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and of the unjust," the resurrection of the latter cannot be called the resurrection from the dead; neither can the subjects thereof be counted worthy to obtain that world, hence will die again; for such are neither the children of God nor children of the resurrection. For the just only are legitimate children, the rest not answering the end for which the resurrection was designed.

So, although Christ's argument thus far corresponds to the Sadduceeic objection to the resurrection of the righteous, it does not sanction a non-resurrection of the unjust. If it did, it would make him like some of our own day, who have held to both sides of that question; for he says in continuation of his reply to the Sadducees: "Now that the dead are raised, even Moses showed at the bush, when he called the Lord the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. For he is not the God of the dead but of the living, for all live unto him." Vs. 37–38.

If the dead are wholly dead, as the Sadducees held, then of course "God is not the God of the dead," seeing that they cannot recognize or know him; but as he called himself the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, while they were dead, this goes to prove not that they were alive and dead at the same time, but their future revival; when all live unto him in the resurrection state. Hence God called himself the God of Abraham, etc., in contemplation of that time when the dead are to be raised, in distinction from some subjects of that resurrection of whom he will not be their God.

For that all the dead are included here is evinced first, by the fact that "the dead" is a general term appliable to all the dead, and second from the fact that Christ declared that "all live unto him," in that resurrection contemplated by the time when God will become the God of Abrahamic characters.

"All live unto him," is an assertion predictive of God's design in reference to what he contemplated concerning their revival, and not the condition in which the dead live in after their revival; as otherwise it would not belong to the argument, and so would have had no convincing power with the Sadducees.

FAITH.

"Earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered to the saints."—Jude 3.

The faith here spoken of evidently was not intended to refer to any subdivision of the christian faith; but that it was of the christian faith in general is evident by the preceding part of the verse; which shows that he was writing of the common salvation.

If, then, Jude wrote of the christian faith in general, it embraced all the doctrines taught in the new dispensation; and if so, it must be of full force so long as the gospel dispensation shall continue. Luke 16: 16 says the law and the prophets were until John, since which time the kingdom of God is preached. "Think not," saith the Savior, "that I am come to destroy the law or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill" (Matt. 5: 17); and then in the same chapter proceeds to teach them—"Ye have heard that it hath been said, an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth." Where have we heard this said? Your reference Bible will quote you to Ex. 22: 24, where God gave this law through Moses; of which our Savior says, "I came not to destroy, but to fulfill."

Now to fulfill is to perform, or accomplish. So when Jesus had performed what the law required, had done what the prophets foresaw and revealed that he would do, had offered himself a sacrifice for the sins of the world, the substance of all that had in the law been foreshadowed, he said—"it is finished." The object of the law is then accomplished: it is fulfilled. Wherefore Paul says (Eph. 2: 15), "Having abolished in his flesh the enmity, even the law of commandments, contained in ordinances."

So we see the line of demarkation between the old and the new dispensations is very plain. Now until such a marked change can be shown, or an abrogation of the doctrines delivered to the saints at the commencement of the gospel dispensation, we ought earnestly to contend for the faith once delivered to the saints. Not that we are to contend for this or that doctrine which may happen to suit us; but, till a new dispensation is given us later than the gospel, let every one be cautious how he shall say this is in force, and that is obsolete. Let him read in the last chapter of Revelation—"If any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book. And if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book."

If, then, the gospel dispensation holds good, every whit, until another later shall come, when shall such come? Hear Paul (Gal. 1: 8),—"Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that we have preached unto you, let him be accursed." No, this is the last dispensation we are to receive till the angel shall stand upon the sea and upon the earth and declare that time shall be no more. If so, then every form of doctrine and observance given to the saints at the beginning still holds good. Or, if any part has been abrogated, why are we not told where, by what authority, and how much?

Now one says that christianity has become so popular that the world will not persecute it; thus making obsolete the saying of 2 Tim. 3: 12,—"Yea, and all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." Another tells us that since the baptism of the Holy Ghost, water baptism has ceased. We ask, by what authority? Again we are told, while water baptism is held to wash away sins, that the Holy Spirit is not with the church of modern times; that his office to christians has ceased. Contrary to John 14: 16,—"And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever." Has "for ever" ceased? John 14: 23,—"If a man love me he will keep my words, and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him." Is this obsolete? When did it cease? Where is the scripture that informs us? Again we are told that in the closing commission of our Savior as recorded by Matthew and Mark: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature; he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved"! O yes, that is all true. But how about the next verse?—"And these signs shall follow them that believe; in my name shall they cast out devils," etc. "And they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover." O! this we are told ceased in the first century. But just in connection with this Matthew records that Christ promised—"Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world."

If, then, Christ is with his people to the end of the world, is it not obvious also that the other promises given in the same breath, relating to the signs that should follow, are promises to the church to the end of time? Or, has the gospel dispensation ceased? These signs were to follow them that should hereafter believe by the preaching of the disciples to the end of the world.

We feel bound to contend earnestly for all the faith once delivered to the saints. But, hold! you are getting on Mormon ground when you contend for miracles in this day. I contend for that for which the Bible contends. Do you reject baptism because the Mormons practice it? No, that is taught in the Bible; they may have some truth to make the falsehood go down. Well, if so, may not the faith in healing be a gospel doctrine, though sometimes held by imposters? Or, is its being found with the Mormons a proof of its untruth? Well, but all Christendom rejects it. But is that a proof that it is not true? Such conclusion would argue that we must be conformed to public opinion without regard to the word of God. But I dare not take away any part of what is written, and say it is not present Bible.

I own, friend, you have the argument on your side; but if these signs were to continue with the church to the end of time, why is it that we see none of them in the church? A very good reason why they are not in the church. "For there is no man which shall do a miracle in my name, that can lightly speak evil of me."—Mark 9: 39. So while the church rejects the doctrine, think ye they can receive the gift? Impossible. Well, but I should think it might be found with individuals, if the church do reject it. So it might, if God saw fit to work in that way. But you recollect it was said of Jesus that "he did not many mighty works there because of their unbelief." And our Savior says concerning these last days, "Nevertheless, when the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" Evidently foreseeing that he should find but very little. And the principle by which he works is always in accordance with his saying—"According to your faith be it unto you."

But as touching the healing of the sick, have you not read in the Scriptures (written by James 5: 14, about forty years after the ascension of our Lord) saying, "Is any sick among you, let him call for the elders of the church, and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord; and the prayer of faith shall save the sick." Again our Savior says (Matt. 21: 22), "And all things whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive." Well, positively I should not dare to lay my hands on the sick, and anoint them in the name of the Lord. I should consider it sacrilege. What! sacrilege to obey the gospel?

Well, friend, according to your doctrine would not the sick always be healed, and nobody die? Say not, according to my doctrine; but say, according to Scripture doctrine. But "ye do err, not knowing the scriptures, nor the power of God." You acknowledge such things did take place in the apostolic age, as healing the sick, etc. Were all healed? Jesus raised several from the dead, but did he raise all who died in his time? Did Elijah save all the widows in Israel in the time of famine? Or did Elisha cleanse all lepers when he healed Naaman? So God never designed to prevent death in all cases by miraculous healing; but that his name should be glorified.

But you read that nothing should be impossible. "In faith,—in faith, brother." Do not forget the faith. It may alway be duty to ask; but when God gives special faith, he'll be sure to answer. And what if the request be not granted; is it becoming to be like Jonah, angry?

But we read that "faith cometh by hearing." How then can we have faith that God will heal any individual at our request? How is it that our Savior upbraided his disciples for lack of faith? (Mark 4: 40),—"Why are ye so fearful? how is it that ye have no faith?" Here they were upbraided for lack of faith in what they could not have heard particularly; but should have learned, from what God had done, to consider what he might do. Again (Mark 11: 22), Jesus commanded his disciples to "have faith in God." Why this command, if not in their power to exercise faith? But the next verse gives in general terms a promise of whatsoever the disciple shall desire, in these words,—"He shall have whatsoever he saith." Well, this is objected to on the ground that the promise was given only to the apostles. Suppose it was given to the apostles; he tells them, "What I tell you in darkness, that speak ye in light; and what ye hear in the ear, that speak ye upon the house tops."

So it is recorded here (Matt. 10: 27), as a part of the faith once delivered to the saints, except you prove that what was given to the apostles was not to the saints, and it was given that we might read it, and by thus hearing might have faith. And this is a general promise, that touches all cases. We may, therefore, by hearing the word, have general faith for all cases, and thus in each case make it particular faith.

LONG ARTICLES.

Whether continued or not, they are tedious. In the face of the many hints and persuasions, urging contributors to be brief in their remarks, there is shown a purpose to gratify an insatiate desire for prolixity of argument, at the expense of the many who don't care a straw for them. Bro. Grant has urged short articles, until the requests are lost in the eagerness of many to monopolize all the blank paper possible. Now if he had not possessed the spirit of forbearance, borrowed from the mind of Christ, he would long ago have got disgusted with the position of Editor, and retired from a work so utterly unappreciated and uncared for by these doctrinal expositors.

Those who have bushels and backloads of prophetical expositions on hand, seem to think that, by cutting and quartering their long mathematical speculations,—long enough to fill a yellow-covered novel,—they are then of the consistency of a cannon-ball, and, like that projectile, will crush all before them. Then, of course, the Editor is expected to parade before the public a detachment from the whole brigade of beastly non-descripts. Just as though a continued article is not a long one; and that the student of prophecy has a special prerogative of thrusting upon the notice of the whole list of Crisis readers a score of interpretations, which are as uninteresting, and as difficult of a unanimous solution, as would be to them the writing of a Sanscrit poem; and all because he presumes his position warrants their publication.

Again, I know of twenty Crisis readers—christians too—whose literary qualifications are of no mean order either, who are ever inquiring, Why this monopoly of paper for a purpose so incomprehensible to the masses? They won't even look at such an article. Not through any prejudicial reason, however, but because every expositor claims his position correct. Thus we see a heterogeneous pyramid of material is exhausted to no purpose. "Fear God and keep his commandments: this is the whole duty of man,"—a responsibility of no mean consequence, when compared with the imaginative conceits of a presumptive brain.

If it would be in order, I should like to inquire why such a recital of historic facts, fancies, and speculations, may not be judiciously dispensed with, without detriment to Christ's cause, in order to give place to the more absorbing topic of practical godliness? I never wrote but one "continued article" in my life; and if I retain my reason, I will try never to write another. I believe I have acquired a little modesty since then, and trust my sense of individual equality will ever prompt me to acknowledge the wants of the masses, even at the risk of fretting a few.

This may be considered a fierce attack upon those whose biblical research is the cornerstone of our prosperity. I will simply say, by way of apology, that in preparing myself for the judgment, I am a unit among the multitudes, who live and labor with the most undying solicitude for the commonwealth of Christ, in this world; and hope and wait for these heavy ears to soon catch the sound of his chariot wheels, freighted with the Prince of peace, crowned in the world to come. But while here, I claim a right to read, observe, investigate, and rebuke, and also demand the reform of a custom, which is alike arbitrary and compulsory upon the rights and immunities of the many, who argue that the greatest good ought to be the expression of the greatest number.

"Though modern practice somewhat differs quite,
'Tis just as well to think before you write;
Redundance places memory on the rack,
For brains may be o'erloaded like the back."

Blackstone, Mass. C. G. CARRE.

GOOD ADVICE.—Said a distinguished American statesman to a debating club of young men: "Life is a book of which we can have but one edition. As it is first prepared it must stand forever. Let each day's actions, as they add another page to the indestructible volume, be such as that we shall be willing to have an assembled world read it."

THE ITALIAN MISSION.

Dear Bro. Grant, and all Brn. and Srs. in Christ Jesus:—It is with deep gratitude to our heavenly Father, who has brought us to our place of destination in safety, that I write you my first letter from La Tour, Italy, which place we have chosen as our home for the present. We left London for Italy the 30th of June. It seemed a waste of time and money to remain there longer; and I longed much to commence my misionary work in this field, to which I feel called of God. I was enabled to leave so soon, through the kind donation of English brethren and sisters to the amount of 16£., 17s., 6d., viz., Bro. R. Robertson, London, 6£., 6s.; Bro. Joseph Curry, Liverpool, 3£.; Brn. and Srs. of Leeds, through Bro. C. A. Thorp, and himself, 5£., 11s., 6d.; and Sr. Jane Templeton, Kilmarnock, Scotland, 1£. As I left England sooner than I expected, when I wrote my letter of the 8th June, to be able to do, I thought it not best to write again from London, but save the expense of postage in these hard times, and write all from Italy. We had an opportunity while in London to speak personally with Dr. Cumming, who expressed the opinion that "all christians believe in the second coming of Christ. He also said he had no confidence in American Adventists on account of the extravagance of their opinions." I also had an interview of three hours with another English Adventist, Lord Congleton, who expressed himself similarly in regard to American Adventists. Mr. Freeman, to whom I had reference from Bro. S. Knight, received me kindly, but coldly, and introduced me to his pastor, Mr. Darling, quite an intelligent gentleman, who speaks French and German well. I assisted him one Sunday in his chapel, and learned from him that there are in London fourteen chapels of Advent believers of different names, but were all united in believing in the restoration of the Jews to Jerusalem, and the rebuilding of the Temple of Solomon: that Antichrist will sit down in the Temple; that Jesus Christ will be visible in the heavens during the millennium, and all the Jews will be converted to him (?).

I found Mr. Brown, a zealous disciple of Dr. Thomas of New York. We read in the Bible that John the Baptist baptized in sign of repentance; the church since Christ baptize for the remission of sins; and Mr. B. in London baptizes for the return of the Jews. Mr. B. has suffered much persecution for his opinions, but is still very zealous, and with his little church of three members observes the Lord's Supper every Sunday. Bro. R. Robertson's opinion is that the doctrine of the coming of Christ, which was preached in England sixty years ago and rejected, has gone West to America, which has now the honor of bearing this glorious truth to other nations. Any good American Adventist will be very kindly received by him and treated as a brother.

I was not able to visit the brethren in Liverpool and Leeds, but communicated with them by letter, and received from them kind sympathy in word and deed. We were compelled to stop in Paris thirty hours, and had the privilege of meeting there an honorable and very dear Polish friend, who was a brother exile in London when we left that city for the United States thirteen years ago. We came via. Macon, Chambery and Mont Cenis to Turin, and enjoyed the magnificent mountain scenery very much. We rode by cars several hours through a lovely valley with mountains on either side, sometimes very close and high, sometimes more distant, always charming, till we came to the little village of St. Michael, where we changed cars for diligence, and began to ascend the mountain. We were very comfortably seated, and our ride delightful, over a road hard and smooth, through a vale in the mountains that seems to have been formed expressly as a means of communication and for the enjoyment of those who can appreciate the wonderful works of God. The ascent for three hours is not rapid. Hamlets are frequent, and the sides of the mountain, which are cultivated wherever it seems possible, look green and smiling, the scene being much enhanced by the torrents of pure crystal water that fall from the mountain steeps to the valley beneath.

We left St. Michael with six horses; but after riding five hours we stopped a half hour, and a fresh team, consisting of two large horses and twelve powerful mules was substituted, and in three hours more we were at the top of the mountain, on which is a Custom House. It is the dividing line between France and Italy. It was midnight. The mules were taken off and with the two horses we made a rapid but safe descent to the little village of Suza, where we submitted to examination, but our passports were not demanded.

From Susa we took cars again and came via. Turin to Pinerolo, a city of thirty thousand inhabitants a short distance south-east of Turin, where we had intended to stop. But after conversation with two French Waldenses we concluded to come to this place, ten miles further, which we reached at ten o'clock at night and were glad to stop, being travel worn and very weary. I requested to be taken to a hotel kept by a Protestant. On entering I introduced myself to the landlord and his wife, French Waldenses, and told them of our circumstances, that I was a missionary from the United States, and that during our long journey we had expended our means so that I had but one dollar in my pocket. They manifested for us much christian sympathy and very kindly offered their service and credit as we needed. They assisted us in finding temporary lodgings at twenty francs per month, and let me have indispensable furniture for the present.

I have spoken with several of the inhabitants upon the coming of Christ and been listened to with much eagerness. At present I can only say that this is a small place, containing some three thousand inhabitants. It has three churches; two French Protestants (Presbyterian) with but one pastor, and a college with eight professors, also a school for girls, and one Catholic church. I find the inhabitants, as far as I have seen them, very kind, simple-hearted people and quite intelligent. They receive me with the greatest kindness, and listen to me when I speak to them of the truths of the kingdom with much eagerness. And, I judge by present appearances, that this field of labor is very extensive. I have already received an invitation from a gentleman who lives near Milan, to spend a month or two with him next November, and give lectures every evening in his house. May God in his mercy bless this mission.

Dear brethren and sisters, pray for us, that [illegible] and please consider our critical position here, our credit among strangers, who observe us very closely, and generously send us as soon as possible means with which we can pay our debts and establish ourselves comfortably. God bless you all.

Your faithful servant and brother waiting for the kingdom, M. B. Czechowski.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Tuesday, Aug. 2, 1864.

Torn or Mutilated Bills.—In sending Government bills or postal currency to this office, please be careful to send us bills that are not torn or mutilated, as all such are taken only at a discount, according to the size of the mutilation.

PRICE OF PAPER.

Printing paper is now two or three times as high as it was four years ago. Nearly all papers have been obliged to raise the price of their papers about one half, and some to double their former rates, while many have suspended. We may find it necessary to increase the price of the Crisis. We think it is now one of the cheapest papers published, when the size and quality of the paper are considered, including the fact that we have no paid advertisements in its columns. It is now nearly double its original size, and printed on much better paper.

We should be glad to continue it at the same price as heretofore, if possible; but we know our readers would much rather that the price should be advanced to $2.50, or even $3.00, rather than that it should be embarrassed with a debt, or be suspended.

If we get a hearty and prompt response to the "bills" sent out this week, as we hope to, it may enable us to continue a while longer at the present price, until printing paper may be lower.

We think "our paper" was never accomplishing more good than at the present time, if we can form an opinion from the letters we are daily receiving. New subscribers continue to multiply, while all things show that we are now just at that point in the history of the world where we need all the helps we can get in order to stand against the wiles of the devil.

We might lessen our expenses considerably by cutting off the poor; but we trust we shall never be obliged to do that. If those who can, will pay promptly in advance, we think we shall come out all right.

"I AM THE DOOR."

Bro. Grant:—Will you please give an exposition of John 10: 9,—"I am the door: by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out, and find pasture." In and out of what pasture?

Also, John 5: 24,—"Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation, but is passed from death unto life."

Yours in search of the truth,

D. M. Kinter.

In John 10: 9, and the context, Jesus compares himself to a shepherd, and his disciples to a flock of sheep. The shepherd, when taking care of his flock, leads them forth from the fold to find pasture, watches over them during the day, and returns with them at its close, and sees that they are not disturbed or injured during the night. This faithful care of the shepherd illustrates the care that Jesus takes of his followers.

The phrase, "go in and out," in the Hebrew style, refers to all the deeds of a person's life. Jesus becomes the guardian and guide in all the actions of his followers, as the shepherd does of the sheep. Hence "by," or through him, we live, receive strength to perform our duties, and protection from the snares of the adversary; and this fact is illustrated by the shepherd and the sheep; as he leads the flock forth from the fold to pasture, sees to all their wants, and then returns them again at night, so Jesus goes forth with his disciples during the day, in the various duties of life, returns with them at night, watches over them during the night, and goes forth with them again in the christian warfare. This continues till life's toil is ended, and the angels are sent to gather the faithful to their reward.

We now come to notice John 5: 24,—"He that heareth my word and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation, but is passed from death unto life."

The question now arises, does a person actually obtain everlasting life at the time he hears the words of Jesus, and believes on him that sent him? or, does he then pass into a condition where he can lay hold of the promise of eternal life when Jesus comes? Does a man at conversion really put on immortality? or, does he simply change his relation to the Lord, so that he is in a condition to receive everlasting life at the time appointed? If men put on immortality at conversion, then why do they die afterwards? and, what becomes of their immortality when they backslide? It is not proper to apply the term "everlasting life" to any one so long as there is a possibility of his dying; because immortal, or everlasting life, signifies a life "that shall never end."

In John 6: 40, we read, "This is the will of him that sent me, that every one that seeth the Son, and believeth on him, may have everlasting life: and I will raise him up at the last day." This, and many other passages, show that the time to receive the promised reward of "everlasting life" is at the last day, or when Jesus comes.

Paul says, in Col. 3: 3, 4,—"Your life is hid with Christ in God: when Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory."

We think this makes the matter very plain, and shows that the "everlasting life," which is promised to the believer, is not actually received in this life, but is reserved for the faithful in the hands of Jesus, and will not be received till he comes the second time.

WOULD THEY DO IT FOR JESUS?

A number of women,—ministers' wives and others,—who hold high positions in the fashionable society of New England, have formed a league, expressed in the following language:—

"New England Women's League for Diminishing the use of Luxuries during the War."

Boston, July 4th, '64.

We, the undersigned, women of the United States, impelled by a deep sense of the peril of our beloved country, and of the sacrifices and sufferings of our brave soldiers, yet abating not a jot of our assurance that God will give success to our righteous cause, provided the people do their duty,—would here express our purpose to perform our part toward bringing about this great end, and our desire to contribute more largely to the strength of our armies, and the relief of the suffering throughout our land.

We do, therefore, pledge ourselves, during the war,

1. To retrench our expenditure in dress, in the household, in social entertainments, and in all luxuries.

2. Without renouncing such foreign articles as we deem necessary for health and comfort, yet, to give the preference to the products and manufactures of our own country."

It is to be feared that these women will not now dress as plainly as christianity requires. Let us read a few words from the Bible:—

"In like manner also, that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety; not with braided hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array; but (which becometh women professing godliness) with good works." "Whose adorning, let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting the hair, and of wearing of gold, or of putting on of apparel; but let it be the hidden man of the heart, in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price. For after this manner in the old time the holy women also, who trusted in God, adorned themselves, being in subjection unto their own husbands."—1 Tim. 2: 9, 10; 1 Pet. 3: 3-5.

Jesus would have his "bride" dress "in modest apparel," without "gold, or pearls, or costly array." In his sight, she looks the best thus dressed. Is not the taste of the Bridegroom-King of kings to be preferred to that of the Paris harlots, who originate the fashions of the day?

Will Jesus be pleased, when he returns to be married to his professed bride, to find that she has paid no attention to his wishes in this matter, but has been following the customs and manners of his enemies? and that even when she laid aside some of her immodest, "costly array," it was not done to please him, but to save money to carry on a bloody war, in direct opposition to all his teachings? Will he not say, as to his ancient church in a similar situation,—"Thou hast played the harlot with many lovers"? Will she be ready for the marriage supper of the Lamb?

Is it not high time for the bride of Christ to begin to adorn herself in harmony with his instructions? Is it not time for real christian women to "separate" themselves from the immodest and costly apparel worn by the majority of church members? May they not with much propriety form a "league" to dress according to the Bible style, however odd they may look in the sight of the proud and fashionable followers of Belial?

We think the time has fully come for all to be divorced from the spirit of the world, if they expect to be among the marriage guests of the Lord of glory. We know most of our readers will say amen! "it is time." Well, then, shall it be done? Do not wait to see what your neighbor will do, but let every one who loves Jesus take the lead, and try in all things to please him.

We think no one in this world would wish to marry another who took no more pains to please him than the church does Jesus at the present time. When we observe the state of things in fashionable church society, we see no evidence of bridal love for Christ, but the strongest proof of love for the world and its pleasures.

The following shows the way the current is moving:—

Saratoga, July 22, 1864.

To the Editor of the Boston Journal:

We had a great time last night at the Congress. The new ball room—120 feet by 44—was opened with music and dancing. It was the greatest thing of the kind ever seen at Saratoga. The ladies were in elegant attire. No one would have thought that war, wounds or death were in any part of the land, or that board was four dollars a day or "drinks sixty cents a glass."

The music was of the first order. The bands of the Congress and Union united. The best of feeling prevails between these hotels. The room was radiant with beauty, beautifully adorned. The dancing was kept up till morning. On the whole it was a gay time."

THE SPIRITUALISTS' NATIONAL CONVENTION.

The National Convention of Spiritualists at Chicago, commencing Tuesday, Aug. 9th, is an important movement and one which we have been expecting for some seven years. It is our purpose, the Lord willing, to be present, and hear what is said, and then have our say on the subject. This is called the "First Grand National Convention of Spiritualists."

The following are some of their sayings, as published in the Banner of Light," July 30th, 1864, connected with the call for this convention:

"It was said in a former notice, all Spiritualists realize the great fact, that we live in a transition age. Old things are rapidly passing away in the religious and social, as well as in the political world. Behold all things must be formed anew. And the time has fully come when the millions in our country who have received the glorious light of the incoming day, must decide whether, by associated action, they will give direction and shape to the new, securing to all and each the greatest possible amount of individual, social, religious and political freedom, compatible with the greatest good of the whole; or whether religious and political demagogues, the rulers of the past, shall, in the reconstruction, so frame our Constitutions and Laws as to crush the millions, for the exclusive aggrandizement and benefit of the few. Slavery, cruelty, oppression and wrong, have had full sway under the old regime, based as it was, and is, upon the Mosaic code of barbarism, and it is for us to decide whether they shall still rule the [illegible] the [illegible] and the Fatherhood of God shall furnish the basis [illegible] foundation of the new Church and State.

In conclusion, the Committee would urge upon the attention of all Spiritualists the recommendation contained in the last resolution. Do not fail to have a representation from every city, town or hamlet. Come, and let us reason together."

Again it is said in the same paper, when referring to this convention:—

"There will be present, not only the most receptive, but the most progressed minds of both sexes, from all parts of the country, all of whom will be attended by their guardian angels and spirit circles, which, in the aggregate, will form an innumerable host of the wisest and best who have ever walked on earth or peopled heaven.

Second, The object of the Convention is more grand, because more comprehensive and beneficent in its purposes than any that has preceded it. It is not to build up a new party or to establish a new creed; but to vitalize all parties with the love of God and man—to promulgate truth as found in all creeds, and thus establish the kingdom of God upon earth by a realization of the great fact that of Faith, Hope and charity, Charity is the greatest.

Let every community of Spiritualists contribute their means to send delegates, and thus hasten forward the good time 'when Righteousness shall cover the earth, as the waters cover the great deep.'

John Beeson.

Washington, D. C, July 18th, 1864."

Says the editor of the Banner of Light, when alluding to the convention:—

"No one can deny that Spiritualism has become a power. . . . But the nature of that power is very far from being comprehended by the world at large. It is cosmopolitan in its character, not confined to any people or country, and when it is brought into action the whole race of man will feel its quickening influence. . . . It will not become leagued with any existing political organization, or employ the platform of any 'party' as a fulcrum. The time is rapidly approaching when the world will be startled by a voice that shall say unto every form of oppression and wrong—'Thus far shalt thou go, and no farther.'"

WHO SUPPORTS THE ROMAN WOMAN?

We think the answer to the above inquiry is very easily given. The one who supports her must be her present husband, and is represented by one of the heads of the scarlet-colored beast of Rev. 17. It may be clearly shown, we think, that the Napoleonic dynasty is represented by the seventh head, and that the wound was given in the days of Napoleon I., and is healed in Napoleon III. This being true, the French power, under Napoleon III., must be the last that supports the "woman."

In Napoleon's annual message to the Assembly, in Nov., 1850, he says: "Our brave soldiers have had the signal honor of restoring Pius IX. to the throne of St. Peter. Party spirit shall never obscure this fact, which will always form a glorious page in the history of France."—Public and private history of Louis Napoleon. By Smucker, p. 71.

A TRACT FOR THE TIMES.

We have received a tract of 18 pp., published by Julius Bruso, Saratoga Springs, N. Y., entitled, "The Church and the World; or Christ and Belial," that should be read by all lovers of the old christian path, who wish to take the direct road to the kingdom of heaven, instead of the "Celestial rail road" to "Vanity Fair," as most professors do at the present day.

This tract was prepared by Bro. D. F. Newton, formerly editor of the Golden Rule, in New York, now associate editor of the Earnest Christian, published at Buffalo, N. Y., also the author of Home Thrusts, a valuable book. The price of the tract is ten cts. for ten copies, postage 2 cts.

IMPORTANCE OF SMALL WORDS.

How often a person's entire life is changed by one small word. No one can get through this world successfully, as a christian, unless he has independence to say "no." There has been no time in the history of the present generation, when there was more need of this word, than at the present time. The world is fast drifting to destruction, and the church is following in the wake, because she has not courage to say no. Young men and women will need to give this word a prominent place, if they would escape the snares of Satan.

The following, from one of our exchanges, is to the point:—

"In the revelations of the last great day, it will be wonderful to discover how many spiritual destinies have been decided by actions that at the time seemed of but small account. A young man of high promise is invited by his associates to join them in a social glass. He firmly says no, and the danger is passed. He lives and dies a sober, useful man. Or with silly cowardice he yields, and acquires a habit which lands him in the drunkard's perdition. On the summit of a hill in Ohio is a court-house so singularly situated that the rain-drops which fall on one side of the roof descend into Lake Erie and thence through the St. Lawrence into the Atlantic sea. The drops on the other side trickle down from rivulet to river until they reach the Ohio and the Mississippi, and enter the ocean by the Gulf of Mexico. A faint breath of wind determines the course of these rain-drops for three thousand miles. So a single act determines a human destiny for time and eternity. A fashionable young man, partially reformed from drinking habits, was once offered a glass of wine by a thoughtless sister; and in yielding he re-kindled a thirst which carried him back to drunkenness and ruin."

OPPOSITION TO THE DRAFT.

The twenty-fifth section of an act passed by Congress March 3d, 1863, entitled, "An act for enrolling and calling out the national forces, and for other purposes," reads as follows:—

"And be it further enacted, That if any person shall resist any draft of men enrolled under this act into the service of the United States, or shall counsel or aid any person to resist any such draft, or shall assault or obstruct any officer in making such draft, or in the performance of any service in relation thereto, or shall command any person to assault or obstruct any such officer, or shall command any drafted man not to appear at the place of rendezvous or willfully dissuade them from the performance of military duty as required by law, such person shall be subject to summary arrest by the Provost Marshal, and shall be forthwith delivered to the civil authorities, and, upon conviction thereof, be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars or by imprisonment not exceeding two years, or by both of said punishments."

NEW AND IMPORTANT CHART ON THE PROPHECIES.

The great symbolic chart of the times of Daniel and John is now out, and ready for delivery. This is the largest and most important chart on prophecy that has been published since the commencement of the Advent movement. It should be in every Advent family and every chapel. A glance at it speaks volumes. In this chart we have the most important features of the visions made plain on tables. And "he that runs may read."

New light is breaking upon the prophetic word, and we are now close by the end. Let us awake to the importance of the times in which we live.

Price of the chart, colored and mounted, is $5.00. To agents who sell, $4.00. For sale at this office. Orders solicited. Address Miles Grant.

YEARLY FEAST.

The campmeeting at Alton Bay, N. H., has been noticed in the Crisis. It is to commence the 29th of Aug., and continue over the following Sunday. This is an important yearly gathering, not for the disciples in New Hampshire merely, but for christians looking for Jesus' coming, in all the States, and in Canada; for no sect or party purpose, but on the grand principle of uniting the hearts and hands together, in prayer and effort for the spiritual advancement of the church, so they may let their light shine, and be better prepared to welcome in their coming Lord; and also labor more effectually for the saving of the sinner. The times are pregnant with events, and the motto is action on the part of the church. Then let all be awake, and prepare for the camp. Be getting ready. First say, if the Lord will, I will go. Then bring all your arrangements in harmony with it. Secondly, lay aside the means, as it may take more than formerly to attend these meetings; but the greater the sacrifice, the greater the blessing. Then see that you have tents, with suitable clothing to keep you comfortable while there; and last, not least, come with hearts prepared to do the work of God, and not your own work, then all will go on in harmony,—God will be glorified, and men will be made better.

Come, get ready now, without delay,
Come to the Camp at Alton Bay;
It is a most delightful place;
There you'll enjoy the means of grace.

You 'll come by cars, the boat you 'll take,
You 'll camp close by that splendid lake;
Come from the North, South, West and East,
Enjoy for once this yearly feast.

The committee 'll do their very best
To supply your wants, and give you rest;
Good order will and must prevail,—
I think in this we shall not fail.

Preaching at morning, noon, and night,
And other meetings as seem right,
'T will be no place to hobbies ride,
Nor that which will the saints divide.

The gifts and tongues we don't desire,
Unless Christ's Spirit does inspire;
Come in the Spirit, full of love,
Be wise, but gentle as a dove.

Come, rich and poor, come, strong and weak,
Together we 'll a blessing seek,
Come with the fervency of prayer,
That all may in his blessings share.

Thine expecting success, L. Boutell.

READING BOOKS.

Are we ever benefited by reading the writings of men? Some think we are. Some are very sure of it. Some can realize the benefits of such readings, so as to thank God for them. It may appear strange, then, that one should ask such a question. It is a strange question, indeed; but I notice in a paper that, but recently, in this nineteenth century, a man professedly a gospel minister, one of those too who preach the Lord is soon coming, on being asked by an inquirer after truth "where she could obtain Hastings' works," cautioned her about reading any thing but the Bible, because "men were so apt to get self into their books." This is singular logic.

It is true that the Bible is before all books, above all, more than all, and yet is greatly neglected, while preference is given other books. Other books have imperfections, errors, false doctrines, etc., in them; and self is often found in them. But are not the same imperfections found in the pulpit and religious newspapers? Is it not as unsafe to go to hear preaching? Some have seen great displays of self in the desk. Is it not as unsafe to patronize a paper? Is it not as unsafe to hold conversation and receive instructions from christian friends? We think so. If all other sources of instruction, of information, are to be abandoned but the Bible, then all persons, old and young, must read no other book, and no one person can instruct another as to the teachings of that great book, lest self be presented. This would scarcely do for the human mind. The Bible cannot be dispensed with; it contains information and instruction the most important [illegible] it knows [illegible]. It should be the [illegible] of our counsel. It should be our text book, our authority in all doctrines. It should settle all disputes on all points on which it treats. But were there no other books, our knowledge of things would be limited indeed. I now remember one man who thinks he is called to preach, to whom I offered some good books, which would have given him some important information. He would not accept them, choosing to get all his information from the Bible. He is a good man, but does not know the use of many of the most common English words. What man of a well-balanced mind would blot out of the world all books, tracts, and papers, except the Bible? I think none such exists. True the world would be freed from many bad books; but we could not spare the good books to get rid of them. We should suspect the soundness of any one's teachings who discouraged the circulation of good books. Let us circulate all we can.

VISIT AT WORCESTER.

After taking the cars in the city of confusion, we rode very pleasantly the distance of about forty-four miles, when to our surprise the conductor announced to the passengers on board, "Worcester Station." As soon as the chariot wheels ceased to roll, we alighted, and as usual in such places were met with those who wear letters conspicuously placed on their hats, and invited to ride up into town. As I was a stranger in Worcester, and having a large carpet-bag to carry, I concluded to ride, and was conducted to the carriage. After telling him that I wished to stop on Home Street, No. 6. I got aboard and on we went. I came to the conclusion before arriving (for our meanderings were many,) that it was a long distance to Home Street; but after a while we arrived safely, and were kindly cared for in the family of Bro. W. F. Higgins, who not only lives on Home Street, but keeps a home for home-bound pilgrims.

We had a very pleasant time in speaking to this church and people, and we trust the word spoken was not like water spilled on the ground, but that it took effect in some hearts and will bring forth fruit, "thirty, sixty, or a hundred fold;" and as a sequence, in the world to come, will have aionian life. We saw some familiar faces—having seen them at our annual gathering at Wilbraham; and also formed many pleasant acquaintances.

Again, Sunday, July 10th, we were permitted to visit this place and speak to this church, and truly we had a refreshing season. Felt it was good to be there to break the bread of life. After the morning service, in which we endeavored to show that immersion was the only scriptural mode of baptism, we repaired to a place where there was "much water," and buried four happy persons in the likeness of Christ's death, beneath the yielding waves; who when baptized went on their way rejoicing. God grant that they may be in the likeness of Christ's resurrection, and be saved eternally in the kingdom of bright glory. We hope to meet those with whom we have taken sweet counsel together, in a bright and better land than this.

"Oh land of rest, for thee I sigh,
When will the moment come,
When I shall lay my armor by
And dwell with Christ at home?"

We spent the most of this week with Bro. Ayres, who tried to make our visit pleasant, helping him in the mowing field, where we felt quite at home. We had a good time with Bro. and Sr. Ayres, also Bro. Chamberlin and wife, all of whom are striving for eternal life. Your brother in Christ,

MEETINGS IN MANCHESTER, N. H.

Bro. Grant:—I have been laboring on the Sabbaths in Manchester for some two months past the most of the time, and I wish to say a few words through the Crisis to the brethren in the ministry in relation to the cause of Christ in that city.

For years past our brethren in that important place have been greatly afflicted with all sorts of distracting questions which a certain class of men have seen fit to introduce among them. But of late a few have resolved to make one more trial to sustain regular preaching on the Sabbath. They have within a few weeks established a Sabbath School which promises well now, although rather small and feeble. The most of those believing in the non-resurrection of the wicked, have left the meetings. Those remaining appear to be now in harmony in heart, if there is some difference of opinion in points of doctrine. What say, brethren in the ministry, will you not make some sacrifice, and go and help build up the precious cause of Christ in the city of Manchester?

If ever brethren needed help, they need it now in Manchester. Bro. W. P. Stratton, who has been so discouraged for years past that he has hardly attended any meetings at all, has recently come out again, and with all his soul appears to be in the work. He is now the superintendant of the Sabbath School, and is also the present chairman of the committee to see that they are supplied with preaching.

Cannot Elders J. Morse, J. W. White, J. Couch, L. Boutell, A. Ross, M. Grant, H. L. Hastings, T. H. Piper, and others, go to Manchester and preach a few Sabbaths, if no more, and help a small feeble church to rise above their present discouragements? Brethren, I exhort you to think of this matter. Pray over it. Those who are "greedy of filthy lucre" need not go. But those who can count all things lost for Christ, let them go, and in the name of the Lord help, yes, help in this time of need, the feeble church and the suffering cause of our Savior in the city of Manchester. You who can go, write to Willard P. Stratton, Manchester, N. H.

O, for wisdom and grace to aid us in these last days of labor and trials! We shall soon have rest in the kingdom of God. Amen.

T. M. Preble.

East Weare, N. H., July 26th, 1864.

☞ Preachers' salaries do not rise with the advance in gold. The man who earns $3.00 now, where he once earned $1.00, does not think of giving a preacher $15.00 where he once gave him $5.00. Hence preachers are not able to buy many books. To accommodate such, seeing the desire for the 3 vols. of The Bible Students' Library is so great, I will send preachers 3 vols. in paper covers, containing more than 1200 pages, for $1.00. At this price I think they are the cheapest books now published. Send soon, if you wish them, as this offer may not long be extended. Direct to the publisher,

THE WORK IN RHODE ISLAND.

For the last six months my labors have been in this State. I find an increasing desire to hear but little disposition to do the word. At the Rhode Island Conference in April, I was desired to act as Missionary. In that capacity I have visited several churches and a large number of private families that lived away from the means of grace. Had some good seasons with them.

"I have received about forty dollars, and on looking over the account I find myself from eight to ten dollars short. The brethren at the May Conference sympathized with me, and Bro. Durfee advised them to sympathize in their pockets. One of the delegates gave me fifty cents, but thank the Lord, I am better off than Bro. E. Bellows was the last quarter he was missionary, he fell short thirty dollars. They made up about eleven dollars for him.

Now there is a cause for all this lack. What is it? It is covetousness and not lack of means. This is a growing evil in these last days and has driven some twelve or fourteen good preachers on this conference to work for a living. Five years ago they thought a preacher ought to get from five to eight dollars per week; now when every thing is more than double they think from three to five is enough. We have only to trust in God and pray, and he will provide; for he has said, "Whatsoever is right I will give you." He has done it, bless his name! and he will do it still.

Yours, J. K. Bellows

Correspondence.

From Sr. M. H. Prescott.

Bro. Grant:—I praise God I have the blessed privilege granted me to add some more to your new Tract Fund, praying God to bless every means that are used by his dear children to carry the light and truth to this dark and unbelieving generation, that seeks for pleasure more than God. O that lukewarm professors, and the poor prodigal, that has left his Father's house, and has wasted all his goods, and sees himself in rags, bruised and mangled for his disobedience to God's law, may read and feel in his poor heart, that God loves him still; and say at once, I will, in the strength of God, return to my Father's house, where there is bread enough and to spare.

Also, that poor sinner, that has never tasted of the good word of life, and the joys of the world to come; and is yet standing in the slippery paths of youth; and perhaps middle age, if not with frosty locks, rushing down the stream of time, with hasty steps to the great and terrible day of God's wrath, which will soon be poured out on a guilty world, when they will have to take up with the sad lamentation, The harvest is past, the summer ended, and I am not saved. O sinner, say in thy heart, I will give up this vain world, and go to Jesus, for he will embrace you in his arms; then, if faithful a little while, you will rise to meet him in the air, and forever be with him. Blessed faith and hope. Come one, come all, to the marriage supper of the Lamb.

I have written more than I thought I should, but my heart is full and I praise God for a full and a free salvation. If the Lord will, I may say more about it at some future time. God speed the light and truth, and let the kingdom come, is my prayer. Praise be Lord, O my soul, and all that is within me.

P. S. Any one of God's children coming this way will find a home at my house. Such as I have, give I unto thee.

From Bro. B. Spaulding.

Bro. Grant:—I have been at home a few weeks, trying to recruit. My tour in Connecticut was a pleasant one. I now propose to take a tour through Maine centre, and would say to brethren who wish me to visit them, they can address me by letter, or see me at my appointments, and I will make arrangements to visit and give lectures when desired. I would like to hold meetings every evening between my appointments. I go into any place where the Lord calls, the highways and hedges in particular. Among the poor and destitute I feel at home, and I can live on bread and butter, if I can only be with those who love God and the truths of his word. I rejoice that I feel able and willing to work in God's vineyard, and I hope to have the co-operation of the brethren where I go. I thank the Lord for the kindness which has been shown me where I have been, and the good brethren and sisters too. I shall long remember their kindness to me.

I received two bundles of the World's Crisis at Springfield, Mass., on my return home, from some unknown friends. The Lord bless the Christian Publication Society, who have so liberally supplied me in tracts. I do not see how I could do without them. I find a good deal of inquiry in relation to the nature of the kingdom of Jesus and its location, the two resurrections, etc., etc. The people will inquire, "Watchman, what of the night?" and we can tell them, "The morning cometh, and also the night." We are glad to hear the inquiry. It is in order.

Yours, B. Spaulding.

Bro. Grant:—The Crisis has become such a favorite with me that I could hardly do without it, and I always enjoy perusing its columns, but it has seemed to me unusually interesting of late, and I welcome its weekly visits as I would those of a dear friend, glad to see it and sit down eager to hear all that it has to say, while it interests me upon the subject of prophecy, and Bible truths in general, and gladdens my heart by telling me that our long-looked for Savior will soon come, and kindly admonishes me to be ready, and talks agreeably upon the subjects connected with our hope, and sings sweetly of our beautiful new earth-home, whither I trust my footsteps tend.

True, it communicates some sad things when it talks of death's doings, of homes made desolate and hearts bereft and bleeding, and loved ones gone; and then it turns and shows me the bright side to this dark picture and talks of Jesus our life-giver, and of the blessed hope and resurrection morn, and of the many sweet promises of truth, kindly given to cheer the stricken mourner's heart. Ah! well did I learn by experience, ye mourning friends, how it sympathise with

THE ITALIAN MISSION.

Dear Bro. Grant, and all Brn. and Srs. in Christ Jesus:—It is with deep gratitude to our heavenly Father, who has brought us to our place of destination in safety, that I write you my first letter from La Tour, Italy, which place we have chosen as our home for the present. We left London for Italy the 30th of June. It seemed a waste of time and money to remain there longer; and I longed much to commence my misionary work in this field, to which I feel called of God. I was enabled to leave so soon, through the kind donations of English brethren and sisters to the amount of 16£., 17s., 6d., viz., Bro. R. Robertson, London, 6£., 6s.; Bro. Joseph Curry, Liverpool, 3£.; Brn. and Srs. of Leeds, through Bro. C. A. Thorp, and himself, 5£., 11s., 6d.; and Sr. Jane Templeton, Kilmarnock, Scotland, 1£. As I left England sooner than I expected, when I wrote my letter of the 8th June, to be able to do, I thought it not best to write again from London, but save the expense of postage in these hard times, and write all from Italy. We had an opportunity while in London to speak personally with Dr. Cumming, who expressed the opinion that "all christians believe in the second coming of Christ. He also said he had no confidence in American Adventists on account of the extravagance of their opinions." I also had an interview of three hours with another English Adventist, Lord Congleton, who expressed himself similarly in regard to American Adventists. Mr. Freeman, to whom I had reference from Bro. S. Knight, received me kindly, but coldly, and introduced me to his pastor, Mr. Darling, quite an intelligent gentleman, who speaks French and German well. I assisted him one Sunday in his chapel, and learned from him that there are in London fourteen chapels of Advent believers of different names, but were all united in believing in the restoration of the Jews to Jerusalem, and the rebuilding of the Temple of Solomon; that Antichrist will sit down in the Temple; that Jesus Christ will be visible in the heavens during the millennium, and all the Jews will be converted to him (?).

I found Mr. Brown, a zealous disciple of Dr. Thomas of New York. We read in the Bible that John the Baptist baptized in sign of repentance; the church since Christ baptize for the remission of sins; and Mr. B. in London baptizes for the return of the Jews. Mr. B. has suffered much persecution for his opinions, but is still very zealous, and with his little church of three members observes the Lord's Supper every Sunday. Bro. R. Robertson's opinion is that the doctrine of the coming of Christ, which was preached in England sixty years ago and rejected, has gone West to America, which has now the honor of bearing this glorious truth to other nations. Any good American Adventist will be very kindly received by him and treated as a brother.

I was not able to visit the brethren in Liverpool and Leeds, but communicated with them by letter, and received from them kind sympathy in word and deed. We were compelled to stop in Paris thirty hours, and had the privilege of meeting there an honorable and very dear Polish friend, who was a brother exile in London when we left that city for the United States thirteen years ago. We came via. Macon, Chambery and Mont Cenis to Turin, and enjoyed the magnificent mountain scenery very much. We rode by cars several hours through a lovely valley with mountains on either side, sometimes very close and high, sometimes more distant, always charming, till we came to the little village of St. Michael, where we changed cars for diligence, and began to ascend the mountain. We were very comfortably seated, and our ride delightful, over a road hard and smooth, through a vale in the mountains that seems to have been formed expressly as a means of communication and for the enjoyment of those who can appreciate the wonderful works of God. The ascent for three hours is not rapid. Hamlets are frequent, and the sides of the mountain, which are cultivated wherever it seems possible, look green and smiling, the scene being much enhanced by the torrents of pure crystal water that fall from the mountain steeps to the valley beneath.

We left St. Michael with six horses; but after riding five hours we stopped a half hour, and a fresh team, consisting of two large horses and twelve powerful mules was substituted, and in three hours more we were at the top of the mountain, on which is a Custom House. It is the dividing line between France and Italy. It was midnight. The mules were taken off and with the two horses we made a rapid but safe descent to the little village of Suza, where we submitted to examination, but our passports were not demanded.

From Susa we took cars again and came via. Turin, to Pinerolo, a city of thirty thousand inhabitants a short distance south-east of Turin, where we had intended to stop. But after conversation with two French Waldenses we concluded to come to this place, ten miles further, which we reached at ten o'clock at night and were glad to stop, being travel worn and very weary. I requested to be taken to a hotel kept by a Protestant. On entering I introduced myself to the landlord and his wife, French Waldenses, and told them of our circumstances, that I was a missionary from the United States, and that during our long journey we had expended our means so that I had but one dollar in my pocket. They manifested for us much christian sympathy and very kindly offered their service and credit as we needed. They assisted us in finding temporary lodgings at twenty francs per month, and let me have indispensable furniture for the present.

I have spoken with several of the inhabitants upon the coming of Christ and been listened to with much eagerness. At present I can only say that this is a small place, containing some three thousand inhabitants. It has three churches; two French Protestants (Presbyterian) with but one pastor, and a college with eight professors, also a school for girls, and one Catholic church. I find the inhabitants, as far as I have seen them, very kind, simple-hearted people and quite intelligent. They receive me with the greatest kindness, and listen to me when I speak to them of the truths of the kingdom with much eagerness. And, I judge by present appearances, that this field of labor is very extensive. I have already received an invitation from a gentleman who lives near Milan, to spend a month or two with him next November, and give lectures every evening in his house. May God in his mercy bless this mission.

Dear brethren and sisters, pray for us, the work and please consider our critical position here, [illegible] credit among strangers who observe us very closely, and generously send us as soon as possible means with which we can pay our debts and establish ourselves comfortably. God bless you all.

Your faithful servant and brother waiting for the kingdom, M. B. CZECHOWSKI.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Tuesday, Aug. 2, 1864.

TORN OR MUTILATED BILLS.—In sending Government bills or postal currency to this office, please be careful to send us bills that are not torn or mutilated, as all such are taken only at a discount, according to the size of the mutilation.

PRICE OF PAPER.

Printing paper is now two or three times as high as it was four years ago. Nearly all papers have been obliged to raise the price of their papers about one half, and some to double their former rates, while many have suspended. We may find it necessary to increase the price of the Crisis. We think it is now one of the cheapest papers published, when the size and quality of the paper are considered, including the fact that we have no paid advertisements in its columns. It is now nearly double its original size, and printed on much better paper.

We should be glad to continue it at the same price as heretofore, if possible; but we know our readers would much rather that the price should be advanced to $2.50, or even $3.00, rather than that it should be embarrassed with a debt, or be suspended.

If we get a hearty and prompt response to the "bills" sent out this week, as we hope to, it may enable us to continue a while longer at the present price, until printing paper may be lower.

We think "our paper" was never accomplishing more good than at the present time, if we can form an opinion from the letters we are daily receiving. New subscribers continue to multiply, while all things show that we are now just at that point in the history of the world where we need all the helps we can get in order to stand against the wiles of the devil.

We might lessen our expenses considerably by cutting off the poor; but we trust we shall never be obliged to do that. If those who can, will pay promptly in advance, we think we shall come out all right.

"I AM THE DOOR."

BRO. GRANT:—Will you please give an exposition of John 10: 9,—"I am the door: by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out, and find pasture." In and out of what pasture?

Also, John 5: 24,—"Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation, but is passed from death unto life."

Yours in search of the truth,

D. M. KINTER.

In John 10: 9, and the context, Jesus compares himself to a shepherd, and his disciples to a flock of sheep. The shepherd, when taking care of his flock, leads them forth from the fold to find pasture, watches over them during the day, and returns with them at its close, and sees that they are not disturbed or injured during the night. This faithful care of the shepherd illustrates the care that Jesus takes of his followers.

The phrase, "go in and out," in the Hebrew style, refers to all the deeds of a person's life. Jesus becomes the guardian and guide in all the actions of his followers, as the shepherd does of the sheep. Hence "by," or through him, we live, receive strength to perform our duties, and protection from the snares of the adversary; and this fact is illustrated by the shepherd and the sheep; as he leads the flock forth from the fold to pasture, sees to all their wants, and then returns them again at night, so Jesus goes forth with his disciples during the day, in the various duties of life, returns with them at night, watches over them during the night, and goes forth with them again in the christian warfare. This continues till life's toil is ended, and the angels are sent to gather the faithful to their reward.

We now come to notice John 5: 24,—"He that heareth my word and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation, but is passed from death unto life."

The question now arises, does a person actually obtain everlasting life at the time he hears the words of Jesus, and believes on him that sent him? or, does he then pass into a condition where he can lay hold of the promise of eternal life when Jesus comes? Does a man at conversion really put on immortality? or, does he simply change his relation to the Lord, so that he is in a condition to receive everlasting life at the time appointed? If men put on immortality at conversion, then why do they die afterwards? and, what becomes of their immortality when they backslide? It is not proper to apply the term "everlasting life" to any one so long as there is a possibility of his dying; because immortal, or everlasting life, signifies a life "that shall never end."

In John 6: 40, we read, "This is the will of him that sent me, that every one that seeth the Son, and believeth on him, may have everlasting life; and I will raise him up at the last day." This, and many other passages, show that the time to receive the promised reward of "everlasting life" is at the last day, or when Jesus comes.

Paul says, in Col. 3: 3, 4,—"Your life is hid with Christ in God; when Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory."

We think this makes the matter very plain; and shows that the "everlasting life," which is promised to the believer, is not actually received in this life but is reserved for the faithful in the hands of Jesus, and will not be received till he comes the second time.

WOULD THEY DO IT FOR JESUS?

A number of women,—ministers' wives and others,—who hold high positions in the fashionable society of New England, have formed a league, expressed in the following language:—

"New England Women's League for Diminishing the use of Luxuries during the War.

BOSTON, July 4th, '64.

We, the undersigned, women of the United States, impelled by a deep sense of the peril of our beloved country, and of the sacrifices and sufferings of our brave soldiers, yet abating not a jot of our assurance that God will give success to our righteous cause, provided the people do their duty—would here express our purpose to perform our part toward bringing about this great end, and our desire to contribute more largely to the strength of our armies, and the relief of the suffering throughout our land.

We do, therefore, pledge ourselves, during the war,

1. To retrench our expenditure in dress, in the household, in social entertainments, and in all luxuries.

2. Without renouncing such foreign articles as we deem necessary for health and comfort, yet, to give the preference to the products and manufactures of our own country."

It is to be feared that these women will not now dress as plainly as christianity requires. Let us read a few words from the Bible:—

"In like manner also, that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety; not with braided hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array; but (which becometh women professing godliness) with good works." "Whose adorning, let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting the hair, and of wearing of gold, or of putting on of apparel; but let it be the hidden man of the heart, in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price. For after this manner in the old time the holy women also, who trusted in God, adorned themselves, being in subjection unto their own husbands."—1 Tim. 2: 9, 10; 1 Pet. 3: 3-5.

Jesus would have his "bride" dress "in modest apparel," without "gold, or pearls, or costly array." In his sight, she looks the best thus dressed. Is not the taste of the Bridegroom-King of kings to be preferred to that of the Paris harlots, who originate the fashions of the day?

Will Jesus be pleased, when he returns to be married to his professed bride, to find that she has paid no attention to his wishes in this matter, but has been following the customs and manners of his enemies? and that even when she laid aside some of her immodest, "costly array," it was not done to please him, but to save money to carry on a bloody war, in direct opposition to all his teachings? Will he not say, as to his ancient church in a similar situation,—"Thou hast played the harlot with many lovers"? Will she be ready for the marriage supper of the Lamb?

Is it not high time for the bride of Christ to begin to adorn herself in harmony with his instructions? Is it not time for real christian women to "separate" themselves from the immodest and costly apparel worn by the majority of church members? May they not with much propriety form a "league" to dress according to the Bible style, however odd they may look in the sight of the proud and fashionable followers of Belial?

We think the time has fully come for all to be divorced from the spirit of the world, if they expect to be among the marriage guests of the Lord of glory. We know most of our readers will say amen! "it is time." Well, then, shall it be done? Do not wait to see what your neighbor will do, but let every one who loves Jesus take the lead, and try in all things to please him.

We think no one in this world would wish to marry another who took no more pains to please him than the church does Jesus at the present time. When we observe the state of things in fashionable church society, we see no evidence of bridal love for Christ, but the strongest proof of love for the world and its pleasures.

The following shows the way the current is moving:—

SARATOGA, July 22, 1864.

To the Editor of the Boston Journal:

We had a great time last night at the Congress. The new ball room—120 feet by 44—was opened with music and dancing. It was the greatest thing of the kind ever seen at Saratoga. The ladies were in elegant attire. No one would have thought that war, wounds or death were in any part of the land, or that board was four dollars a day or "drinks sixty cents a glass."

The music was of the first order. The bands of the Congress and Union united. The best of feeling prevails between these hotels. The room was radiant with beauty, beautifully adorned. The dancing was kept up till morning. On the whole it was a gay time."

THE SPIRITUALISTS' NATIONAL CONVENTION.

The National Convention of Spiritualists at Chicago, commencing Tuesday, Aug. 9th, is an important movement and one which we have been expecting for some seven years. It is our purpose, the Lord willing, to be present, and hear what is said, and then have our say on the subject. This is called the "FIRST GRAND NATIONAL CONVENTION OF SPIRITUALISTS."

The following are some of their sayings, as published in the Banner of Light," July 30th, 1864, connected with the call for this convention:

"It was said in a former notice, all Spiritualists realize the great fact, that we live in a transition age. Old things are rapidly passing away in the religious and social, as well as in the political world. Behold all things must be formed anew. And the time has fully come when the millions in our country who have received the glorious light of the incoming day, must decide whether, by associated action, they will give direction and shape to the new, securing to all and each the greatest possible amount of individual, social, religious and political freedom, compatible with the greatest good of the whole; or whether religious and political demagogues, the rulers of the past, shall, in the reconstruction, so frame our Constitutions and Laws as to crush the millions, for the exclusive aggrandizement and benefit of the few. Slavery, cruelty, oppression and wrong, have had full sway under the old regime, based as it was, and is, upon the Mosaic code of barbarism, and it is for us to decide whether they shall still rule the [illegible] or whether the [illegible] and beautiful theory of the Brotherhood of all races of men, and the Fatherhood of God shall furnish the basic foundation of the new Church and State.

In conclusion, the Committee would urge upon the attention of all Spiritualists the recommendation contained in the last resolution. Do not fail to have a representation from every city, town or hamlet. Come, and let us reason together."

Again it is said in the same paper, when referring to this convention:—

"There will be present, not only the most receptive, but the most progressed minds of both sexes, from all parts of the country, all of whom will be attended by their guardian angels and spirit circles, which, in the aggregate, will form an innumerable host of the wisest and best who have ever walked on earth or peopled heaven.

Second, The object of the Convention is more grand, because more comprehensive and beneficent in its purposes than any that has preceded it. It is not to build up a new party or to establish a new creed; but to vitalize all parties with the love of God and man—to promulgate truth as found in all creeds, and thus establish the kingdom of God upon earth by a realization of the great fact that of Faith, Hope and charity, Charity is the greatest.

Let every community of Spiritualists contribute their means to send delegates, and thus hasten forward the good time 'when Righteousness shall cover the earth, as the waters cover the great deep.'

JOHN BEESON.

Washington, D. C. July 18th, 1864."

Says the editor of the Banner of Light, when alluding to the convention:—

"No one can deny that Spiritualism has become a power. . . . But the nature of that power is very far from being comprehended by the world at large. It is cosmopolitan in its character, not confined to any people or country, and when it is brought into action the whole race of man will feel its quickening influence. . . . It will not become leagued with any existing political organization, or employ the platform of any 'party' as a fulcrum. The time is rapidly approaching when the world will be startled by a voice that shall say unto every form of oppression and wrong—'Thus far shalt thou go, and no farther.'"

WHO SUPPORTS THE ROMAN WOMAN?

We think the answer to the above inquiry is very easily given. The one who supports her must be her present husband, and is represented by one of the heads of the scarlet-colored beast of Rev. 17. It may be clearly shown, we think, that the Napoleonic dynasty is represented by the seventh head, and that the wound was given in the days of Napoleon I., and is healed in Napoleon III. This being true, the French power, under Napoleon III., must be the last that supports the "woman."

In Napoleon's annual message to the Assembly, in Nov., 1850, he says: "Our brave soldiers have had the signal honor of restoring Pius IX. to the throne of St. Peter. Party spirit shall never obscure this fact, which will always form a glorious page in the history of France."—Public and private history of Louis Napoleon. By Smucker, p. 71.

A TRACT FOR THE TIMES.

We have received a tract of 18 pp., published by Julius Bruso, Saratoga Springs, N. Y., entitled, "The Church and the World; or Christ and Belial," that should be read by all lovers of the old christian path, who wish to take the direct road to the kingdom of heaven, instead of the "Celestial rail road" to "Vanity Fair," as most professors do at the present day.

This tract was prepared by Bro. D. F. Newton, formerly editor of the Golden Rule, in New York, now associate editor of the Earnest Christian, published at Buffalo, N. Y., also the author of Home Thrusts, a valuable book. The price of the tract is ten cts. for ten copies, postage 2 cts.

IMPORTANCE OF SMALL WORDS.

How often a person's entire life is changed by one small word. No one can get through this world successfully, as a christian, unless he has independence to say "NO." There has been no time in the history of the present generation, when there was more need of this word, than at the present time. The world is fast drifting to destruction, and the church is following in the wake, because she has not courage to say NO. Young men and women will need to give this word a prominent place, if they would escape the snares of Satan.

The following, from one of our exchanges, is to the point:—

"In the revelations of the last great day, it will be wonderful to discover how many spiritual destinies have been decided by actions that at the time seemed of but small account. A young man of high promise is invited by his associates to join them in a social glass. He firmly says NO, and the danger is passed. He lives and dies a sober, useful man. Or with silly cowardice he yields, and acquires a habit which lands him in the drunkard's perdition. On the summit of a hill in Ohio is a court-house so singularly situated that the rain-drops which fall on one side of the roof descend into Lake Erie and thence through the St. Lawrence into the Atlantic sea. The drops on the other side trickle down from rivulet to river until they reach the Ohio and the Mississippi, and enter the ocean by the Gulf of Mexico. A faint breath of wind determines the course of these rain-drops for three thousand miles. So a single act determines a human destiny for time and eternity. A fashionable young man, partially reformed from drinking habits, was once offered a glass of wine by a thoughtless sister; and in yielding he re-kindled a thirst which carried him back to drunkenness and ruin."

OPPOSITION TO THE DRAFT.

The twenty-fifth section of an act passed by Congress March 3d, 1863, entitled, "An act for enrolling and calling out the national forces, and for other purposes," reads as follows:—

"And be it further enacted, That if any person shall resist any draft of men enrolled under this act into the service of the United States, or shall counsel or aid any person to resist any such draft, or shall assault or obstruct any officer in making such draft, or in the performance of any service in relation thereto, or shall command any person to assault or obstruct any such officer, or shall counsel any drafted man not to appear at the place of rendezvous or willfully dissuade them from the performance of military duty as required by law, such person shall be subject to summary arrest by the Provost Marshal, and shall be forthwith delivered to the civil authorities, and upon conviction thereof be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars or by imprisonment not exceeding two years, or by both of said punishments."

The great symbolic chart of the times of Daniel and John is now out, and ready for delivery. This is the largest and most important chart on prophecy that has been published since the commencement of the Advent movement. It should be in every Advent family and every chapel. A glance at it speaks volumes. In this chart we have the most important features of the visions made plain on tables. And "he that runs may read."

New light is breaking upon the prophetic word, and we are now close by the end. Let us awake to the importance of the times in which we live.

YEARLY FEAST.

The campmeeting at Alton Bay, N. H., has been noticed in the Crisis. It is to commence the 29th of Aug., and continue over the following Sunday. This is an important yearly gathering, not for the disciples in New Hampshire merely, but for christians looking for Jesus' coming, in all the States, and in Canada; for no sect or party purpose, but on the grand principle of uniting the hearts and hands together, in prayer and effort for the spiritual advancement of the church, so they may let their light shine, and be better prepared to welcome in their coming Lord; and also labor more effectually for the saving of the sinner. The times are pregnant with events, and the motto is action on the part of the church. Then let all be awake, and prepare for the camp. Be getting ready. First say, if the Lord will, I will go. Then bring all your arrangements in harmony with it. Secondly, lay aside the means, as it may take more than formerly to attend these meetings; but the greater the sacrifice, the greater the blessing. Then see that you have tents, with suitable clothing to keep you comfortable while there; and last, not least, come with hearts prepared to do the work of God, and not your own work, then all will go on in harmony,—God will be glorified, and men will be made better.

Come, get ready now, without delay,
Come to the Camp at Alton Bay;
It is a most delightful place;
There you'll enjoy the means of grace.

You'll come by cars, the boat you'll take,
You'll camp close by that splendid lake;
Come from the North, South, West and East,
Enjoy for once this yearly feast.

The committee'll do their very best
To supply your wants, and give you rest;
Good order will and must prevail,—
I think in this we shall not fail.

Preaching at morning, noon, and night,
And other meetings as seem right;
'T will be no place to hobbies ride,
Nor that which will the saints divide.

The gifts and tongues we don't desire,
Unless Christ's Spirit does inspire;
Come in the Spirit, full of love,
Be wise, but gentle as a dove.

Come, rich and poor, come, strong and weak,
Together we'll a blessing seek;
Come with the fervency of prayer,
That all may in his blessings share.

Thine expecting success, L. BOUTELL.

READING BOOKS.

Are we ever benefited by reading the writings of men? Some think we are. Some are very sure of it. Some can realize the benefits of such readings, so as to thank God for them. It may appear strange, then, that one should ask such a question. It is a strange question, indeed; but I notice in a paper that, but recently, in this nineteenth century, a man professedly a gospel minister, one of those too who preach the Lord is soon coming, on being asked by an inquirer after truth "where she could obtain Hastings' works," cautioned her about reading any thing but the Bible, because "men were so apt to get self into their books." This is singular logic.

It is true that the Bible is before all books, above all, more than all, and yet is greatly neglected, while preference is given other books. Other books have imperfections, errors, false doctrines, etc., in them; and self is often found in them. But are not the same imperfections found in the pulpit and religious newspapers? Is it not as unsafe to go to hear preaching? Some have seen great displays of self in the desk. Is it not as unsafe to patronize a paper? Is it not as unsafe to hold conversation and receive instructions from christian friends? We think so. If all other sources of instruction, of information, are to be abandoned but the Bible, then all persons, old and young, must read no other book; and no one person can instruct another as to the teachings of that great book, lest self be preached. This would scarcely do for the human mind. The Bible cannot be dispensed with; it contains information and instruction the most important. Its authority is above dispute. It should be the man of our counsel. It should be our text book, our authority in all doctrines. It should settle all disputes on all points on which it treats. But were there no other books, our knowledge of things would be limited indeed. I now remember one man who thinks he is called to preach, to whom I offered some good books, which would have given him some important information. He would not accept them, choosing to get all his information from the Bible. He is a good man, but does not know the use of many of the most common English words. What man of a well-balanced mind would blot out of the world all books, tracts, and papers, except the Bible? I think none such exists. True the world would be freed from many bad books; but we could not spare the good books to get rid of them. We should suspect the soundness of any one's teachings who discouraged the circulation of good books. Let us circulate all we can.

VISIT AT WORCESTER.

After taking the cars in the city of confusion, we rode very pleasantly the distance of about forty-four miles, when to our surprise the conductor announced to the passengers on board, "Worcester Station." As soon as the chariot wheels ceased to roll, we alighted, and as usual in such places were met with those who wear letters conspicuously placed on their hats, and invited to ride up into town. As I was a stranger in Worcester, and having a large carpet-bag to carry, I concluded to ride, and was conducted to the carriage. After telling him that I wished to stop on Home Street, No. 6. I got aboard and on we went. I came to the conclusion before arriving (for our meanderings were many,) that it was a long distance to Home Street; but after a while we arrived safely, and were kindly cared for in the family of Bro. W. F. Higgins, who not only lives on Home Street, but keeps a home for HOMEBOUND pilgrims.

We had a very pleasant time in speaking to this church and people, and we trust the word spoken was not like water spilled on the ground, but that it took effect in some hearts and will bring forth fruit, "thirty, sixty, or a hundred fold;" and as a sequence, in the world to come, will have aionian life. We saw some familiar faces—having seen them at our annual gathering at Wilbraham; and also formed many pleasant acquaintances.

Again, Sunday, July 10th, we were permitted to visit this place and speak to this church, and truly we had a refreshing season. Felt it was good to be there to break the bread of life. After the morning service, in which we endeavored to show that immersion was the only scriptural mode of baptism, we repaired to a place where there was "much water," and buried four happy persons in the likeness of Christ's death, beneath the yielding waves; who when baptized went on their way rejoicing. God grant that they may be in the likeness of Christ's resurrection, and be saved eternally in the kingdom of bright glory. We hope to meet those with whom we have taken sweet counsel together, in a bright and better land than this.

"Oh land of rest, for thee I sigh,
When will the moment come,
When I shall lay my armor by
And dwell with Christ at home!"

We spent the most of this week with Bro. Ayres, who tried to make our visit pleasant, helping him in the mowing field, where we felt quite at home. We had a good time with Bro. and Sr. Ayres, also Bro. Chamberlin and wife, all of whom are striving for eternal life. Your brother in Christ,

MEETINGS IN MANCHESTER, N. H.

BRO. GRANT:—I have been laboring on the Sabbaths in Manchester for some two months past the most of the time, and I wish to say a few words through the Crisis to the brethren in the ministry in relation to the cause of Christ in that city.

For years past our brethren in that important place have been greatly afflicted with all sorts of distracting questions which a certain class of men have seen fit to introduce among them. But of late a few have resolved to make one more trial to sustain regular preaching on the Sabbath. They have within a few weeks established a Sabbath School which promises well now, although rather small and feeble. The most of those believing in the non-resurrection of the wicked, have left the meetings. Those remaining appear to be now in harmony in heart, if there is some difference of opinion in points of doctrine. What say, brethren in the ministry, will you not make some sacrifice, and go and help build up the precious cause of Christ in the city of Manchester?

If ever brethren needed help, they need it now in Manchester. Bro. W. P. Stratton, who has been so discouraged for years past that he has hardly attended any meetings at all, has recently come out again, and with all his soul appears to be in the work. He is now the superintendant of the Sabbath School, and is also the present chairman of the committee to see that they are supplied with preaching.

Cannot Elders J. Morse, J. W. White, J. Couch, L. Boutell, A. Ross, M. Grant, H. L. Hastings, T. H. Piper, and others, go to Manchester and preach a few Sabbaths, if no more, and help a small feeble church to rise above their present discouragements? Brethren, I exhort you to think of this matter. Pray over it. Those who are "greedy of filthy lucre" need not go. But those who can count all things lost for Christ, let them go, and in the name of the Lord help, yes, help in this time of need, the feeble church and the suffering cause of our Savior in the city of Manchester. You who can go, write to Willard P. Stratton, Manchester, N. H.

O, for wisdom and grace to aid us in these last days of labor and trials! We shall soon have rest in the kingdom of God. Amen.

T. M. PREBLE.

East Weare, N. H., July 26th, 1864.

☞ Preachers' salaries do not rise with the advance in gold. The man who earns $3.00 now, where he once earned $1.00, does not think of giving a preacher $15.00 where he once gave him $5.00. Hence preachers are not able to buy many books. To accommodate such, seeing the desire for the 3 vols. of THE BIBLE STUDENT'S LIBRARY is so great, I will send preachers 3 vols. in paper covers, containing more than 1200 pages, for $1.00. At this price I think they are the cheapest books now published. Send soon, if you wish them, as this offer may not long be extended. Direct to the publisher,

THE WORK IN RHODE ISLAND.

For the last six months my labors have been in this State. I find an increasing desire to hear but little disposition to do the word. At the Rhode Island Conference in April, I was desired to act as Missionary. In that capacity I have visited several churches and a large number of private families that lived away from the means of grace. Had some good seasons with them.

I have received about forty dollars, and on looking over the account I find myself from eight to ten dollars short. The brethren at the May Conference sympathized with me, and Bro. Durfee advised them to sympathize in their pockets. One of the delegates gave me fifty cents, but thank the Lord, I am better off than Bro. E. Bellows was the last quarter he was missionary, he fell short thirty dollars. They made up about eleven dollars for him.

Now there is a cause for all this lack. What is it? It is covetousness and not lack of means. This is a growing evil in these last days and has driven some twelve or fourteen good preachers on this conference to work for a living. Five years ago they thought a preacher ought to get from five to eight dollars per week; now when every thing is more than double they think from three to five is enough. We have only to trust in God and pray, and he will provide; for he has said, "Whatsoever is right I will give you." He has done it, bless his name! and he will do it still.

Yours, J. K. BELLOWS

Correspondence.

From Sr. M. H. Prescott.

BRO. GRANT:—I praise God I have the blessed privilege granted me to add some more to your new Tract Fund, praying God to bless every means that are used by his dear children to carry the light and truth to this dark and unbelieving generation, that seeks for pleasure more than God. O that lukewarm professors, and the poor prodigal, that has left his Father's house, and has wasted all his goods, and sees himself in rags, bruised and mangled for his disobedience to God's law, may read and feel in his poor heart, that God loves him still; and say at once, I will, in the strength of God, return to my Father's house, where there is bread enough and to spare.

Also, that poor sinner, that has never tasted of the good word of life, and the joys of the world to come; and is yet standing in the slippery paths of youth; and perhaps middle age, if not with frosty locks, rushing down the stream of time, with hasty steps to the great and terrible day of God's wrath, which will soon be poured out on a guilty world, when they will have to take up with the sad lamentation, The harvest is past, the summer ended, and I am not saved. O sinner, say in thy heart, I will give up this vain world, and go to Jesus, for he will embrace you in his arms; then, if faithful a little while, you will rise to meet him in the air, and forever be with him. Blessed faith and hope. Come one, come all, to the marriage supper of the Lamb.

I have written more than I thought I should, but my heart is full and I praise God for a full and a free salvation. If the Lord will, I may say more about it at some future time. God speed the light and truth, and let the kingdom come, is my prayer. Praise be Lord, O my soul, and all that is within me.

BRO. GRANT:—I have been at home a few weeks, trying to recruit. My tour in Connecticut was a pleasant one. I now propose to take a tour through Maine centre, and would say to brethren who wish me to visit them, they can address me by letter, or see me at my appointments, and I will make arrangements to visit and give lectures when desired. I would like to hold meetings every evening between my appointments. I go into any place where the Lord calls, the highways and hedges in particular. Among the poor and destitute I feel at home, and I can live on bread and butter, if I can only be with those who love God and the truths of his word. I rejoice that I feel able and willing to work in God's vineyard, and I hope to have the co-operation of the brethren where I go. I thank the Lord for the kindness which has been shown me where I have been, and the good brethren and sisters too. I shall long remember their kindness to me.

I received two bundles of the World's Crisis at Springfield, Mass., on my return home, from some unknown friends. The Lord bless the Christian Publication Society, who have so liberally supplied me in tracts. I do not see how I could do without them. I find a good deal of inquiry in relation to the nature of the kingdom of Jesus and its location, the two resurrections, etc., etc. The people will inquire, "Watchman, what of the night?" and we can tell them, "The morning cometh, and also the night." We are glad to hear the inquiry. It is in order.

Yours, B. SPAULDING.

From Sr. J. J. Austin.

BRO. GRANT:—The Crisis has become such a favorite with me that I could hardly do without it, and I always enjoy perusing its columns, but it has seemed to me unusually interesting of late, and I welcome its weekly visits as I would those of a dear friend, glad to see it and sit down eager to hear all that it has to say, while it interests me upon the subject of prophecy, and Bible truths in general, and gladdens my heart by telling me that our long-looked for Savior will soon come, and kindly admonishes me to be ready, and talks agreeably upon the subjects connected with our hope, and sings sweetly of our beautiful new earth-home, whither I trust my footsteps tend.

True, it communicates some sad things when it talks of death's doings, of homes made desolate and hearts bereft and bleeding, and loved ones gone; and then it turns and shows me the bright side to this dark picture and talks of Jesus, our life-giver, and of the blessed hope and resurrection morn, and of the many sweet sunbeams of truth kindly given to cheer the stricken mourner's heart.

Ah! well do I know by experience, ye mourning friends how to sympathize with you, for I too have been drinking from that mixed cup that God has prepared for all. In yonder burying place, side by side, a dear sister and precious mother sleep the sleep of death; but a blessing rests upon them, for both died in the Lord; and I, believing in the Resurrection and the Life hope soon to meet them again with other dear friends on the "evergreen shore." BRO. GRANT:—On our way to this place we stopped and attended our appointment at Jonesville, Mich. The church here, with their pastor, Eld. A. E. Babcock, are well united, and the God of peace is with them. The church here have had many influences to contend with, but still they stand firm.

On our arrival at this place a goodly number of our old friends were waiting to greet us. These faithful ones had circulated our appointment, and had made every necessary arrangement for the meeting. Last spring we found the cause here in a low state. Our labors at that time resulted in the reformation of some sinners, then a growing interest has been kept up under the labors of Dr. P. B. Hoyt, their pastor. We have had some excellent meetings at this time. Four have put on Christ by baptism, and others we think will soon. One of the above subjects of baptism has been a member of the Methodist Episcopal church for many years, and has many times sought baptism at their hands, but failed. She came to the water very much composed, and decided to obey God and live. On coming up out of the water she praised the Lord aloud. We think a good impression was left on the many eye witnesses of this baptism. D. R. & M. S. MANSFIELD.

BRO. GRANT:—I have had the pleasure of reading the columns of the Crisis for quite a time, and the more I read it the better I like it. It is a great comfort to me to read those interesting letters from those whom I never have seen yet love. Brethren and sisters, we are living in a very stirring time, when troubles and trials are thickening very fast, and it is a self-evident fact that we are at the time when the King of kings is to come; and I can say with all my heart, Let him come. "He that will love life and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil, and his lips that they speak no guile." Let him "seek peace and ensue it." Your brother in hope.

DEAR BRETHREN:—I have suffered a long detention from my field of labor, on account of the protracted sickness of my wife, but by the goodness of the Lord she has so far recovered as to be able to be about the house, and to ride out in pleasant weather. We feel grateful for his mercies in restoring thus far, praying he may continue to restore till health is gained. I am now able to attend appointments, and hope to attend the camp-meetings, for the purpose of glorifying my Master, and greeting a multitude of like precious faith once more before the consummation of our blessed hope, when the good and faithful will meet to part no more forever.

Thine looking for life eternal,

Groton, July 28th, 1864. L. BOUTELL.

From Bro. S. Hart.

DEAR BRETHREN AND SISTERS:—To-night I am permitted to dwell in safety. And as I write to let you know that I am aware of the course that this world is pursuing, I would say, stand firm in Jesus, firm as the everlasting rock. The mighty tide that is coming will overwhelm many of those that have not their anchor cast. I rest in God. Let the angry storm come with its wild deluge of blood and its threatening devastations. I rest in God, and wait for protection from his hand. He can lift me above the mighty whirlwind and bear me to his everlasting home. He can guide me in dark places and rescue my feet from slippery paths. Though the world trust not him, yet will I trust in his mighty power; for there is none other that can save. He is my refuge in the day of trouble, and he will save me in the day of his wrath. SANFORD HART.

FREDDIE L. FRENCH.

Died in Rutland, Vt., Sunday, July 17th, of inflammation of the brain, Freddie L., only son of Bro. S. and Sr. E. C. French, aged eleven months.

While suffering from difficult dentition, death came stealthily and snatched him from the arms of fond parents, who were bestowing upon him every care. A few hours' warning only were given ere this lovely flower was smitten with the mildew of the tomb. Too fair and too frail for earth's poisonous breath, he has found a refuge in the grave till Jesus wakes to life the dead, and makes all things new.

"He needs no more soothing, no low cradle hymn,
No mother to hush him to sleep;
He needs no physician, no lamp burning dim,
No pale, weary faces to bend over him,
And hope while they silently weep.
Dear parents, remember though death's solemn call
Has smitten you cruelly here;
Whatever of anguish this life can befall,
Your darling forever is free from it all,
For him you have nothing to fear."

Our dear brother and his companion are proving that God never leaves nor forsakes, and are unspeakably comforted by the blessed hope. H. F. C.

ROBINSON F. BERRY.

Died in Portsmouth, N. H., June 29th, 1864, Robinson F. Berry, aged fifty years.

Another faithful disciple of our blessed Lord has been laid away to rest awhile from the toil and strife of this world of sorrow and care, to sleep in Jesus, and will surely awake at the sound of the voice of the Son of God when he speaks to life the dead.

Bro. Berry lived a christian life for twenty-eight years, during which time, by his constant prayer he secured the confidence of those who knew him. In 1843 he, with his companion, embraced the doctrine of the literal interpretation of the Holy Scriptures, to which view he clung tenaciously until his death, and doubting no earthly good with which the Lord had favored him too valuable to be devoted to his cause, he bestowed liberally to the cause of God, considering that "the Lord loveth the cheerful giver," and that "it is more [illegible]

[illegible] joyously anticipating the day when they shall meet brother, husband and father, to part no more forever.

The sister has not only been called recently to lay aside her loving companion, but also a little one of some four or five summers, which makes her home seem somewhat gloomy and forsaken; but the presence of Jesus will scatter all the gloom, and make all our future prospects bright and glorious; and may his presence ever abide with thee, my dear sister, supporting thee not only in this thy deep affliction, but in all the trials through which thou mayest be called to pass ere thou reachest the happy Eden home.

The funeral was attended by the writer, assisted by Bro. C. S. Emerson, at the chapel, on Friday, July 1st, where a large circle of friends assembled to sympathise with the bereaved. W. H. MITCHEL.

JOSHUA WEBBER.

Joshua R. Webber (formerly of Bangor, Me.,) died in New Orleans, La., May 27th, 1863, aged twenty-one years, seven months.

Also in North Vassalboro', Me., July 11th, 1864, Sr. Adelia Adams, wife of Bro. Henry Adams, aged twenty-eight years, thirteen days.

Thus in the space of a few short months have we been called upon to mourn the loss of a brother and sister. From what we can learn of our brother's last moments, we feel that he sleeps in Jesus. We have the strongest evidence that poor mortals can have, that our sister sleeps in Jesus. She suffered much for a number of months from her disease,—consumption,—but she bore her suffering with patience, knowing that if we suffer with Jesus we shall also reign with him.

She died in faith, bidding her friends good by, and exhorting them to be faithful followers of the Lord Jesus, and meet her in the soon coming kingdom. Thanks be to God for the hope of the resurrection. Soon those that sleep in Jesus will come forth to immortality and life that awaits the faithful of God. Bro. Robert Hall attended the funeral. M. B. CYPHERS.

HELLEN FRANCES PULVER.

Died of affection of the brain, in Farmington, Ct., July 15th, 1864, Hellen Frances Pulver, daughter of Hiram and Jane Pulver, aged seven years, and six months.

Bro. and Sr. Pulver deeply feel their loss, and while they shed bitter tears, they are consoled with the assurance that Frances will soon come from the land of the enemy, and death be forever destroyed.

Frances, like the early flower,
Drooped when just in bloom;
Passed away in childhood's hour,
To the silent tomb.
GEO. L. TEEPLE.

JARED MARTIN.

Died at Key West, June 18th, 1864, of yellow fever, Capt. Jared W. Martin, aged thirty years.

Bro. Martin professed religion, and was baptized June 8th, 1862, (my eldest son was baptized at the same time,) at our Seneca Falls Yearly Conference. I understand that he professed to maintain his allegiance to Christ, even to the last. He was an amiable and honorable young man, and had the confidence of his associates. He sleeps, as we hope, to awake "at the resurrection of the just." His funeral was attended on the 17th, at Eagle Harbor, N. Y., at the Methodist Episcopal church, and the writer delivered a discourse from 1 Thess. 4: 13–18, to a large congregation, who seemed to listen with interest to the word. Elder Salsbury, pastor of the Wesleyan Methodist church, in the place, adjourned his regular meeting, and all attended the funeral. He also assisted in the exercises. C. F. SWEET.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Liverpool July 16th, Queenstown 17th.

There is no political news of importance.

It is confirmed that Denmark has proposed a truce, but nothing is known as to the terms or concessions offered.

It is reported that the Danes were repulsed while attempting a landing at Dalbeck and Fredericshaven.

The King of the Belgians was about to visit Napoleon at Vichy.

The Danish Commission has returned from its mission to the allied headquarters, having been unable to bring about a cessation of hostilities, but a Berlin dispatch says a truce until July 31st was agreed upon. Meanwhile peace propositions will be made.

Garibaldi, it is said, is preparing to march against Rome with 15,000 volunteers. His headquarters are at Palermo.

DOMESTIC.

Philadelphia, July 27. The Bulletin has the following special dispatch:

"Washington, July 27, P. M. A gentleman just arrived here informs me that Harper's Ferry has been evacuated by our forces, and that the rebels are there [illegible] about four miles distant from that place. He cannot give an estimate of the number of rebels, but states that they are in large force, also that there was more or less fighting on Sunday between Martinsburg and Williamsport, and our forces fell back sullenly and resolutely."

New York, July 28. The Nashville dispatch of the 27th says Gen. Rousseau crossed the Coosaw river on the 13th, where he was attacked by 5000 rebels. After five hours' fighting he routed them, and proceeded. At Talladega he broke up a rebel conscript camp, capturing 100. At Tylocuga he destroyed two large warehouses filled with rebel supplies and a large quantity of saltpetre. He also fired the large iron works and destroyed the furnaces and smelting pit.

July 29. The Tribune's Washington dispatch of the 28th says dispatches received this evening from Gen. Sherman's army state that there has been no material change.

Atlanta is within the grasp of Gen. Sherman, and could be occupied at any moment, but the capture or destruction of the rebel army is what is contemplated. The rebel loss since our army crossed the Chattahoochie is estimated at 18,000.

Nashville, Tenn., July 27. Information received from an officer of the 23d corps says that in two battles in front of Atlanta we destroyed the greater portion of the enemy's best corps. All the officers captured on the 22d and 23d say that the rebel Gen. Hood was killed on the 22d.

St. Louis, Mo., July 27. The guerrillas burned the railroad property at Shelbina and Lakeman, on the Hannibal and St. Joseph Railroad, yesterday. They destroyed all the blockhouses, water tanks and the bridge at Salt river, and robbed the citizens and plundered the stores of both friend and foe alike. The band numbered eighty.

New York, July 27. Owing to the yellow fever at quarantine, the Mayor has issued a proclamation, warning people against a violation of the health laws.

The Charleston Courier of the 21st July has the following report:

"The artillery firing in the harbor has been very active since our last report. During Tuesday night the Morris Island batteries fired 139 shot, and seventeen on Wednesday. The enemy has, besides, kept up a desultory fire in the direction of Secessionville. Nor have our own guns been altogether silent. The Sullivan's Island batteries have thrown seventy-eight shells, and Battery Cheves about sixteen shells at the enemy's position on Morris Island."

Baltimore, Md., July 29. The American's special, dated Harper's Ferry, says:

"Harper's Ferry is once again the scene of active military operations. The military authorities have pushed forward their movements with unusual vigor, sagacity and secrecy. If the rebel forces linger anywhere near Winchester a battle is among the probabilities within the next few days. If fought at all, it will be fought under circumstances which I believe will give it success."

Washington, July 31. The ball has at last opened at Petersburg. Yesterday (Saturday) morning at daylight the mine in front of the 9th corps was sprung, blowing into the air one of the largest and strongest works of the enemy, and burying in its ruins a number of rebels, with three of its four guns. [illegible]

The mine which was exploded was said to be four hundred feet long and the charge was six tons of powder. It was constructed by the 48th Pennsylvania regiment, which is composed entirely of coal miners. The mine was commenced June 28th, and seven tons of powder were placed in it immediately under the rebel fort.

St. John's, N. F., July 29. Cyrus W. Field, Esq. left to-day for Valentia Bay. He visited Trinity Bay yesterday. Heart's Content is the place where the Atlantic cable will be landed. Mr. Field proposes to build a land line thence to Placentia, 100 miles in length, and over a good road the entire distance. The cable will connect Placentia Bay with Cape Breton. Capt. Orlebar of H. M. steamer Margarette Stevenson will meet Mr. Field at Placentia to make soundings.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 1st.—Later advices state that we were unable to hold ground gained on Saturday, and the failure is said to belong to the colored troops, who composed the second division of the 9th corps. All quiet on Sunday. Loss on both sides 5,000.

YELLOW FEVER AT NEW YORK.—Reference to our telegraphic dispatches will show that the authorities of New York have announced their determination to enforce the quarantine laws, yellow fever having been brought into the harbor in the United States war steamer Tahoma. On Tuesday the Times says that officers were offered $10 a day and sailors $5 a day to remain on board and take care of the ship, nearly all her crew being prostrate with yellow fever. Over seventy sick men have been removed on shore within a few days. The entire station has been so terrified by the disastrous state of affairs on the unfortunate vessel that hardly any one can be got to volunteer for the ordinary duty of keeping the decks clean. It is so dangerous to go near a craft in the Tahoma's position, that even the steam-tugs give her a wide berth. This vessel left New York during the excitement occasioned by the late rebel raid, having on board sailors and marines for purposes explained at the time. On her return the fever broke out, and for some days it was feared that every man on board would perish. The latest communication with the steamer elicited the information that there had been no abatement of the disease on board.—Boston Journal.

St. Louis, Mo., July 23rd. Much surprise was created here a short time since by the arrest of several very prominent secessionists of this city, whose offense was unknown at the time, but has lately come to light. They were connected with a conspiracy extending throughout the entire Mississippi valley, having for its object the erection of a North-western Confederacy.

Provost Marshal General Sanderson has been gathering evidence in the matter for several months. This testimony is now in possession of the Washington authorities. It implicates many prominent men, and shows that a very dangerous organization had been formed.

One of the parties arrested here is said to have been so badly frightened that a bond for half a million dollars was offered for his release.

It is believed that the recent guerrilla movements in this State have connection with this great conspiracy, particularly as Thornton, in a speech at Platte, said: "The Knights of the Golden Circle are organized and armed and ready to rise throughout the free States."

THE FIRES IN MAINE.—The Bangor Times says that a Western train was detained three hours on Thursday in consequence of fires raging on both sides of the track in the town of Pittsfield. The Belfast Age says:

"We hear of some large meadows on the Northern part of this county, hundreds of acres in extent, that have been swept over and every living thing burned. On Sunday several religious meetings were dismissed in the midst of the services, those in attendance having to turn out in a body to fight fire. In the town of Newport the other day, the goods were removed from the stores of the village, in anticipation of a general conflagration, and one or more houses, we learn, have been burned. Fires are raging in the Western part of this city, in Knox, and in other towns, and doing extensive injury."

THE HUNDRED DAY MEN AND THE DRAFT.—Washington, July 26th. If the opinion of Solicitor Whiting, denying the exemption of 100 day men from the draft, is adhered to, dissatisfaction will arise in Massachusetts, as Gov. Andrew has ordered proceedings under the impression that those thus enlisting would not be liable to draft until the expiration of their term of service.

The war department persists in its policy not to exempt from the draft the State militia doing duty for 100 days, but to credit with that service such of them as may be drafted. It is considered certain that there will be no modification of this order.

☞ The Siberian Telegraph line is working to Queenstown, Ireland, from Irkoutsk, Siberia—a distance of 6,500 miles. A dispatch was recently transmitted the whole distance in two hours: a great feat, making a fair allowance for gain in apparent time.

☞ A drouth similar to that in the United States prevails in England and Ireland. For nearly a month ending July 12 no rain had fallen, and the crops were wilting. The weather is unusually hot and sultry, and the farmers apprehended the worst results unless rain speedily appeared.

GENERAL CAMPMEETING AT WILBRAHAM, MASS.

Providence permitting, a GENERAL campmeeting will commence at Wilbraham, on the old ground upon the hill, Monday, August 22d, and continue one week.

Ample accommodations will be provided for board and horse keeping. Board at 70 cents per day. Single meal,—breakfast or supper,—25 cents; dinner 30 cents. The boarding department is under the charge of the Committee, and any profits accruing from the same will go to the support of the meeting.

RUTLAND TO WILBRAHAM.

We are happy to say to all who wish to attend the Wilbraham campmeeting via. Rutland, Vt., and Bellows Falls, etc., that free return tickets will be given from Bellows Falls to Rutland by applying to the conductor on the way down. As free return tickets will probably be furnished from Springfield to Bellows Falls, the way is now open for visiting Wilbraham from Rutland for fare one way, which will not exceed $5.50. Shall we not have a goodly representation, then, from North Western Vermont? Come,—it may be our last gathering. H. F. C.

Meeting of the Advent Christian Association.

The fifth annual meeting of this Society will be held at Wilbraham Grove, commencing at 4 o'clock P. M., Tuesday, Aug. 23d, 1864.

A full representation from all churches co-operating with this Society, and a full attendance of preachers thus co-operating is desirable at this meeting. Questions too important to admit of neglect or indifference on the part of the churches scattered abroad, or of the ministry, will come before this meeting. Does the Constitution require amendment? Shall there be any change in the editorial management of the Crisis? To whom as officers of the Society shall we intrust the funds and various interests of the same for the coming year? These, among many others that will arise, are questions to be decided at this meeting. Let no trifling pecuniary consideration, nor loss of time, prevent a general gathering of the friends of this Association. Each church (i. e., society of believers in Jesus Christ) co-operating, is entitled to one delegate, and one additional delegate for every fifty members above the number of twenty-five members.

Remember ☞ That all delegates sent by churches to the Advent Christian Association must be furnished with written credentials, or forfeit their right to membership. ☜

H. F. CARPENTER, Clerk.

Rutland, Vt., July 7th, 1864.

THE CONSTITUTION Of the Advent Christian Association as now revised and amended.

ART. I. This Society shall be known by the name of the Advent Christian Association.

ART. II. The objects of this Society shall be the promulgation of Bible truth and the promotion of vital piety by the formation of a Christian Publication Society for the issue of books, tracts and periodicals.

ART. III. The officers of this Society shall be a President, Vice-President, Secretary, Treasurer and nine Directors, who, together with the Editor or Editors, shall constitute a Board of Managers.

ART. IV. The members of this Society shall consist of all pastors and evangelists co-operating, and of delegates from churches* also co-operating, and of all officers of this Association. Each church shall be allowed one delegate and one additional delegate for every fifty members above the number of twenty-five members.

ART. V. The duties of the officers shall be the same as are usually performed by such officers. And the Board of Managers shall by means of Committees whom they shall appoint provide for the discharge of the duties indicated in the second article of this Constitution. The Board shall also fill vacancies occurring until the next annual meeting of the Society. The Board shall make annual reports of all funds received and disbursed, of business transacted, and of the condition of the various interests of the Society. The Board shall be chosen by ballot at the annual meeting of the Society.

ART. VI. The annual meeting of the Society shall be held at such time and place as shall be declared by adjournment of the Society, or appointed by the Board. Special meetings may be called by the Society, by public notice given at least three weeks previously, at the request of ten members, either preachers or delegates from the separate churches.

ART. VII. This Constitution may be amended by a majority at any regular meeting, when two months' notice of the proposed amendment has been given, or without such notice, by two-thirds of the members present at any annual meeting.

ART. VIII. The Editor or Editors of the World's Crisis shall be chosen by ballot at the annual meeting of the Advent Christian Association, or at any special meeting called for that purpose, provided six weeks' notice be given of the same through the columns of the Crisis.

Proposed amendment for Art. IV. now on the table:—"And each church living at such a distance that they cannot conveniently be represented by a delegate from among themselves, may note by written communication to the Secretary, or may select as their proxy any person whom they may designate, whether he reside among them or not."

NOTE. A church is defined in the words of Wesley, "A Society of believers in Jesus Christ."

N. B. If it is impossible to bring tents, bring good provision and bedding, and we will try to furnish shelter, provided all such will drop me a line by the 25th of August, at Baraboo, Wis., so that I may know how matters stand. Don't omit to write, stating how many will come with you. W. SHELDON.

Campmeeting.

There will be a campmeeting in Wolcott, Ct., commencing Sept. 5th, and continuing through the week and over the following Sabbath, on land owned by Bro. Hector Smith. This meeting will be in a beautiful grove near the highway, with an excellent spring of water on the ground, and with every other convenience desirable to make it an object for the brethren and sisters to come.

This is an entirely new field, and hopes are entertained that both preachers and brethren and sisters will come filled with faith that God will bless the effort to the saving of some. Bro. Smith and wife have stood almost alone in this place for twenty years witnesses to the truth of the Savior's speedy coming, and now ask the co-operation of the brethren while he makes this effort to benefit his fellow men.

We hope there will be a general rally of all the brethren and sisters from the surrounding towns. Come bringing your tents, and stay through the meeting. Brethren coming by Railroad east or west, will stop at Bristol. This is on the Hartford, Providence, and Fishkill R. R., where teams will be in readiness to carry passengers to the ground. Those coming on the Canal Road will stop at Southington, where they will find conveyance. Other arrangements noticed hereafter.

For the Brethren, RALPH WILLIAMS.

Campmeeting.

There will be a campmeeting in Savoy, commencing Aug. 29th, and continuing one week, on the old battle ground at Bro. Noah Mirick's. Horse keeping will be furnished by Bro. Mirick. There will be a victualing tent on the ground, where food can be had by the week or day, or single meal, or otherwise. As cotton cloth is so high, we do not expect brethren can get tents unless they have old ones. If you have tents, bring them; but come well provided with buffalos, quilts and blankets, and a place will be provided to spread them under shelter.

Come, brethren, let there be a general rally. Come with warm hearts, settle all difficulties, banish all hardness. Our campmeetings are almost done. Soon notice will be given from head quarters to go into camp on the new earth. No preaching brethren are engaged. We want all to come who love God and wait for his Son, and who will give meat in due season—the last crowning truths of the gospel. H. HADLOCK, for the Church.

Wisconsin Annual Conference.

The "Advent Christian Conference" will hold its yearly session in connection with the Wisconsin Campmeeting, at Okee, Columbia Co., Wis., twenty miles north west from Madison, by the way of Lodi, beginning September 11th, 1864.

Let every church send delegates, and every minister be in attendance if possible; otherwise be sure to report by letter. Churches and ministers who have not yet united, should be sure to do so this year, that we may move in order and harmony, and consequently with greater strength for good. Delegates should bring letters of appointment from churches, and ministers with whom we are not acquainted should bring letters of commendation.

Letters may be sent to me at Baraboo, Sauk Co., Wis. W. SHELDON, Secretary of Conf.

Notice.

Basket meetings will be held at the following places:

Three miles west of Forestville, Delaware Co., (as Wm. Smith may arrange), Aug. 7th.

These meetings are designed for two sermons in the grove, to commence at 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M. Each person is requested to bring a basket of provision, and provide himself with a seat. Let the rich dress in plain garments, so the poor will come and hear the gospel preached. Will the friends at the above places designate the spot, post up notices, and circulate the word all around? A collection will be taken up for home mission purposes, that the gospel may be preached in the highways and hedges. PETER S. W. DEYO.

Tent Meeting.

I will commence a meeting at Havana, Mason Co., Ill., Aug. 17th, and continue over the following Sunday. I shall come with the mission tent, and shall try to arrange to have some one help me in preaching the word. We hope to see a general gathering of the friends in that part of the State. Come, brethren, lay aside the cares of the world for a little season, and dedicate a few days of remaining time to the work of the Lord. Let your prayers go up continually, that good may be done and souls saved as the result of this effort.

WM. McCULLOCK, Evangelist.

Campmeeting in Wisconsin.

Probably our Wisconsin campmeeting will be held at Okee, Columbia Co., Wis., beginning on Sunday, Sept. 11th. Tents to be erected on Saturday, the 10th. Despite the hard times, we look for a grand rally. Particulars in [illegible]

For the Committee, W. SHELDON.

To the Friends in the West.

Providence permitting, I shall visit Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, and perhaps Wisconsin, soon after harvest. Friends wishing a visit from me, who have not already written, will please write soon, that I may make out my list of appointments. If you write, I shall try to call on you; but if you do not, I shall not know where you are. I shall go with my team, and make first for Ogle Co., Ill., thence to Dayton, Mich. Address PETER S. W. DEYO, Strawberry Point, Iowa.

Notice.

There will be a meeting in the Western Tabernacle, in Chicago, to commence Aug. 9th, and continue over the following Sabbath. Eld. Miles Grant, of Boston, will be present, and give a series of lectures on Bible Christianity, and its great antagonist—Spiritualism—and other important subjects relating to the signs of the times. Further notice next week.—Voice of the West.

Meeting at Meredith Village, N. H.

If the Lord will, I will preach at the Town Hall, Meredith Village, N. H., where Bro. T. E. Lang may arrange, on Friday evening, Saturday afternoon, and over Sunday, Aug. 5th, 6th, and 7th.

Shall we see a general rally to this meeting? Pray for us. H. L. HASTINGS.

Conference.

The Maine Quarterly Conference of Free Sabbath Adventists will hold its next session at North Berwick, Me., commencing Thursday evening, Aug. 4th, and continuing over the Sabbath and first day. All lovers of truth are cheerfully invited to attend. Also, if it be His good pleasure, I will hold meetings, as brethren at Meredith Village and New Hampton may arrange, Sundays 14th and 21st. S. C. HANCOCK.

Notice.

The Christian Easterly Maine Conference is appointed to be held at North Searsport, to commence Thursday, Aug. 18th, at 5 o'clock P. M., and continue over the Sabbath.

By order of managers, M. YOUNG, Clerk.

Alton Campmeeting.

A campmeeting will be held at Alton, N. H., to commence Aug. 29th, and hold over the following Sunday. Also a meeting on the ground Sunday, the 28th. Particulars hereafter.

For the Committee, J. G. SMITH.

A campmeeting will be held in Etna, Me., on the same ground where it was in 1863, to commence the first week in September. Arrangements will be made accordingly. More hereafter. ISRAEL DAMMAN.

you, for I too have been drinking from that mixed cup that God has prepared for all. In yonder burying place, side by side, a dear sister and precious mother sleep the sleep of death; but a blessing rests upon them, for both died in the Lord; and I believing in the Resurrection and the Life hope soon to meet them again with other dear friends on the "evergreen shore." JANE J. AUSTIN.

From D. R. and M. S. Mansfield.

BRO. GRANT:—On our way to this place we stopped and attended our appointment at Jonesville, Mich. The church here, with their pastor, Eld. A. E. Babcock, are well united, and the God of peace is with them. The church have had many influences to contend with, but still they stand firm.

On our arrival at this place a goodly number of our old friends were waiting to greet us. These faithful ones had circulated our appointment, and had made every necessary arrangement for the meeting. Last spring we found the cause here in a low state. Our labors at that time resulted in the reformation of some sinners, then a growing interest has been kept up under the labors of Dr. P. B. Hoyt, their pastor. We have had some excellent meetings at this time. Four have put on Christ by baptism, and others we think will soon. One of the above subjects of baptism has been a member of the Methodist Episcopal church for many years, and has many times sought baptism at their hands, but failed. She came to the water very much composed, and decided to obey God and live. On coming up out of the water she praised the Lord aloud. We think a good impression was left on the many eye witnesses of this baptism. D. R. & M. S. MANSFIELD.

From Bro. T. F. Pinkham.

BRO. GRANT:—I have had the pleasure of reading the columns of the Crisis for quite a time, and the more I read it the better I like it. It is a great comfort to me to read those interesting letters from those whom I never have seen yet love. Brethren and sisters, we are living in a very stirring time, when troubles and trials are thickening very fast, and it is a self-evident fact that we are at the time when the King of kings is to come; and I can say with all my heart, Let him come. "He that will love life and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil, and his lips that they speak no guile." Let him "eschew evil and do good." Let him "seek peace and ensue it." Your brother in hope.

Haverhill, Mass. T. F. PINKHAM.

From Bro. L. Boutell.

DEAR BRETHREN:—I have suffered a long detention from my field of labor, on account of the protracted sickness of my wife, but by the goodness of the Lord she has so far recovered as to be able to be about the house, and to ride out in pleasant weather. We feel grateful for his mercies in restoring thus far, praying he may continue to restore till health is gained. I am now able to attend appointments, and hope to attend the camp-meetings, for the purpose of glorifying my Master, and greeting a multitude of like precious faith once more before the consummation of our blessed hope, when the good and faithful will meet to part no more forever.

Thine looking for life eternal,

Groton, July 28th, 1864. L. BOUTELL.

From Bro. S. Hart.

DEAR BRETHREN AND SISTERS:—To-night I am permitted to dwell in safety. And as I write to let you know that I am aware of the course that this world is pursuing, I would say, stand firm in Jesus, firm as the everlasting rock. The mighty tide that is coming will overwhelm many of those that have not their anchor cast. I rest in God. Let the angry storm come with its wild deluge of blood and its threatening devastations. I rest in God, and wait for protection from his hand. He can lift me above the mighty whirlwind and bear me to his everlasting home. He can guide me in dark places and rescue my feet from slippery paths. Though the world trust not him, yet will I trust in his mighty power; for there is none other that can save. He is my refuge in the day of trouble, and he will save me in the day of his wrath. SANFORD HART.

Obituaries.

FREDDIE L. FRENCH.

Died in Rutland, Vt., Sunday, July 17th, of inflammation of the brain, Freddie L., only son of Bro. S. and Sr. E. C. French, aged eleven months.

While suffering from difficult dentition, death came stealthily and snatched him from the arms of fond parents, who were bestowing upon him every care. A few hours' warning only were given ere this lovely flower was smitten with the mildew of the tomb. Too fair and too frail for earth's poisonous breath, he has found a refuge in the grave till Jesus wakes to life the dead, and makes all things new.

"He needs no more soothing, no low cradle hymn,
No mother to hush him to sleep;
He needs no physician, no lamp burning dim,
No pale, weary faces to bend over him,
And hope while they silently weep.

Dear parents, remember though death's solemn call
Has smitten you cruelly here;
Whatever of anguish this life can befall,
Your darling forever is free from it all,
For him you have nothing to fear."

Our dear brother and his companion are proving that God never leaves nor forsakes, and are unspeakably comforted by the blessed hope.

ROBINSON F. BERRY.

Died in Portsmouth, N. H., June 29th, 1864, Robinson G. Berry, aged fifty years.

Another faithful disciple of our blessed Lord has been laid away to rest awhile from the toil and strife of this world of sorrow and care, but he sleeps in Jesus, and will surely awake at the sound of the voice of the Son of God when he speaks to life the dead.

Bro. Berry lived a christian life for twenty-eight years, during which time, by his consistent course he secured the confidence of those who knew him. In 1843, he, with his companion, embraced the doctrine of the literal interpretation of the Holy Scriptures, to which view he clung tenaciously until his death; and deeming no earthly good with which the Lord had favored him too valuable to be devoted to his cause, he bestowed liberally to the cause of God, considering that "the Lord loveth the cheerful giver," and that "it is more blessed to give than to receive." The church with which he was connected shared largely in his liberality. He died in the faith of seeing Jesus and being made like him when he comes. [illegible] joyously anticipating the day when they shall meet brother, husband and father to part no more forever.

Our sister has not only been called recently to lay aside her loving companion, but also a little boy of some four or five summers, which makes her home seem somewhat gloomy and forsaken; but the presence of Jesus will scatter all the gloom, and make all our future prospects bright and glorious; and may his presence ever abide with thee, my dear sister, supporting thee not only in this thy deep affliction, but in all the trials through which thou mayest be called to pass ere thou reachest the happy Eden home.

The funeral was attended by the writer, assisted by Bro. C. S. Emerson, at the chapel, on Friday, July 1st, where a large circle of friends assembled to sympathise with the bereaved.

JOSHUA WEBBER.

Joshua R. Webber (formerly of Bangor, Me.) died in New Orleans, La., May 27th, 1863, aged twenty-one years, seven months.

Also in North Vassalboro', Me., July 11th, 1864, Sr. Adelia Adams, wife of Bro. Henry Adams, aged twenty-eight years, thirteen days.

Thus in the space of a few short months have we been called upon to mourn the loss of a brother and sister. From what we can learn of our brother's last moments, we feel that he sleeps in Jesus. We have the strongest evidence that poor mortals can have, that our sister sleeps in Jesus. She suffered much for a number of months from her disease,—consumption,—but she bore her suffering with patience, knowing that if we suffer with Jesus we shall also reign with him.

She died in faith, bidding her friends good by, and exhorting them to be faithful followers of the Lord Jesus, and meet her in the soon coming kingdom. Thanks be to God for the hope of the resurrection. Soon those that sleep in Jesus will come forth to immortality and life that awaits the faithful of God. Bro. Robert Hall attended the funeral. M. B. CYPHERS.

HELLEN FRANCES PULVER.

Died of affection of the brain, in Farmington, Ct., July 15th, 1864, Hellen Frances Pulver, daughter of Hiram and Jane Pulver, aged seven years, and six months.

Bro. and Sr. Pulver deeply feel their loss, and while they shed bitter tears, they are consoled with the assurance that Frances will soon come from the land of the enemy, and death be forever destroyed.

Frances, like the early flower,
Drooped when just in bloom;
Passed away in childhood's hour,
To the silent tomb.

GEO. L. TEEPLE.

JARED MARTIN.

Died at Key West, June 18th, 1864, of yellow fever, Capt. Jared W. Martin, aged thirty years.

Bro. Martin professed religion, and was baptized June 8th, 1862, (my eldest son was baptized at the same time,) at our Seneca Falls Yearly Conference. I understand that he professed to maintain his allegiance to Christ, even to the last. He was an amiable and honorable young man, and had the confidence of his associates. He sleeps, as we hope, to awake "at the resurrection of the just." His funeral was attended on the 17th, at Eagle Harbor, N. Y., at the Methodist Episcopal church, when the writer delivered a discourse from 1 Thess. 4: 13–18, to a large congregation, who seemed to listen with interest to the word. Elder Salsbury, pastor of the Wesleyan Methodist church, in the place, adjourned his regular meeting, and all attended the funeral. He also assisted in the exercises. C. F. SWEET.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Liverpool July 16th, Queenstown 17th.

There is no political news of importance.

It is confirmed that Denmark has proposed a truce, but nothing is known as to the terms or concessions offered.

It is reported that the Danes were repulsed while attempting a landing at Dalbeck and Fredericshaven.

The King of the Belgians was about to visit Napoleon at Vichy.

The Danish Commission has returned from its mission to the allied headquarters, having been unable to bring about a cessation of hostilities, but a Berlin dispatch says a truce until July 31st was agreed upon. Meanwhile peace propositions will be made.

Garibaldi, it is said, is preparing to march against Rome with 15,000 volunteers. His headquarters are at Palermo.

DOMESTIC.

Philadelphia, July 27. The Bulletin has the following special dispatch:

"Washington, July 27, P. M. A gentleman just arrived here informs me that Harper's Ferry has been evacuated by our forces, and that the rebels have their line of skirmishers out about four miles distant from that place. He cannot give an estimate of the number of rebels, but states that they are in large force, also that there was more or less fighting on Sunday between Martinsburg and Williamsport, and our forces fell back sullenly and resolutely."

New York, July 28. The Nashville dispatch of the 27th says Gen. Rosseau crossed the Coosaw river on the 13th, where he was attacked by 5000 rebels. After five hours' fighting he routed them, and proceeded. At Talladega he broke up a rebel conscript camp, capturing 100. At Tylocuga he destroyed two large warehouses filled with rebel supplies and a large quantity of nitre. He also fired the large iron works and destroyed the furnaces and smelting pit.

July 29. The Tribune's Washington dispatch of the 28th says dispatches received this evening from Gen. Sherman's army state that there has been no material change.

Atlanta is within the grasp of Gen. Sherman, and could be occupied at any moment, but the capture or destruction of the rebel army is what he is contending for. The rebel loss since our army crossed the Chattahoochie is estimated at 18,000.

Nashville, Tenn., July 27. Information received from an officer at the front says that in two battles in front of Atlanta we destroyed the greater portion of the enemy's best two corps. All the prisoners captured on the 22d and 23d say that the rebel Gen. Hood was killed on the 22d.

St. Louis, Mo., July 27. The guerrillas burned the railroad property at Shelbina and Lakeman, on the Hannibal and St Joseph Railroad, yesterday. They destroyed all the blockhouses, water tanks and the bridge at Salt river, and robbed the citizens and plundered the stores of both friend and foe alike. The band numbered eighty.

New York, July 27. Owing to the yellow fever at quarantine, the Mayor has issued a proclamation, warning people against a violation of the health laws.

The Charleston Courier of the 21st July has the following report:

"The artillery firing in the harbor has been very active since our last report. During Tuesday night the Morris Island batteries fired 189 shot, and Wednesday 425 shots at Fort Sumter. Nineteen shells were thrown at the city Tuesday night and seventeen on Wednesday. The enemy has, besides, kept up a desultory fire in the direction of Secessionville. Nor have our own guns been altogether silent. The Sullivan's Island batteries have thrown some seventy-eight shells, and Battery Cheves about sixteen shells at the enemy's position on Morris Island."

Baltimore, Md., July 29. The American's special, dated Harper's Ferry, says:

"Harper's Ferry is once again the scene of active military operations. The military authorities have pushed forward their movements with unusual vigor, sagacity and secrecy. If the rebel force lingers anywhere near Winchester a battle is among the probabilities within the next few days. If fought at all, it will be fought under circumstances which I believe will give it success."

Washington, July 31. The ball has at last opened at Petersburg. Yesterday (Saturday) morning at daylight the mine in front of the 9th corps was sprung, blowing into the air one of the largest and strongest works of the enemy, and burying in its ruins a number of rebels, with three of its four guns.

This was the signal for a general assault all along the line, and in an instant thereafter our guns opened with terrific fury upon the enemy, [illegible]

The mine which was exploded was said to be four hundred feet long, and the charge was six tons of powder. It was constructed by the 48th Pennsylvania regiment, which is composed entirely of coal miners. The mine was commenced June 28th, and seven tons of powder were placed in it immediately under the rebel fort.

St. John's, N. F., July 29. Cyrus W. Field, Esq. left to-day for Valentia Bay. He visited Trinity Bay yesterday. Heart's Content is the place where the Atlantic cable will be landed. Mr. Field proposes to build a land line thence to Placentia, 100 miles in length, and over a good road the entire distance. The cable will connect Placentia Bay with Cape Breton. Capt. Orlebar of H. M. steamer Margarett Stevenson will meet Mr. Field at Placentia to make soundings.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 1st.—Later advices state that we were unable to hold ground gained on Saturday, and the failure is said to belong to the colored troops, who composed the second division of the 9th corps. All quiet on Sunday. Loss on both sides 5.000.

YELLOW FEVER AT NEW YORK.—Reference to our telegraphic dispatches will show that the authorities of New York have announced their determination to enforce the quarantine laws, yellow fever having been brought into the harbor in the United States war steamer Tahoma. On Tuesday the Times says that officers were offered $10 a day and sailors $5 a day to remain on board and take care of the ship, nearly all her crew being prostrate with yellow fever. Over seventy sick men have been removed on shore within a few days. The entire station has been so terrified by the disastrous state of affairs on the unfortunate vessel that hardly any one can be got to volunteer for the ordinary duty of keeping the decks clean. It is so dangerous to go near a craft in the Tahoma's position, that even the steam-tugs give her a wide berth. This vessel left New York during the excitement occasioned by the late rebel raid, having on board sailors and marines for purposes explained at the time. On her return the fever broke out, and for some days it was feared that every man on board would perish. The latest communication with the steamer elicited the information that there had been no abatement of the disease on board.—Boston Journal.

St. Louis, Mo., July 23rd. Much surprise was created here a short time since by the arrest of several very prominent secessionists of this city, whose offense was unknown at the time, but has lately come to light. They were connected with a conspiracy extending throughout the entire Mississippi valley, having for its object the erection of a North-western Confederacy.

Provost Marshal General Sanderson has been gathering evidence in the matter for several months. This testimony is now in possession of the Washington authorities. It implicates many prominent men, and shows that a very dangerous organization had been formed.

One of the parties arrested here is said to have been so badly frightened that a bond for half a million dollars was offered for his release.

It is believed that the recent guerrilla movements in this State have connection with this great conspiracy, particularly as Thornton, in a speech at Platte, said: "The Knights of the Golden Circle are organized and armed and ready to rise throughout the free States."

THE FIRES IN MAINE.—The Bangor Times says that a Western train was detained three hours on Thursday in consequence of fires raging on both sides of the track in the town of Pittsfield. The Belfast Age says:

"We hear of some large meadows on the Northern part of this county, hundreds of acres in extent, that have been swept over and every living thing burned. On Sunday several religious meetings were dismissed in the midst of the services, those in attendance having to turn out in a body to fight fire. In the town of Newport the other day, the goods were removed from the stores of the village, in anticipation of a general conflagration, and one or more houses, we learn, have been burned. Fires are raging in the Western part of this city, in Knox, and in other towns, and doing extensive injury."

THE HUNDRED DAY MEN AND THE DRAFT.—Washington, July 26th. If the opinion of Solicitor Whiting, denying the exemption of 100 day men from the draft, is adhered to, dissatisfaction will arise in Massachusetts, as Gov. Andrew has ordered proceedings under the impression that those thus enlisting would not be liable to draft until the expiration of their term of service.

The war department persists in its policy not to exempt from the draft the State militia doing duty for 100 days, but to credit with that service such of them as may be drafted. It is considered certain that there will be no modification of this order.

☞ The Siberian Telegraph line is working to Queenstown, Ireland, from Irkoutsk, Siberia—a distance of 6,500 miles. A dispatch was recently transmitted the whole distance in two hours: a great feat, making a fair allowance for gain in apparent time.

☞ A drouth similar to that in the United States prevails in England and Ireland. For nearly a month ending July 12 no rain had fallen, and the crops were wilting. The weather is unusually hot and sultry, and the farmers apprehended the worst results unless rain speedily appeared.

Notices.

GENERAL CAMPMEETING AT WILBRAHAM, MASS.

Providence permitting, a GENERAL campmeeting will commence at Wilbraham, on the old ground upon the hill, Monday, August 22d, and continue one week.

Ample accommodations will be provided for board and horse keeping. Board at 70 cents per day. Single meal,—breakfast or supper,—25 cents; dinner 30 cents. The boarding department is under the charge of the Committee, and any profits accruing from the same will go to the support of the meeting.

Those going from Boston to the campmeeting can take the 4.15 A. M. train at the Boston and Worcester depot, and arrive at the camp-ground at 7.27 A. M., or they can take the 2.30 P. M. express train, and arrive in Worcester at 4 P. M., and then change to an accommodation train, which leaves Worcester at 4.15, and arrives at Wilbraham at 6.23 P. M. No other trains stop at the campground.

We have not as yet succeeded in getting the fare reduced on the various Rail Roads. We hope that some reduction may yet be made, and that we shall be able to report in our next paper.

The cars leave Springfield for the camp-ground, (distance nine miles), at 7.15 and 11.15 A. M., and 5 P. M.

F. H. BERICK, MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS, S. G. MATHEWSON, H. MUNGER, } Committee of Arrangements.

RUTLAND TO WILBRAHAM.

We are happy to say to all who wish to attend the Wilbraham campmeeting via. Rutland, Vt., and Bellows Falls, etc., that free return tickets will be given from Bellows Falls to Rutland by applying to the conductor on the way down. As free return tickets will probably be furnished from Springfield to Bellows Falls, the way is now open for visiting Wilbraham from Rutland for fare one way, which will not exceed $5.50. Shall we not have a goodly representation, then, from North Western Vermont? Come,—it may be our last gathering.

H. F. C.

Meeting of the Advent Christian Association.

The fifth annual meeting of this Society will be held at Wilbraham Grove, commencing at 4 o'clock P. M., Tuesday, Aug. 23d, 1864.

A full representation from all churches co-operating with this Society, and a full attendance of preachers thus co-operating is desirable at this meeting. Questions too important to admit of neglect or indifference on the part of the churches scattered abroad, or of the ministry, will come before this meeting. Does the Constitution require amendment? Shall there be any change in the editorial management of the Crisis? To whom as officers of the Society shall we intrust the funds and various interests of the same for the coming year? These, among many others that will arise, are questions to be decided at this meeting. Let no trifling pecuniary consideration, nor loss of time, prevent a general gathering of the friends of this Association. Each church (i. e., society of believers in Jesus Christ) co-operating, is entitled to one delegate, and one additional delegate for every fifty members above the number of twenty-five members.

Remember ☞ That all delegates sent by churches to the Advent Christian Association must be furnished with written credentials, or forfeit their right to membership. ☜

H. F. CARPENTER, Clerk.

Rutland, Vt., July 7th, 1864.

Meeting of the Board.

The Board of the Advent Christian Association will meet at Wilbraham Grove, Tuesday, Aug. 23d, 1864, at 9 o'clock, A. M. A full attendance is requested. H. F. CARPENTER, Clerk.

THE CONSTITUTION

Of the Advent Christian Association as now revised and amended.

ART. I. This Society shall be known by the name of the Advent Christian Association.

ART. II. The objects of this Society shall be the promulgation of Bible truth and the promotion of vital piety by the formation of a Christian Publication Society for the issue of books, tracts and periodicals.

ART. III. The officers of this Society shall be a President, Vice-President, Secretary, Treasurer and nine Directors, who, together with the Editor or Editors, shall constitute a Board of Managers.

ART. IV. The members of this Society shall consist of all pastors and evangelists co-operating, and of delegates from churches* also co-operating, and of all officers of this Association. Each church shall be allowed one delegate and one additional delegate for every fifty members above the number of twenty-five members.

ART. V. The duties of the officers shall be the same as are usually performed by such officers. And the Board of Managers shall by means of Committees whom they shall appoint provide for the discharge of the duties indicated in the second article of this Constitution. A majority of the Board at any meeting duly notified and two-thirds present at any time without notice, shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business. The Board shall also fill vacancies occurring until the next annual meeting of the Society. The Board shall make annual reports of all funds received and disbursed, of business transacted, and of the condition of the various interests of the Society. The Board shall be chosen by ballot at the annual meeting of the Society.

ART. VI. The annual meeting of the Society shall be held at such time and place as shall be declared by adjournment of the Society, or appointed by the Board. Special meetings may be called by the Society, by public notice given at least three weeks previously, at the request of ten members, either preachers or delegates from the separate churches.

ART. VII. This Constitution may be amended by a majority at any regular meeting, when two months' notice of the proposed amendment has been given, or without such notice, by two-thirds of the members present at any annual meeting.

ART. VIII. The Editor or Editors of the World's Crisis shall be chosen by ballot at the annual meeting of the Advent Christian Association, or at any special meeting called for that purpose, provided six weeks' notice be given of the same through the columns of the Crisis.

Proposed amendment for Art. IV. now on the table:—"And each church living at such a distance that they cannot conveniently be represented by a delegate from among themselves, may note by written communication to the Secretary, or may select as their proxy any person whom they may designate, whether he reside among them or not."

NOTE. A church is defined in the words of Wesley, "A Society of believers in Jesus Christ."

General Campmeeting in Wisconsin.

This meeting is to be attended by Eld. Miles Grant, and a score of other ministers. Let all arrange to erect their tents on Sept. 10th. Hay free for all who bring tents. Stage transportation from Madison to Okee on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, starting early in the morning; and from Baraboo to Okee on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, starting early. Those coming by cars from Prairie Du Chien direction will leave the cars at Mazomanie, and take stage to Upper Sauk, (thence five miles to the meeting), or to Baraboo, thence twelve miles by stage to the meeting. Those coming from the East on the same line, will do the same. Those coming on the Lacrosse line will leave the cars at Kilburn City, and take stage to Baraboo,—twelve miles; thence by stage to Okee. Those further East, on the same line, can do the same. Those coming with teams from Dubuque region will come by the way of Mineral Point to Sauk, thence to the meeting. Okee is five miles from where the meeting was last year, and three miles from Lodi.

O. S. KNAPP, C. STONE, W. SHELDON, } Committee of Arrangements.

N. B. If it is impossible to bring tents, bring good provision and bedding, and we will try to furnish shelter, provided all such will drop me a line by the 25th of August, at Baraboo, Wis., so that I may know how matters stand. Don't omit to write, stating how many will come with you.

W. SHELDON.

Campmeeting.

There will be a campmeeting in Wolcott, Ct., commencing Sept. 5th, and continuing through the week and over the following Sabbath, on land owned by Bro. Hector Smith. This meeting will be in a beautiful grove near the highway, with an excellent spring of water on the ground, and with every other convenience desirable to make it an object for the brethren and sisters to come.

This is an entirely new field, and hopes are entertained that both preachers and brethren and sisters will come filled with faith that God will bless the effort to the saving of some. Bro. Smith and wife have stood almost alone in this place for twenty years witnesses to the truth of the Savior's speedy coming, and now ask the co-operation of the brethren while he makes this effort to benefit his fellow men.

We hope there will be a general rally of all the brethren and sisters from the surrounding towns. Come bringing your tents, and stay through the meeting. Brethren coming by Railroad east or west, will stop at Bristol. This is on the Hartford, Providence, and Fishkill R. R., where teams will be in readiness to carry passengers to the ground. Those coming on the Canal Road will stop at Southington, where they will find conveyance. Other arrangements noticed hereafter.

For the Brethren, RALPH WILLIAMS.

Campmeeting.

There will be a campmeeting in Savoy, commencing Aug. 29th, and continuing one week, on the old battle ground at Bro. Noah Mirick's. Horse keeping will be furnished by Bro. Mirick. There will be a victualing tent on the ground, where food can be had by the week or day, or single meal, or otherwise. As cotton cloth is so high, we do not expect brethren can get tents unless they have old ones. If you have tents, bring them; but come well provided with buffalos, quilts and blankets, and a place will be provided to spread them under shelter.

Come, brethren, let there be a general rally. Come with warm hearts, settle all difficulties, banish all hardness. Our campmeetings are almost done. Soon notice will be given from head quarters to go into camp on the new earth. No preaching brethren are engaged. We want all to come who love God and wait for his Son, and who will give meat in due season—the last crowning truths of the gospel. H. HADLOCK, for the Church.

Wisconsin Annual Conference.

The "Advent Christian Conference" will hold its yearly session in connection with the Wisconsin Campmeeting, at Okee, Columbia Co., Wis., twenty miles north west from Madison, by the way of Lodi, beginning September 11th, 1864.

Let every church send delegates, and every minister be in attendance if possible; otherwise be sure to report by letter. Churches and ministers who have not yet united, should be sure to do so this year, that we may move in order and harmony, and consequently with greater strength for good. Delegates should bring letters of appointment from churches, and ministers with whom we are not acquainted should bring letters of commendation.

Letters may be sent to me at Baraboo, Sauk Co., Wis. W. SHELDON, Secretary of Conf.

Notice.

Basket meetings will be held at the following places:

Three miles west of Forestville, Delaware Co., (as Wm. Smith may arrange), Aug. 7th.

These meetings are designed for two sermons in the grove, to commence at 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M. Each person is requested to bring a basket of provision, and provide himself with a seat. Let the rich dress in plain garments, so the poor will come and hear the gospel preached. Will the friends at the above places designate the spot, post up notices, and circulate the word all around? A collection will be taken up for home mission purposes, that the gospel may be preached in the highways and hedges. PETER S. W. DEYO.

Tent Meeting.

I will commence a meeting at Havana, Mason Co., Ill., Aug. 17th, and continue over the following Sunday. I shall come with the mission tent, and shall try to arrange to have some one help me in preaching the word. We hope to see a general gathering of the friends in that part of the State. Come, brethren, lay aside the cares of the world for a little season, and dedicate a few days of remaining time to the work of the Lord. Let your prayers go up continually, that good may be done and souls saved as the result of this effort.

WM. MCCULLOCK, Evangelist.

Campmeeting in Wisconsin.

Probably our Wisconsin campmeeting will be held at Okee, Columbia Co., Wis., beginning on Sunday, Sept. 11th. Tents to be erected on Saturday, the 10th. Despite the hard times, we look for a grand rally. Particulars in this [illegible]

For the Committee, W. SHELDON.

To the Friends in the West.

Providence permitting, I shall visit Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, and perhaps Wisconsin, soon after harvest. Friends wishing a visit from me, who have not already written, will please write soon, that I may make out my list of appointments. If you write, I shall try to call on you; but if you do not, I shall not know where you are. I shall go with my team, and make first for Ogle Co., Ill., thence to Dayton, Mich. Address PETER S. W. DEYO, Strawberry Point, Iowa.

Notice.

There will be a meeting in the Western Tabernacle, in Chicago, to commence Aug. 9th, and continue over the following Sabbath. Eld. Miles Grant, of Boston, will be present, and give a series of lectures on Bible Christianity, and its great antagonist—Spiritualism—and other important subjects relating to the signs of the times. Further notice next week.—Voice of the West.

Meeting at Meredith Village, N. H.

If the Lord will, I will preach at the Town Hall, Meredith Village, N. H., where Bro. T. E. Lang may arrange, on Friday evening, Saturday afternoon, and over Sunday, Aug. 5th, 6th, and 7th.

Shall we see a general rally to this meeting? Pray for us. H. L. HASTINGS.

Conference.

The Maine Quarterly Conference of Free Sabbath Adventists will hold its next session at North Berwick, Me., commencing Thursday evening, Aug. 4th, and continuing over the Sabbath and first day. All lovers of truth are cheerfully invited to attend. Also, if it be His good pleasure, I will hold meetings, as brethren at Meredith Village and New Hampton may arrange, Sundays 14th and 21st.

S. C. HANCOCK.

Notice.

The Christian Easterly Maine Conference is appointed to be held at North Searsport, to commence Thursday, Aug. 18th, at 5 o'clock P. M., and continue over the Sabbath.

By order of managers, M. YOUNG, Clerk.

Alton Campmeeting.

A campmeeting will be held at Alton, N. H., to commence Aug. 29th, and hold over the following Sunday. Also a meeting on the ground Sunday, the 28th. Particulars hereafter.

For the Committee, J. G. SMITH.

Campmeeting.

A campmeeting will be held in Etna, Me., on the same ground where it was in 1863, to commence the first week in September. Arrangements will be made accordingly. More hereafter.

For the World's Crisis.

THOUGHTS,

Suggested on reading the death of Sr. Pauline Slater.

Precious sister, we have parted,
We no more shall meet thee here;
Friends now lonely and sad hearted,
Shed for thee the silent tear.

Now our hearts with grief are riven,
When we think of years gone by,
When the parting hand was given,
And we bade our last good bye.

Sister dear, thy name shall never
From my memory be effaced,
And thy worth be cherished ever,
On affection's altar placed.

But though from us thou art taken,
Laid beneath the cold, cold ground,
Yet in beauty thou wilt waken,
When the Advent trump shall sound.

There, where friends shall no more sever,
There, where parting cannot come,
Sister, we shall live forever,
In our beauteous Eden home.

For the World's Crisis.

JOURNAL LEAVES.—NO. 2.

Thursday, June 9th. Spent some time today notifying the neighbors that there would be a meeting of those who love to engage in the social worship of God, at my paternal home this eve. Some of the expectants of the coming One came from a neighboring town to meet with us, and the Holy Spirit seemed to descend upon us like gentle rain, inspiring us with new faith, hope, love and zeal. How sweet and hallowed the influences of the prayer-meeting.

Friday, June 10th. Visited a dear sister, now pleasantly located in a home of her own. How strong are the ties which bind us to those who have shared the same parents' care, and have played beneath the same green tree. Being several years older than my sister, it was mine to exercise considerable influence in the formation of those principles and habits which were to govern her more or less through life. I have realized since, more than I did at the time, the responsibilities resting upon me as the eldest child, and have shed bitter tears because I did not discharge them more faithfully. Ye who are occupying like position, remember your duty towards those younger than yourselves. Called on a sick relative, who for twelve long years has been suffering with a severe form of asthma. Found her at this time so much distressed, that I could not administer sympathy and consolation at length, as I have been wont to do, and left her with a wish and a prayer that she might seek and obtain strength equal to her day, and find a home in that world where the inhabitant shall not say, "I am sick." Found another friend lame and almost immoderately mourning her deprivation from meeting with the people of God for worship; told her that God's word and the throne of his grace were accessible to her at her home. Left her some profitable reading matter, and bade her farewell, better able to appreciate the soundness of limb which has been conferred on me.

Stopping to converse with a friend who was at work in his field by the roadside, asked him the question, "How long do you think this world will continue in the present condition?" "O," said he at once, "millions of years." Explained to him as well as I could why we had reason to think otherwise, and looking over my tracts was happy to find one on the "Restitution," which I requested him to read. May his eyes be enlightened to see the things which are speedily coming on the earth.

Called on a Congregationalist friend to whom I had lent "Hastings' Signs of the Times." This book was given me a few months ago by a sister in Boston, to read and lend; and if her eye should fall on this article I would say to her, that I have endeavored to prove faithful to the trust committed to me. Have since obtained another copy and placed it where I trust it will do good, and hope ere long to be instrumental in having more in circulation. I feel that we as a people should be very much awake to the importance of disseminating light in every possible way on the momentous themes which make us, as Adventists, a separate people.

As the lady above referred to returned me the book, I asked her how she liked it. Her reply was, "I believe the author of that book has got the right idea of things. I think we shall have war and commotion till Jesus comes; and this doctrine of peace to prevail before the Redeemer shall come in person, which our ministers have been preaching to us is all false." This is only one instance of many where individuals are being awakened by labor on the part of those who have seen the light. Who of us will not labor?

Saturday, June 11th. On waking this morning how satisfactory was the thought that I was in my father's house; not a stranger—an alien; but a child, an heir, one welcome to any thing and every thing which the house afforded. I thought my feelings were an illustration of those which the trusting, confiding christian enjoys. How blessed to feel our heirship as the sons of God—our joint heirship with Jesus Christ to the heavenly inheritance. No christian should rest without the clear evidence that his title to this is sure.

Sunday, June 12th. Having seen in the Crisis the appointment of Bro. Hastings to preach in Lawrence to-day, and feeling an earnest desire to hear him, arose early and walked on mile after mile, studying and admiring the great book of nature which its Author had thrown open before me, and also being animated by the anticipation that I was to meet new ones who were waiting for the coming of the Just One, and thus should afterward have no acquaintances to think of as fellow-travelers to the better land. In two and one-half hours had accomplished the journey of eight miles, and found myself in Lawrence, the city of manufactories, where cotton and woollen are made into fabrics by efficient machinery, which superceded the use of the old spinning wheel used by our grandmothers of honored memory. The place has altered very much since I was there fifteen years ago. The barren sands have given way to green verdure, and the labor of those who have endeavored to cultivate the works of nature as well as to erect the works of art, have been abundantly repaid. Joining the church-going multitude I soon found where Lyceum Hall (the place where the Adventists worship) was, and after ascending two flights of stairs, found a goodly number assembled for worship in a commodious place.

The services commenced by the singing of a hymn which was not familiar to me, but it seemed to inspire me with just the feelings which I wished to possess for the occasion; there were the frequent repetition of the words, "The Bridegroom is coming." O that these truthful words might be echoed by every one who feels their truth; that the cry might go through the length and breadth of the land until every one shall know, or at least shall have heard, that the marriage of the Lamb is about to take place, and all who are not included in the number which shall constitute his bride must be forever lost. After the hymn, one of the brethren offered a fervent and appropriate prayer, followed by Bro. Hastings, after which the latter preached from 1 Chron. 12: 32; in which verse occurs the phrase, "Which were men that had understanding of the times to know what Israel ought to do." Subject, The importance of understanding what should be done and of doing it at the time when it should be done. The all important question was, what should the church of God be doing at the present time? He mentioned some things which they should not do—which would be altogether useless; for instance, Noah's salvation depended upon his building an ark; but we might build arks all our days and it would avail us nothing, for there is no necessity now for an ark to be built. But the present ark of the church is to proclaim the speedy coming of the Lord, and to be doing every thing possible to be prepared herself, and to have others prepared for it. Surely we cannot doubt that this is so; and oh! that the church generally would understand its important work and faithfully perform it.

Remained at the Hall during the noon intermission. A part of it was spent in Sunday School exercises, in which I was happy to participate. Was pleased to see not only the children and youth, but a great many of the older portion of the congregation stop to study together the truths of the blessed Bible. A worthy example for our Advent friends generally to imitate.

Heard another sermon this afternoon by Bro. Hastings from Mark 1: 16, 17. Subject: "How to become fishers of men; or, in other words, "how to be effectual in winning souls to Christ." The speaker spoke of the different methods which it was necessary to take to catch different kinds of fish. So in regard to men; we must possess wisdom in drawing souls to Jesus. The way to draw one would be the way to frighten another from the fold. This was an important discourse. The Lord grant that those who heard it may be successful in winning many to righteousness. After those who wished to leave had retired from this service, the lovers of Jesus enjoyed the privilege of surrounding the communion table, rejoicing that

"Around a table, not a tomb,
He willed our gathering place should be;
When going to prepare our home,
Our Savior said, Remember me."

And blessed indeed it is that we have not to think of our Lord as lying in the grave, but as risen for our justification, and now interceding for us before the throne; and while we commemorate his sufferings and death, our hearts leap forward with joy to the time when we shall eat and drink, not in remembrance of him, but with him in the everlasting kingdom. Interesting remarks were made by several. If all the determinations expressed there were carried out, Christ will have some valiant soldiers in his army.

After finding rest and refreshment for mind and body for an hour at the home of Bro. Churchill, repaired to the Common, where Bro. Hastings had given appointment to address those who might assemble. His subject was "Government." He spoke of the different earthly governments, saying that all that had ever existed were unsatisfactory, even our own, admitted by many to be the best the world has ever seen, did not give satisfaction; and why? because of a lack of righteousness, wisdom and power on the part of those in authority. Government consisting of three departments, the legislative, the judicial and the executive, it was proved to be the case, that the legislative department were not competent to make the laws just as they should; and sometimes the executive department had not power to carry out what was decided to be the interpretation of the law. Therefore there was wrong and dissatisfaction continually.

Said the speaker, "A monarchial government would be preferable to any other, could there be one at its head righteous enough to make all laws just right; wise enough to interpret them exactly right, and powerful enough to carry them all out just right;—that would be the kind that would give perfect satisfaction." He then said, Let me read you a prediction from an old book, (which he presumed contained much that would be new to many of them, and he suggested that they had better save the three cents a day that they paid for lying telegrams, and get a copy of this book, and have some good reliable news.) Then opening the Bible he turned to Isaiah 32: 1, and read, "Behold, the King shall reign in righteousness, and princes shall rule in judgment." "There," said he, "it is; we are going to have just what we said we needed; this is a prophetic declaration concerning Christ, and he is surely coming to reign on earth. Who will prepare to be his subjects? Come, sinner, get ready for this glorious reign."

At the close of the discourse a part of that good old hymn—

was sung; and may the wish of the speaker be realized, that that attentive multitude may be at the grand coronation to crown Jesus Lord of all. As the audience were about to disperse, a shower fell; but not such an one as literally watereth the earth, making it to bring seed for the sower, and bread for the eater; but a shower of heavenly truth, presented in an attractive form and printed on little sheets of paper,—commonly called tracts. Let us hope and pray that many of these little sheets may prove to be seed sown in good ground, which shall be watered by grace divine and bring forth fruit which shall yield a rich harvest.

Gladly accepted an invitation to spend last night with Bro. Hastings and family at their residence, a mile removed from the din and bustle of the city;—a pleasant contrast to the city tenements which they have been occupying for some years past. Very much enjoyed my short tarry with them, and bade them farewell this morning, earnestly desiring that in their present home, God may permit them to have a little rest amid their arduous labors in his cause,—to have a foretaste of the rest which remaineth for the people of God.

Found several opportunities on my way home to work for the Master, and feel an increasing desire to spend and be spent in his blessed cause. O, that the church of the living God might all awake to duty, for it is time for all loins to be girded, every lamp to be trimmed and burning, and each heart in a state of constant preparation to meet its coming Lord. For the World's Crisis.

THE INSTABILITY OF EARTHLY GREATNESS.

Is it not astonishingly strange to see so many going astray in this day of light and knowledge; and even men of science going the downward road to destruction, led by the pomp of worldly honors, when it is obvious that the honors which this world bestows pass away like the dew before the morning sun? that empires and kingdoms crumble to atoms, and the works of the sculptor moulder to dust—the throne of the conqueror demolished—the pride and opulence of man blasted?

"But I would be great," says the votary of ambition, "let my fate turn as it may. I would have my fate engraven high on the records of fame. I would wear the laurels of renown, that future generations might recount the heroic deeds that I have done." And it is even so with all the votaries of pride and ambition, from the highest down to the lowest grade of all those who are pursuing the paths of worldly honor. But, alas! the long-cherished hope of the conqueror will fail to be realized, and the sons of ambition will soon be borne to their narrow home. Thus we see the ambition of man going on from one degree to another, without any real enjoyment.

Since such are the frailties and scenes of earthly glory, where shall the restless mind find a lasting treasure, which shall satisfy its every want, heighten its joys, and alleviate its woes? The question is easily answered. We can find it by listening to the voice of wisdom,—the voice of religion. Religion is the guide of youth, and the support of old age. True and undefiled religion fills the mind with peace, and bids us look forward to that solid happiness which is beyond the turbulent scenes of earth. Religion lifts the mind from earth and places the thoughts on those joys which never die. How important, then, that we seek it as our guide while wandering here; and at last, when our mission on earth shall be finished, we may have a name in heaven with the vast and ransomed throng, which will require no engraved monument to perpetuate our name. Happy the thought, that beyond death's streams we have a home, an unfading inheritance, where love and friendship shall be consummated, and a world, once stained with sin and iniquity, washed from all pollution, where the songs of joy will echo through the celestial realms where God and Christ are all and in all.

Now as I close my theme, perhaps a word or two of admonition will not go amiss. If we would possess the happy and promised land that we read of in divine revelation, we must be ready at all times to work in the vineyard of our Lord and Master, and bear the heat and burden of the day. The day dawneth, saith the watchman on Zion's wall; and if this be the case, the time for sleep has passed away. We should bid adieu to the couch of idleness, and prepare for the duties of the day. Dear brethren, let not indolence be so much as named among us; for no good can be accomplished without labor, patient and untiring labor. Therefore, as christians, let us one and all form the resolution not to be backward in performing our duty. Let us count no task too heavy that will promote the prosperity of Zion.

"Love not the world, its fairest flowers
Are sure to fade and die;
And earthly fame, by fancy reared,
Will soon in ruin lie.

Love that above, that fairer world,
By Jesus' presence blest,
Where weary, sighing, sorrowing man
Shall find eternal rest.

Where warring winds no more shall vex
The calm, untroubled sky;
But God's own hand shall wipe all tears
From every weeping eye."

For the World's Crisis.

THE SERPENT OF SERPENTS.

Better place a serpent in the hands of your children, or on your centre tables, than the light, popular readings of the day—Harper, Godey, Peterson, Leslie, the Ledger, and the whole catalogue of sugar-coated poisons. A serpent, or a stinging adder, is far less dangerous. We flee from a living serpent with forked tongue, run—escape for our life; but a serpent in the form of a book or paper, though the poison is far more deadly than that of the crawling reptile, does not alarm us. The serpents are coiled unseen, till the poisoned forked tongue darts forth—or if seen, in comely form, in the garb of pleasure, with fair face and flattering lips—

"And underneath her eyelids sat a kind
Of witching sorcery, that nearer drew,
Whoever with unguarded look beheld,
And seeming free of all disguise; her song
Enchanting, and her words which sweetly dropped,
As honey from the comb, most large of promise,
Still prophesying days of new delight."

Some parents tell us a novel, a love tale, a silly romance, something ficticious and highly exciting, tend to form a taste for reading. Children will fall in love with romance and the comical, when publications of a more serious, solid, and historical character would be insipid, tasteless, or repulsive.

Thus, these mixed publications of a light, novel, and vicious tendency, are placed in their hands, and a taste formed in early life for corrupt literature, to the exclusion of the Bible, and everything of a truly virtuous and purifying tendency.

"Vice is a monster of such frightful mien,
That, to be hated, needs but to be seen;
But seen too oft, familiar with its face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace."

This Satanic policy is destroying multitudes innumerable.

"How shall I speak thee, or thy power address,
Thou god of our idolatry, the Press!
By thee religion, liberty, and laws,
Exert their influence and advance their cause.
By thee, worse plagues than Pharaoh's land befell,
Diffused, make earth the vestibule of hell!
Thou fountain, at which drink the good and wise;
Thou ever-bubbling spring of endless lies!
Like Eden's dread probationary tree,
Knowledge of good and evil is from thee!"

Very many ministers reprobate novel reading, romances, love tales, foolish anecdotes and comicals, and still leave us in the dark, never specify or aim a blow at the serpent's head. It's not the vile Eugene Sue, or a corrupt Bulwer that now do the mischief, scattering firebrands, arrows, and death, but the snakes in the grass, the sugar-coated poisons, the fashionable, fascinating popular readings—the mixed publications, the bitter and the sweet intermingled.

Satan transforms himself into an angel of light. Editors, beloved, are you aware of the mischief you are doing in giving favorable notice of these popular works of fiction? The man that writes novels, publishes novels, sells novels, and puffs novels, may look for novel readers in his own family.

Friends, you that traffic in these literary serpents, the popular, fascinating weeklies and monthlies that are flooding and cursing our land, mark well the words of Christ, "With what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again." Rumsellers find this passage literally true—the curses they impart often return tenfold upon their own pates, into their own bosoms. Very many children of those who traffic in liquid death and damnation become inebriates, bloated sots, and find a drunkard's grave. Fathers, mothers, sons and daughters, all find a common hell of weeping, wailing, and gnashing of teeth. So may it be with these dealers in intellectual poisons, that intoxicate the mind, corrupt the heart, pollute the soul—sink it lower than the grave! "He that soweth to the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption." "They have sown the wind, and they shall reap the whirlwind."—Hosea 8: 7.

THE COMMAND.

"And this commandment have we from him, that he who loveth God, love his brother also."

View with a gentle, pitying eye,
Thy brother's faults, nor pass him by
With bitter words and proud disdain;
Urge him from evil to refrain,
Kindly strive his sins to remove,
And teach him "Friendship, Truth and Love."

For others' woes compassion feel,
And comfort where you cannot heal;
Relieve the sufferings of the poor,
Sympathy bring to sorrow's door;
And practice well these graces three—
"Friendship, Truth and Charity."

Bellows, and Wm. Fenn.

Church at Exeter reported by letter. Have preaching two Sundays in each month, by Eld. Edwin R. Wood. Meetings most part of the time interesting, although our numbers are few. Two added to the church—now numbers twenty-two. Expecting the Chief Shepherd will soon appear, and give eternal life to his children. Albert Sweet, Clerk.

Committee appointed to see them. Prayer meetings—three a week—quite interesting. Sabbath School on the decrease. Preaching by Brn. Wood, Shepherd, and J. K. Bellows.

Foster church, no delegate. Bro. M. R. Phetteplace thought there was no more interest than there had been.

Danielsonville church, no delegate.

Central Village, no delegate. Bro. Howard reported by request of the conference. Interest rather low. Some good meetings. Bro. William Fenn was there one Sunday. Some there that loved the Lord. Chestnut Hill, no delegate. Abington, no delegate.

Rocky Brook, letter. No particular progress to record. Still maintain our organization as a church among the distracting and dividing influences that have been among us. Had some beneficial meetings. The good Lord has stirred some up to feel more fully their duty and privilege. Sunday School not so full as it had been; still interesting. Had preaching the last quarter from the following brethren: J. D. Brown, J. N. Loughborough, J. K. Bellows, Wm. Shepherd, Frank Burbank, and John T. Dixon. Another Sunday School scholar has started to serve the Lord. Prayer meetings two a week. The young folks have started a prayer meeting of their own. Charles F. Dixon, Clerk.

Gloucester church, letter. Numbers twenty, none added, one dropped, more ought to be unless they change their course. Members live very scattering, the majority are in good standing. Had preaching by the following brethren: J. K. Bellows, D. O. Hopkins, J. M. Hicks, and J. S. Eldredge, pastor. Organized Sunday School, which numbers about thirty. Bro. J. S. Eldredge has the greater part of it upon himself. Henry R. Evans, Clerk.

Report of preaching brethren: Bro. Joseph Northup. Labor limited since last conference. Not been present at conference for some six or nine months. He reported his labors accordingly. Been at the following places: Gloucester, R. I.; Voluntown, Ct.; Summit, Coventry, North Stonington, Ct. Seen sinners converted, and good done.

Bro. Peter Noka. Been at the same place at the Pond St. church, Providence. Seen backsliders reclaimed, one converted, baptized and joined the church. He wanted some of his Advent brethren to preach there on Prophecy. The church would not consent to it. He thought he should leave them if they would not receive his brethren.

Bro. M. R. Phetteplace. Been at Chepachet. Thought the truth was gaining ground slowly in that place. Sunday School numbered about fifty. Started another Sunday School about three miles from Chepachet; numbered thirty-five.

Bro. Edwin Wood. Been at Exeter and Lafayette. Interest not so good as he would like to see it. No Sunday School at Exeter; some talk about starting one.

Bro. J. K. Bellows. Labored in limits of conference. Been at Summit, Rocky Brook, Westerly, River Point, Centrall, etc. Some alive, some dead. Thought practical piety about as low as he ever saw it. Been well sustained in all places but there. Had some books sold them, and run in debt for more. Paid out about $8 more than he had received.

Bro. B. St. John, from western Ct. Labored with good results. Sister Mussey had been laboring in that region. Some conversions. Large field to labor.

Bro. A. Durfee. Been laboring most of the time at home. Been at Clark's Mills. Enjoyed himself some of the time, and sometimes did not. Thought the cause of truth was gaining slowly where he lived. Some slight tokens of God's grace.

Bro. Geo. Smith. Trying to do the will of the Lord. Had good time trying to preach. Been at the Union meeting-house, north part of the State. Felt the Lord was willing to bless. [illegible]

Bro. P. C. Rodman reported by letter. Thought he should be able to be with us, but did not feel it to be duty. Would like to have the conference hold its next session there. Preached every Sabbath, and sometimes first day. Attended some funerals. Scattered some $6 worth of books and tracts. The work is onward with him. Expected good results from labors in Ashley. Had the witness that his ways pleased the Lord. His prayer was that the Lord be with us. Sent fifty cents for the Tract Fund.

Letter from V. P. Simmons. Would like to be with us if it was convenient. Sincerely believes that he is in the path of duty. His convictions were never clearer in regard to the right of anything he ever entered upon. Never had more peace of mind than during the time he had been in the army. Still trying to be a christian, but came short of his ideas of a Bible christian, and feared lest he should come short of the kingdom.

The following resolution was passed:—Resolved that a committee be appointed to visit the church at Westerly and at Providence to ascertain their condition. Bro. Peter Noka was appointed to visit the church in Providence, and Bro. Joseph Northup the Westerly church.

Bro. R. Knight and the Clerk were chosen to act with the Chair to arrange the preaching and select the subject for criticism for next conference.

Bro. M. R. Phetteplace reported from the committee that was appointed to furnish destitute churches with preaching. He had written to the following churches: River Point, Warwick Plains, Chestnut Hill, Lafayette, Westerly, Rocky Brook, and Centrall. There were but two or three in favor of a missionary or itinerant preacher. Report accepted. Committee discharged. Subject indefinitely postponed.

PEWED CHURCHES.

The restraints of religious instruction are of no trifling importance; they often result in constraints to forsake sin and to walk in paths of righteousness. The church injures herself by not adopting a kind and sympathetic policy toward those who are without her pale. This class are often generous in their support of free institutions, but who would contribute little otherwise.

Frequently the first gatherings of a society in some hall or public building is much better sustained than old ones in pewed houses. The reason is apparent. In the first instance, there is a manifest freedom, a sociality of feeling and interest; in the latter case, in a pewed house there is a feeling of restraint, of exclusiveness and officiousness about things which makes an outsider, especially a poor person, feel he is not at home.

Pewed churches, when held as private property, preclude the possibility of reaching the masses. A popular writer, speaking on this point, says, "Protestant churches are so sadly obnoxious to this charge, that thousands of the poor in spirit and in purse are kept from the worship of God, and driven to infidelity by no other means. A serious charge, but one which cannot be gainsayed, and which few reflective persons will call in question."

A large portion, if not all our chapels, embrace in their structure funds contributed by persons from abroad, or outside the parish; and in addition there are individuals among the poor at home who have given their mites to help make up the thousands of dollars thus invested. These contributions were made for a public benevolent purpose. But when these edifices were finished, they were cut up into private concerns—the pews being sold to those who would pay most for them. Thus the money donated by benevolent persons from abroad and by the poor at home, is swallowed up by the pew holders, and thereby perverted from its legitimate use. Those who paid ten, twenty, or fifty dollars, get nothing for their money—not even a place to stand or kneel in the house without meeting an extra demand therefor, or of being regarded as a beneficiary. This is the way the poor are robbed in the house of their confessed friends. Those individuals, good meaning people, no doubt, who control the pews, monopolize several seats in the most eligible part of the chapel, whereas if the seats were free, they could control no more than they actually occupy, and the remainder might, and probably would, be taken up by persons who otherwise would be absent.

The private pew system is a prolific source of evil. It fosters pride and religious aristocracy; it robs many of the means of grace by making them too dear for them to buy; it takes off the restraints of religious instruction from society in general, by circumscribing its blessings to a few, and it makes salaried ministers of the popular class in constant demand, while it repudiates the services of the plainer, but no less substantial teachers. We would therefore submit the question, whether the vital interests of the church do not demand a reform.—Zion's Herald.

A SALUTARY THOUGHT.—When I was a young man, there lived in our neighborhood a farmer who was usually reported to be a very liberal man and uncommonly upright in his dealing. When he had any of the produce of his farm to dispose of, he made it an invariable rule to give good measure—rather more than could be required of him. One of his friends, observing him frequently doing so, questioned him why he did it—told him he gave too much, and said it would not be to his advantage. Now mark the answer of this excellent man: "God Almighty has permitted me but one journey through the world, and when I am gone, I cannot return to rectify mistakes." Think of this. But one journey through the world.—[illegible] Chron.

A FEW WORDS ON PRUNING.

The often repeated axiom "prune whenever your knife is sharp," holds good for small limbs upon small trees, but for old and neglected ones both experience and theory indicate midsummer as the proper time for the removal of large limbs. Not only is the amputated stump more thoroughly shaded at that time, but the forces of the tree are in that condition which allows the healing over process to commence more promptly than at any other season. We have to repeat what has often been said in these columns: do not cut a limb unless with a definite object and it is clearly seen that something is to be gained by it. In pruning we remove limbs altogether or shorten them, and for quite different ends. A neglected tree will have its centre crowded with branches which, being excluded from light, cannot perfect their fruit. Others will cross and chafe one another, while others again will grow so much to one side as to throw the tree quite out of balance. In either case the limb may be removed with decided benefit to the tree. Nor is the manner of its removal a matter of indifference; if worth doing at all it is worth doing well. A pruning saw or a small hand-saw without a back, and with a rather wide set is to be used to remove the limbs. In the operation the limb should be held in such a manner that it it cannot fall by its own weight and make a bad crack, or strip the bark before the sawing is completed. Saw close to where the limb joins another and pare the cut surface smooth with a knife, chisel or drawing knife. The surface should then have some protecting coating; a thick solution of shellac in alcohol is one of the best preparations for this purpose, but owing to the high price of both these articles it will be found cheaper to use grafting wax, which may be applied in a melted state with a brush. Either of the compositions mentioned in the report of the Fruit Growers' Meeting on page 164 (last month) may be used. Branches may be shortened in, either to induce the formation of fruit buds or to cause some of its lower buds to start and produce branches to fill up a vacant space. For the last mentioned purpose the cutting is done in Spring.—American Agriculturist.

"This is for your health."—Paul.

LITTLE HINTS TO YOUNG PREACHERS.

Old Father Hersey is no more. There is some danger that we shall forget the "little things." If we do, it will surely go ill with us. For, sneer at it as we may, after all, little things have far more to do with personal comfort and ministerial success, than most of us are disposed to admit. Many a one has experienced this when it was too late. Young preachers ought to know and feel it at the very threshold of their ministerial life.

As a means to this, some of these vitally important little things will now be modestly and plainly hinted.

TAKE CARE OF YOUR STOMACH.

This is one of your first duties. On its performance largely depends the performance of all others. The stomach is the seat of life, the source of health. Its connection with heart and brain is most intimate, and most controlling. It ought, therefore, to be well used. If kindly treated, it will be one of your best friends; if abused, one of your worst enemies. It has a quick sense of imposition and injury; is as full of revenge as a savage, and punishes without pity or remorse. Woe be to the culprit on whom its vengeance falls. Its instruments of vengeance are a fearful host of horrible diseases, acute and chronic. The most common are headache, dyspepsia and bronchitis. This is a trio at the very thought of which any preacher may tremble. Whoever would escape them must not do violence to his stomach; he must be strictly temperate in all his eating.

On this subject, to every young preacher, we would hint:

1. If you would avoid the headache, the dyspepsia, or the bronchitis, take care of your stomach.

2. If you desire a sound body, take care of your stomach.

3. If you wish an active, vigorous intellect, take care of your stomach.

4. If you covet strong, musical vocal powers, take care of your stomach.

5. If you want to be a successful preacher, and to preach on till superannuated by age, take care of your stomach.

But how are you to do it? By the persistent observance of three very simple rules:

1. Never eat when you are not hungry—never. No matter how tempting the dishes, nor how urgent the entreaties of those who prepared them. Better disoblige foolish friends a little than incur the wrath of your own stomach.

2. Eat only such food as by experience you find agrees with you—such as your stomach comfortably digests. Never mind what doctors say on this subject. Let your stomach be its own judge. God intended it to be such. It is a safer guide than all the doctors in Christendom. Never, never disregard it.

3. Never eat too much. The moment your stomach gives signs of becoming burdened, "put the knife to your throat." Hard to do, especially when a sumptuous, savory meal is before us and kind friends are pressing us unmercifully to eat heartily. True, true indeed. But it must be done, else look out for the vengeance of an angry stomach—a vengeance that will as certainly come as you live. This, by experience, you already know. Then beware. Never eat too much. No, never.

Apropos. Young preachers are often sorely tempted to the infringement of this rule by the ill-advised kindness of those with whom they lodge. Tables are loaded with an endless variety of good things, deliciously served up; and then the guests are expected to eat bountifully of dishes before them. This is unmerciful kindness. Death to stomachs and sermons.—Ex.

"NURSERY POISON."

The editor of the New York Weekly has a word to say about "nursery poison:"—

"If the undertakers of the present day possessed a share of that gratitude which we like to believe exists among other classes of men, they would erect monuments in every city to the memory of that lethal genius who first invented 'Godfrey's Cordial,' for it may be fairly questioned if the greatest battle in the present war supplied death with so many victims as has this fatal anodyne. It is probable no worse than other medicines of its kind, but being more generally used among the poor and unreflecting, the mischief it works is greater than that occasioned by any other. With thousands of mothers this 'specific' is invariably resorted to in every case of infantile restlessness, irritability or appearance of slight sickness, while others constantly administer it to their children to produce a state of semi-torpor—mistaken for sleep—during which the child requires no attention. The results are that many infants are quickly killed by over-doses of the stuff, given by mothers ignorant of its powers, while in other cases children are more slowly drugged to idiotcy and death by its continual use in smaller quantities. . . . A few days since I visited a large wholesale coffin warehouse in one of our western cities, and I noticed with astonishment that about five times as many little coffins were made as large ones. A terrible shudder ran through my frame as I beheld the long rows of little coffins standing on end side by side, and knew that some mother's babes were destined to fill them all! But when I thought that most of these babes are killed outright by the use of such murderous compounds as Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup—which you see advertised in all the papers of the land—Godfrey's cordial and paregoric, I ceased to wonder about the large number of little coffins. Continue on, mothers, to dose and drug your children when sick; put into their mouths something of the effects of which you know nothing; always give them 'something to take;' let them die; weep as Rachel wept for her children; think how uncertain life is in this strange world; send for a little coffin, and commence to dose some more children. In this way the business of the undertaker will thrive, grave-yards will fill up, and our mortality tables show a large increase. Label all your bottles 'Nursery Poison,' and put them out of the reach of your children."—Western Health Journal.

CURE FOR ASTHMA.

We read in a recent work on asthma by Mr. Rumball of England, that this distressing and apparently incurable disorder can be controlled by very simple treatment. The commonest form of disorder, which is called spasmodic bronchitis, is "a congestion of the mucous membrane, together with spasms of the posterior fibres of the brochial tubes; the chief sequel being a low ceronic bronchitis, with a liberal flow of frothy mucous." Mr. Rumball says of his own case: "I wanted something which would dissolve in contact with moisture, and remain and act as a powerful astringent; alum appeared to possess the requisite properties. I had a machine made like a lottery wheel, with a mouth piece, inside I placed a revolving brush, and some finely powdered alum and gum-arabic; the brush when turned on a centre raised a dust, this I inhaled largely many times a day." Expectoration followed, the paroxysms were cut short, and the result was that after suffering for five years he was completely cured. He has had no return of the attack in twenty years time. The remedy appears simple and easily applied.

CHEWING GUM.

The habit of chewing gum is a very pernicious one. The substance of some gums which are used for chewing is poisonous; and to the extent that it is received into the stomach by chewing does the system become poisoned by it. There are other gums, the substance of which is entirely innoxious; but even these cannot be chewed without injury. Whenever the process of chewing is carried on, the salivary fluid is being constantly secreted, and thus the juices provided for the moistening of the food are perverted from their legitimate use. This is a greater evil than it would readily appear to be to a superficial observer. The completeness and healthfulness of digestion depends very largely upon the condition of the food when it is received into the stomach. It cannot be in proper conditions unless the salivary glands act efficiently and healthfully during mastication, and this they cannot do if they are habitually excited by the action of the jaws in the intervals between the taking of meals. This is a very serious objection to the habit of chewing tobacco, aside from the great objection, that tobacco is exceedingly poisonous. Parents should be careful to teach their children that chewing is a process to be carried on only when food is to be prepared to be taken into the stomach, and that aside from this it cannot be carried on to any great degree without harm.—J. C. Jackson.

DIARRHEA REMEDY.—A. W. Davis, of Marshfield, Pa., wishes to communicate to the world the following as a valuable and speedy cure for dysentery, diarrhea, etc.:—Smartweed, two parts; tansy, one part; ginseng, one part; made into a strong tea, and drank every hour or half-hour, about one-third or half a teacupful at a time. If taken in larger doses it does no injury, and never fails to cure recent attacks. He says his father has used it with good effect for forty years, and among all to whom he has recommended it, it has never been known to fail.—American Artisan.

CURE FOR POISONING BY IVY.—In case of poisoning by ivy, plunge the part affected in hot water, as hot as can be borne, holding it there some time. The unpleasant itching and burning sensation will be removed. Two or three applications are a sure cure—at least this has been the case with our informant.—New England Farmer.

CRUST COFFEE.—Bread crust baked in an oven until it is very brown, but not black, and then pounded to the fineness of ground coffee, is a safer, cheaper, and quite as agreeable and healthful a substitute for coffee as any other mixture now in use.—Journal of Health.

CURE FOR YELLOW FEVER.—Take two-thirds of a tumbler of olive oil, the juice of two lemons, and add one tea spoonful of table salt; mix well together. It is said to cure the hardest cases.

☞ The less we exercise the less health we have, and the more certain are we to die before our time.

THOUGHTS,

Suggested on reading the death of Sr. Pauline Slater.

Precious sister, we have parted,
We no more shall meet thee here;
Friends now lonely and sad hearted,
Shed for thee the silent tear.

Now our hearts with grief are riven,
When we think of years gone by,
When the parting hand was given,
And we bade our last good bye.

Sister dear, thy name shall never
From my memory be effaced,
And thy worth be cherished ever,
On affection's altar placed.

But though from us thou art taken,
Laid beneath the cold, cold ground,
Yet in beauty thou wilt waken,
When the Advent trump shall sound.

There, where friends shall no more sever,
There, where parting cannot come,
Sister, we shall live forever,
In our beauteous Eden home.

JOURNAL LEAVES.—NO. 2.

Thursday, June 9th. Spent some time today notifying the neighbors that there would be a meeting of those who love to engage in the social worship of God, at my paternal home this eve. Some of the expectants of the coming One came from a neighboring town to meet with us, and the Holy Spirit seemed to descend upon us like gentle rain, inspiring us with new faith, hope, love and zeal. How sweet and hallowed the influences of the prayer-meeting.

Friday, June 10th. Visited a dear sister, now pleasantly located in a home of her own. How strong are the ties which bind us to those who have shared the same parents' care, and have played beneath the same green tree. Being several years older than my sister, it was mine to exercise considerable influence in the formation of those principles and habits which were to govern her more or less through life. I have realized since, more than I did at the time, the responsibilities resting upon me as the eldest child, and have shed bitter tears because I did not discharge them more faithfully. Ye who are occupying like position, remember your duty towards those younger than yourselves. Called on a sick relative, who for twelve long years has been suffering with a severe form of asthma. Found her at this time so much distressed, that I could not administer sympathy and consolation at length, as I have been wont to do, and left her with a wish and a prayer that she might seek and obtain strength equal to her day, and find a home in that world where the inhabitant shall not say, "I am sick." Found another friend lame and almost immoderately mourning her deprivation from meeting with the people of God for worship; told her that God's word and the throne of his grace were accessible to her at her home. Left her some profitable reading matter, and bade her farewell, better able to appreciate the soundness of limb which has been conferred on me.

Stopping to converse with a friend who was at work in his field by the roadside, asked him the question, "How long do you think this world will continue in the present condition?" "O," said he at once, "millions of years." Explained to him as well as I could why we had reason to think otherwise, and looking over my tracts was happy to find one on the "Restitution," which I requested him to read. May his eyes be enlightened to see the things which are speedily coming on the earth.

Called on a Congregationalist friend to whom I had lent "Hastings' Signs of the Times." This book was given me a few months ago by a sister in Boston, to read and lend; and if her eye should fall on this article I would say to her, that I have endeavored to prove faithful to the trust committed to me. Have since obtained another copy and placed it where I trust it will do good, and hope ere long to be instrumental in having more in circulation. I feel that we as a people should be very much awake to the importance of disseminating light in every possible way on the momentous themes which make us, as Adventists, a separate people.

As the lady above referred to returned me the book, I asked her how she liked it. Her reply was, "I believe the author of that book has got the right idea of things. I think we shall have war and commotion till Jesus comes; and this doctrine of peace to prevail before the Redeemer shall come in person, which our ministers have been preaching to us is all false." This is only one instance of many where individuals are being awakened by labor on the part of those who have seen the light. Who of us will not labor?

Saturday, June 11th. On waking this morning how satisfactory was the thought that I was in my father's house; not a stranger—an alien; but a child, an heir, one welcome to any thing and every thing which the house afforded. I thought my feelings were an illustration of those which the trusting, confiding christian enjoys. How blessed to feel our heirship as the sons of God—our joint heirship with Jesus Christ to the heavenly inheritance. No christian should rest without the clear evidence that his title to this is sure.

Sunday, June 12th. Having seen in the Crisis the appointment of Bro. Hastings to preach in Lawrence to-day, and feeling an earnest desire to hear him, arose early and walked on mile after mile, studying and admiring the great book of nature which its Author had thrown open before me, and also being animated by the anticipation that I was to meet new ones who were waiting for the coming of the Just One, and thus should afterward have no acquaintances to think of as fellow-travelers to the better land. In two and one-half hours had accomplished the journey of eight miles, and found myself in Lawrence, the city of manufactories, where cotton and woollen are made into fabrics by efficient machinery, which superceded the use of the old spinning wheel used by our grandmothers of honored memory. The place has altered very much since I was there fifteen years ago. The barren sands have given way to green verdure, and the labor of those who have endeavored to cultivate the works of nature as well as to erect the works of art, have been abundantly repaid. Joining the church-going multitude I soon found where Lyceum Hall (the place where the Adventists worship) was, and after ascending two flights of stairs, found a goodly number assembled for worship in a commodious place.

The services commenced by the singing of a hymn which was not familiar to me, but it seemed to inspire me with just the feelings which I wished to possess for the occasion; there were the frequent repetition of the words, "The Bridegroom is coming." O that these truthful words might be echoed by every one who feels their truth; that the cry might go through the length and breadth of the land until every one shall know, or at least shall have heard, that the marriage of the Lamb is about to take place, and all who are not included in the number which shall constitute his bride must be forever lost. After the hymn, one of the brethren offered a fervent and appropriate prayer, followed by Bro. Hastings, after which the latter preached from 1 Chron. 12: 32; in which verse occurs the phrase, "Which were men that had understanding of the times to know what Israel ought to do." Subject, The importance of understanding what should be done and of doing it at the time when it should be done. The all important question was, what should the church of God be doing at the present time? He mentioned some things which they should not do—which would be altogether useless; for instance, Noah's salvation depended upon his building an ark; but we might build arks all our days and it would avail us nothing, for there is no necessity now for an ark to be built. But the present ark of the church is to proclaim the speedy coming of the Lord, and to be doing every thing possible to be prepared herself, and to have others prepared for it. Surely we cannot doubt that this is so; and oh! that the church generally would understand its important work and faithfully perform it.

Remained at the Hall during the noon intermission. A part of it was spent in Sunday School exercises, in which I was happy to participate. Was pleased to see not only the children and youth, but a great many of the older portion of the congregation stop to study together the truths of the blessed Bible. A worthy example for our Advent friends generally to imitate.

Heard another sermon this afternoon by Bro. Hastings from Mark 1: 16, 17. Subject: "How to become fishers of men; or, in other words, "how to be effectual in winning souls to Christ." The speaker spoke of the different methods which it was necessary to take to catch different kinds of fish. So in regard to men; we must possess wisdom in drawing souls to Jesus. The way to draw one would be the way to frighten another from the fold. This was an important discourse. The Lord grant that those who heard it may be successful in winning many to righteousness. After those who wished to leave had retired from this service, the lovers of Jesus enjoyed the privilege of surrounding the communion table, rejoicing that

"Around a table, not a tomb,
He willed our gathering place should be;
When going to prepare our home,
Our Savior said, Remember me."

And blessed indeed it is that we have not to think of our Lord as lying in the grave, but as risen for our justification, and now interceding for us before the throne; and while we commemorate his sufferings and death, our hearts leap forward with joy to the time when we shall eat and drink, not in remembrance of him, but with him in the everlasting kingdom. Interesting remarks were made by several. If all the determinations expressed there were carried out, Christ will have some valiant soldiers in his army.

After finding rest and refreshment for mind and body for an hour at the home of Bro. Churchill, repaired to the Common, where Bro. Hastings had given appointment to address those who might assemble. His subject was "Government." He spoke of the different earthly governments, saying that all that had ever existed were unsatisfactory; even our own, admitted by many to be the best the world has ever seen, did not give satisfaction; and why? because of a lack of righteousness, wisdom and power on the part of those in authority. Government consisting of three departments, the legislative, the judicial and the executive, it was proved to be the case, that the legislative department were not competent to make the laws just as they should; and sometimes the executive department had not power to carry out what was decided to be the interpretation of the law. Therefore there was wrong and dissatisfaction continually.

Said the speaker, "A monarchial government would be preferable to any other, could there be one at its head righteous enough to make all laws just right; wise enough to interpret them exactly right, and powerful enough to carry them all out just right;—that would be the kind that would give perfect satisfaction." He then said, Let me read you a prediction from an old book, (which he presumed contained much that would be new to many of them, and he suggested that they had better save the three cents a day that they paid for lying telegrams, and get a copy of this book, and have some good reliable news.) Then opening the Bible he turned to Isaiah 32: 1, and read, "Behold, the King shall reign in righteousness, and princes shall rule in judgment." "There," said he, "it is; we are going to have just what we said we needed; this is a prophetic declaration concerning Christ, and he is surely coming to reign on earth. Who will prepare to be his subjects? Come, sinner, get ready for this glorious reign."

At the close of the discourse a part of that good old hymn—

was sung; and may the wish of the speaker be realized, that that attentive multitude may be at the grand coronation to crown Jesus Lord of all. As the audience were about to disperse, a shower fell; but not such an one as literally watereth the earth, making it to bring seed for the sower, and bread for the eater; but a shower of heavenly truth, presented in an attractive form and printed on little sheets of paper,—commonly called tracts. Let us hope and pray that many of these little sheets may prove to be seed sown in good ground, which shall be watered by grace divine and bring forth fruit which shall yield a rich harvest.

Gladly accepted an invitation to spend last night with Bro. Hastings and family at their residence, a mile removed from the din and bustle of the city;—a pleasant contrast to the city tenements which they have been occupying for some years past. Very much enjoyed my short tarry with them, and bade them farewell this morning, earnestly desiring that in their present home, God may permit them to have a little rest amid their arduous labors in his cause,—to have a foretaste of the rest which remaineth for the people of God.

Found several opportunities on my way home to work for the Master, and feel an increasing desire to spend and be spent in his blessed cause. O, that the church of the living God might all awake to duty, for it is time for all souls to be girded, every lamp to be trimmed and burning, and each heart in a state of constant preparation to meet its coming Lord. THE INSTABILITY OF EARTHLY GREATNESS.

Is it not astonishingly strange to see so many going astray in this day of light and knowledge; and even men of science going the downward road to destruction, led by the pomp of worldly honors, when it is obvious that the honors which this world bestows pass away like the dew before the morning sun? that empires and kingdoms crumble to atoms, and the works of the sculptor moulder to dust—the throne of the conqueror demolished—the pride and opulence of man blasted?

"But I would be great," says the votary of ambition, "let my fate turn as it may. I would have my fate engraven high on the records of fame. I would wear the laurels of renown, that future generations might recount the heroic deeds that I have done." And it is even so with all the votaries of pride and ambition, from the highest down to the lowest grade of all those who are pursuing the paths of worldly honor. But, alas! the long-cherished hope of the conqueror will fail to be realized, and the sons of ambition will soon be borne to their narrow home. Thus we see the ambition of man going on from one degree to another, without any real enjoyment.

Since such are the frailties and scenes of earthly glory, where shall the restless mind find a lasting treasure, which shall satisfy its every want, heighten its joys, and alleviate its woes? The question is easily answered. We can find it by listening to the voice of wisdom,—the voice of religion. Religion is the guide of youth, and the support of old age. True and undefiled religion fills the mind with peace, and bids us look forward to that solid happiness which is beyond the turbulent scenes of earth. Religion lifts the mind from earth and places the thoughts on those joys which never die. How important, then, that we seek it as our guide while wandering here; and at last, when our mission on earth shall be finished, we may have a name in heaven with the vast and ransomed throng, which will require no engraved monument to perpetuate our name. Happy the thought, that beyond death's streams we have a home, an unfading inheritance, where love and friendship shall be consummated, and a world, once stained with sin and iniquity, washed from all pollution, where the songs of joy will echo through the celestial realms where God and Christ are all and in all.

Now as I close my theme, perhaps a word or two of admonition will not go amiss. If we would possess the happy and promised land that we read of in divine revelation, we must be ready at all times to work in the vineyard of our Lord and Master, and bear the heat and burden of the day. The day dawneth, saith the watchman on Zion's wall; and if this be the case, the time for sleep has passed away. We should bid adieu to the couch of idleness, and prepare for the duties of the day. Dear brethren, let not indolence be so much as named among us, for no good can be accomplished without labor, patient and untiring labor. Therefore, as christians, let us one and all form the resolution not to be backward in performing our duty. Let us count no task too heavy that will promote the prosperity of Zion.

"Love not the world, its fairest flowers
Are sure to fade and die,
And earthly fame, by fancy reared,
Will soon in ruin lie.

Love that above, that fairer world,
By Jesus' presence blest,
Where weary, sighing, sorrowing man
Shall find eternal rest,

Where warring winds no more shall vex
The calm, untroubled sky,
But God's own hand shall wipe all tears
From every weeping eye."

THE SERPENT OF SERPENTS.

Better place a serpent in the hands of your children, or on your centre tables, than the light, popular readings of the day—Harper, Godey, Peterson, Leslie, the Ledger, and the whole catalogue of sugar-coated poisons. A serpent, or a stinging adder, is far less dangerous. We flee from a living serpent with forked tongue, run—escape for our life; but a serpent in the form of a book or paper, though the poison is far more deadly than that of the crawling reptile, does not alarm us. The serpents are coiled unseen, till the poisoned forked tongue darts forth—or if seen, in comely form, in the garb of pleasure, with fair face and flattering lips—

"And underneath her eyelids sat a kind
Of witching sorcery, that nearer drew,
Whoever with unguarded look beheld;
And seeming free of all disguise; her song
Enchanting; and her words which sweetly dropped,
As honey from the comb, most large of promise,
Still prophesying days of new delight."

Some parents tell us a novel, a love tale, a silly romance, something ficticious and highly exciting, tend to form a taste for reading. Children will fall in love with romance and the comical, when publications of a more serious, solid, and historical character would be insipid, tasteless, or repulsive.

Thus, these mixed publications of a light, novel, and vicious tendency, are placed in their hands, and a taste formed in early life for corrupt literature, to the exclusion of the Bible, and everything of a truly virtuous and purifying tendency.

"Vice is a monster of such frightful mien,
That, to be hated, needs but to be seen;
But seen too oft, familiar with its face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace."

This Satanic policy is destroying multitudes innumerable.

"How shall I speak thee, or thy power address,
Thou god of our idolatry, the Press!
By thee religion, liberty, and laws,
Exert their influence and advance their cause:
By thee, worse plagues than Pharaoh's land befell,
Diffused, make earth the vestibule of hell!
Thou fountain, at which drink the good and wise;
Thou ever-bubbling spring of endless lies!
Like Eden's dread probationary tree,
Knowledge of good and evil is from thee!"

Very many ministers reprobate novel reading, romances, love tales, foolish anecdotes and comicals, and still leave us in the dark, never specify or aim a blow at the serpent's head. It's not the vile Eugene Sue, or a corrupt Bulwer that now do the mischief, scattering firebrands, arrows, and death, but the snakes in the grass, the sugar-coated poisons, the fashionable, fascinating popular readings—the mixed publications, the bitter and the sweet intermingled.

Satan transforms himself into an angel of light. Editors, beloved, are you aware of the mischief you are doing in giving favorable notices of these popular works of fiction? The man that writes novels, publishes novels, sells novels, and puffs novels, may look for novel readers in his own family.

Friends, you that traffic in these literary serpents, the popular, fascinating weeklies and monthlies that are flooding and cursing our land, mark well the words of Christ, "With what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again." Rumsellers find this passage literally true—the curses they impart often return tenfold upon their own pates, into their own bosoms. Very many children of those who traffic in liquid death and damnation become inebriates, bloated sots, and find a drunkard's grave. Fathers, mothers, sons and daughters, all find a common hell of weeping, wailing, and gnashing of teeth. So may it be with these dealers in intellectual poisons, that intoxicate the mind, corrupt the heart, pollute the soul—sink it lower than the grave! "He that soweth to the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption." "They have sown the wind, and they shall reap the whirlwind."—Hosea 8: 7.

THE COMMAND.

"And this commandment have we from him, that he who loveth God, love his brother also."

View with a gentle, pitying eye,
Thy brother's faults, nor pass him by
With bitter words and proud disdain;
Urge him from evil to refrain,
Kindly strive his sins to remove,
And teach him "Friendship, Truth and Love."

For others' woes compassion feel,
And comfort where you cannot heal;
Relieve the sufferings of the poor,
Sympathy bring to sorrow's door;
And practice well these graces three—
"Friendship, Truth and Charity."

REPORT OF THE R. I. AND EAST CONN. CONFERENCE.

River Point, July 6th, 1864. Conference met according to appointment. Wednesday, 2 P. M. Few present. Afternoon spent in social worship. 7 o'clock. Met for social meeting. 8 o'clock, preaching by Bro. J. K. Bellows from Rom. 12: 1, 2.

Thursday, 9 A. M. Met for business, Bro. M. R. Phetteplace in the chair. After prayer and singing, delegates were called upon to report. Bro. Rice Knight reported the church at River Point. Interest low in the church. Sunday School interest increasing. School numbers about fifty scholars. Lack some good teachers. Preaching last quarter by the following brethren: J. K. Bellows, E. Bellows, and Wm. Fenn.

Church at Exeter reported by letter. Have preaching two Sundays in each month, by Eld. Edwin R. Wood. Meetings most part of the time interesting, although our numbers are few. Two added to the church—now numbers twenty-two. Expecting the Chief Shepherd will soon appear, and give eternal life to his children. Albert Sweet, Clerk.

Lafayette church. Bro. Ambrose Taylor, delegate. Interest rather low. Considerably scattered. A few there still striving to serve the Lord. Some dropped, others that ought to be. Committee appointed to see them. Prayer meetings—three a week—quite interesting. Sabbath School on the decrease. Preaching by Brn. Wood, Shepherd, and J. K. Bellows.

Foster church, no delegate. Bro. M. R. Phetteplace thought there was no more interest than there had been.

Danielsonville church, no delegate.

Central Village, no delegate. Bro. Howard reported by request of the conference. Interest rather low. Some good meetings. Bro. William Fenn was there one Sunday. Some there that loved the Lord. Chestnut Hill, no delegate. Abington, no delegate.

Rocky Brook, letter. No particular progress to record. Still maintain our organization as a church among the distracting and dividing influences that have been among us. Had some beneficial meetings. The good Lord has stirred some up to feel more fully their duty and privilege. Sunday School not so full as it had been; still interesting. Had preaching the last quarter from the following brethren: J. D. Brown, J. N. Loughborough, J. K. Bellows, Wm. Shepherd, Frank Burbank, and John T. Dixon. Another Sunday School scholar has started to serve the Lord. Prayer meetings two a week. The young folks have started a prayer meeting of their own. Charles F. Dixon, Clerk.

Gloucester church, letter. Numbers twenty, none added, one dropped, more ought to be unless they change their course. Members live very scattering, the majority are in good standing. Had preaching by the following brethren: J. K. Bellows, D. O. Hopkins, J. M. Hicks, and J. S. Eldredge, pastor. Organized Sunday School, which numbers about thirty. Bro. J. S. Eldredge has the greater part of it upon himself. Henry R. Evans, Clerk.

Report of preaching brethren: Bro. Joseph Northup. Labor limited since last conference. Not been present at conference for some six or nine months. He reported his labors accordingly. Been at the following places: Gloucester, R. I.; Voluntown, Ct.; Summit, Coventry, North Stonington, Ct. Seen sinners converted, and good done.

Bro. Peter Noka. Been at the same place at the Pond St. church, Providence. Seen backsliders reclaimed, one converted, baptized and joined the church. He wanted some of his Advent brethren to preach there on Prophecy. The church would not consent to it. He thought he should leave them if they would not receive his brethren.

Bro. M. R. Phetteplace. Been at Chepachet. Thought the truth was gaining ground slowly in that place. Sunday School numbered about fifty. Started another Sunday School about three miles from Chepachet; numbered thirty-five.

Bro. Edwin Wood. Been at Exeter and Lafayette. Interest not so good as he would like to see it. No Sunday School at Exeter; some talk about starting one.

Bro. J. K. Bellows. Labored in limits of conference. Been at Summit, Rocky Brook, Westerly, River Point, Centrall, etc. Some alive, some dead. Thought practical piety about as low as he ever saw it. Been well sustained in all places but there. Had some books sold them, and run in debt for more. Paid out about $8 more than he had received.

Bro. B. St. John, from western Ct. Labored with good results. Sister Mussey had been laboring in that region. Some conversions. Large field to labor.

Bro. A. Durfee. Been laboring most of the time at home. Been at Clark's Mills. Enjoyed himself some of the time, and sometimes did not. Thought the cause of truth was gaining slowly where he lived. Some slight tokens of God's grace.

Bro. Geo. Smith. Trying to do the will of the Lord. Had good time trying to preach. Been at the Union meeting-house, north part of the State. Felt the Lord was willing to bless. [illegible]

Bro. P. C. Rodman reported by letter. Thought he should be able to be with us, but did not feel it to be duty. Would like to have the conference hold its next session there. Preached every Sabbath, and sometimes first day. Attended some funerals. Scattered some $6 worth of books and tracts. The work is onward with him. Expected good results from labors in Ashley. Had the witness that his ways pleased the Lord. His prayer was that the Lord be with us. Sent fifty cents for the Tract Fund.

Letter from V. P. Simmons. Would like to be with us if it was convenient. Sincerely believes that he is in the path of duty. His convictions were never clearer in regard to the right of anything he ever entered upon. Never had more peace of mind than during the time he had been in the army. Still trying to be a christian, but came short of his ideas of a Bible christian, and feared lest he should come short of the kingdom.

The following resolution was passed:—Resolved that a committee be appointed to visit the church at Westerly and at Providence to ascertain their condition. Bro. Peter Noka was appointed to visit the church in Providence, and Bro. Joseph Northup the Westerly church.

Bro. R. Knight and the Clerk were chosen to act with the Chair to arrange the preaching and select the subject for criticism for next conference.

Bro. M. R. Phetteplace reported from the committee that was appointed to furnish destitute churches with preaching. He had written to the following churches: River Point, Warwick Plains, Chestnut Hill, Lafayette, Westerly, Rocky Brook, and Centrall. There were but two or three in favor of a missionary or itinerant preacher. Report accepted. Committee discharged. Subject indefinitely postponed.

Hymn. Some stirring testimonies from different brethren and sisters, after which we adjourned until Friday, 9 A. M., for business.

2 P. M. Preaching by Bro. B. St. John of Danbury, Ct., from Acts 8: 30. At 7 P. M. met for social worship. At 8 o'clock preaching by Bro. A. Durfee, on the pre-existence of Christ. For criticism.

Friday, 9 A. M. Met for business. Bro. Edwin Straight arrived and reported his labors. Preached near home most of the time. Been at East Providence and Manton. Felt that he would try to do more.

9.50. Criticism of Bro. A. Durfee's sermon, by Brn. M. R. Phetteplace and J. K. Bellows, after which an Essay was read by Bro. Alva Bellows on a Personal Devil. Criticized by Brn. A. Durfee and J. K. Bellows. Essay written and sent to this conference to be read and criticized, by Bro. Jonathan Wilson, the Bibleite. Subject, a miscellaneous view of different subjects on the Bible.

2 P. M. Preaching by Bro. Alva Bellows, from 1 Cor. 12: 31. 7 o'clock, met for social worship. 8 o'clock, preaching by Bro. Joseph Northup. Thus closed the R. I. and East Conn. Conference. We trust some good was accomplished.

Adjourned to meet at Lafayette the first Wednesday in October, at 2 o'clock P. M. Preaching brethren: M. R. Phetteplace, R. I., A Durfee, J. Northup, P. Noka, J. K. Bellows, New York; B. St. John, Ct.; E. R. Wood, E. S. Straight, R. I.; A. Bellows, Mass.; G. Smith, R. I.

PEWED CHURCHES.

The restraints of religious instruction are of no trifling importance; they often result in constraints to forsake sin and to walk in paths of righteousness. The church injures herself by not adopting a kind and sympathetic policy toward those who are without her pale. This class are often generous in their support of free institutions, but who would contribute little otherwise.

Frequently the first gatherings of a society in some hall or public building is much better sustained than old ones in pewed houses. The reason is apparent. In the first instance, there is a manifest freedom, a sociality of feeling and interest; in the latter case, in a pewed house there is a feeling of restraint, of exclusiveness and officiousness about things which makes an outsider, especially a poor person, feel he is not at home.

Pewed churches, when held as private property, preclude the possibility of reaching the masses. A popular writer, speaking on this point, says, "Protestant churches are so sadly obnoxious to this charge, that thousands of the poor in spirit and in purse are kept from the worship of God, and driven to infidelity by no other means. A serious charge, but one which cannot be gainsayed, and which few reflective persons will call in question."

A large portion, if not all our chapels, embrace in their structure funds contributed by persons from abroad, or outside the parish; and in addition there are individuals among the poor at home who have given their mites to help make up the thousands of dollars thus invested. These contributions were made for a public benevolent purpose. But when these edifices were finished, they were cut up into private concerns—the pews being sold to those who would pay most for them. Thus the money donated by benevolent persons from abroad and by the poor at home, is swallowed up by the pew holders, and thereby perverted from its legitimate use. Those who paid ten, twenty, or fifty dollars, get nothing for their money—not even a place to stand or kneel in the house without meeting an extra demand therefor, or of being regarded as a beneficiary. This is the way the poor are robbed in the house of their confessed friends. Those individuals, good meaning people, no doubt, who control the pews, monopolize several seats in the most eligible part of the chapel, whereas if the seats were free, they could control no more than they actually occupy, and the remainder might, and probably would, be taken up by persons who otherwise would be absent.

The private pew system is a prolific source of evil. It fosters pride and religious aristocracy; it robs many of the means of grace by making them too dear for them to buy; it takes off the restraints of religious instruction from society in general, by circumscribing its blessings to a few, and it makes salaried ministers of the popular class in constant demand, while it repudiates the services of the plainer, but no less substantial teachers. We would therefore submit the question, whether the vital interests of the church do not demand a reform.—Zion's Herald.

A SALUTARY THOUGHT.—When I was a young man, there lived in our neighborhood a farmer who was usually reported to be a very liberal man and uncommonly upright in his dealing. When he had any of the produce of his farm to dispose of, he made it an invariable rule to give good measure—rather more than could be required of him. One of his friends, observing him frequently doing so, questioned him why he did it—told him he gave too much, and said it would not be to his advantage. Now mark the answer of this excellent man: "God Almighty has permitted me but one journey through the world, and when I am gone, I cannot return to rectify mistakes." Think of this. But one journey through the world.—Vt. Chron.

A FEW WORDS ON PRUNING.

The often repeated axiom "prune whenever your knife is sharp," holds good for small limbs upon small trees, but for old and neglected ones both experience and theory indicate midsummer as the proper time for the removal of large limbs. Not only is the amputated stump more thoroughly shaded at that time, but the forces of the tree are in that condition which allows the healing over process to commence more promptly than at any other season. We have to repeat what has often been said in these columns: do not cut a limb unless with a definite object and it is clearly seen that something is to be gained by it. In pruning we remove limbs altogether or shorten them, and for quite different ends. A neglected tree will have its centre crowded with branches which, being excluded from light, cannot perfect their fruit. Others will cross and chafe one another, while others again will grow so much to one side as to throw the tree quite out of balance. In either case the limb may be removed with decided benefit to the tree. Nor is the manner of its removal a matter of indifference; if worth doing at all it is worth doing well. A pruning saw or a small hand-saw without a back, and with a rather wide set is to be used to remove the limbs. In the operation the limb should be held in such a manner that it it cannot fall by its own weight and make a bad crack, or strip the bark before the sawing is completed. Saw close to where the limb joins another and pare the cut surface smooth with a knife, chisel or drawing knife. The surface should then have some protecting coating; a thick solution of shellac in alcohol is one of the best preparations for this purpose, but owing to the high price of both these articles it will be found cheaper to use grafting wax, which may be applied in a melted state with a brush. Either of the compositions mentioned in the report of the Fruit Growers' Meeting on page 164 (last month) may be used. Branches may be shortened in, either to induce the formation of fruit buds or to cause some of its lower buds to start and produce branches to fill up a vacant space. For the last mentioned purpose the cutting is done in Spring.—American Agriculturist.

"This is for your health."—Paul.

LITTLE HINTS TO YOUNG PREACHERS.

Old Father Hersey is no more. There is some danger that we shall forget the "little things." If we do, it will surely go ill with us. For, sneer at it as we may, after all, little things have far more to do with personal comfort and ministerial success, than most of us are disposed to admit. Many a one has experienced this when it was too late. Young preachers ought to know and feel it at the very threshold of their ministerial life.

As a means to this, some of these vitally important little things will now be modestly and plainly hinted.

TAKE CARE OF YOUR STOMACH.

This is one of your first duties. On its performance largely depends the performance of all others. The stomach is the seat of life, the source of health. Its connection with heart and brain is most intimate, and most controlling. It ought, therefore, to be well used. If kindly treated, it will be one of your best friends; if abused, one of your worst enemies. It has a quick sense of imposition and injury; is as full of revenge as a savage, and punishes without pity or remorse. Woe be to the culprit on whom its vengeance falls. Its instruments of vengeance are a fearful host of horrible diseases, acute and chronic. The most common are headache, dyspepsia and bronchitis. This is a trio at the very thought of which any preacher may tremble. Whoever would escape them must not do violence to his stomach; he must be strictly temperate in all his eating.

On this subject, to every young preacher, we would hint:

1. If you would avoid the headache, the dyspepsia, or the bronchitis, take care of your stomach.

2. If you desire a sound body, take care of your stomach.

3. If you wish an active, vigorous intellect, take care of your stomach.

4. If you covet strong, musical vocal powers, take care of your stomach.

5. If you want to be a successful preacher, and to preach on till superannuated by age, take care of your stomach.

But how are you to do it? By the persistent observance of three very simple rules:

1. Never eat when you are not hungry—never. No matter how tempting the dishes, nor how urgent the entreaties of those who prepared them. Better disoblige foolish friends a little than incur the wrath of your own stomach.

2. Eat only such food as by experience you find agrees with you—such as your stomach comfortably digests. Never mind what doctors say on this subject. Let your stomach be its own judge. God intended it to be such. It is a safer guide than all the doctors in Christendom. Never, never disregard it.

3. Never eat too much. The moment your stomach gives signs of becoming burdened, "put the knife to your throat." Hard to do, especially when a sumptuous, savory meal is before us and kind friends are pressing us unmercifully to eat heartily. True, true indeed. But it must be done, else look out for the vengeance of an angry stomach—a vengeance that will as certainly come as you live. This, by experience, you already know. Then beware. Never eat too much. No, never.

Apropos: Young preachers are often sorely tempted to the infringement of this rule by the ill-advised kindness of those with whom they lodge. Tables are loaded with an endless variety of good things, deliciously served up; and then the guests are expected to eat bountifully of dishes before them. This is unmerciful kindness. Death to stomachs and sermons.—Ex.

"NURSERY POISON."

The editor of the New York Weekly has a word to say about "nursery poison:"—

"If the undertakers of the present day possessed a share of that gratitude which we like to believe exists among other classes of men, they would erect monuments in every city to the memory of that lethal genius who first invented 'Godfrey's Cordial,' for it may be fairly questioned if the greatest battle in the present war supplied death with so many victims as has this fatal anodyne. It is probable no worse than other medicines of its kind, but being more generally used among the poor and unreflecting, the mischief it works is greater than that occasioned by any other. With thousands of mothers this 'specific' is invariably resorted to in every case of infantile restlessness, irritability or appearance of slight sickness, while others constantly administer it to their children to produce a state of semi-torpor—mistaken for sleep—during which the child requires no attention. The results are that many infants are quickly killed by over-doses of the stuff, given by mothers ignorant of its powers, while in other cases children are more slowly drugged to idiocy and death by its continual use in smaller quantities. A few days since I visited a large wholesale coffin warehouse in one of our western cities, and I noticed with astonishment that about five times as many little coffins were made as large ones. A terrible shudder ran through my frame as I beheld the long rows of little coffins standing on end side by side, and knew that some mother's babes were destined to fill them all! But when I thought that most of these babes are killed outright by the use of such murderous compounds as Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup—which you see advertised in all the papers of the land—Godfrey's cordial and paregoric, I ceased to wonder about the large number of little coffins. Continue on, mothers, to dose and drug your children when sick; put into their mouths something of the effects of which you know nothing; always give them 'something to take;' let them die; weep as Rachel wept for her children; think how uncertain life is in this strange world; send for a little coffin, and commence to dose some more children. In this way the business of the undertaker will thrive, grave-yards will fill up, and our mortality tables show a large increase. Label all your bottles 'Nursery Poison,' and put them out of the reach of your children."—Western Health Journal.

CURE FOR ASTHMA.

We read in a recent work on asthma by Mr. Rumball of England, that this distressing and apparently incurable disorder can be controlled by very simple treatment. The commonest form of disorder, which is called spasmodic bronchitis, is "a congestion of the mucous membrane, together with spasms of the posterior fibres of the brochial tubes; the chief sequel being a low ceronic bronchitis, with a liberal flow of frothy mucous." Mr. Rumball says of his own case: "I wanted something which would dissolve in contact with moisture, and remain and act as a powerful astringent; alum appeared to possess the requisite properties. I had a machine made like a lottery wheel, with a mouth piece, inside I placed a revolving brush, and some finely powdered alum and gum-arabic; the brush when turned on a centre raised a dust, this I inhaled largely many times a day." Expectoration followed, the paroxysms were cut short, and the result was that after suffering for five years he was completely cured. He has had no return of the attack in twenty years time. The remedy appears simple and easily applied.

CHEWING GUM.

The habit of chewing gum is a very pernicious one. The substance of some gums which are used for chewing is poisonous; and to the extent that it is received into the stomach by chewing does the system become poisoned by it. There are other gums, the substance of which is entirely innoxious; but even these cannot be chewed without injury. Whenever the process of chewing is carried on, the salivary fluid is being constantly secreted, and thus the juices provided for the moistening of the food are perverted from their legitimate use. This is a greater evil than it would readily appear to be to a superficial observer. The completeness and healthfulness of digestion depends very largely upon the condition of the food when it is received into the stomach. It cannot be in proper conditions unless the salivary glands act efficiently and healthfully during mastication, and this they cannot do if they are habitually excited by the action of the jaws in the intervals between the taking of meals. This is a very serious objection to the habit of chewing tobacco, aside from the great objection, that tobacco is exceedingly poisonous. Parents should be careful to teach their children that chewing is a process to be carried on only when food is to be prepared to be taken into the stomach, and that aside from this it cannot be carried on to any great degree without harm.—J. C. Jackson.

DIARRHEA REMEDY.—A. W. Davis, of Marshfield, Pa., wishes to communicate to the world the following as a valuable and speedy cure for dysentery, diarrhea, etc.:—Smartweed, two parts; tansy, one part; ginseng, one part; made into a strong tea, and drank every hour or half-hour, about one-third or half a teacupful at a time. If taken in larger doses it does no injury, and never fails to cure recent attacks. He says his father has used it with good effect for forty years, and among all to whom he has recommended it, it has never been known to fail.—American Artisan.

CURE FOR POISONING BY IVY.—In case of poisoning by ivy, plunge the part affected in hot water, as hot as can be borne, holding it there some time. The unpleasant itching and burning sensation will be removed. Two or three applications are a sure cure—at least this has been the case with our informant.—New England Farmer.

CRUST COFFEE.—Bread crust baked in an oven until it is very brown, but not black, and then pounded to the fineness of ground coffee, is a safer, cheaper, and quite as agreeable and healthful a substitute for coffee as any other mixture now in use.—Journal of Health.

CURE FOR YELLOW FEVER.—Take two-thirds of a tumbler of olive oil, the juice of two lemons, and add one tea spoonful of table salt; mix well together. It is said to cure the hardest cases.

"THE MORNING COMETH, AND ALSO THE NIGHT."—Isa. 21: 12.

Christian, see the prophetic sky,
  Behold the signs appear,
That tell us the bright morning
  Is drawing very near;
The morn that ends our sorrows,
  Wipes all our tears away,
That brings the glad fruition
  Of our eternal day.

The resurrection morning,
  When from their tombs shall come
The host of slumbering millions,
  To meet the coming One;
When we shall rise triumphant,
  With them to meet our King,
And through eternal ages
  Redemption's song to sing.

Sinner, when your Judge, arrayed in power,
  Sits upon the great white throne,
How your soul will quake in terror
  As you hear your awful doom.
Though with anguish deep and wailing
  You to rocks and mountains cry,
All will prove but unavailing,
  None can from His presence fly.

When all faces gather blackness,
  Powerless at His feet you'll lie,
There to hear the dreadful sentence—
  "Curs'd, depart, you now must die."
Swiftly is the time approaching
  When will come our morning bright,
But alas! then comes your darkness,
  E'en one long eternal night.

* * * * * *

Look upon the blessed Saviour,
  Bleeding, nailed upon the tree,
See the anguish he is suffering,—
  Dying there for you and me.
Now he's waiting to receive you,
  Lovingly he bids you "come";
O! then haste, in him take refuge
  From the great fast-gathering storm.

THE WAR.
ITS ORIGIN—PROGRESS—END.

BY HENRY W. DANN.

For three long and weary years I have been watching with intensest interest the course of passing events. I have seen the cruel demon war hurrying off its thousand and ten thousand victims. It has brought sadness to multitudes of hearts; converted peaceful homes into places of desolation, mourning and woe, and filled the land with crippled, deformed and mangled humanity. Every passing breeze bears onward its conflicting rumors of renewed conflict, carnage, death.

O! what a fearful record of horror and wickedness will be shown when the three past years are written up; and in view of that great day of judgment just before us, I ask myself the great question, "Who shall be able to stand?"

To the christian, the times in which we live are marked and significant. And he must be ignorant and blind indeed who in these passing scenes cannot discover traces of the fulfillment of prophecy.

But to a godless world and a sleeping church no gleam of spiritual light dawns on the dark and fearful horizon. Truly we live in perilous times. O what a change in three brief years. To-day we see implements of husbandry which were designed for a holier use converted into weapons of war, and hearts that ought to beat with love are filled with enmity and malicious hate.

Truly individuals as well as nations have become hardened and blinded to their own and the best interests of bleeding humanity, and the terrible war-cloud still lingers in the horizon of the nations of earth.

If we look abroad we find an unusual activity prevails every where. European nations were never so distrustful and uneasy as they are to-day, and every where "men's hearts are failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth." As a nation we are on the very verge of ruin and bankruptcy, yet the multitudes remain as careless and unconcerned as they could possibly have done under the most prosperous and peaceful days that ever dawned on the United States.

The question naturally arises here as to the cause of such a sad state of affairs. The war is upon us in all its terrors, and it is self-evident that it is the result of cause or causes that first gave it its impetus. Now the question as to the origin of this rebellion can be satisfactorily determined if viewed from the proper stand-point, i. e., Divine Revelation. Politicians cannot answer it, and worldly-minded men as a general thing do not care to answer it.

This question, however, does not so much concern the people as the question, When will it end? I undertake to say that it is utterly impossible even to guess at the termination unless we know something of the commencement of this war.

From a Bible stand-point, then, I propose to show briefly the origin, progress and coming end of the great struggle in which we are to-day engaged.

ORIGIN OF THE WAR.

1. It is the natural result of the overwhelming wickedness of the age. Perhaps there never has been a time in human history when the people have been so openly and notoriously reckless and wicked as at the present day. The records of crime are appalling. Sabbath breaking and blasphemy have become "institutions among us."

Christendom is horridly addicted to profanity, and if there be any law against it, the law is of no effect; from the mere infant up to the hoary head is heard cursing and blasphemy. Men swear when it is hot, and when it is cold; when it is wet, and when it is dry; in fact, it makes but little difference what the circumstances are, men find occasion to profane the name of the Most High God. And one writer has truthfully remarked,—"Probably, day and night throughout Christendom, a hundred or a thousand curses are uttered while one prayer is offered." And we have instances on record of men who have always lived in heathen lands, who never heard the name of God blasphemed until they reached the shores of what we call civilization.

Again, we had become a nation of Sabbath breakers. Neither the word or day of God has been reverenced. It would puzzle a philosopher to tell, judging from actual observation of Sunday life, whether there was such a thing in existence as the Lord's day. Places of amusement are thronged on the Sabbath day. The railroad train thunders along on the Sabbath as on other days. Boats ply their course on the Sabbath. Stores are opened on the Sabbath. Business affairs are all talked over and plans all arranged on the Sabbath. In fact, the Sabbath day has become a great holiday among the people; but oh! how little they know of the delightful rest of the christian who makes the day what it is designed to be, a day of sweet refreshing rest.

Again, the nation had become boastful and proud. We have boasted of freedom, while four millions of our fellow creatures were groaning beneath the yoke of cruel bondage. We have invited the down-trodden and oppressed of every clime to come to this land of liberty. We have inscribed on our banners, "All men are created free and equal," which has ever been among us as far from the truth as heaven is from hell. "The present seems to be an age of bombast, of proud and baseless boasting. From the merchant who sells his goods by lying advertisements, which are mere boasting and little else,—from the man who peddles Yankee notions from a tin-cart, to the lying lawyer, or the statesman who talks for buncombe in the forum; it is the same intolerable egotism." The nation is wickedly proud. The height of fashion must be reached, cost what it may; and even in the temples consecrated to the worship of Almighty God, pride reigns supreme. One must have on an extra nice suit of clothes in order to feel at all at home in such a place as that.

In addition to all this, as a nation we were guilty of implacability, inhumanity, licentiousness, cruelty, rashness and selfishness. Through all these means the hearts of men became wofully hardened; and it is no cause of wonder that this wickedness should end in open revolt. We have, then, in this overwhelming tide of corruption, one of the causes of the present war.

2. Political corruption. Any one who is at all conversant with the politics of this country knows full well that "the devil has got into it." The scenes that have been enacted even within the walls of our national Capitol we think ought to be sufficient to convince any man of the fact that corrupt politicians have taken an active part in bringing about this great rebellion.

I remember of hearing an individual remark some years ago, that he "would vote for the devil if he was up for office on his ticket." It is the same to-day; men will sacrifice the holiest principles on the shrine of political party.

Politicians are often dishonest, and resort to the most contemptible meanness to carry their point. And we might remark just here that political agitation is destructive of peace and prosperity in the church as well as in State.

If men would act independently of party, it would soon work out a political reformation that would astonish the world.

3. A backslidden church. I am thoroughly convinced that had the church of God been faithful to her vows, and had individual christians put forth mighty efforts to save humanity, we should not to-day be surrounded by such terrible scenes of carnage and death.

But the question is asked, Has not the church exerted herself in every direction to spread the truth and get the world saved? The church has, thank God, done a noble work; but the worldly-mindedness and inconsistency of a large majority of professed christians has to a certain extent vitiated and counteracted all these christian efforts. Then again she has put false constructions on the word of life, and as a natural consequence men have become carnally secure in error, and blind as to their actual state and condition before God.

Take an example. The church has been telling us that "the world is to be converted to God." Now if this doctrine be correct, then we expect and look for good at all times and every where. On this supposition we are not prepared for war and its kindred horrors, but are expecting all the while "a good time coming." While on the other hand, had the church given us Bible truth in the matter, we should have expected and looked for just such a state of affairs as now exists; for the Scripture declaration is that "evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived."—2 Tim. 3: 13.

Again, in John 18: 23 Christ declares in the most positive terms that his servants can not fight. So, too, Christ's sermon on the mount, recorded in Matt. 5th, is literally explained away. In another place the Scriptures assert that "the weapons of our warfare are not carnal." 2 Cor. 10: 3, 4; but the church declares they are, and urges the use of them.

We need not multiply quotations. Suffice it to say that the spirit of war is contrary to the whole genius of christianity; and furthermore, that "there is not a record to be found, in writings sacred or profane, of the existence of a christian soldier during the first two hundred years of the church's history."—Guiness' Letter.

Is not the christian to recognize and obey civil governments? Most certainly, and in my opinion that man is far from being a christian who can sympathise with the rebellious people of the South.

And I furthermore believe that every true christian is loyal to the government, and wishes and prays for its peace and prosperity. We may not endorse all of the acts of the present administration, from honest religious principle. But when a man differs and strives to embarrass the government from party policy alone, I think his religion needs to be remodelled. The duty of the church is to propagate "truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth."

Such are my views of the origin of this wicked war; others may and probably will differ with me on this great question, still I believe the first reason or cause assigned, viz: the overwhelming wickedness of the people, covers the whole ground and answers satisfactorily the question, What caused this war?

PROGRESS OF THE WAR.

The question has been repeatedly asked, What progress has been made, or what have we gained in this long and fearful struggle?

If you mean by these inquiries what moral gain has been made, we answer most emphatically and positively, none at all. It is contrary to the whole genius of war that men are made better by it, but on the contrary it tends to immorality and vice in every direction.

The peculiar mode of living—the varied and ungodly associates—the oft-repeated death scene,—all tend to harden the soldier's heart, and keep him away from the softening and hallowing influence of the gospel of Jesus Christ. But if you ask what natural advantage has been derived, we answer, as to extent of territory undoubtedly much has been gained, and as a general thing the majority are confident of success in the end. But after all we have not gained as we expected; the war continues to drag through year after year, at times looking bright, and then again fearfully dark.

From my stand-point, the Bible, I can not see that much advantage has been derived, and I attribute this tardy progress to the following facts:

1. The uncertainty in the minds of the government as to the real nature of the conflict.—One man tells us that we are fighting for the Union; another that we are fighting to destroy slavery; and still another that we are fighting for the "nigger," meaning, I suppose, slavery; and some few contend that we are fighting for national life and honor. And I do not wonder, in view of all this, that it should be so repeatedly said that "we don't know what we are fighting for." The truth of the matter is simply this: men are desperately wicked, and with hearts full of malice, hatred and revenge, will fight, while the other party with similar feelings array themselves to oppose them. I would to God that the people could be brought to a better mind and come together in love and harmony.

There can no real and permanent progress be made until we have clear and united views as to the real nature of the struggle. In order to this, the President by proclamation should state just what the government is trying to accomplish, and thus bring the minds of the people together on the object of the war.

2. The government is actuated too much by partisan motives.—The question should not be raised, Will it be beneficial to our interests, or tend to aid us in this or that election? but, Will it be for the best? will it mitigate in any degree the horrors of war? will it be for the best interest of the people? will it be for the glory of God?

Men are oftentimes unconsciously influenced, and it is now and then the case with our government. Some leading politician gives in his opinion in certain matters; and lo, before we are scarcely aware of it, his opinion is adopted as the law of the land. Politicians are bad enough, take them as they run, but currupt politicians belong to "the devil's own set."

3. Incompetent officers.—None will pretend to deny that life has been uselessly sacrificed through the incompetency of commanding officers. The record of the past has shown unnumbered blunders on the part of our leaders, and indeed it has occurred so often that the government has been compelled to remove scores of them. The first battle of the war would in my opinion have been quite decisive, or at least would have turned the scale in our favor, but for this very reason.

It is true, of late this class of men have been removed as fast as discovered; still in some cases incompetent officers have been retained. One thing is certain: so long as blundering officers are allowed to lead our armies, so long must the struggle drag and its progress be retarded. I need not refer to the multiplied disasters to our arms, as all are acquainted with the facts in the case.

4. Another reason why progress has been so slow is, that the government has not been so lenient to christians as it ought.—Now the fact that christians can not fight is as true as heaven and God are true. Professors of religion, members of the various churches, together with thousands of ministers, are using carnal weapons, I know; but this fact does not alter in the least the words of our Savior that christians can not fight. John 18: 36. Have christians, then, no duties toward earthly governments? Most certainly they have. They are commanded to be subject to the higher powers, to pay tribute, to render to all their dues—tribute to whom tribute is due, custom to whom custom, fear to whom fear, honor to whom honor." Rom. 13.

Again, the christian is commanded to be "subject to principalities and powers, to obey magistrates, etc. Tit. 3: 1, 2. Furthermore, the christian is to make "supplications, prayers and intercessions for all men, for kings, and for all that are in authority." 1 Tim. 2: 12. Such are the duties of christians toward the government; but when laws are enacted that conflict with the word of God, then he is to "obey God rather than men." Acts 4: 19, 5: 29.

One thing, however, should be borne in mind: that "there is not a single passage in the Scriptures bidding christians to defend any government on earth."—Guiness. Every christian I believe to be an ardent lover of his country, and the best friend the nation can possibly have. The government should have exempted from military duty all men who are and have been conscientiously opposed to the use of carnal weapons.

But they can commute. No, they can not. Many poor christians can not raise sufficient money for this purpose. I have in my mind now some who were obliged to part with books, clothing, and even the necessaries of life, in order to meet this demand of the government.

But in this "world we shall have tribulation"; yet, thank God, in him "we have peace," glory to his name.

CHRIST'S SYMPATHY.

While the storm was fiercely blowing,
While the sea was wildly flowing—
Angry wind and angry billow
Only rocked the Savior's pillow,
  Jesus slept.

But when sudden grief was rending
Human hearts in sorrow bending—
When he saw the sisters weeping
Where their brother's form was sleeping,
  "Jesus wept."

THE INSTRUMENT OF THOUGHT.

We might as well assume that the function of every living tissue depended on an "immortal principle," as to maintain that immortality is essential to the manifestation of the functions of the brain and nervous system generally. The grand argument of our opponents is, that thought is not an attribute, or function of matter, no matter how organized. This, as we have seen, leads to the conclusion that the beasts possess immortal souls, for they certainly think. We all agree that man thinks, but by what means does he think? Does he think, feel, and reason because he has an immortal soul? Does he not think and reason by means of his brain? Are thought, feeling, and sentiment attributes of immortality only? Then it follows that all animals, not possessed of an immortal mind, are incapable of thought, reason, and sentiment; consequently all the lower animals, as well as all idiots, simpletons, or fools, have no immortality about them; because they are incapable of displaying these mental phenomena! This argument, therefore, proves too much for the advocates of the immortal-soul system. It proves that some men have no immortality! Here the opposition are certainly in a dilemma, from which no rules of logic on earth can deliver them! While it may be, however, that idiots think, their thoughts and sentiments are not such as we should expect from a mind endowed with the principle of immortality and incorruptibility. Does it not follow, then, if some men, such as idiots, etc., display no trace of incorruptibility, that this principle is not congenital? For, if it were congenital, or hereditary, all men would be in possession of it.

Matter, organized, refined, and endowed with life, is capable of thought in the ratio of its perfection. That this is true we see demonstrated before our eyes by observing the organization of different genera, species, and varieties in the animal world, from the smallest animalculæ up to man, the noblest work of God. Every link we mark in this great chain of organization, bears upon its face the degree of intelligence it possesses, and establishes the proposition, that intellect, other things being equal, is always in proportion to the perfection of its constitution. Unorganized matter is incapable of thought. Moreover, it is not enough that matter be organized in order to produce mental phenomena, but it must also be endowed with life, as we have already stated. And to those who deny that organized matter, endowed with life, can think, we will put a few questions. If matter, organized, refined, sublimated, and endowed with life, is incapable of thought, by what means do the beasts think? Thought, you affirm, is not a function of matter, and yet the beasts that perish think! Is thought a function of matter in this case? Again, we would ask, seeing they are all endowed with instinct, if this is an attribute or function of matter? Will you affirm that sight, hearing, tasting, smelling, and feeling are functions of matter, when moulded and fashioned by the hand of God? Is it not preposterous to say that matter can see? That matter can smell? That it can feel? And yet you are bound to admit this, or else be driven to the conclusion, that every living thing in the universe of God has an immortal soul! Are you prepared for this? Or do you shrink back from this position? If so, you must admit that your views of the subject are unsound, and consequently untenable. And if all the functions of the five senses are manifested by matter, why may not reason, perception, judgment, and imagination also be developed by matter still more exquisitely organized? If the stomach can digest food, the liver secrete bile, and the heart propel the blood, why may not the brain, acted upon by electro-magnetism, secrete thought? Is there any thing more incompatible in the one case, than in the other? We come, therefore, to the conclusion, that matter, organized as we behold it in man, and endowed with life from God, is capable of manifesting moral and intellectual functions.

We have now shown, that immortality is not essential to thought, reason, etc., or that, if it be, every living thing, possessing the five senses, must be in possession of it: and having made these general remarks, we shall proceed to examine the mind and some of its attributes in detail. And,

1st. OF PERSONAL IDENTITY. A great many singular ideas prevail on the subject of Personal Identity. Those who hold the doctrine of "hereditary immortality," suppose that the soul or spirit of man constitutes his identity. Supposing then, for the sake of argument, that the soul or spirit, in the popular sense, constitutes man's personal identity, what is it that speaks when the language "my soul," "my spirit," "my body," or "my mind" is used? A man speaks of himself, and says he has a mind, a soul, a body, a head and a heart, etc. What is it that possesses all these? Is it not that which is the representative of them all? In other words, is it not that which supplies the I of consciousness—that which gives rise to the sentiment of personal identity? To affirm the contrary would be to represent the soul or spirit as saying my soul, or my spirit. Has the soul possession of another soul? Does the spirit possess a spirit? This view of the case, then, is at once reduced to an absurdity. The scriptures do not thus trifle with the understanding of man. It is utterly beneath the spirit of wisdom and knowledge thus to speak. Moreover, if the soul constitute the personal identity of man, what becomes of its immortality when the feeling of self-consciousness is deranged so that the person shall imagine himself to be a very extraordinary personage, a king, an emperor, and even God himself? Can this derangement be affirmed of an immortal soul?

Again, as we have organs for the manifestation of all our other feelings and faculties, it is reasonable to suppose that there is an organ, the manifestation of whose function would give rise to the sentiment of I, myself. And when that organ is diseased, its function becomes the subject of that kind of derangement of which we have spoken. While, therefore, it is clear that man has a material organ, whose office it is to create the feeling of personality, or self-consciousness, it is also evident that man is not to be dissected and examined in that state; but that he is to be the subject of a sound, rational, and philosophical analysis, in order to arrive at the truth upon this subject. We would ask one question—if the spirit, mind, or soul, in the popular sense of these words, does everything of a moral and mental nature, by means of material organs, what is left for the man to do? for it is evident that the spirit is not the man! These acts, to which we have referred, should be affirmed of man, as such, in the aggregate, and not of his mind, soul, or spirit. Therefore, when a man (not spirit) sees, he sees by means of the eye; when he thinks, reasons, reflects and perceives, it is by means of his brain. And as he has organs by which to operate on the world, and by which external objects operate on him, so it is fair to conclude that every feeling, every moral sentiment, and every intellectual faculty, has its appropriate organ, or instrument, in the brain; and that of personal identity among the number. There is nothing in personal identity, then, to favor the popular view of immortality.—Her. of Life.

CAMPMEETINGS.

I want to say a few words about campmeetings, as there are to be several of them this season. Our meetings for the last six years have been losing in interest, and but little has been done for the advancement of the Lord's cause. Brethren and sisters come to these meetings from a distance, that they may be benefited; but instead, go home sad, and depressed in spirits, thinking they will never attend another meeting.

The question is, What can be done? "Well," says one, "what is the matter?" There are a good many things in the way. Why do we not see the same brotherly love manifested that we did years ago? Let God's word answer. "Because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold." Where does iniquity abound? I reply, everywhere; in the church as well as in the world.

Let us go back and compare the present with the past, and perhaps we can reach the sequel of the whole matter. We heard a message going through the land, "Behold! the Lord cometh. The church was awakened; sinners felt their danger; the church lost its selfish interest; meetings were appointed in every direction; and with one united effort they went to work for the Lord, and for the salvation of their fellow-men. We heard no murmuring, no fretting, no hiding of talents, and saying, "Lord, I cannot;" but "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" All seemed anxious and ready to work. Then, campmeetings were a blessing.

The ministering brethren did not spend half their time at the meetings in settling old difficulties, and business matters, for all things were settled up at once, or else there were no troubles. At any rate, they were quiet about them, and did not vex the little flock. All earth's petty trials sank into insignificance before the glorious doctrine of the coming of the Lord. Every prayer and exhortation was so earnest; so full of meaning; so deep with love; so real and heartfelt. O! what confidence in each other; the preaching so powerful, so pure, so honest. And while the man of God was expounding the word, the whole congregation lifted up their hearts in prayer for him. The preacher felt their influence and was strengthened. They did not preach for filthy lucre; they loved not their lives unto death; they were willing to lose their reputation and become the offscouring of all things, for Christ's sake.

What was the result of such a course? Why, sinners came flocking to the anxious seat, and the tears rolling down their cheeks, showed there was deep sorrow for sin within. Sobs and sighs were heard from every quarter from the penitent soul. Ere the morning sun had risen, fervent, earnest prayers were heard from every tent. Then after breakfast the class meetings, The preachers, of course, were among the first to attend these meetings, setting an example for the little flock to follow. At noon it was understood by all, that a general prayer-meeting was to be held at the stand to pray for sinners. Then, you would see the brethren and sisters looking up the lost sheep. The anxious seat was placed before them, and all the sincere and humble came forward. But alas! a great change has come over the church. Preachers have backslidden from God, and gone after the things of the world.

Years have passed, and the Lord tarries, and the church slumbers. God's servants say in their hearts, "My Lord delayeth his coming," and have begun to beat their fellow-servants, and to eat and drink with the drunken, mingling with the worldling on terms of equality with him.

So when we come together for a campmeeting it is not with the united purpose of honoring God and saving souls. Some have one object and some another. They feel but little interest for poor sinners, or in the welfare of each other; but think more of having a pleasant, social time, or of riding some questionable hobby, or of wasting God's opportunities in singing popular pieces, than they do of weeping over the judgments fast coming upon the world.

O! how I have been grieved for my brethren when I have seen the time taken up on the camp ground in singing. It was impossible under such circumstances to make sinners feel they were lost; impossible to get up a prayer-meeting; for so bewitching is music, that unless it is carried on by the Spirit of the gospel, it is very dangerous to come under its influence. Indulging in this concert singing on the camp ground drives away the Spirit of God, both from our own hearts, and that of the poor sinner. Our exhortations have no love of God in them; our prayers are faithless and powerless.

These are facts which have been observed by many for more than five years. It it almost impossible to get up a prayer-meeting at the stand, or to make any extra effort to save the sinner. May God preserve us from these things which threaten our ruin, is the prayer of a pilgrim. H. B. HASTINGS.

WHAT IS MAN? PSALM 8.

Sometimes it is incorrectly affirmed that the Psalmist propounds this question with reference to Christ, because Paul, after speaking of "the world to come," which is to be placed in subjection to Christ, chances to quote this language in Heb. 2: 6. In the preceding chapter Paul had been advocating Christ's superiority over the angels, "being made so much better than the angels," and "unto the Son he saith, Thy throne, O God, is forever and ever; a sceptre of righteousness is the sceptre of thy kingdom."

In the next chapter it is added, "For unto the angels hath he not put in subjection the world to come whereof we speak,"—or, of which he had just been speaking—the kingdom of Christ. Now, after having spoken of Christ's superiority over the angels, in connection with his future kingdom, Paul proceeds to refer to man's lowly condition, a little above the beasts of the earth, but a little "lower than the angels," and then represents Christ as coming down to this low estate of man, to redeem him, before establishing his kingdom: Christ is represented as taking a stand upon a level with mortal man, "for the suffering of death;" thus "Jesus was made a little lower than the angels," as well as man. "Forasmuch as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same; that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death . . . for verily he took not on him the nature of angels; but he took on him the seed of Abraham."—Heb. 2: 14, 16.

Thus Paul, instead of making this question refer to Christ, applies it to man, for the sake of showing how Christ stooped to redeem fallen man, even coming down to a position a "little lower than the angels" himself, to raise man up.

1st. David inquires, "What is man (enoush? —"a mortal man, weak, feeble."—DR. PICK. The same word is translated "MORTAL MAN" in Job 4: 17. This is not the word from which "man" is generally translated.) What is mortal man—weak, feeble man? What is such a meagre being, contrasted with the glittering heavens, the sparkling stars and moon —the gigantic "work of thy fingers"? This sounds all right when applied to man; but how absurd to say, "What is mortal Christ—weak, feeble" Christ? Of what consequence is he, when contrasted with thy works?

2nd. What is such a being that thou "art mindful of him," or "that thou visitest him?" It sounds right to speak thus of frail man, who had no claim on the favor of God, only as God saw fit to be "mindful" of him,—but it sounds very differently if applied to the Son of God.

3rd. "Thou madest him to have dominion over the works of thy hands. . . . ALL sheep and oxen, yea, and the beasts of the field," etc. "ALL" does not mean a meagre fraction of the whole, but the sum total; hence, if this refers to Christ in the world to come, then how can man in this world, a resurrection of "sheep," "oxen" and "beasts," would be involved, even "ALL" of them, which would give more than fill our world. The truth is, God gave man dominion over them in the past, both before and after the fall, and this is all the Psalmist refers to. God said to Noah and his posterity, "The fear of you shall be upon every beast of the earth, and upon every fowl of the air, upon ALL that moveth upon the earth, and upon all the fishes of the sea; into your hands are they delivered." Gen. 9: 2. "What is mortal man," though once crowned with glory and honor?

THE LORD WILL COME.

The Lord will come. This can be no delusive fable; for thus all the prophets have spoken. And God has said not one jot or tittle of his word spoken through the holy prophets shall pass away till all be fulfilled. They spoke of his first coming, to offer himself as an atonement for the sins of mankind; that all who would believe in him might not perish, but obtain eternal life. That event has taken place. They have also said he would come the second time without sin unto salvation. God cannot lie. Therefore our hope is sure.

Then woe to all who put their trust in the gods of this world; they can not buy eternal life. But joy and peace, great riches and glory, await all who believe and trust in Him. Then welcome, poverty, welcome, oppression! for oh! I see by faith the beautiful faces of that happy multitude, where one is never striving to be above another, but all are rejoicing in the possession of boundless wealth, and in oppression forever ceased. Methinks I hear the glad notes swelling from the golden harps, and—, but thought is lost in amazement while contemplating the rapturous prospect.

The Lord will come again. He will come soon! for wise men have observed the signs, which He and his apostles said should immediately precede his return, and they have mostly if not all been fulfilled. But there is one sign which has solemnly presented itself to my mind. It is the gospel sound. We read that when Aaron, the high priest, went into the Holy place to minister before the Lord, there were golden bells fastened to the hem of his robe, that the people might hear their sound and know that he lived.

Jesus, our great High Priest, has gone into the Holy of Holies, once for all. Now let the gospel represent the golden bells on the hem of his robe. While the gospel bells are sounding, we know he is making intercession for us. O joy! For years they have rung out, "Repent, for the kingeom of heaven is at hand."

But now it seems to me there is a difference in the chime. What does it mean? Mournfully they are pealing over land and sea, like the last bell of the ship that is just ready to push from the shore,—"If there is another, come, for all things are now ready!" Yes, there is a difference in the chime. He must be even now preparing to lay aside his mediatorial robe, to clothe himself as a judge, and to come forth. O sinner! haste and repent, for when he appears again you will hear no more the music of the golden bells, no more gospel!

Brethren and sisters, rejoice! All ye feeble and oppressed ones, lift up your heads; your redemption draweth nigh! For oh! listen to the golden bells! is there not a difference in the chime? The Lord will come.

LEAVING SATAN BEHIND, OR A BLESSING OR A CURSE.

Is it not so? Does not every man leave behind him, on bidding adieu to earthly things, a blessing or a curse?

"A good man, out of the good treasure of the heart, bringeth forth good things; and an evil man, out of the evil treasure, bringeth forth evil things."—Matt. 12: 35.

"Some men's sins are open beforehand, going before to judgment; and some men they follow after. Likewise also the good works of some are manifest beforehand; and they that are otherwise cannot be hid."—1 Tim. 5: 24, 25.

The examples of good men though dead will speak, be "had in everlasting remembrance." . . . "They rest from their labors and their works do follow them." Good books and papers preach; bad books and papers preach. One is a savor of life to life, the other of death to death! One preaches salvation, the other damnation!

Reader, which kind of preaching will you choose to preach when the silver cord shall be loosed, or the golden bowl be broken; when your dust returns to the earth as it was, and your spirit returns to God who gave it? Do not very many parents leave Satan behind them in bound volumes to poison the souls of the rising age? Thus the iniquity of the fathers is visited upon the children to the third and fourth generation! How many parents, blinded by the god of this world, leave "Godey, "Harper," "Peterson," and other sugar-coated poisons, serpents in the grass, the very devil himself, in their libraries or on their centre tables, to curse their offspring! While these same unwise parents are sleeping in their graves, their children drink in this novel trash to their own destruction! We know a minister of the gospel, aside from other pernicious readings, who had Shakespeare neatly bound in his library! Who knows but this same corrupting, fascinating, licentious writer, may be the instrument in ruining the souls of his children forever? The lovely Charlotte Elizabeth fluttered on the verge of everlasting death by poring over the pages of this bewitching author. [See her "Recollections."]

Says the Rev. G. B. Waters: "Shakespeare's morality, seldom rises above the supreme selfishness of the heathen world, and often sinks into its grossest forms. He has exhibited ambition, avarice, revenge, jealousy, and all the groveling passions of the human soul, with all the skill of art, but where are those opposite graces of the spirit which alone can antidote their influence? It is remarkable that amid all the multitudinous phases of human thought and feeling, which the myriad-minded poet has represented, he has never attained to any conception of those high and sublime forms which flow out under the influence of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

The tendency of nearly all his writings is to quicken into inordinate and morbid activity that faculty which phrenologists term amativeness, already strong enough to need firm and wise restraint. No one can deny, moreover, that with all his excellences there is among his plays a great amount of senseless frivolity, unworthy of a thoughtful, earnest mind.

Besides, who has counted up the passages where he is positively vulgar, and covertly or openly licentious? Not a few there are, I am sure, that are most grossly so. What a sink of pollution, vulgarity and licentiousness is, for instance, the Merry Wives of Windsor. While no one of his plays, even the best, can give you a model, and scarcely an instance, of those exalted and self-denying virtues which spring only from a heartfelt symyathy with the spirit of the Bible.

His powerful and exciting delineations of love have, without doubt, ruined many a soul. If those instances were recorded where the works of Shakespeare have had an influence, either directly or indirectly, in exciting the passions to such an ungovernable strength, that men have been led into crime and misery, what an account would be placed to their score."

"O world! how deeply fallen from thy sphere!
O mind! how lost thy noblest wing of thought!
O soul! how base thy form—how lost art thou
To God's similitude—how deep thy stain."

REPORT OF THE HEBRON CONFERENCE.

A goodly number from the adjacent towns met on Friday, A. M., at ten o'clock, and as the preaching brethren expected failed to be there, the writer spoke from 2 Cor. 13: 5, and again on the afternoon, from Ps. 8: 4.

Friday afternoon, Eld. J. A. Libby, from Poland, arrived and spoke to the people at 5 o'clock. Text, John 8: 31, 32. A good interest was manifest in the meeting and we had a number of warm exhortations after the sermon.

Met Saturday, A. M., at 2 o'clock, for prayer and conference. We had quite a reinforcement on Saturday, from different places, which still added to the interest of the meeting. Preaching at half past ten by Eld. J. A. Libby. At two o'clock, P. M., Bro. Libby spoke again to the people. At five o'clock met for social meeting. We had many heart-cheering exhortations from different brethren and sisters.

As the Congregationalists requested the house on the Sabbath, we removed to the orchard of Bro. Stevens. Sunday, A. M., at nine o'clock, met for prayer and conference. We were blessed abundantly with the Spirit. Our retiring to the orchard proved to our advantage, as the house could not have contained the people, there being a large increase of numbers on Sunday.

At half past ten preaching by Eld. J. A. Libby. Text, 1 John 3: 8. At twelve o'clock we repaired to the water, where one brother was buried with Christ in baptism, showing his faith in Christ and his resurrection, and also the resurrection of the dead. Met at two o'clock, when Bro. Libby resumed his discourse, which was one of interest and we trust of profit to the people. At five o'clock met at the schoolhouse and listened to an interesting discourse from Eld. D. Hutchinson. Text, John 3: 16.

This is a new place, the Advent doctrine never having been preached to this community until last October. Since that time they have had two conferences, and as they felt anxious for meetings and willing to sacrifice for the same, we felt desirous that they might receive much good, and we feel that our desires have been realized, as we have met with the people once since the meeting and find that others are being added to their number. We pray that the work may continue to go on.

A CORRECTION.

Since "My Journal" appeared in the columns of the Crisis, I have been informed that "points of doctrine" is not the "scattering element" in this place; hence I have penned these few lines to correct any wrong impressions that might have sprung from that article. It is a fact, however, that "points of doctrine" is one of the obstacles in the way of affecting a union of the believers in Newark.

Ceremonies on the Death of the Pope.—A great deal is said about the approaching death of the Pope. The following are the ceremonies which will be observed on the occasion:—When the death of the Pope is announced, the Camerlingo Cardinal repairs to the pontificial palace, not to install himself, as certain writers say, but to prove the death officially. He ascertains this without the assistance of physicians, by striking three times on the forehead of the Pope with a hammer. If, at the third summons, he receives no reply, death is certain. Science would not be satisfied with so expeditious a formality—she who recognizes no other infallible signs of death than the decomposition of the body; but science has nothing to do with mere ceremonies or etiquette. After the death of the Pope has been attested, the great bell of the capitol sounds thirty-three strokes, to proclaim to Rome and the Catholic world that the church has no longer a pastor. This bell never sounds except on solemn occasions, such as death of the Pope and opening of the Carnival.—Herald.

Proceeds of Sanitary Fairs.—The magnificent series of Sanitary Fairs, begun several months ago at Chicago, is now nearly closed. The substantial results have been in the highest degree satisfactory. The following is a tolerably accurate statement of the proceeds of the fairs: Chicago, $75,000; Cincinnati, 120,000; Boston, $147,000; Brooklyn, $300,000; Cleveland, $120,000; Buffalo, $100,000; New York, $1,200,000; St. Louis, $575,000; Philadelphia, $1,300,000; Pittsburg, $350,000; smaller fairs aggregate about $150,000. A FAST.

In accordance with our usual custom, we would invite those who are interested in our great annual campmeeting at Wilbraham, to observe Friday, Aug. 19th, as a day of fasting and prayer, that the special blessing of the Lord may rest upon this meeting. Our aid must come alone from "the high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity." Let us all look to Him for help.

Our meeting will, no doubt, be one of unusual interest and importance. Let us unite to make it the best one we ever enjoyed.

We would suggest that the time usually allotted to supper be spent in prayer; and while thus employed, let us consecrate ourselves anew to the service of the Lord. We are most rapidly approaching the great day of the Lord, when it will be decided whether we shall live forever, or die "the second death."

Camp Wilbraham.—We purpose to have a meeting on the camp-ground, at Wilbraham, Lord's day, Aug. 21st, provided the weather is favorable, at 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M., and one o'clock P. M. Those who can, will do well to come on Friday or Saturday, 19th and 20th, and put up their tents, so as to be all ready at the great meeting the following week.

Appointments.—As we purpose to get our paper off one day earlier than usual campmeeting week, those who wish to have appointments inserted should send them so that they may be received as early as Monday morning, Aug. 22d.

Worcester.—We spent Lord's day, July 24th, with the church in Worcester. There appears to be a healthy state of things in their midst. Four were baptized, and six requested prayers.

"BRETHREN, PRAY FOR US."

If Paul had need of the prayers of christians when about to engage in his conflicts with the enemies of the cross of Christ, we think we certainly need them in these days, when battling with the hosts now arrayed against Jesus and his word.

As it is our purpose to be present at the National Convention of Spiritualists at Chicago, commencing Aug. 9th, and expose the foundation of Spiritualism, we would say, as did Paul, "brethren, pray for us," that the truth may have a triumph in Chicago.

Information Wanted.—We want the post-office address of the following persons:—Geo. F. Champlin, E. Whitney, J. W. Hazen, Geo. Dodge, J. F. Champlin. Will any one who knows, please inform us?

A CALL FOR LIGHT.

Bro. Grant:—I have read the World's Crisis a few weeks in the office of the Earnest Christian, at Buffalo, and my curiosity, to say the very least, has been somewhat excited at the (to me) novel doctrines advocated therein. The spirit of investigation and inquiry is upon me, and to assist in the work I send for your paper for six months. In the Nos. I read, I saw in you what pleased me very much; viz: a disposition to notice and answer any queries that were suitable and respectful and sincere. I have never heard any of the peculiar doctrines of your class until within a few weeks. A lady at Buffalo requested me to read two books she lent me. The first doctrine, entirely new to me, was—"The soul of man is not immortal." 2nd. "The dead are unconscious."

There are two thoughts on my mind, which you will please notice in your paper.

1st. If Christ died, that is, (as I have been taught to understand) both soul and body, what power had he to raise himself up? What power has a dead thing? He says, "I have power to lay down" my life, "and I have power to take it again."

2nd. What answer can be given to the glorious anticipations of dying saints that they are going direct to a state of life and glory? Would God suffer men of such devotion and piety to be so deceived? Does deception produce such raptures? Wm. Hart.

Fowlerville, Liv. Co., N. Y.

We feel it a pleasure to respond to the inquiries of Bro. Hart, and trust he may see the glorious light now shining upon the Scriptures, and take more delight than ever in preaching the blessed hope of the gospel.

In answer to the first inquiry we would say, we find no proof in the Bible that Christ raised himself from the dead. We think such an idea exhibits its own absurdity at first sight. The passage referred to is the only one that we know of that intimates such an idea, which all vanishes when we come to examine the meaning of the word exousian, rendered in our version "power." The same word is also rendered "liberty," "authority," "right." The word occurs in Heb. 13: 10, "We have an altar, whereof they have no (exousian) right to eat which serve the tabernacle." Again in Rev. 22: 14,—"Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have (exousia) right to the tree of life." In 1 Cor. 8: 9, it is rendered liberty. "But take heed lest by any means this (exousia) liberty of yours become a stumbling-block."

In the passage under examination, Dickenson, Granville Penn, the Syriac, and several others, render it authority. Noton's translation reads, "I am commissioned to lay it down, and I am commissioned to receive it again." The Improved Version and the Emphatic Diaglott read, "I have authority to lay it down, and I have authority to receive it again."

It will be seen at a glance why the Savior had a right to receive his life again. The law had a claim only upon the guilty. Christ was innocent. Therefore he had the "right," "liberty," "authority," or "commission, to receive it again."

From whom was he "to receive it again"? "This commandment," or commission, as many render it, "have I received of my Father." Then, we think it would follow that he would "receive" his life again through the power of his Father. On this point, we find but one voice in the Scriptures. Let us turn to a few among the many witnesses: "This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we all are witnesses." Acts 2: 32. "Ye . . . killed the Prince of life, whom God hath raised from the dead; whereof we all are witnesses."—Acts 3: 15. "Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead." "And when they had fulfilled all that was written of him, they took him down from the tree, and laid him in a sepulchre. But God raised him from the dead."—Acts 13: 29, 30.

No one disputes but that it is proper to render exousia by the word power, when it will make sense, and not contradict other scriptures; but if rendered "power" in John 10: 18, it makes the passage teach an absurdity, besides contradicting all the Bible witnesses. We think this is sufficiently clear without further remarks.

In relation to the second question: "What answer can be given to the glorious anticipations of dying saints that they are going direct to a state of life and glory?" we would say in the language of Scripture,—"There is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave whither thou goest."—Eccl. 9: 10. "The living know that they shall die, but the dead know not any thing."—Eccl. 9: 5. "Man lieth down and riseth not, till the heavens be no more; they shall not awake nor be raised out of their sleep."—Job 14: 12. "In death there is no remembrance of thee."—Ps. 6: 5. "His breath goeth forth; he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish."—Ps. 146: 4. "If Christ be not raised, . . . then they that have fallen asleep in Christ are perished."—1 Cor. 15: 18. "If after the manner of men I have fought with beasts at Ephesus, what advantageth it me, if the dead rise not?"—1 Cor. 15: 32. "Let me freely speak unto you of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, . . . for David is not ascended into the heavens; . . . for David, after he had served his own generation by the will of God, fell on sleep, and was laid unto his fathers, and saw corruption; but he whom God raised again saw no corruption."—Acts 2: 29, 32, and 13: 36, 37.

"But I would not have you to be ignorant," brethren, "concerning them which are asleep; . . . for the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words."—1 Thess. 4: 13, 16–18.

Well, Bro. Hart, "what answer can be given" to all this scripture, and ten times as much more of like import? Would God suffer the Holy Spirit to move holy men to write such things if they were not true? We should say, let God be true if it proves all the impressions and visions of uninspired men to be false.

In answer to the inquiry, "Does deception produce raptures?" we would say, a person may be deceived and be happy in consequence of that deception. For instance: suppose you see one coming, whom you take to be a long-absent friend; but as he comes near he proves to be a stranger. Your joy was just as great, till you found out your mistake, as it would have been if it were your friend. So in the case of those who die in the expectation of getting their reward as soon as they are dead. They have been thus taught, and so believed; consequently their feelings are the same as they would be if it were true. On the other hand, those who die expecting to sleep in Jesus till the resurrection, at the coming of Christ, so far as our observation goes, die more calmly, peacefully and joyfully, than those who expect to go to glory when they die. We think the feelings of neither prove any thing. The Bible must decide all these points, and we have found it very plain and positive, in its declarations, that men do not go to glory when they die, but to the grave to wait till the resurrection, when the Life-giver returns.

"Marvel not at this; for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth, they that have done good unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation."—John 5: 28, 29. We do not see how language could show more clearly than this that the accountable beings, who are to be rewarded or punished, are in the graves, in the very place where the Bible says there is no knowledge. Again we read, "The sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and hell (margin—the grave) delivered up the dead which were in them; and they were judged every man according to their works."—Rev. 20: 13. Here, again, we see that the ones to be "judged" are now in their graves; consequently not yet rewarded or punished. Judgment should precede punishment and reward, and thus the Bible teaches. The judgment day is not till after the seventh angel sounds, which is a future event. In Rev. 11: 14–18, we read, "The seventh angel sounded, . . . and the nations were angry, and thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead, that they should be judged, and that thou shouldst give reward unto thy servants the prophets, and to the saints, and them that fear thy name, small and great." Hence they did not go to their reward at death. But "the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father, with his angels, and then he shall reward every man according to his works."—Matt. 16: 27.

NEW TRACTS.

We have just received two excellent tracts from Philadelphia. One is entitled,—"Forsaking all for Christ; especially Self-Love, without which Christian love cannot be perfect."

The other,—"Heirs of the world to come should not fight for this world." They are eighteen page tracts. We do not know the price of them, but they can be had by addressing Box 1199 P. O. Philadelphia, Pa.

The one on fighting is just the thing to lend your neighbor, who claims that christians should fight. Brn. will do well to send and get 50 cts. or a dollar's worth.

"ABSOLUTE RECONSTRUCTION."

The spirits and their followers propose an "absolute reconstruction" of Church, State, and Society, in all their departments. They claim the hour has come for the great work to commence. The time is evidently at hand for Satan to make his last and terrible effort against the Lord and his word; and we have no doubt but that it will be made through the seductive influence of Spiritualism.

In the Banner of Light for July 23d, 1864, in an article headed "Religion and Progress," by L. Judd Pardee, it is said:—

"And I say, if the Light cannot get into the world's Bastiles, the Bastiles must be demolished, that it may shine over their waste places, and light the workmen who build anew. I am for Force when Wisdom presents it, because I am a friend of Love and Peace.

If we are to have a new Theology, we must have a New State, the New Church (ere long to rise) to be the Mother of it. Church and State ought to be, as in essential reality every where they always have been, one."

The Spiritualists are earnestly advocating the union of Church and State, but it is a "new church" and a new state," organized out of all the existing ones.

THE CHICAGO CONVENTION.

The Spiritualists are anticipating a great meeting at the Chicago convention, commencing Aug. 9th. They hope to gain an important victory over opposing influences, and establish their system on a firm basis. A Chicago correspondent of the Banner of Light says:—

"Our spirit friends here have for a long time had in preparation, and will develop about the time of this convention, one of the grandest and most authentic demonstrations of spirit-power which has ever been made to man. It will come in a shape that no one can question, and will be for all time an evidence of the truth of this philosophy which skepticism can neither cry down nor destroy. It will be a landmark in the history of our faith; and the members of this convention will carry to their homes, and will distribute over all the world, the overwhelming evidence which this demonstration will furnish of the exalted power of the spirit-land. Yours in the faith. George A. Shufeldt, Jr.

BE CONTENT.

The following is full of common sense:—

"There was a boy who only wanted a marble. When he had the marble he only wanted a ball; when he had a ball he only wanted a top; when he had a top he only wanted a kite; and when he had marble, ball, top and kite, he was not happy. There was a man who only wanted money; when he had money he only wanted a house; when he had a house he only wanted land; when he had land he only wanted a coach; and when he had money, house, land and coach, he wanted more than ever. Be content with little, for much will have more all the world over."

When men arrive at their highest point of wisdom, they only reach the simple teaching of the Bible. On the point of contentment the Scriptures say:—"Having food and raiment, let us be therewith content."—1 Tim. 6: 8.

The richest men have only their food and raiment for all their care and toil; and they are generally far less happy and contented than the poor. It is not the amount of this world's goods that makes us happy, but rather being contented with what we have. "Godliness with contentment is great gain," said an inspired man. When we consecrate all to Jesus, and with the apostle can say, "I have learned in whatever state I am, therewith to be content," then we may "rejoice evermore," and have "peace . . . as a river." All other ways will only prove unhappy failures. "Be content with such things as ye have."—Heb. 13: 5.

THE MOVING WORLD.

This is truly "fast age." If one loses the news of one day, he finds himself quite behind the times. But the greatest progress appears to be in every thing that is unchristian. Infidelity, extravagance, pleasure parties, war, and wickedness of every description, are running a race, which nearly all the world seem anxious to witness. People are acquiring an insatiable lust after the things of the world, and losing all relish for holy things.

The following letter from Saratoga, N. Y., July 22nd, signed "Burleigh," will give a faint idea of the "moving world" in these days:—

Saratoga, July 22.

"In August there will be a raid of sportsmen in this place to attend on the races. This has now become a fixed institution of the Springs, and sporting men are to be catered for, and unusual attractions are held out to them. The politicians are also to hold important meetings here in the early part of August. The great parties are all to be represented by the central committees, leading members of which are already on the ground. The billiard saloon that connects with the Union is one of the largest in the land. It has sixteen tables of the newest combinations, and is run day and night. Billiards are taking the place of bowling, and arrangements are being made to have a room in which ladies and gentlemen can go in companies as they formerly did to the bowling saloons. Indeed, most of the gentlemen who formerly were found at the alleys can be seen in this immense saloon each morning. The man who runs this establishment is a curiosity in his way. He is well on to sixty years old, has quite a number of stores, and employs women for ten miles round making "Indian work"—baskets, bows, arrows, etc., which he sells as of Indian manufacture. He has a dozen irons in the fire and keeps a smart lookout that none of them burn.

Gambling is carried on here to a fearful rate. Thousands change hands daily, and the young men, soldiers home from the war, with their pay in their pocket, young Californians, and old men, are infatuated, and the betting is high. Near the United States Hotel is a large double-brick house. All is quiet around it. Men go in as if to a sacrifice. No sound issues from the dwelling. It is kept by Morrissey and is, out of New York, the largest gambling house in the country. It is kept in style. All the machinery is well adjusted, well oiled, and moves without friction. The table is elegant, and costly viands and wines are spread in profusion. It bears the name of a "Club House," and many public men who hold the repute and life of men in their hands are said to board there. But thousands are lost and won within that quiet retreat. Morrissey can be seen at any time at the United States, dressed in style, a short, athletic, powerful man, quiet and of few words. He came to New York in 1852, from Troy. He was then a fighter, poor, drunken and brutal. He came to whip Bill Poole and his party to whom he bore a deadly hate. He was engaged to protect the ballot boxes in a ward election. He then arranged the fight with Sullivan, and became the champion of the fancy. He has made money—is said to be worth $500,000—is a great stock operator, keeps several of the largest gambling houses in the city of New York. He is a steady man now, drinks nothing, and does not gamble himself. He has a lease of the Race Track for the races, and brings up at his own expense detectives from New York to keep pickpockets away and preserve good order.

All around this "Club House" are gambling tables, all open to the eye. A room is selected, a small semi-circular table bound with green baize, tokens to represent coin, four men to run the machine, all the dupes that can be induced to sit down, with about ten or twenty who play against the bank, but all really in the ring, with an apparent fairness in the mode, but so conducted that in nine chances to ten the bank must win and the person lose. Here from early morn, all the day long, till the small hours that tell that midnight has gone, men sit and squander money and character. Scarcely a word is spoken, and all that is in a subdued tone, and the game runs on, carrying untold wealth into the till of the bank, and despair into the heart and frenzy into the eye of the loser. Clerks, sons of noble mothers, officers who have fought bravely for the nation, young husbands and fathers, are daily carried over this moral cataract of Niagara and are seen no more.

Besides these, it has become fashionable to form clubs of wealthy men, and in a room from which all are excluded who are not invited, and have a great game of cards, with the small stake of $25 or $50 to give piquancy to the game. These men do not want money; but the excitement of chance they seek, and some go out from these scenes to deeper play."

RESPECT TO PERSONS.

My brethren, have not the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Lord of glory, with respect of persons. For if there come unto your assembly a man with a gold ring, in goodly apparel, and there come in also a poor man in vile raiment; and ye have respect to him that weareth the gay clothing, and say unto him, Sit thou here in a good place; and say to the poor, Stand thou there, or sit here under my footstool: Are ye not then partial in yourselves, and are become judges of evil thoughts? . . . But if ye have respect to persons, ye commit sin, and are convinced of the law as transgressors."—Jas. 2: 1–4, 9.

It is to be feared that the instruction given by the Holy Spirit, through the apostle James, as just read, is but little regarded in popular churches at the present day. One would think that they understood it directly the opposite of what it reads, judging from what is practised. Such things tell a sad tale, and show that vital godliness is not the ruling principle in such assemblies.

The following, among many that might be given, shows how low nominal christianity has fallen:—

"Hunting for a Seat. We know a gentleman who has on Sunday afternoons been taking walks about Zion, in New York, for the purpose of making observations, and he is prepared to make a few notes about pews. 1. All the churches outside the Methodist Episcopal that he has entered are pewed, unless Trinity be an exception. Even a Catholic church he entered he found pewed, the pew doors locked and the keys not at hand. This struck him as a great novelty. He has worshiped in Catholic churches in the Old World, and always found them free. 2. He has generally succeeded in getting a seat, though not often without being subjected to much waiting and mortification. 3. The churches in which he found the greatest difficulty were those in which there was the largest amount of "empty boxes" and the poorest preachers. 4. As a general rule the heretodox churches offer the stranger the most cordial welcome. The Episcopal churches give the least cordial one. In one of them, on Fifth Avenue, he tried three times to get a seat. One thing has particularly surprised him. A stranger may stand till the sacristan is ready to find him a place, while gentleman after gentleman passes to his seat, each eyeing him, as if to say, What business have you here? On only one occasion has a pew-holder invited him to a seat, and that was in Dr. Spring's (Presbyterian.) He mentions it as a pleasant episode in his church explorations. On only one occasion did a pew-holder say to him, as he left the church, "Come again; you will find my pew open." This is another pleasant incident; it occurred at Dr. Dowling's (Baptist)."

For the World's Crisis.

NEWARK, N. J.

The little band at "Good Samaritan Hall" are pressing onward to "the kingdom." Coming out of tribulations, they are humble in spirit, and every meeting attended by them is of a refreshing character. It is my lot to labor with this people, and, though many obstacles are in the way, God's grace is sufficient for us, and we get victory after victory, and hope to be ready for the coming of the Lord.

We now desire the prayers of all the churches, that the blessing of God may abide with us continually; that wanderers may be reclaimed; that sinners may be converted; and, that I may be a humble, faithful servant of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Yours waiting for Jesus,

July 25th, 1864. F. H. Burbank.

For the World's Crisis.

ALTON BAY CAMPMEETING.

This campmeeting last fall was one of the best of the season. I trust that it will improve the present year. A few of its good traits are worthy of notice.

It was not small and unimportant, nor was it so large as to be unwieldly and unmanageable.

The committee seemed to fear God more than they did turbulent and loud-talking men, and did not allow it to be perverted from its true object for fear of offending a few unruly and vain talkers, whose mouths ought to be stopped lest they subvert whole houses.

It was not thought advisable to get a thousand or two of brethren together, causing an expense of two or three thousand dollars per day, and then to fritter away the time preaching error one day and truth the next, displeasing God, grieving the Spirit of truth, and distracting the church for the sake of having peace with men who will not be peaceable, and satisfying men who will not be satisfied.

The time for prayer meetings was not largely taken up in listening to ungodly and backslidden singers, performing sheet music for the benefit of peddlers who had it to sell and wanted it advertised.

The circle of tents and the camp ground was not filled and cluttered up with rings and knots of loud-talking, jangling, disputing men, whose great object seemed to be to argue and find fault, rather than to seek and save the lost.

I saw no tents on the ground where the course of the committee and the meeting were publicly denounced, nor where preachers publicly characterized the labors of those who united in prayers for the salvation of sinners as "howling" their "voices away," etc., etc.

"On the first day of the week, when the disciples came together to break bread," and enjoyed a sweet and solemn season in the great tent, there was no sect or clique that refused to join in the solemn token of christian love around the table of the Lord, nor was there any opposition meeting kept up by others during the whole time.

Hence I liked Alton Bay Campmeeting. The pleasant scenery, the beautiful Lake Winnipiseogee, the convenient access by land or water, the accommodating railroad managers, the gentlemanly steamboat captains, and their willingness to reduce fares, fit the ground and please the people; the quiet of the congregation, the good-will of the community, the unity of the brethren, the harmony of the preachers, the good done in the region, the spirit of labor for sinners, and finally the rich blessing of God upon the people, all these things made it a good meeting. I may not attend many campmeetings this year, but if it please the Lord, I hope the one at Alton Bay may be one of them, and that it may be better than before. Pray for it. H. L. Hastings.

Correspondence.

From Sr. J. C. Hall.

Brethren and Sisters:—We are waiting for our Redeemer, and yearn to see him. He will come in the "clouds of heaven with power and great glory, and every eye shall see him." Then, though we may be asleep in death, the trumpet will awake us, and "our eyes shall behold him." Oh, then, what rapture will thrill us as we exclaim, "Lo! this is our God, we have waited for him." Then, as we rise to "meet the Lord in the air," and gaze down through that "sea of glass" on the terror and destruction of God's enemies, feeling that we have been "plucked as brands from the burning," how we shall wonder that we ever could have been engrossed so much with things which were to "perish with the using." How we shall wonder that we did not "always rejoice," knowing that soon we should be "present with the Lord."

Ah! we now see as "through a glass darkly" the things prepared for those who love him; and sometimes we are troubled by doubts of our love, remembering that he said, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." This is the only valid evidence we have that we love him. Am I keeping his commandments? This is my chief concern. I want to be ready each hour to welcome the Redeemer. I want to keep in such an attitude of listening watchfulness, that no unusual sound or sight, at noon of day, or dead of night, could frighten me; because my trust is in the loving mercy of my Creator, who permits me through "riches of grace" in Christ, my Savior, to feel that "spirit of adoption" which calls him Father. Praise his name. Your sister in the "blessed hope,"

Fort Hunter, N. Y. J. C. Hall.

From Bro. J. T. Dixon.

Bro. Grant:—Sunday, 17th ult. On invitation of Bro. S. P. Clark, fifteen brethren and sisters (of our school) came up from Rocky Brook (eight miles) in the forenoon to visit the Sabbath School here, and teach the children some new pieces to sing, from Bradbury's "Golden Chain." Had a very interesting time singing with and addressing the children. At eleven A. M. public worship in the Hall. The Lord helped to speak words of encouragement from Matt. 14: 31, followed by Eld. J. Northup with appropriate remarks; then a real old-fashioned love-feast, blending the dear saints' hearts together more closely in Christ. Then Bro. C. took us to his hospitable home, where his amiable and christian "helpmeet" provided a bountiful repast, and gladly welcomed us to partake of it. At 3 P. M. met with S. School in Hall again, and spent two hours very pleasantly with the children singing and exhorting them to get ready for Him who says, "Suffer such to come unto me." The visitors then left for their homes, and all felt mutually benefitted by the services. Bro. C. feelingly expressed his thanks for the visit, and spoke of the encouragement and comfort derived from the same, and he would bear all the expense of vehicles which conveyed the R. B. friends to the Hall.

Sunday evening and Saturday evening previous I preached, by invitation of Bro. Joseph Northup, at Carolina Village, two miles from Clark's Hall. Latter evening, hall full. Bro. Northup has secured a convenient hall there, and many new hearers, who seem anxious to hear about the "blessed hope." He and Bro. Clark are working in unison. I hope good preaching brethren, who think more of Christ than self, will not forget those places when passing through the State.

The social meetings in our place (Rocky Brook) have been unusually interesting of late,—are holden Wednesday and Saturday evenings,—last week averaging over thirty present, nearly all speaking for Jesus.

Sr. Hastings, the children you saw born while laboring here last winter have not died this summer! There are, thank God, a few "nursing fathers and mothers" yet left in Rocky Brook and Peace Dale. I have been with them a few Sundays, and have felt cheered to see so much evidence of life still in the old church that has passed through so many storms. O! I feel as though I loved the dear old church better than ever; i. e., such as are the church. I have had some blessed seasons with them of late, although I miss some who once mingled their voices with us in prayer and praise. Some are sleeping, others are following, whose feet must soon step down in the "dark, sullen river." God be with the sinking ones, is my prayer; and may they have the "rod and staff" to lean upon through the "dark valley." Soon they will step out on the other side.

"Pilgrim at the gate of death,
Gasping out thy waning breath,
Thrilled with pain, beset with fear,
As eternity draws near;
Dying christian, courage take;
Angels' chariots round thee wait;
Speaks death's conqueror now to thee,
'Thou shalt my salvation see!'"

To the dear saints in New York and Conn.: God richly reward you for your kindness and liberality to me while with you last fall and winter. I hope those who then started for the kingdom are still on the way Zionward. God bless those dear friends in South-east and North Salem who so kindly remembered my needs in a time of need (some of them not christians either). May those benevolent hearts soon be all given to Jesus.

Precious Jesus! how I wish I had always been more like him, more obedient, more trusting. O! how especially dear has he been to me in past years, when I have felt all earthly arms failing, and I have well nigh fainted, and been disposed to renounce my allegiance to Him even, and become very disobedient. How sweetly "he has brought my wandering spirits back." I feel to-day to say, "O God, my heart is fixed." All I am and have I dedicate anew to the Lord. I claim no merit of my own,—

"Simply to His cross I cling."

Brn., pray for me. John T. Dixon.

Clark's Mills, R. I.

From Sr. D. N. Kidder.

Dear Brethren and Sisters in Christ:—The time has come when he that thinketh he standeth must take heed lest he fall. Now is our great danger, "time of trouble;" sore trials and conflicts; severe test of our faith and also our deliverance at hand. Behold, "the great day of his wrath is come, and who shall be able to stand?" They only who stand in Christ's righteousness!

Make straight paths for your feet, brethren, look well to your lamps and see that you have a supply of good oil; for, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh." They that are ready will go in to the supper and the door will be shut. Blessed Jesus, help us to be in earnest, get ready and wait.

This time of trial that is coming on all the world to try them, will drive the true child nearer the Throne; enable him to sever the last cord that binds him to earth, while the cry will settle deep in his heart, Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly! This will evidently be the voice of the church when Jesus comes, and not a few begin to feel it already, such is their sorrow and distress.

In regard to the perils of these last days we need not go abroad or look a great way in the distance, but come right down to our own neighborhoods, families, homes and hearts—and do we not meet those trials and conflicts unsurpassed in the history of our lives heretofore? And do not all these things admonish us to walk with great care and watchfulness? I often fear that I shall fail at last, and often cry out, "Lord Jesus, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom."

Your sister in tribulation,

Bristol, N. H. D. N. Kidder.

From Bro. Ralph Phinney.

Bro. Grant:—I was two Lord's days with the brethren worshiping in Hall 18 of the Cooper Institute, New York. I found them alive to the duties of the gospel. It is the most lively church of our faith I have met with in some time. Just as soon as they have an opportunity to speak they do not wait one for another, but speak of their hopes and are happy in the faith of the very near coming of the blessed Lord. This church is well organized, and they attend to the Lord's table regularly, also to ministering to the necessity of the saints at home beside the aid of those who visit and labor among them.

I stopped with one very worthy brother, T. J. Cox, 273 West 22nd Street. Bro. and Sr. Cox both are those humble followers of the Lord who carry out the principles of the gospel in all their intercourse with the world and the children of the kingdom. We have had no special stir or revival in this section; but the brotherhood is pure and waiting and looking for the coming of the day of the Lord Jesus. Blessed is that servant who shall be ready when his Lord comes. "Be ye also ready." Ralph Phinney.

Cambria Mills, Mich.

From Sr. D. Randall.

Bro. Grant:—It is cheering in these times of trial to hear from those of like precious faith. Although we have never seen their faces, we hope the time will soon come when God's dear scattered ones will be gathered into a land where there will be no more dying, no more wars or commotions. This world's prospects look dark, but to those who are looking for their reward when Jesus comes the prospect is brightening; the distress of nations with perplexity bespeak his coming near. May we be ready. Your sister in Christ, looking for immortality when Jesus comes. Delia Randall.

ARRABELL A. PITMAN.

Died in Barnstead, N. H., May 9th, 1864, Arrabell A. Pitman, aged thirteen years and seven months.

She bore her sickness of twelve weeks patiently for one of her age. Her last days were those of great suffering, consumption being the disease that ended her days. Although we mourn her loss, we trust she sleeps in Jesus. She warned her young friends to get religion and meet her in heaven. When she was asked by the writer if she felt that Jesus had forgiven her sins, her answer was, "Yes, and I am ready to go."

May this affliction be sanctified to the weeping mother, who consigns to the grave the last child, being the eighth, together with her husband. Jesus our Life-Giver will soon come and destroy the last enemy, death. Thank God for eternal life brought to light through Christ at his coming!

NELLIE F. WELLMAN.

Died in Gloucester, R. I., May 24th, of consumption, Nellie F., only child of William H. and Susan E. Wellman, aged one year, six months, twenty-four days.

The loved one sleeps in silent gloom,
She's left us in life's earliest bloom;
The lovely flowers of summer wave
In rich profusion o'er her grave.

She's left this vale of tears and woes,
Of transient friends, oppressive foes,
To join the number of the dead,
Who sleep triumphant in their Head.

But dry thy tears; the trump will sound,
And bring the loved ones from the ground;
Then she'll come forth a glorious birth,
Fair daughter of the ransomed earth.

Funeral discourse by the writer, from Jer. 31: 16. May we all meet Nellie in Christ's kingdom.

ELD. LUTHER PAINE.

Fell asleep in Jesus, in Springfield, Mass., on the 23d day of July, Elder Luther Paine, aged seventy-three years.

Bro. P. was formerly a minister in the Methodist Episcopal church. Our aged brother was sick but five short days. He died in the faith that he should sleep but a short season ere he should awake in the likeness of Jesus, whom he loved and longed to be with.

"Saint after saint on earth
Has lived and loved and died;
And they left us one by one—
We laid them side by side.
We laid them down to sleep,
But not in hope forlorn;
We laid them but to sweetly sleep
Until that glorious morn;
Come, then, Lord Jesus, come."

A discourse was delivered on the occasion, July 26th, from Job 14: 10, by the writer.

SAMUEL WAYNE GRAVES.

Killed in battle of the Wilderness, near Spotsylvania Court House, May 12th, 1864, Samuel Wayne Graves, of the 2nd R. I. Reg., only remaining son of Samuel and Sarah I. Graves, of Apponaug, R. I., (formerly of China, Me.,) aged twenty-two years and eight months.

Far from home, he was cut down when expecting soon to return. He was a kind, loving son and brother, and death has indeed desolated his once happy home. He "shall come again from the land of the enemy." Jer. 31: 16.

The young and the loved
Have faded from our track;
We miss him and we mourn him,
But cannot lure him back;
For an iron sleep hath bound him
In its passionate embrace;
We may weep, but cannot win him
From his dreary resting place.

RUFUS HILL.

Died in Belgrade, Me., July 22d, Mr. Rufus Hill, aged forty-nine years.

Death would not relinquish his claim, and after a painful illness of a number of weeks, he quietly fell asleep. He seemed resigned, remarking to his sister that he had no desire to live. Community has lost an honest business man, society an earnest friend, and one brother and three sisters a sincere and affectionate brother, whose loss they deeply feel. May God comfort their hearts.

"Grave, the guardian of our dust,
Grave, the treasury of the skies,
Every atom of thy dust
Rests in hope again to rise.

L. L. HOWARD.

JUSTIN E. LOOMIS.

Died at Campbell Hospital, Washington, June 9th, 1864, Sergeant Justin E. Loomis, of Co. G., 109th N. Y. V., aged thirty-one years.

He fell wounded at the battle of the Wilderness. He is deeply lamented by his companions in arms, who have lost in him a warm-hearted and brave comrade. He leaves a large circle of relatives and friends to mourn his loss; but they mourn not as those without hope.

E. L. FORRESTER.

WILLIE LOCK.

Died at Hollis Centre, Me., July 22d, 1864, Willie, only son of Simon J. and Annah M. Stark, aged one year and ten months.

Services by the writer, from John 12: 24; "But if it die, it shall bring forth much fruit."

The King of the Belgians arrived at Paris on the 20th. It is announced that the object of his visit is merely to negotiate a marriage between the Count of Flanders and Princess Anne Murat.

It is asserted that Napoleon will probably go to Baden and there have an interview with the King of Prussia.

Herr Von Bismark has arrived at Vienna to attend the peace negotiations.

SPAIN.

It is reported that the Spanish Cabinet has resolved to act energetically in order to obtain entire satisfaction from Peru. It is alleged at Madrid that communications from Chili express a desire for the re-establishment of friendly relations.

Cape of Good Hope advices to July 20th, show increasing difficulties with the Kaffirs, and more fears of war, but there had been no active hostilities. The Cape authorities are making every preparation for war. The English Ministers continue to represent in Parliament that tranquility will probably be preserved.

THE DANO-GERMAN WAR.—A PRUSSIAN force, 6000 strong, entered Rendsburg on the 21st, and took possession of the town from the German Federal troops. The Federal Diet has ordered Gen. Hake to protest against the proceeding.

DOMESTIC.

New York, Aug. 2nd. The Herald's Nashville dispatch of the 31st gives a congratulatory address from Gen. Thomas to the Army of the Cumberland, on the brilliant success in the late battles. He states that our loss on the 20th was 1,733 killed, wounded and missing; on the 22nd, 3,500 and 10 cannon. The rebel loss on the 20th was 6,000, while seven stand of colors were taken. On the 22d, eighteen stand of colors were taken and 5,000 stand of arms. The rebel loss in killed was 3,200, besides 3,200 prisoners.

The same correspondent says the battle of the 28th was as complete a defeat of the rebels as that of the 22d; 642 rebel dead were buried by our forces after the battle.

The Herald's City Point (Va.) correspondent says all the combinations for the capture of the defenses commanding Petersburg were faultless. Our entire army was under arms and a majority of four corps were within a mile of the mine. The troops in the rebel defenses are now known to have been only three divisions, the others having been drawn away by the ruse. The destruction of the fort was complete and the surprise of the rebels perfect. Why their frightened and flying troops were not at once pursued immediately after the explosion, and entirely routed before they could reform and make resistance, is not easily answered.

The Herald's Army of the Potomac correspondent says rebel deserters state that the enemy was busy burying his dead all night. Their statements make out their loss much heavier than was supposed, which was fully 2,000 killed, wounded and prisoners. The treatment of the negro prisoners and wounded by the rebels is reported to have been barbarous in the extreme. Two are said to have escaped to our lines with their tongues cut out.

Justice to the negroes compels me to say that no troops made a finer charge on the first line after the explosion. It is true they fell back from the second line, but in no charge since the war have troops been under such a severe and murderous fire of musketry and shrapnel.

The Herald's correspondent, writing on the 1st inst., says the latest estimate of our loss is 3,000, of whom 1,300 are prisoners.

The 57th Mass. Regiment lost more severely than any other. The regiment is now under command of Lieut. Doty. The 4th Rhode Island, 31st and 32d Maine were captured almost entirely. The policy of withdrawing our troops in open day is bitterly discussed by our officers. No advantage was gained by the rebels until our troops commenced falling back.

The Tribune's Washington dispatch says it is believed that the force sent by Lee to the north side of the James river has not returned to Petersburg, but has gone to the Rappahannock.

The Tribune's correspondent, dating 1st inst., says whole companies of rebel deserters came in on Saturday, and that other important movements are on foot.

Cairo, Ill., Aug. 2d. Nearly 1,000 exchanged Union prisoners from Red River country arrived at New Orleans on the 25th ult., the majority belonging to Iowa and Indiana. They present a pitiable appearance, hatless, shoeless, and many without sufficient clothing to cover their nakedness. Many have been twelve or sixteen months in captivity. The first installment was from the prison pen at Tyler, Texas, where from 4,000 to 6,000 are confined in a stockade fort, at the rate of 1,000 to an acre, and their treatment is cruel and shameful beyond description. Many officers are in irons, and all are suffering for food, medicine and clothing. Two hundred of these prisoners have been vaccinated for prevention of small pox with unhealthy virus, which inoculated them with the most loathsome diseases.

Immediately upon the arrival of those released, the representatives of the Western Sanitary Commission and the State Agents of Iowa and Indiana went to work to alleviate their condition.

Nashville, Aug. 3d, 1864. Gen. Stoneman's raid along the Macon Railroad met with a great success in cutting the rebel line of communication and thus completely isolating Atlanta. But I regret the necessity to add that one division of cavalry, while returning, met with a serious disaster. The Macon Railroad was torn up for eighteen miles, the rails twisted, the ties, tanks, bridges and depots burned, and the road rendered useless for months to come.

Gen. Edward McCook's division, returning by way of Newman, captured a large wagon train, filled with much valuable private property belonging to rebel officers, and among other property was Gen. Hood's papers and a quantity of whiskey, all of which fell into the hands of the General and his forces.

About this time the rebels, under Gen. Ransom, attacked Gen. McCook, and a fight ensued, in which McCook's command was routed and the greater part of his command captured. About five hundred of the troops have reported at Marietta, and give fearful stories of losses. The command at starting numbered three thousand two hundred. Gen. McCook is reported killed.

Washington, Aug. 3. The republican extra says dispatches from Harper's Ferry, dated at 9 P. M. yesterday, state that McCauseland's cavalry and artillery, 2000 strong, attacked Generals Averill and Kelly at Cumberland with great fury, evidently expecting to demolish them.

The rebels were promptly received, repulsed and completely routed. Gen. Averill captured several caissons, and a large number of wagons heavily laden with spoils. It is also reported that one piece of artillery was captured from the rebels.

Philadelphia, Aug. 3. Disturbances occurred this evening in the vicinity of Seventh and Pine streets, which threatened to become a formidable riot. Some firemen on their way to a fire were attacked by a party of negroes and a general fight ensued, which led to several arrests by the police.

New York, Aug. 3. The World's special dispatch says: The Potomac country this side of Harper's Ferry is becoming again the scene of considerable interest. This last raid is probably by the ubiquitous Moseby, though it may be by a portion of the rebel cavalry force reported to be gathering at Leesburg. The disposition of our troops is such that the enemy will be obliged to confine his demonstrations along the river banks.

It is fully confirmed, late to-night that the rebel cavalry yesterday did capture a stage which left Washington for Frederick, and that they also cut the Independent Telegraph line running south of that place. But our forces are after them.

New York, Aug. 5. The steamer Dudley Buck, from Newbern 1st, has arrived. The expedition sent out by Gen. Palmer to Chowan river under Lieut. Wild had returned with one hundred bales of cotton and a large amount of tobacco captured from the enemy, from which the Treasury Department will realize over $100,000. The expedition also recaptured the steamer Arrow and some prisoners, besides destroying a large amount of rebel commissary stores.

The Herald's Nashville correspondent, writing on the 28th ult., says Gen. Sherman's army was in motion on that day, though it was contraband to telegraph it at the time. It was moving by the left flank, and those conversant with the situation will comprehend the importance of such a movement. Gen. Sherman's delay before Atlanta was for the only purpose of keeping the rebels there, in which he has succeeded admirably.

The Nashville Union says of the battle before Atlanta on the 28th ult., that the rebels made several assaults upon our fortifications in solid columns, but were each time repulsed, losing heavily. The greater portion of the dead and wounded fell into our hands.

New York, Aug. 6. A New Orleans letter of the 30th ult. says information has been received at head quarters that Admiral Farragut had passed Forts Morgan and Gaines, and it is supposed that he commands the entrance to Mobile Bay and is bombarding the upper defenses. The Admiral has six iron clads now, and two more left here to-day to join him.

The following is taken from the Richmond Sentinel.

Mobile, Aug. 6. Seventeen of the enemy's ships—fourteen ships and three iron-clads—passed Fort Morgan this morning. The Tecumseh, a monitor, was sunk by Fort Morgan. The Tennessee surrendered after a desperate fight. The Selma was captured and the Gaines beached.

The enemy's fleet have approached the city. A monitor has been engaging Fort Powell all day.

Harper's Ferry, Aug. 3. Brig. Gen. Kelley reports that a scout has just arrived at New Creek, and reports that Gen. Averill overtook the enemy near Moorefield yesterday and attacked him, capturing all of his artillery and 500 prisoners.

Washington, Aug. 7. The rebels, on Saturday morning, sprung the mine by which they expected to blow up Fort Warren, before Petersburg, but were unsuccessful, as the fort was only partially destroyed. At the time of the explosion our men were ready for them, having previously evacuated the place and mounted Quaker guns. As soon as the storming party reached the crater made by the explosion, a most terrific enfilading fire opened on them, compelling all who reached the breach to surrender.

GENERAL CAMPMEETING AT WILBRAHAM, MASS.

Providence permitting, a GENERAL campmeeting will commence at Wilbraham, on the old ground upon the hill, Monday, August 22d, and continue one week.

Ample accommodations will be provided for board and horse keeping. Board at 70 cents per day. Single meal,—breakfast or supper,—25 cents; dinner 30 cents. The boarding department is under the charge of the Committee, and any profits accruing from the same will go to the support of the meeting.

Those going from Boston to the campmeeting can take the 4.15 A. M. train at the Boston and Worcester depot, and arrive at the camp-ground at 7.27 A. M., or they can take the 2.30 P. M. express train, and arrive in Worcester at 4 P. M., and then change to an accommodation train, which leaves Worcester at 4.15, and arrives at Wilbraham at 6.23 P. M. No other trains stop at the camp-ground.

Arrangements have been made with the Eastern R. R. Co., by which those taking the cars from Portsmouth and intermediate places for Boston, paying full fares at the ticket offices, can have FREE RETURN PASSES by application to Geo. T. Adams, 167 Hanover street, Boston, or to him on the camp-ground.

On the Conn. R. R. from South Vernon, and intermediate places to Springfield, those going to campmeeting will buy a common ticket, and BE SURE AND ASK THE CONDUCTOR for a return CHECK from Wilbraham campmeeting. This Check must be endorsed by Geo. T. Adams, at the Wilbraham campmeeting. As it is most likely that the R. R. Co. from Bellows Falls to South Vernon will do the same as the Conn. R. R., all who come from Bellows Falls will also please ask the Conductor for a return pass.

On the Western R. R., and also the Worcester, we expect fare will be reduced one third, so that the fare will be about $3.40 from Boston to camp-ground and return. Particulars next week.

The cars leave Springfield for the camp-ground, (distance nine miles), at 7.15 and 11.15 A. M., and 5 P. M.

WILBRAHAM CAMPMEETING.

The President of the Western R. R. gives encouragement to expect a reduction of the fare one-third for our Wilbraham meeting. This, at their low price, will be about the same as the reduction of one-half on other roads. It will be only two cents a mile. If we get this reduction, which I think is very sure (will say certain in next paper), you can make up your minds to come; and if the fare is not reduced, you never will know the difference. It is your duty to come. It is your meeting; for all have helped pay for the things that are there, and we are making new and important improvements for your comfort, which you will see when you get there.

All who want to send tents or other freight ahead of their coming, can direct to my care, and it will be seen to until you come. We are making arrangements to supply with hot water those who want to board themselves, and who live so far off that they cannot bring conveniences with them. Old tent places will be reserved until Wednesday noon, especially those in front of the circle. Tents erected the Saturday before will be safe until Monday, as a number of the brethren will stay on the ground over the Sabbath. Bring plenty of clothes, and leave your knick-knacks and finery at home. Campmeeting is no place to show off, or court favor of the world.

I expect a good meeting. If we all strive for peace, we shall have it certainly.

HIRAM MUNGER.

RUTLAND TO WILBRAHAM.

We are happy to say to all who wish to attend the Wilbraham campmeeting via. Rutland, Vt., and Bellows Falls, etc., that free return tickets will be given from Bellows Falls to Rutland by applying to the conductor on the way down. As free return tickets will probably be furnished from Springfield to Bellows Falls, the way is now open for visiting Wilbraham from Rutland for fare one way, which will not exceed $5.50. Shall we not have a goodly representation, then, from North Western Vermont? Come,—it may be our last gathering.

Meeting of the Advent Christian Association.

The fifth annual meeting of this Society will be held at Wilbraham Grove, commencing at 4 o'clock P. M., Tuesday, Aug. 23d, 1864.

A full representation from all churches co-operating with this Society, and a full attendance of preachers thus co-operating is desirable at this meeting. Questions too important to admit of neglect or indifference on the part of the churches scattered abroad, or of the ministry, will come before this meeting. Does the Constitution require amendment? Shall there be any change in the editorial management of the Crisis? To whom as officers of the Society shall we intrust the funds and various interests of the same for the coming year? These, among many others that will arise, are questions to be decided at this meeting. Let no trifling pecuniary consideration, nor loss of time, prevent a general gathering of the friends of this Association. Each church (i. e., society of believers in Jesus Christ) co-operating, is entitled to one delegate, and one additional delegate for every fifty members above the number of twenty-five members.

Remember ☞ That all delegates sent by churches to the Advent Christian Association must be furnished with written credentials, or forfeit their right to membership. ☜

H. F. CARPENTER, Clerk.
Rutland, Vt., July 7th, 1864.

Meeting of the Board.

The Board of the Advent Christian Association will meet at Wilbraham Grove, Tuesday, Aug. 23d, 1864, at 9 o'clock, A. M. Punctual attendance requested.

H. F. CARPENTER, Clerk.

General Western Campmeeting in Amboy, Illinois.

The healthful and life-giving interest of the Advent cause in the West is young and weak. Herculean work is to be done. The whole community is to be aroused by the gospel of the kingdom, and prepared for the judgment, or perish! Let us take upon our very heart of hearts this work, and do it. Do it bravely and heroically. Do not flinch or falter.

Come, then, to the general camp at Amboy, Aug. 29th. Let us sit in council. Let us impart new courage to each other in our work. Let us pray for a revival of the work of God. Let us use the gospel means to save souls from death. Let us not be satisfied without fifty or a hundred conversions and baptisms at Amboy. Pray for this. Expect it. Come to work for it. And let us send out a new inspiration and life, all through this great West, on the truth of the coming kingdom.

Ho, ye sleepers, "hid away among the stuff," come out and show yourselves! Ye timid ones, gather up courage, and come. Lovers of this present world, shake off the earthly, and seek the heavenly and divine. Ye double-minded, come, and get established. Perishing backsliders, come, and eat again at your Father's table. Sinners, come! Come all! Come from beyond the River, the Father of waters. Come! Come from the wide spreading prairies of Illinois. Come from the bluffs, valleys, and prairies of Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota, Michigan, and elsewhere. Come all who can and share in our glorious feast of tabernacles in Amboy.

We shall provide for horsekeeping at reasonable rates. Also, a table will be provided for any that wish board at reasonable rates. Board and lodging also can be got in the village near by. Lumber can be secured for family tents by writing to Eld. D. S. Clark at Amboy. The sides can be made of boards and the roof of cotton cloth. It will not be injured for other use afterwards. The boarding tents will be under the direction of the meeting, and the profits go to sustain the expenses of the camp-ground, etc.

Well, brethren, friends, one and all, we say once more, come up to the feast. Let this be the greatest and best meeting we have ever had in the West.

D. S. CLARK,
J. V. HIMES,
} Committee.

To all whom it may Concern.

Notice is hereby given that meetings are held in Franklin Hall, Dansville, N. Y., every Sunday, with preaching every alternate Sunday. Also prayer meetings every Thursday evening. Pilgrims are always welcome among us.

Grove Meeting.

The Lord permitting, I will hold a grove meeting on the farm of Bro. Alman W. Gage, in West Brattleboro, Vt., Sunday, August 14th. Brethren from abroad are invited to attend.

Those coming from the East on the same line, will do the same. Those coming on the Lacrosse line will leave the cars at Kilburn City, and take stage to Baraboo,—twelve miles; thence by stage to Okee. Those further East, on the same line, can do the same. Those coming with teams from Dubuque region will come by the way of Mineral Point to Sauk, thence to the meeting. Okee is five miles from where the meeting was last year, and three miles from Lodi.

O. S. KNAPP,
C. STONE,
W. SHELDON,
} Committee of Arrangements.

N. B. If it is impossible to bring tents, bring good provision and bedding, and we will try to furnish shelter, provided all such will drop me a line by the 25th of August, at Baraboo, Wis., so that I may know how matters stand. Don't omit to write, stating how many will come with you.

W. SHELDON.

Campmeeting.

There will be a campmeeting in Wolcott, Ct., commencing Sept. 5th, and continuing through the week and over the following Sabbath, on land owned by Bro. Hector Smith. This meeting will be in a beautiful grove near the highway, with an excellent spring of water on the ground, and with every other convenience desirable to make it an object for the brethren and sisters to come.

This is an entirely new field, and hopes are entertained that both preachers and brethren and sisters will come filled with faith that God will bless the effort to the saving of some. Bro. Smith and wife have stood almost alone in this place for twenty years witnesses to the truth of the Savior's speedy coming, and now ask the co-operation of the brethren while he makes this effort to benefit his fellow men.

We hope there will be a general rally of all the brethren and sisters from the surrounding towns. Come bringing your tents, and stay through the meeting. Brethren coming by Railroad east or west, will stop at Bristol. This is on the Hartford, Providence, and Fishkill R. R., where teams will be in readiness to carry passengers to the ground. Those coming on the Canal Road will stop at Southington, where they will find conveyance. Other arrangements noticed hereafter.

For the Brethren, RALPH WILLIAMS.

Campmeeting.

There will be a campmeeting in Savoy, commencing Aug. 29th, and continuing one week, on the old battle ground at Bro. Noah Mirick's. Horse keeping will be furnished by Bro. Mirick. There will be a victualing tent on the ground, where food can be had by the week or day, or single meal, or otherwise. As cotton cloth is so high, we do not expect brethren can get tents unless they have old ones. If you have tents, bring them; but come well provided with buffalos, quilts and blankets, and a place will be provided to spread them under shelter.

Come, brethren, let there be a general rally. Come with warm hearts, settle all difficulties, banish all hardness. Our campmeetings are almost done. Soon notice will be given from head quarters to go into camp on the new earth. No preaching brethren are engaged. We want all to come who love God and wait for his Son, and who will give meat in due season—the last crowning truths of the gospel.

H. HADLOCK, for the Church.

Wisconsin Annual Conference.

The "Advent Christian Conference" will hold its yearly session in connection with the Wisconsin Campmeeting, at Okee, Columbia Co., Wis., twenty miles north west from Madison, by the way of Lodi, beginning September 11th, 1864.

Let every church send delegates, and every minister be in attendance if possible; otherwise be sure to report by letter. Churches and ministers who have not yet united, should be sure to do so this year, that we may move in order and harmony, and consequently with greater strength for good. Delegates should bring letters of appointment from churches, and ministers with whom we are not acquainted should bring letters of commendation.

Letters may be sent to me at Baraboo, Sauk Co., Wis.

W. SHELDON, Secretary of Conf.

Tent Meeting.

I will commence a meeting at Havana, Mason Co., Ill., Aug. 17th, and continue over the following Sunday. I shall come with the mission tent, and shall try to arrange to have some one help me in preaching the word. We hope to see a general gathering of the friends in that part of the State. Come, brethren, lay aside the cares of the world for a little season, and dedicate a few days of remaining time to the work of the Lord. Let your prayers go up continually, that good may be done and souls saved as the result of this effort.

WM. MCCULLOCK, Evangelist.

Campmeeting in Wisconsin.

Probably our Wisconsin campmeeting will be held at Okee, Columbia Co., Wis., beginning on Sunday, Sept. 11th. Tents to be erected on Saturday, the 10th. Despite the hard times, we look for a grand rally. Particulars in time.

For the Committee, W. SHELDON.

Agency for Maine.

Having been solicited to take the agency for Maine of Bro. Himes' "New Chart of Daniel and John," I would say to any and all in Maine who wish it, that I am prepared to furnish it at the regular [illegible] price, $5.00, and to preachers (or others who wish them to sell) at a liberal discount. Address orders to I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.

A LIBERAL OFFER.

Being satisfied that time is short, and that what is done must be done quickly; and feeling anxious to do what we can to arouse a sleeping world and church, we make the following liberal offer:—

Any one who will send three or more new subscribers to the Crisis for six months or one year, with advance pay for the same, shall receive one third the value of the money sent, in any of our books and tracts they may select. For instance, if they send three dollars, they receive one dollar's worth of books or tracts; for six dollars, we send them two dollars' worth; for twelve dollars, four dollars' worth, etc.

Let every reader take hold of the work in earnest, and help scatter tracts, books and papers like autumnal leaves.

Obituaries.

ARRABELL A. PITMAN.

Died in Barnstead, N. H., May 9th, 1864, Arrabell A. Pitman, aged thirteen years and seven months.

She bore her sickness of twelve weeks patiently for one of her age. Her last days were those of great suffering, consumption being the disease that ended her days. Although we mourn her loss, we trust she sleeps in Jesus. She warned her young friends to get religion and meet her in heaven. When she was asked by the writer if she felt that Jesus had forgiven her sins, her answer was, "Yes, and I am ready to go."

May this affliction be sanctified to the weeping mother, who consigns to the grave the last child, being the eighth, together with her husband. Jesus our Life-Giver will soon come and destroy the last enemy, death. Thank God for eternal life brought to light through Christ at his coming!

R. W. CASWELL.

NELLIE F. WELLMAN.

Died in Gloucester, R. I., May 24th, of consumption, Nellie F., only child of William H. and Susan E. Wellman, aged one year, six months, twenty-four days.

The loved one sleeps in silent gloom,
She's left us in life's earliest bloom;
The lovely flowers of summer wave
In rich profusion o'er her grave.

She's left this vale of tears and woes,
Of transient friends, oppressive foes,
To join the number of the dead,
Who sleep triumphant in their Head.

But dry thy tears; the trump will sound,
And bring the loved ones from the ground;
Then she'll come forth a glorious birth,
Fair daughter of the ransomed earth.

Funeral discourse by the writer, from Jer. 31: 16. May we all meet Nellie in Christ's kingdom.

M. R. PHETTEPLACE.

ELD. LUTHER PAINE.

Fell asleep in Jesus, in Springfield, Mass., on the 23d day of July, Elder Luther Paine, aged seventy-three years.

Bro. P. was formerly a minister in the Methodist Episcopal church. Our aged brother was sick but five short days. He died in the faith that he should sleep but a short season ere he should awake in the likeness of Jesus, whom he loved and longed to be with.

"Saint after saint on earth
Has lived and loved and died;
And they left us one by one—
We laid them side by side.
We laid them down to sleep,
But not in hope forlorn;
We laid them but to sweetly sleep
Until that glorious morn;
Come, then, Lord Jesus, come."

A discourse was delivered on the occasion, July 26th, from Job 14: 10, by the writer.

SAMUEL WAYNE GRAVES.

Killed in battle of the Wilderness, near Spotsylvania Court House, May 12th, 1864, Samuel Wayne Graves, of the 2nd R. I. Reg., only remaining son of Samuel and Sarah I. Graves, of Apponaug, R. I., (formerly of China, Me.,) aged twenty-two years and eight months.

Far from home, he was cut down when expecting soon to return. He was a kind, loving son and brother, and death has indeed desolated his once happy home. He "shall come again from the land of the enemy." Jer. 31: 16.

The young and the loved
Have faded from our track;
We miss him and we mourn him,
But cannot lure him back;
For an iron sleep hath bound him
In its passionate embrace;
We may weep, but cannot win him
From his dreary resting place.

RUFUS HILL.

Died in Belgrade, Me., July 22d, Mr. Rufus Hill, aged forty-nine years.

Death would not relinquish his claim, and after a painful illness of a number of weeks, he quietly fell asleep. He seemed resigned, remarking to his sister that he had no desire to live. Community has lost an honest business man, society an earnest friend, and one brother and three sisters a sincere and affectionate brother, whose loss they deeply feel. May God comfort their hearts.

"Grave, the guardian of our dust,
Grave, the treasury of the skies,
Every atom of thy dust
Rests in hope again to rise.

L. L. HOWARD.

JUSTIN E. LOOMIS.

Died at Campbell Hospital, Washington, June 9th, 1864, Sergeant Justin E. Loomis, of Co. G., 109th N. Y. V., aged thirty-one years.

He fell wounded at the battle of the Wilderness. He is deeply lamented by his companions in arms, who have lost in him a warm-hearted and brave comrade. He leaves a large circle of relatives and friends to mourn his loss; but they mourn not as those without hope.

E. L. FORRESTER.

WILLIE LOCK.

Died at Hollis Centre, Me., July 22d, 1864, Willie, only son of Simon J. and Annah M. Stark, aged one year and ten months.

Services by the writer, from John 12: 24; "But if it die, it shall bring forth much fruit."

From Liverpool the 21st ult.

FRANCE.

The French Government has addressed a circular to the various Powers, inviting them to participate in an International Congress, to be held next autumn, for the purpose of regulating telegraphic communication in Europe.

The King of the Belgians arrived at Paris on the 20th. It is announced that the object of his visit is merely to negotiate a marriage between the Count of Flanders and Princess Anne Murat.

It is asserted that Napoleon will probably go to Baden and there have an interview with the King of Prussia.

ITALY.

Garibaldi left Ischia on the 19th for Caprera, apparently in bad health.

DENMARK.

The Danish blockade of the German ports was raised on the 21st.

The Diet at Frankfort has adopted by a large majority a resolution calling on the Duke of Augustenberg to substantiate his claims to Schleswig-Holstein.

Herr Von Bismark has arrived at Vienna to attend the peace negotiations.

SPAIN.

It is reported that the Spanish Cabinet has resolved to act energetically in order to obtain entire satisfaction from Peru. It is alleged at Madrid that communications from Chili express a desire for the re-establishment of friendly relations.

Cape of Good Hope advices to July 20th, show increasing difficulties with the Kaffirs, and more fears of war, but there had been no active hostilities. The Cape authorities are making every preparation for war. The English Ministers continue to represent in Parliament that tranquility will probably be preserved.

THE DANO-GERMAN WAR.—A PRUSSIAN force, 6000 strong, entered Rendsburg on the 21st, and took possession of the town from the German Federal troops. The Federal Diet has ordered Gen. Hake to protest against the proceeding.

TWO DAYS LATER.

The Independence Belge says Mr. Slidell had left Paris on a visit to Napoleon at Vichy.

THE DANO-GERMAN QUESTION.—The first sitting of the Conference was held on the 26th. Rechberg and Bismark were present.

The following resolution was unanimously carried in the Stuttgard Chambers: "We solemnly protest against the forcible occupation of Rendsberg by the Prussians, and request the Government in conjunction with other States to oppose this violence, the necessary means for the purpose improving as peace prospects grow more certain."

The Austrian Emperor has received Bismark. He will remain in Vienna, and take part in the peace negotiations.

A Vienna dispatch says of the Conference: The Austrian, Russian and Danish Plenipotentiaries met on Monday. An interchange of views took place, which may influence future negotiations.

PORTUGAL.

The ports will be opened shortly for the free importation of grain, in consequence of the scarcity of the harvest.

TURKEY.

The Porte has closed the Protestant missionary establishment, arresting the converts. The American Missionary Societies have re-opened their establishments. The Protestant religion is greatly spreading among the Musselmen.

DOMESTIC.

New York, Aug. 2nd. The Herald's Nashville dispatch of the 31st gives a congratulatory address from Gen. Thomas to the Army of the Cumberland, on the brilliant success in the late battles. He states that our loss on the 20th was 1,733 killed, wounded and missing; on the 22nd, 3,500 and 10 cannon. The rebel loss on the 20th was 6,000, while seven stand of colors were taken. On the 22d, eighteen stand of colors were taken and 5,000 stand of arms. The rebel loss in killed was 3,200, besides 3,200 prisoners.

The same correspondent says the battle of the 28th was as complete a defeat of the rebels as that of the 22d; 642 rebel dead were buried by our forces after the battle.

The Herald's City Point (Va.) correspondent says all the combinations for the capture of the defenses commanding Petersburg were faultless. Our entire army was under arms and a majority of four corps were within a mile of the mine. The troops in the rebel defenses are now known to have been only three divisions, the others having been drawn away by the ruse. The destruction of the fort was complete and the surprise of the rebels perfect. Why their frightened and flying troops were not at once pursued immediately after the explosion, and entirely routed before they could reform and make resistance, is not easily answered.

The Herald's Army of the Potomac correspondent says rebel deserters state that the enemy was busy burying his dead all night. Their statements make out their loss much heavier than was supposed, which was fully 2,000 killed, wounded and prisoners. The treatment of the negro prisoners and wounded by the rebels is reported to have been barbarous in the extreme. Two are said to have escaped to our lines with their tongues cut out.

Justice to the negroes compels me to say that no troops made a finer charge on the first line after the explosion. It is true they fell back from the second line, but in no charge since the war have troops been under such a severe and murderous fire of musketry and shrapnel.

The Herald's correspondent, writing on the 1st inst., says the latest estimate of our loss is 3,000, of whom 1,300 are prisoners.

The 57th Mass. Regiment lost more severely than any other. The regiment is now under command of Lieut. Doty. The 4th Rhode Island, 31st and 32d Maine were captured almost entirely. The policy of withdrawing our troops in open day is bitterly discussed by our officers. No advantage was gained by the rebels until our troops commenced falling back.

The Tribune's Washington dispatch says it is believed that the force sent by Lee to the north side of the James river has not returned to Petersburg, but has gone to the Rappahannock.

The Tribune's correspondent, dating 1st inst., says whole companies of rebel deserters came in on Saturday, and that other important movements are on foot.

Cairo, Ill., Aug. 2d. Nearly 1,000 exchanged Union prisoners from Red River country arrived at New Orleans on the 25th ult., the majority belonging to Iowa and Indiana. They present a pitiable appearance, hatless, shoeless, and many without sufficient clothing to cover their nakedness. Many have been twelve or sixteen months in captivity. The first installment was from the prison pen at Tyler, Texas, where from 4,000 to 6,000 are confined in a stockade fort, at the rate of 1,000 to an acre, and their treatment is cruel and shameful beyond description. Many officers are in irons, and all are suffering for food, medicine and clothing. Two hundred of these prisoners have been vaccinated for prevention of small pox with unhealthy virus, which inoculated them with the most loathsome diseases.

Immediately upon the arrival of those released, the representatives of the Western Sanitary Commission and the State Agents of Iowa and Indiana went to work to alleviate their condition.

Nashville, Aug. 3d, 1864. Gen. Stoneman's raid along the Macon Railroad met with a great success in cutting the rebel line of communication and thus completely isolating Atlanta. But I regret the necessity to add that one division of cavalry, while returning, met with a serious disaster. The Macon Railroad was torn up for eighteen miles, the rails twisted, the ties, tanks, bridges and depots burned, and the road rendered useless for months to come.

Gen. Edward McCook's division, returning by way of Newman, captured a large wagon train, filled with much valuable private property belonging to rebel officers, and among other property was Gen. Hood's papers and a quantity of whiskey, all of which fell into the hands of the General and his forces.

About this time the rebels, under Gen. Ransom, attacked Gen. McCook, and a fight ensued, in which McCook's command was routed and the greater part of his command captured. About five hundred of the troops have reported at Marietta, and give fearful stories of losses. The command at starting numbered three thousand two hundred. Gen. McCook is reported killed.

Washington, Aug. 3. The republican extra says dispatches from Harper's Ferry, dated at 9 P. M. yesterday, state that McCauseland's cavalry and artillery, 2000 strong, attacked Generals Averill and Kelly at Cumberland with great fury, evidently expecting to demolish them.

The rebels were promptly received, repulsed and completely routed. Gen. Averill captured several caissons, and a large number of wagons heavily laden with spoils. It is also reported that one piece of artillery was captured from the rebels.

Philadelphia, Aug. 3. Disturbances occurred this evening in the vicinity of Seventh and Pine streets, which threatened to become a formidable riot. Some firemen on their way to a fire were attacked by a party of negroes and a general fight ensued, which led to several arrests by the police.

New York, Aug. 3. The World's special dispatch says: The Potomac country this side of Harper's Ferry is becoming again the scene of considerable interest. This last raid is probably by the ubiquitous Moseby, though it may be by a portion of the rebel cavalry force reported to be gathering at Leesburg. The disposition of our troops is such that the enemy will be obliged to confine his demonstrations along the river banks.

It is fully confirmed late to-night that the rebel cavalry yesterday did capture a stage which left Washington for Frederick, and that they also cut the Independent Telegraph line running south of that place. But our forces are after them.

New York, Aug. 5. The steamer Dudley Buck, from Newbern 1st, has arrived. The expedition sent out by Gen. Palmer to Chowan river under Lieut. Wild had returned with one hundred bales of cotton and a large amount of tobacco captured from the enemy, from which the Treasury Department will realize over $100,000. The expedition also recaptured the steamer Arrow and some prisoners, besides destroying a large amount of rebel commissary stores.

The Herald's Nashville correspondent, writing on the 28th ult., says Gen. Sherman's army was in motion on that day, though it was contraband to telegraph it at the time. It was moving by the left flank, and those conversant with the situation will comprehend the importance of such a movement. Gen. Sherman's delay before Atlanta was for the only purpose of keeping the rebels there, in which he has succeeded admirably.

The Nashville Union says of the battle before Atlanta on the 28th ult., that the rebels made several assaults upon our fortifications in solid columns, but were each time repulsed, losing heavily. The greater portion of the dead and wounded fell into our hands.

New York, Aug. 6. A New Orleans letter of the 30th ult. says information has been received at head quarters that Admiral Farragut had passed Forts Morgan and Gaines, and it is supposed that he commands the entrance to Mobile Bay and is bombarding the upper defenses. The Admiral has six iron clads now, and two more left here to-day to join him.

The following is taken from the Richmond Sentinel.

Mobile, Aug. 6. Seventeen of the enemy's ships—fourteen ships and three iron-clads—passed Fort Morgan this morning. The Tecumseh, a monitor, was sunk by Fort Morgan. The Tennessee surrendered after a desperate fight. The Selma was captured and the Gaines beached.

The enemy's fleet have approached the city. A monitor has been engaging Fort Powell all day.

Harper's Ferry, Aug. 3. Brig. Gen. Kelley reports that a scout has just arrived at New Creek, and reports that Gen. Averill overtook the enemy near Moresfield yesterday and attacked him, capturing all of his artillery and 500 prisoners.

Washington, Aug. 7. The rebels, on Saturday morning, sprung the mine by which they expected to blow up Fort Warren, before Petersburg, but were unsuccessful, as the fort was only partially destroyed. At the time of the explosion our men were ready for them, having previously evacuated the place and mounted Quaker guns. As soon as the storming party reached the crater made by the explosion, a most terrific enfilading fire opened on them, compelling all who reached the breach to surrender.

Notices.

GENERAL CAMPMEETING AT WILBRAHAM, MASS.

Providence permitting, a GENERAL campmeeting will commence at Wilbraham, on the old ground upon the hill, Monday, August 22d, and continue one week.

Ample accommodations will be provided for board and horse keeping. Board at 70 cents per day. Single meal,—breakfast or supper,—25 cents; dinner 30 cents. The boarding department is under the charge of the Committee, and any profits accruing from the same will go to the support of the meeting.

Those going from Boston to the campmeeting can take the 4.15 A. M. train at the Boston and Worcester depot, and arrive at the camp-ground at 7.27 A. M., or they can take the 2.30 P. M. express train, and arrive in Worcester at 4 P. M., and then change to an accommodation train, which leaves Worcester at 4.15, and arrives at Wilbraham at 6.23 P. M. No other trains stop at the camp-ground.

Arrangements have been made with the Eastern R. R. Co., by which those taking the cars from Portsmouth and intermediate places for Boston, paying full fares at the ticket offices, can have FREE RETURN PASSES by application to Geo. T. Adams, 167 Hanover street, Boston, or to him on the camp-ground.

On the Conn. R. R. from South Vernon, and intermediate places to Springfield, those going to campmeeting will buy a common ticket, and BE SURE AND ASK THE CONDUCTOR for a return CHECK from Wilbraham campmeeting. This Check must be endorsed by Geo. T. Adams, at the Wilbraham campmeeting. As it is most likely that the R. R. Co. from Bellows Falls to South Vernon will do the same as the Conn. R. R., all who come from Bellows Falls will also please ask the Conductor for a return pass.

On the Western R. R., and also the Worcester, we expect fare will be reduced one third, so that the fare will be about $3.40 from Boston to camp-ground and return. Particulars next week.

The cars leave Springfield for the camp-ground, (distance nine miles), at 7.15 and 11.15 A. M., and 5 P. M.

WILBRAHAM CAMPMEETING.

The President of the Western R. R. gives encouragement to expect a reduction of the fare one-third for our Wilbraham meeting. This, at their low price, will be about the same as the reduction of one-half on other roads. It will be only two cents a mile. If we get this reduction, which I think is very sure (will say certain in next paper), you can make up your minds to come; and if the fare is not reduced, you never will know the difference. It is your duty to come. It is your meeting; for all have helped pay for the things that are there, and we are making new and important improvements for your comfort, which you will see when you get there.

All who want to send tents or other freight ahead of their coming, can direct to my care, and it will be seen to until you come. We are making arrangements to supply with hot water those who want to board themselves, and who live so far off that they cannot bring conveniences with them. Old tent places will be reserved until Wednesday noon, especially those in front of the circle. Tents erected the Saturday before will be safe until Monday, as a number of the brethren will stay on the ground over the Sabbath. Bring plenty of clothes, and leave your knick-knacks and finery at home. Campmeeting is no place to show off, or court favor of the world.

I expect a good meeting. If we all strive for peace, we shall have it certainly.

HIRAM MUNGER.

RUTLAND TO WILBRAHAM.

We are happy to say to all who wish to attend the Wilbraham campmeeting via. Rutland, Vt., and Bellows Falls, etc., that free return tickets will be given from Bellows Falls to Rutland by applying to the conductor on the way down. As free return tickets will probably be furnished from Springfield to Bellows Falls, the way is now open for visiting Wilbraham from Rutland for fare one way, which will not exceed $5.50. Shall we not have a goodly representation, then, from North Western Vermont? Come,—it may be our last gathering.

Meeting of the Advent Christian Association.

The fifth annual meeting of this Society will be held at Wilbraham Grove, commencing at 4 o'clock P. M., Tuesday, Aug. 23d, 1864.

A full representation from all churches co-operating with this Society, and a full attendance of preachers thus co-operating is desirable at this meeting. Questions too important to admit of neglect or indifference on the part of the churches scattered abroad, or of the ministry, will come before this meeting. Does the Constitution require amendment? Shall there be any change in the editorial management of the Crisis? To whom as officers of the Society shall we intrust the funds and various interests of the same for the coming year? These, among many others that will arise, are questions to be decided at this meeting. Let no trifling pecuniary consideration, nor loss of time, prevent a general gathering of the friends of this Association. Each church (i. e., society of believers in Jesus Christ) co-operating, is entitled to one delegate, and one additional delegate for every fifty members above the number of twenty-five members.

Remember ☞ That all delegates sent by churches to the Advent Christian Association must be furnished with written credentials, or forfeit their right to membership. ☜

H. F. CARPENTER, Clerk.

Rutland, Vt., July 7th, 1864.

Meeting of the Board.

The Board of the Advent Christian Association will meet at Wilbraham Grove, Tuesday, Aug. 23d, 1864, at 9 o'clock, A. M. Punctual attendance requested.

H. F. CARPENTER, Clerk.

General Western Campmeeting in Amboy, Illinois.

The healthful and life-giving interest of the Advent cause in the West is young and weak. Herculean work is to be done. The whole community is to be aroused by the gospel of the kingdom, and prepared for the judgment, or perish! Let us take upon our very heart of hearts this work, and do it. Do it bravely and heroically. Do not flinch or falter.

Come, then, to the general camp at Amboy, Aug. 29th. Let us sit in council. Let us impart new courage to each other in our work. Let us pray for a revival of the work of God. Let us use the gospel means to save souls from death. Let us not be satisfied without fifty or a hundred conversions and baptisms at Amboy. Pray for this. Expect it. Come to work for it. And let us send out a new inspiration and life, all through this great West, on the truth of the coming kingdom.

Ho, ye sleepers, "hid away among the stuff," come out and show yourselves! Ye timid ones, gather up courage, and come. Lovers of this present world, shake off the earthly, and seek the heavenly and divine. Ye double-minded, come, and get established. Perishing backsliders, come, and eat again at your Father's table. Sinners, come! Come all! Come from beyond the River, the Father of waters. Come! Come from the wide spreading prairies of Illinois. Come from the bluffs, valleys, and prairies of Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota, Michigan, and elsewhere. Come all who can and share in our glorious feast of tabernacles in Amboy.

We shall provide for horsekeeping at reasonable rates. Also, a table will be provided for any that wish board at reasonable rates. Board and lodging also can be got in the village near by. Lumber can be secured for family tents by writing to Eld. D. S. Clark at Amboy. The sides can be made of boards and the roof of cotton cloth. It will not be injured for other use afterwards. The boarding tents will be under the direction of the meeting, and the profits go to sustain the expenses of the camp-ground, etc.

Well, brethren, friends, one and all, we say once more, come up to the feast. Let this be the greatest and best meeting we have ever had in the West.

D. S. CLARK,
J. V. HIMES,
} Committee.

To all whom it may Concern.

Notice is hereby given that meetings are held in Franklin Hall, Dansville, N. Y., every Sunday, with preaching every alternate Sunday. Also prayer meetings every Thursday evening. Pilgrims are always welcome among us.

Grove Meeting.

The Lord permitting, I will hold a grove meeting on the farm of Bro. Amasa W. Gage, in West Brattleboro, Vt., Sunday, August 14th. Brethren from abroad are invited to attend.

Those further East, on the same line, can do the same. Those coming with teams from Dubuque region will come by the way of Mineral Point to Sauk, thence to the meeting. C. STONE,
W. SHELDON,
} Committee of Arrangements.

N. B. If it is impossible to bring tents, bring good provision and bedding, and we will try to furnish shelter, provided all such will drop me a line by the 25th of August, at Baraboo, Wis., so that I may know how matters stand. Don't omit to write, stating how many will come with you.

W. SHELDON.

Campmeeting.

There will be a campmeeting in Wolcott, Ct., commencing Sept. 5th, and continuing through the week and over the following Sabbath, on land owned by Bro. Hector Smith. This meeting will be in a beautiful grove near the highway, with an excellent spring of water on the ground, and with every other convenience desirable to make it an object for the brethren and sisters to come.

This is an entirely new field, and hopes are entertained that both preachers and brethren and sisters will come filled with faith that God will bless the effort to the saving of some. Bro. Smith and wife have stood almost alone in this place for twenty years witnesses to the truth of the Savior's speedy coming, and now ask the co-operation of the brethren while he makes this effort to benefit his fellow men.

We hope there will be a general rally of all the brethren and sisters from the surrounding towns. Come bringing your tents, and stay through the meeting. Brethren coming by Railroad east or west, will stop at Bristol. This is on the Hartford, Providence, and Fishkill R. R., where teams will be in readiness to carry passengers to the ground. Those coming on the Canal Road will stop at Southington, where they will find conveyance. Other arrangements noticed hereafter.

For the Brethren, RALPH WILLIAMS.

Campmeeting.

There will be a campmeeting in Savoy, commencing Aug. 29th, and continuing one week, on the old battle ground at Bro. Noah Mirick's. Horse keeping will be furnished by Bro. Mirick. There will be a victualing tent on the ground, where food can be had by the week or day, or single meal, or otherwise. As cotton cloth is so high, we do not expect brethren can get tents unless they have old ones. If you have tents, bring them; but come well provided with buffalos, quilts and blankets, and a place will be provided to spread them under shelter.

Come, brethren, let there be a general rally. Come with warm hearts, settle all difficulties, banish all hardness. Our campmeetings are almost done. Soon notice will be given from head quarters to go into camp on the new earth. No preaching brethren are engaged. We want all to come who love God and wait for his Son, and who will give meat in due season—the last crowning truths of the gospel.

H. HADLOCK, for the Church.

Wisconsin Annual Conference.

The "Advent Christian Conference" will hold its yearly session in connection with the Wisconsin Campmeeting, at Okee, Columbia Co., Wis., twenty miles north west from Madison, by the way of Lodi, beginning September 11th, 1864.

Let every church send delegates, and every minister be in attendance if possible; otherwise be sure to report by letter. Churches and ministers who have not yet united, should be sure to do so this year, that we may move in order and harmony, and consequently with greater strength for good. Delegates should bring letters of appointment from churches, and ministers with whom we are not acquainted should bring letters of commendation.

Letters may be sent to me at Baraboo, Sauk Co., Wis.

W. SHELDON, Secretary of Conf.

Tent Meeting.

I will commence a meeting at Havana, Mason Co., Ill., Aug. 17th, and continue over the following Sunday. I shall come with the mission tent, and shall try to arrange to have some one help me in preaching the word. We hope to see a general gathering of the friends in that part of the State. Come, brethren, lay aside the cares of the world for a little season, and dedicate a few days of remaining time to the work of the Lord. Let your prayers go up continually, that good may be done and souls saved as the result of this effort.

WM. MCCULLOCK, Evangelist.

Campmeeting in Wisconsin.

For the World's Crisis.

THE DAY-STAR.

AIR.—"Annie of the Vale."

The day-star is glowing, its clear beams bestowing,
Foreshadowing light the prophets long foretold;
The daylight is dawning, we'll soon hail the morning,
With heavenly light our King we shall behold!

CHORUS.

Come! come! come, sinner, come!
The Spirit and the Bride both say come!
The Savior is pleading, and angels are waiting
To carry glad tidings to their home.

Christ's kingdom is coming, the signs are fulfilling,
God's little flock are sighing for their home,
Men's hearts now are failing, they see trouble coming,
And darkness reigns where once the light has shone.

Then let us be waiting, with lamps trimmed and burning,
For soon our King will come on earth to reign;
The saints will be gathered, the wicked left severed,
To meet their doom among the nations slain.

Then haste, sinner, hasten, ere you shall awaken
To cry at last,—the day of grace is o'er;
The Spirit is pleading, and Christ's interceding
That you may come and share life evermore.

We'll watch and keep praying, and ne'er cease our singing,
Till Father calls—Good children, all come home,
To meet in the mansions of glorious redemption,
Where Christ will reign upon his Father's throne.

H. K. FLAGG.

For the World's Crisis.

MY WESTERN TOUR.—NO. 4.

My last communication left me in the midst of an interesting meeting in the beautiful farming town of Utica, twenty miles west of Winona, Minn., where I felt very much at home with old and new friends around me, the friends of Jesus, who manifested a deep interest in his cause. Meetings each evening of the week with an increase of interest, as manifest by the numbers in attendance, several of whom came six miles each evening, and the good Spirit by which our meetings characterized, there being no schism in the body but a willingness to bear the cross; while the unconverted were apparently under conviction, and some started for the kingdom. The time in the season, in haying and the commencement of their heavy harvest of grain, with the wages of their help as high as three dollars or more a day, demonstrated our duty to be to continue the meeting over another Sabbath, hoping some might be saved in consequence, to inherit a glorious immortality.

On the Sabbath, July 11th, a day most oppressively warm, we had by far the largest congregation of our meeting, more than could possibly get into the house, so that many were seated in wagons at the windows and around the house, who were perfectly quiet while I preached a long sermon, arguing the nearness and character of "the end of all things," and the important practical duties belonging to us in view of these truths. I was never more gratified with the attention given to the word, than in this instance. After an intermission for refreshment, the house was filled for the exercises of a Sabbath School and interesting Bible class, in which most of the young people engaged with many elder ones, the readings and examinations of which were very interesting, Elders Page and Ramer taking part. We see in this exercise the promise of great usefulness, and hope that as often as the "first day of the week" returns, a large number of the young and old may gather there to learn and "search the Scriptures," and thereby be "made wise unto salvation," inspired by a worthy ambition to excel under the wise and kind superintendence of Bro. Barrett, and the instruction of their teachers. I shall think of them on future Sabbaths, and the pleasant seasons I had with them.

At five, P. M., I preached outside the house, on account of the intense heat, on the "sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow," and closed the services of our meeting of days by the observance of the "Supper," spreading a long table in the house, around which about thirty sat down to "eat the bread, and drink the wine" with mingled emotions, as we thought "of the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow" in a "little while."

"How bright the vision; oh! how long
Shall that glad hour delay?"

While eating, some good testimonies were given by elders and brethren present, and we "sung a hymn and went out," to separate to go our several ways. Oh, the bitterness of parting! I have realized it many a time, but the joy of the final meeting—how I long to share it. While bidding adieu to these brethren, "ready to depart on the morrow," I gave them my last words of counsel, which I hope will be remembered, and I got the promise from many that they would be faithful and meet me in the kingdom, while some who were deeply convicted in the meeting made the faithful promise to do the best they could to serve the Lord. I trust they will keep their pledge and be useful in the cause of truth. There are two youngerly men of good abilities who have enjoyed religion, and preached the word, who joined the army to fight with "carnal weapons," and lost the favor of God as we might expect, with whom I conversed, one of whom confessed his wrong in meeting and promised me, as I left him, that he would do his best to serve the Lord, which I hope he will do, and God will make him a blessing. I shall pray for him, and the other also.

Many in the places I have visited have urged me to sell my home east, and move into this western field to labor for God, and surely here is a chance for labor—an inviting field, large enough for several to occupy—with means enough to sustain them by taking a proper course. The advantages of the soil for a living are great, unequalled. It is hard for me to realize as I look out on the broad prairies under good cultivation, interspersed with groves and wood land, laid out in square fields fenced and supplied with comfortable houses for the most part, good and convenient roads that cost no labor to make them and keep them in repair, that I am in a country only from five to ten years old.

Only for this dreadful war, what a country this would be. At present the farmers are realizing great prices for their wheat. It has risen in a few weeks from sixty-five cents to as high as $2,10 per bushel, although it has fallen a little of late.

On Monday morning it became my sad duty to part with Mr. Leonard's family, mutually painful to us all. Sr. Leonard was the fruit of my labor in Canada East some years since. I baptized her, and with my companion have passed many sunny hours at her home with her interesting family. But as with all earthly pleasure interruption came. I moved farther east and they to the far west, and during their residence here, two years of a busy, taxen life had greatly depressed Sr. Leonard's enjoyment and almost overcome her. But she has been much revived, and tells me she has got back where she was when living east at her sequestered home, she daily sought a dark room in her chamber, her frequent, her chosen place of prayer, which was often joyous as paradise, and gilded with the bright sunshine of heaven. May she henceforth have such an altar in her western home; and her husband to go with her to the "mercy seat," as he is now with her in theory, and her interesting daughters also. I love to think of my new acquaintances—brethren and kind friends in this place, as Bro. Shield's family, the Cheathams, Lovejoy and others. May God bless them all.

This day, a very warm one, I journeyed with my friend, Mr. Leonard, through a diversified country of beautiful prairie farms, oak openings, and deep, deep gorges, as Root river, which we reached by descending a deep valley three miles and left by a similar ascent. These deep beds of western rivers are romantic places, with the high bluffs over-hanging you, you pass down deep, narrow, winding ravines to the rivers as the Mississippi and other rivers. On these streams the greater part of the wood land is mostly oak, short and light compared with eastern forests; hence on account of these deep river-beds, much of this prairie land is drained of water, which is one inconvenience of the west, yet in many places on the prairies it is sufficiently plenty.

We put up rather late at night at a little Norwegian village in the town of Newburg, Minn., over forty miles south of Utica, near the Iowa line. We were well entertained. The Norwegians here are converts to Methodism, and have a church edifice and a minister of their own tongue, and are industrious and good citizens. I find there is a strange blending of nationalities in this great west, the refuge or place of resort of adventurers, of the homeless and the landless; and this is a fact that affects the proclamation of Bible truth here. All sorts of prejudices must be overcome, and all kinds of religious opinions dealt with. The odds and ends meet here.

After a night of refreshing rest, in good health I rose to behold a beautiful morning, to part with my kind friend, Mr. Leonard, who was under the necessity of returning to his business, leaving me to pursue my journey to Hesper, Iowa, my next place of stopping; and it being a busy season for the teams, for they do the mowing and reaping—and almost all the farm work, and single wagons being extremely scarce so that I must hire a double team if any, the distance to Hesper being but six miles, I concluded to start early and go on foot, which I did, shouldering my heavy valise and taking a small travelling bag in my hand, I pushed on with zeal over Richland Prairie, one of the richest, and well cultivated.

I reached the residence of an able farmer by the name of Thomson, a distance of three miles, where, being fatigued and thirsty, I called for drink. Here I found a pleasant family of Methodists, soon became acquainted with them, told them I was an Advent preacher, and had an interesting conversation with them, and a good breakfast with a hearty welcome. They did not seem to be cursed with bigotry like too many others, but were free to converse, confessing that the cause of religion was low among them, although not wanting in numbers; said that three of their last preachers had entered the army, and consequently they had no preaching this year. They confessed that it did not look right for ordained preachers of the gospel of PEACE to rush on to the angry conflict, and bathe their hands in the life-blood of their enemies, whom their Master had taught them to love. Strange times are these truly. Let us beware. Came on to Hesper, a beautiful village in an oak grove, whose boast is, that unlike to most western villages, strong drink has never been sold here, nothing stronger than tea can be obtained here. Hence it is not a drunken hole of filth of every kind, but a cleanly, thrifty looking place, the dominant or most numerous religious sect being the "Friends," who are a friendly people.

Among the pleasant homes of this village is the beautiful residence of Bro. John McKee, formerly of Stanbridge, C. E., who spent a large share of his boyhood days with his uncle, who was his tutor, on the little farm I now own. I found my way to this pilgrim home, and felt truly at home with his pleasant family. Had a large meeting last night, and was requested to continue longer, but had to decline doing so. I go to Burr Oak, six miles distant, to preach this evening, and shall continue this series of articles for the gratification of numerous friends, and the glory of God; and as heretofore, I request the prayers of the faithful. Yours in "the faith,"

NUMBER TWELVE.

THE DEATH OF JACOB.

The long and eventful life of Jacob is drawing to its close, and he gathers his children around him for the last time to give them his parting blessing. While they silently gather around his couch, his mind is wandering over the scenes of the long past that come back to him now in all their bright reality.

Once more he recalls the blessing of his father Isaac, his long service for those he loved, his wrestling with the angel till he obtained the wished-for blessing of heaven—the promise of God that his posterity should obtain the possession of Canaan. Also the scenes of his many wanderings came up before him, wandering in a land he did not possess, but which should some day bloom in verdure around the happy homes of his descendants. He remembers, too, his sorrow for the supposed death of Joseph, and his joy in the happy reunion, and lastly his removal to the beautiful land of Goshen, where his last days had been spent in peace and quiet.

The vision of the past fades away, and he turns his eyes upon those who have obeyed his summons. Bestowing his benediction upon them in turn, he comes to Judah, and beholding the future glory of his tribe he exclaims, "Judah, thou art he whom thy brethrens hall praise: thy hand shall be on the neck of thine enemies; thy father's children shall bow down before thee." Beholding his exaltation and triumph, he goes on: "Judah is a lion's whelp; from the prey, my son, thou art gone up; he stooped down, he crouched as a lion, and as an old lion; who shall rouse him up?" Then beholding the dawn of a still brighter day, the rising of a star of hope to the nations, he exclaims in an ecstasy of prophetic joy, "The sceptre shall not depart from Judah, nor a lawgiver from between his feet, until Shiloh come; and unto him shall the gathering of the people be."

Thus he gives a glimpse of the Redeemer—a promise bright with the ineffable glory of the far off future. Each of his remaining sons receives his last benediction, and he then charges them to bury him in the cave of Machpelah with his kindred. He has breathed a father's last words of counsel, and given his last charge according to the faith he has in the solemn promises of Jehovah that his seed should some day possess the goodly land where he had long wandered with his flocks.

He gazes out upon the fields once more, glowing with the freshness and beauty of Egypt's fairest province; the breath of the verdant fields kisses his time-wrinkled brow; he gathers up his feet upon the couch, and the long life of the patriarch is ended.

Deep is the mourning for their father. Solemn and impressive are the funeral rites. A host of mourners follow the bier of the patriarch to the sacred cave of Machpelah, which contains the dust of his wife and kindred. There they bury him, Jacob their father, by the side of those who had fallen in the years before him. There they leave him to slumber till the last trump shall awaken the dust in Machpelah to immortal life.

The heads of the tribes go back to Egypt feeling that a great prince had departed, but little dreaming how soon the wave of oppression would sweep over many who saw in childish wonder the pageant of the patriarch's burial.

SEWING MACHINES.

Among the marvels of these latter days there are few more convenient or wonderful than the sewing machine. It has wrought a revolution in many departments of human industry. The needle has been the reliance and ruin of multitudes. To "stitch, stitch, stitch," has been the tedious labor of many a fair and gentle-handed lady, and what with the stooping posture, the enforced confinement, and the scanty reward of patient and protracted toil, death has speedily closed up the wretched existence of many of those whose sole dependence was the needle.

The poor tired-out housewife, who, wearied with too many cares and labors, at last when the tired children and the fretful babe are safely locked in slumber sits down to sew by the midnight lamp, and interlace the thread of her own precious life amid the shreds and patches with which she clothes her little ones,—she, too, has found at last that the needle was her tyrant rather than her servant, and beneath its rule she has died.

The sewing machine changes all this. One sewing machine is equal to two "sewing societies" minus the mistakes, the bungling, the confusion, the tea, the talk, and the flirtations. On various kinds of sewing a smart woman can take from twenty to forty stitches per minute, but with a machine I have counted, I think, some eight hundred stitches; and while a fair ratio is from three hundred to six hundred stitches per minute, or twenty or thirty times as fast as hand sewing, they can be run at from fifteen hundred to two thousand stitches per minute. Just think of it,—a woman gets an hour to sew, and in that time with a machine she does a full day's work, and that without the fatigue and burden which any hand sewer must feel.

A housekeeper with a sewing machine needs to hire no seamstress; she has an iron one that never kills itself with tight lacing or dyspepsia, nor gives up by noon sick with the headache. A young woman with a sewing machine is independent. It will bring her in more money than many a husband would, and would never grumble when she uses it either; and besides it will neither smoke, drink, flirt with the girls, nor run up a board bill for her to pay. Still, notwithstanding all this, no doubt some silly girls will prefer beaux and husbands to a "Wheeler & Wilson"; but plenty who have tried husbands would like the chance to choose again and take the machine, I warrant you.

But the best of all is when having got a good husband, he, nice man that he is, goes and buys the sewing machine, and perhaps learns to run it himself; and while she sits and cuts and bastes the cloth, he runs it through the machine with a rush, and, like magicians who pull all sorts of things out of all manner of strange places, so he tumbles in bits of cloth at one end and pulls out at the other all manner of those men's clothes, women's clothes, boys' clothes, girls' clothes, and baby clothes, which are so handy to have in the house, where a happy couple live.

Now, my friend, hadn't you better go and get your wife a sewing machine? It will be better than to get a new wife when yours has sewed herself to death, won't it?

"What will it cost?"

O! any where from fifty to one hundred dollars and thereabouts.

"Can't afford it."

O, you can't! How long will it take you to make up that amount of money in cigars at present prices? Sell a cow, if you have several, and buy a machine. Sell a horse and buy a machine. Use the old furniture and buy a machine. Use the old wagon and buy a machine. Wear the old clothes and buy a machine. A machine is better than a melodeon. A machine is better than a piano; and besides with a machine first you can save and earn enough to buy many other things.

"What one shall I get?" Well, almost any of half a dozen different ones will help you wonderfully; but still it is as well to get the best when you are about it.

"But which is the best?" Well, I never used either. Still I have heard of some objections to several. One makes a ridge on one side of the cloth; one wastes thread; one is noisy; one gets out of order; one ravels too easy, etc., and the pretty general decision is that the "Wheeler and Wilson" machine is for all general purposes the best. This has been the verdict at some eighteen State Fairs, besides hundreds of other fairs. The prices range from $50 to $120—the difference being mainly in style, finish and ornamentation, the cheaper ones doing the same work equally well.

The other day I was conversing with a friend who for years had had charge of a large cloak manufactory in Boston; and he informed me that they used "Wheeler and Wilson's" machine exclusively, as did the other large manufacturers with which he was acquainted. It makes the lock stitch alike on both sides, will not ravel, and was decidedly the best for all general purposes, in his opinion.

The fact that the sales of this machine have steadily increased from 799 machines in 1853, to 21,306 in 1859, an increase of almost thirty-fold in seven years (and I know not how large it has been since 1859), shows that there must be good reasons for preferring this machine. The company's large and splendid manufactory, it is said, can produce five hundred machines per day.

Persons who wish for information, prices, descriptions, etc., can obtain circulars of the company's agents, or by addressing "Wheeler and Wilson Manufacturing Company, 505 Broadway, N. Y., or 228 Washington St., Boston."

I have been informed also that ministers of the gospel of all denominations can be accommodated with Wheeler and Wilson's machines at reduced prices, and I think few gifts would be more welcome to a poor worn-out preacher's wife than a good sewing machine. Who is willing to raise $50 or $75 to buy one for this purpose?

WHO WILL HELP FURNISH THE WESTERN TENT?

Hark! my friends. Listen to the voice that comes from the far West! The Lord God of Israel is still to be worshiped; his truth is still to be proclaimed; listening multitudes are yet to hear the proclamation of the speedy coming of the "King" who shall "reign in righteousness." Year after year have we heard the glad tidings in our favored region, and our hearts have been gladdened by the prospect before us, and now to the regions beyond do these same tidings need to be more fully published. And how shall they hear without a preacher? and how shall the preacher preach, except he have some place in which to preach? for ofttimes the rain, and again the scorching heat of the sun, render it impracticable to be in the open air entirely; and in some places there are no buildings suitable to be occupied for such a purpose; and when there are such, their occupancy is frequently forbidden to those whose minds have been enlightened in regard to the truth which should be proclaimed in thunder tones at the present time.

We have an efficient preacher in the western field. Bro. Himes, whose zeal and ability are well known, has, with a portion of that self-sacrificing spirit which characterized his Master, left the associations of his early home, and located himself in the West, for the express purpose of spreading light on the most important theme which can engage the attention of man. And now for the place in which he may address those who will gather to hear. Brethren, sisters, will you help furnish it?—not a costly structure, with a "towering spire, almost commingling with the skies;" nor a fixed one, which can only be serviceable for a single spot; but a temporary and movable one, like those in which the patriarchs of old sojourned. With such a place of worship the preacher may remove as occasion may demand, from one place to another. When his work is done in one place, he can go to the next; and so on, until the glad tidings have been proclaimed everywhere.

I know there is much to be done in the East; numerous and increasing are the calls for help which come to those whom the Lord has made stewards of his bounty; and the few whose hearts have been enlarged and are willing to heed these calls, hardly know which to respond to first; but can we not be a little more self-sacrificing—can we not deny ourselves of some luxury, or even comfort, that we may hear this call and help prepare the way by which the swarming population of the growing West can efficiently have the present truth proclaimed to them? I feel that it is a noble cause to aid; who else feels so? I will give my mite; who else will give theirs? I desire to have it said of me, "She hath done what she could;" who else has the same desire?

Come, ye expectants of the coming One, let us awake to the weighty responsibility that rests upon us, to be active in spreading the light we have received. It is no time to be hoarding treasures for the fires of the last day to consume. Better give liberally, and to the extent of our ability, giving up our possessions in the present world, seeking our portion in the world to come; and be among those to whom a crown immortal, a kingdom eternal, and a life evermore shall be given.

THE ABYSS OF SPIRITUALISM.

BRO. GRANT:—My attention was attracted to a letter of Sr. Willard's, with extracts from a correspondence from a sister, who had narrowly escaped "the abyss of Spiritualism," and to the "Remarkable Dream." It revived within me the conviction that I must write. But what to say! My ample experience with that inconceivably subtle and horrible delusion, makes me very confident that the dear sister does not yet know herself,—worse, does not know the workings of that truly awful power which she thinks she has escaped. But to declare it is not to prove it, and perhaps none but those thoroughly experienced in detecting the traces of that magnetic influence would at all believe me were I to state that her writings, especially the dream, bear strong traces of the delusion.

It is with hesitation that I speak thus, and I would assure the sister that only the kindest feeling and a sense of duty prompt me to it. I am sure when she is entirely free, when the spell is broken, she will see it herself, yet I should add, it may require many and terrible experiences to give her a full acquaintance with this mystery of iniquity. It will look presumptuous to those who are as yet untried, to write thus, and let me say, I do not write with a view to prevent their trial by the same means; for it is utterly impossible that human power should resist this superhuman magnetism, of which, as stated in the Crisis, the agents are wicked spirits, and powerful ones too. Watching and prayer are the only means which we can use. They save us through the goodness of God, but they do not prevent the trial.

Daniel wrote, "Many shall be made white and tried!" Every child of God must be made white, every one proved. It cannot be that any of the "elect" shall escape. As long ago as when he wrote that, the type of this ordeal was given, when the Hebrew children went through the fiery furnace; but the form of one like the Son of man went with them. The church is going through that furnace, and the fire is seven times hotter than the fires of any other trials we can endure; and this fact can only be understood by the experienced, for no others can conceive of the fiendish subtlety and power of Spiritualism. O! children of the Most High, look to your footing! You cannot be too vigilant, and write upon your hearts the precious words of Christ, uttered, as I believe, for this hour of all others that have passed since he stood on earth, "Because thou hast kept the word of my patience, I also will keep thee from the hour of temptation that shall come upon all the world to try them that dwell upon the earth."

In the dream which she relates, I see the identical workings of the illusion with those which I have experienced in wonderful visions, both waking and sleeping, which now I know were but the leading cords of those invisible seducers, to draw me deeper into their snares. They work by flattery. It can be traced in all their illusions. They pet self wherever it can be touched; for instance, they would have the sister believe that she was to give the offer of mercy to the multitude; and the deep fervor and warm zeal which she expresses are no evidence of the truth of her vision, because the most extreme devotion and zeal of the real christian are exactly imitated by the impostors and put upon their victims. O to be able to discern between the spirits which have gone out into the world!

As to the voices which she heard in her dream I have often heard them, even, as I thought, the very voice of God, with all the awful solemnity yet ineffable tenderness of the loving Father. Once he spoke to me (as I thought), and it was followed by another which I thought I detected to be the voice of a lying spirit, feigning to be his. I prayed to be saved from its power. Indeed I had been uncommonly diligent and earnest in prayer, but I did not perceive till long after that both were lying voices. The most fervent glow of devotion, the most radiant desire to do good, usually accompanied the illusions which they flung around me. Tongue cannot even feebly tell the unutterable intensity of feeling which at such times has tortured me to the extreme point of mental and physical endurance, varied by seasons of exquisite joy and peace, which also were entirely false.

She speaks of the voice, saying, "The seal is about to be set." So did the wicked ones exercise me on that point, and I was led to agonize that it might be set on my forehead. This was but a little episode in a wonderful drama which they enacted with me, playing upon my feelings in every way by which they could mislead. No doubt this is the sealing time, and they know it. But oh! beware! Let not Satan deceive you by taking a seasonable truth to do it with, for that is precisely his way. Do not be deceived by the plausible reasoning and real truths scattered through their teachings.

These "powers of darkness" have demoniac artfulness, and do not scruple to use God's own weapons to overcome His believers, as they are the most potent in dealing with those who have the truth.

Those "terrible flags"—no need of words to describe them, too well I understand the awful spirit that hovered about them like a breath of the sulphurous smoke, the gloom and horror of that Tartarean darkness, where probably the spirits formerly dwelt. No, dear sister, let us not think we have "escaped the abyss of Spiritualism." We shall be in the furnace, liable at any time to frequent and long contests with the enemy, until the battle of the last great day. Then, by the grace of God, we shall be more than conquerors, by as much as our enemies are more than human in their power and skill.

When I realize what frequent and truly terrible experiences I have passed through, my soul shudders, grows faint and sick with horror, and cries out, How long, O Lord, how long? But I feel that it cannot be long. At this rate of progress Satan will soon have gathered in his own; then shall the rising of a new day bring to us a joy and peace as real and enduring as the truth and immortality of God, and our elder Brother, the King of kings and Lord of lords, will take us to his victorious and everlasting rest.

THE GIFT.

I see before me a beautiful gift, and so bright and unsullied does it appear that I cannot compare it to any thing short of a "pearl of great price." But it is not one of earthly extraction, for an heavenly Friend obtained it from the deep fountain of eternal love. And I have learned from the word of truth, that if I live in obedience to the commands of this heavenly Friend, this invaluable gift is to be mine; and so anxious am I to obtain the prize, I feel like laying hold on it by faith, and holding it fast in hope. For I am aware that if I, through disobedience, forfeit my right and title to this free gift, death must be my portion. But if through faithfulness and obedience gain it, eternal life, unalloyed by sin, sorrow and death, will be mine. Rom. 6: 23. "For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord."

Dear friends, let us so run that we may win this sweet and precious boon—eternal life—which is the "free gift" of God through Jesus to fallen man.

Eternal life! eternal life!
We have it through the Savior;
Eternal life! Eternal life!
Oh! come, and live forever.

ANECDOTE OF DR. BEECHER.

The following anecdote of Dr. Beecher, communicated to the Northern Monthly by C. E. Stowe, gives a characteristic glimpse of the man, and at the same time illustrates a true principle of action:—

Beecher's simplicity, buoyancy and imperturbable good humor disarmed opposition when he came in personal contact with an opponent. An old wood-sawyer, whom we will call W——, a rough, strong, shrewd man, who belonged to a rival sect, was violently prejudiced against the Doctor, especially on account of his total abstinence principles. He had never seen him, and would not hear him preach. This man had a large lot of wood to saw opposite to the Doctor's house. The Doctor depended upon constant manual labor for keeping up his own health; and in Boston, where he could not enjoy the luxury of a garden to dig in, he was often puzzled to find means to keep himself in good working order. The consequence was that he sawed all the wood for his own large family; and often finding that too little, would beg the privilege of sawing at the wood-pile of a neighbor. He was fastidious in the care of his wood-saw, having it always at hand in his study, half concealed among minutes of councils, incomplete magazine articles and sermons, and the setting of his saw was often duly accomplished while he settled nice points of theology with his boys, or took counsel with brother ministers.

Looking out of his study window one day, when his own wood-pile was reduced to a discouraging state of order—every stick sawed and split—he saw, with envy, the pile of old W. in the street. Forthwith he seized his saw, and soon the old sawyer of the street beheld a man, without cravat and in his shirt-sleeves, issuing from Dr. Beecher's house, who came briskly up and asked if he wanted a hand at his pile; and forthwith fell to work with a right good will, and soon proved to his brother sawyer that he was no mean hand at the craft.

Nodding his head significantly at the opposite house W. said:

"You live there?"

B. "Yes."

W. "Work for the old man?"

B. "Yes."

W. "What sort of an old fellow is he?"

B. "Oh, pretty much like the rest of us. Good man enough to work for."

W. "Tough old chap, ain't he?"

B. "Guess so, to them that try to chaw him up."

So the conversation went on till the wood went so fast with the new comer that W. exclaimed:

"First rate saw that of yourn!"

This touched the Doctor in a tender point. He had set that saw as carefully as the articles of his creed—every tooth was critically adjusted, and so he gave a smile of triumph.

"I say," said W., "Where can I get a saw like that?"

B. "I do not know, unless you buy mine."

W. "Will you trade? What do you ask?"

B. "I do not know. I will think about it. Call at the house to-morrow and I will tell you."

The next day the old man knocked, and met the Doctor at the door, fresh from the hands of his wife, with his coat brushed and cravat tied, going out to pastoral duty.

W. gave a start of surprise.

"Oh," said the Doctor, "you are the man that wanted to buy my saw. Well, you shall have it for nothing—only let me have some of your wood to saw when you work on my street."

W. said that he then felt as if he wanted to crawl into an auger-hole.

LITTLE METTIE.*

Little Mettie is asleep,
Wherefore should his parents weep?
Fold his hands across his breast,
Let the little loved one rest.

Little Mettie had begun
Life's uncertain race to run;
For an hour he sojourned here
On this earth so dark and drear.

But his Shepherd, Christ, foreknew
Dangers living souls pass through;
Hence he hid him in the grave,
Shielding him from many a wave.

Mother, let the dear boy sleep,
Father, sister, do not weep;
Soon the glorious morn will break,
And the dead to life awake.

Brother, you will miss him here,
O'er his grave shed many a tear;
But if Christ your Shepherd be,
Soon the loved one you may see.

He shall live to die no more,
Lovelier, dearer than before;
You shall hear his cherub voice
Making heavenly hosts rejoice.

Over in the better land,
Near the Savior's throne he'll stand,
Singing loud and sweet and clear,
"Jesus leads the children here!"

I THOUGHT IT WAS MY MOTHER'S VOICE.

A friend told me not long ago, a beautiful story about kind words. A good lady passed a drinking saloon just as the keeper was thrusting a young man into the street. He was very young and very pale, but his haggard face and wild eyes told that he was very far gone in the road to ruin, and with an oath he brandished his clenched fists, threatening to be revenged on the man who had ill-used him. This young man was so excited and blinded with passion, that he did not see the lady who stood very near to him, until she laid her hand on his arm, and spoke in her gentle loving voice, and asked him what was the matter.

At the first kind word he started as if a heavy blow had struck him, and turned quickly round paler than before, and trembling from head to foot. He surveyed the lady for a moment, and then with a sigh of relief he said,

"I thought that was my mother's voice, it sounded strangely like! But her voice has been hushed in death these many years."

"You had a mother then, and she loved you," said she.

With that sudden revulsion of feeling which often comes to people of fine nervous temperaments, the young man burst into tears, and sobbed out, "Oh yes, I had an angel mother and she loved her boy! But since she died all the world has been against me, and I am lost to honor, lost to decency, and lost forever!"

"No, not lost forever; for God is merciful, and his pitying love can reach the chief of sinners," said the lady in her soft, sweet voice; and the timely words swept the hidden chords of feeling which had long been untouched in the young man's heart, thrilling it with magic power, and wakening a host of tender emotions, which had been buried very deep beneath the rubbish of sin and crime.

More gentle words the lady spoke, and when she passed on her way the young man followed her. He marked the house she entered, and wrote the name which was on the silver door-plate, in his memorandum book. Then he went slowly away with a deeper, earnest look on his pale face, and a deeper and more earnest feeling in his heart.

Years glided by, and the gentle lady had quite forgotten the incident we have related, when one day a stranger sent up his card, and desired to speak with her.

Wondering who it could be, she went down to the parlor, where she found a noble looking, well dressed man, who rose deferentially to meet her. Holding out his hand, he said:

"Pardon me, madam, for this intrusion; but I have come many miles to thank you for the great service you rendered me a few years ago," said he, in a trembling voice.

The lady was puzzled, and asked for an explanation, as she did not remember ever having seen the gentleman before.

"I have changed so much," said the man, "that you have quite forgotten me; but though I only saw your face once, I am sure I should have recognized it any where. And your voice, too, is so like my mother's."

Those last words made the lady remember the young man she had kindly spoken to in front of the drinking saloon so long before, and she mingled her tears with those which were falling slowly over the man's cheeks.

After the first gush of emotion had subsided, the gentleman told the lady how those few gentle words had been instrumental in saving him, and making him what he was then.

"The earnest expression of 'No, not lost forever,' followed me wherever I went," said he, "and it always seemed that it was the voice of my mother speaking to me from the tomb. I repented of my many transgressions, and resolved to live in Jesus as my mother would be pleased to have me; and by the mercy and grace of God I have been enabled to resist temptation, and keep my good resolutions."

"I never dreamed there was such power in a few kind words before," exclaimed the lady, "and surely ever after this I shall take more pains to speak them to all the sad and suffering ones I meet in the walks of life."—From Sunny Faces.

KEEPING THE GOLDEN RULE.

"Please, sir, will you ring the door-bell for me?" said a short, fat girl, to a gentleman who was passing a house before which she stood vainly trying to reach the bell-handle. The tall gentleman was either too proud or too busy with his own thoughts, to give much attention to Miss Annie's request. He merely glanced at her as he brushed past, and said,—

"Go away! I have nothing for you."

Poor Annie felt pained, for she was a nice little girl, and did not like to be mistaken for a beggar. So she sighed, looked at the door in despair, and said, half aloud,—

"Oh dear! what shall I do?"

Just then a stout boy, with a big basket filled with groceries, came walking toward her. "I won't ask him," said Annie to herself. "I don't believe he would help me, and he might make fun of me."

But the boy stopped at the door-step and put down his basket. He had seen her trouble as he came up the street, and had pitied her. His face was full of sunshine as he smiled on Annie, and said,—

"Can't you reach the bell? Let me ring it for you."

"Oh, I shall be so glad," replied Annie. "I've been waiting here ever so long, and I'm so tired."

The boy rang the bell, the door was opened, and Annie's trouble was ended.

Now the golden rule given by Jesus says, "Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so unto them." Did that proud gentleman keep this rule when he gave little Annie that rude answer?

You guess not, eh? You think if he had been in Annie's place and she in his he would have wanted her to ring the bell, eh? Very good.

And how about the boy? He kept the golden rule did he? Right again. Once more: how is it with you, [illegible]ie Scornful? do you keep the golden rule when you toss your head and laugh at poor Ellen Dull because she can't say her lesson? How with you, Ned Lazybones, when you sat toasting your toes before the stove last winter, and left little Harry to do the chores alone? How with you all, my children? Do you all keep the golden rule of Jesus?—S. S. Advocate.

GOD TAKES CARE OF US.

A kind woman, hunting up the children of want one cold day last winter, tried to open a door in the third story of a wretched house, when she heard a little voice say, "Pull the string up higher." She looked up and saw a string, which, on being pulled, lifted the latch, and she opened the door upon two little half-naked children all alone. Very cold and pitiful they looked.

"Do you take care of yourselves, little ones?" asked the good woman.

"God takes care of us," said the oldest.

"And are you not very cold? no fire on a day like this!"

"Oh, when we are very cold, we creep under the quilt, and I put my arm round Tommy, and Tommy puts his arm round me, and we say, 'Now I lay me down to sleep,' then we get warm," said the little girl.

"And what do you have to eat, pray?"

"When granny comes home she fetches us something. Granny says God has got enough. Granny calls us God's sparrows; and we say, 'Our Father,' and 'daily bread' every day. God is our Father."

Tears came in the good woman's eyes. She had a mistrusting spirit herself; but these two little "sparrows," perched in that cold upper chamber, taught her a sweet lesson of faith and trust that she will never forget.

And have you, children, who have almost everything else, this sweet spirit of content and thankfulness?

THE SECRET.—There were two little sisters whom no one could see without loving, for they were always so happy together. No cross words, no pouts, no slaps, no running away in a pet. On the green before the door, trundling hoop, playing with Rover, they were always the same sweet-tempered little girls.

"You never seem to quarrel," I said to them one day; how is it you are always so happy together?"

They looked up, and the eldest answered—"I 'spose 'tis cause Addie lets me, and I lets Addie."

DO NOT MAKE EXCUSES.—Children, do not form the habit of making excuses. If you have done wrong, be willing to own it. Do not try to hide it or throw the blame on another. A person who is quick at making excuses, is not very likely to be good for anything else, or to be loved and honored.

FINISH THY WORK.

Finish thy work, the time is short,
The sun is in the west;
The night is coming down—till then
Think not of rest.

Yes, finish all thy work, then rest;
Till then, rest never;
The rest prepared for thee by God,
Is rest forever.

Finish thy work, then wipe thy brow;
Ungird thee from thy toil!
Take breath, and from each weary limb
Shake off the soil.

Finish thy work, then sit thee down
On some celestial hill,
And of its strength reviving air
Take thou thy fill.

Finish thy work, then go in peace,
Life's battle fought and won,
Hear from the throne the Master's voice,
"Well done! well done!"

Finish thy work, then take thy harp,
Give praise to God above;
Sing a new song of mighty joy
And endless love.

Give thanks to Him who held thee up
In all thy path below,
Who made thee faithful unto death,
And crowns thee now.

THE WAR.
ITS ORIGIN—PROGRESS—END.

BY HENRY W. DANN.

(Concluded.)

END OF THE WAR.

When will this cruel war be over? what are the prospects to-day? are questions that agitate every heart. Some say the end is nigh at hand, others can see no gleam of light through the dark war-cloud that lowers over the sky.

In attempting to answer these questions, we must obtain clear views of the period of time in which we live. And all the light that is required for this purpose is furnished in the prophecies of the word of God.

We are living in the last days. The present age is full of evidence on this point; and to the student of the Bible and of history the events of to-day are but the fulfillment of prophecies uttered more than a thousand years ago. The kingdoms of this world are fast passing away.

The Babylonian kingdom, 677 B. C.; the Medo Persian, 538 B. C.; the Grecian, 332 B. C.; the Roman, 30 B. C.; are among the nations that were, but are not. The first three arose, shone, and passed away. The last, through divisions, has been shorn of all its strength and glory. These divided kingdoms exist to-day. But what say the Scriptures in reference to them? "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom that shall never be destroyed. . . . . . It shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever." The age in which we live, then, is the age in which we look for the "everlasting kingdom of God" to be set up, by the appearance on earth of Jesus Christ, who will destroy the wicked by the brightness of his coming. Such being the fact we are not to look for the prosperous days that we have heretofore enjoyed; but on the contrary must expect commotion, distress and perplexity until the Lord shall come.

But the horrors of war may be very materially mitigated, and to a certain extent done away, by proper legislation, earnest prayer to God, and the co-operation of christian men. As a christian I should say, let fighting alone and the war will die a natural death. But I cannot hope for this so long as men continue to defy the Almighty God.

There will undoubtedly be a cessation of hostilities some time, but how shall we bring it about? The majority say, "Fight it out." Now allowing that this can be done, when we consider the frightful waste of life that it would occasion, it becomes us to inquire if there is not a better way. We answer emphatically, there is. To bring about a solution of our difficulties and end the war, that is so far as we can expect an end, we should immediately

1. Proclaim an armistice. This is imperatively demanded if we look no further than to rest an exhausted army. Again, it would give the rebellious people of the South a respite in which to think over the past and the prospects of the future. It would enable the people of this great nation to breathe more freely and discuss more calmly the great questions at issue. It would inspire the people with hope, it would cheer the despondent, and help to inaugurate a reign of peace.

2. Call a convention. Get the voice of the people on this mighty question. Let there be a gathering together of people from every State. Let there be a free expression of opinion and interchange of sentiment. Let the South be made to feel that we are not waging this war to crush and destroy them, but for the mutual interests of all concerned. At this convention let no party question be raised, no "vain strife about words" be indulged; but as far as possible let harmony prevail, and whatever difference there may be let it be honest and not from sinister or impure motives.

3. Consider terms of peace. Let that be the prime object before us. Let there be a mutual interchange of feeling between the different sections of country represented. And let it be fully understood that a suspension of hostilities has been ordered for the express purpose of bringing about a reconciliation. Let every effort possible be put forth to bring about this desired result. I tell you such a course savors of the purest patriotism and the highest type of loyalty, notwithstanding what political babblers may say to the contrary. The national honor and life are staked on this question of peace. The good of humanity and the welfare of this great republic are suspended on the question of a speedy termination of this terrible strife. I have no sympathy with those who cry peace, peace, while war lurks in every avenue of their hearts. Such cry peace from party motives, and have not the good of the nation at heart. A political peace is just no peace at all; and if it is gained will only rise up in the future to embarrass and overturn the government under which we live.

4. A firmer trust in Almighty God. In the midst of our former prosperity we had well nigh forgotten God. We have boasted in our strength, and neglected to look to the hills from whence it came. And the only wonder with me is that God has not cast us off forever, and driven us down to that land of darkness where mercy and hope are strangers for ever.

The Chicago Times says: "The physicians of this place hold secrets which, if made known, would cause the community to run stark mad with wonder. If the vice and crime and debauchery were exposed to the broad light of critical inspection, this fair earth would assume an aspect so hideous that angels would weep, devils laugh, and the good and virtuous would lift up their hands in holy horror, and sigh for the extinction of this sinful age." And were the truth known in regard to the state of morals in our country to-day we would stand appalled at the prospect before us. Let us, then, as a nation repent of our sins, and humble ourselves in the sight of God.

And finally, let the revealed will of God be the supreme law of the land and nation, and a change as great and glorious as can well be conceived will take place even here in this land of woe and death. Such are my views of the crisis through which we are passing to-day.

I have endeavored very briefly to set forth the origin, progres, and coming end of this cruel war. I have hinted at some measures calculated to inaugurate a reign of peace. But after all I do not look for permanent peace in these last days of the nation's history. But, thank God, there is "a peace which passeth all understanding," and fills the heart with love and joy.

I firmly believe the measures I have suggested for remedying our difficulties, if adopted at once, will result in great positive and lasting good; should they fail to accomplish a settlement I am content to leave the whole matter in the hands of God. All that I have written is merely suggestive. These thoughts might be extended indefinitely, but if what has been written shall convince one soul of his errors and lead him to the "land of life," I am satisfied. My daily prayer to Almighty God is, that he would bring deliverance to the captives, joy to the sorrowing, light to the blind, hope to the despairing, wisdom to the foolish, peace to the rebellious, and life to the dead; so that the United States may not be blotted out from history forever.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

"The kingdom of God shall be taken from you."—MATT. 21: 43.

What kingdom does the Savior mean? Let us briefly look at the different interpretations.

1st. Some claim that reference is made to the offers of the kingdom to the Jews. Not so. Jesus said not a word about witholding the offers of the kingdom from any one, nor is it true that the offer of the kingdom is withheld. It is freely offered to Jews and Gentiles on the same terms. "The kingdom of God"—not the offer of it—was to be "taken from" one class and "given" to another class. What kingdom?

2nd. Others claim that God set up a kingdom among the Israelites, and that Christ here alludes to that kingdom. Not so; for that kingdom was long previously "overturned," and was to be "no more TILL" the great Heir of David should reconstruct it on a deathless and perpetual basis. To say of a kingdom that had been taken from a certain people centuries before, it "shall be taken from you," would certainly be incorrect. The kingdom here mentioned remained to be taken from a certain class at a future period, when the Savior spake.

3d. It is evident from the context that the territorial kingdom is meant—"the kingdom prepared from the foundation of the world"—the very territory occupied by the wicked husbandmen who refused to render the fruits of holiness. A lovely "vineyard" or kingdom (our earth) was let out to man, who was required to render to God the fruits of righteousness, but man revolted, and refused to render the fruits of righteousness; so God sent servants and prophets to revolted man to prevail upon him to render the fruits, but the messengers are stoned and persecuted; but God continues to send messengers to the rebellious occupants of this vineyard, or territorial kingdom, and they are subjected to the same treatment; finally God sends his Son to revolted man, who occupies the vineyard or kingdom once let out to him; but they say, "This is the heir (to our vineyard or kingdom,) come, let us kill him, and let us seize on his INHERITANCE," or territorial kingdom which they were occupying. So they crucified the Son of God. Right here the Savior inquires, "When the Lord therefore of the vineyard COMETH, what will he do unto those husbandmen?" The approved reply is, "He will miserably destroy those wicked men, and will let out his vineyard to other husbandmen, etc." When? "When the Lord of the vineyard cometh."

On the strength of this, Christ adds, "Therefore say I unto you, The kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof." When? "When the Lord of the vineyard cometh." What kingdom? The same one formerly occupied by wicked husbandmen, who would not render the fruits, now to be given to those who "will" render the fruits. This proves the vineyard and kingdom identical.

Prominent among those wicked husbandmen stood the Jews, but they were not alone; hence, all the wicked will be "miserably destroyed" "when the Lord of the vineyard cometh,"—an event yet future,—and then this "vineyard" or "inheritance," or territorial "kingdom of God," once occupied by wicked husbandmen, will be given to a nation of holy ones, now slumbering in beds of death, who shall be born at once, and they "shall take the kingdom and possess the kingdom forever, even forever and ever," and "bring forth the fruits thereof."

GOD LEFT HIM TO TRY HIM.

"Howbeit, in the business of the ambassadors of the princes of Babylon, who sent unto him to inquire of the wonder that was done in the land, God left him to try him, that he might know all that was in his heart."—2 Chron. 32: 31.

The person here alluded to whom God left to try was Hezekiah, king of Israel. "In those days Hezekiah was sick to the death," and God by the prophet Isaiah healed him, and added to his days fifteen years. At that time the prince of Babylon sent letters and a present unto Hezekiah, for he had heard that Hezekiah had been sick. And Hezekiah hearkened unto them and showed them all the house of his precious things, the silver, and the gold, and the spices, and the precious ointment, and all the house of his armor, all that was found in his treasures; there was nothing in his house nor in all his dominion that Hezekiah showed them not.

Hezekiah had exceeding great riches and honor; he was a good man, and God had prospered him and given him much substance; but in the hour of his prosperity his heart was lifted up, he had become proud. Probably these ambassadors from the prince of Babylon were spies. He had heard of the growing power of Israel, and sent these ambassadors to spy out the land. Hezekiah could not have done them a greater favor than to do as he did in showing them all his treasures and all he had, for there was nothing in all his kingdom that he showed them not. In this unwise act he greatly displeased the Almighty. God saw that Hezekiah was proud, and so he left him, to try him, that he might know all that was in his heart.

When these ambassadors from the prince of Babylon arrived at Jerusalem, Hezekiah was in just the frame of mind to receive them; for it reads, "He hearkened unto them, and showed them all he possessed." So we see how foolish a wise king will be when left of God to be tried. There was a secret sin that God desired to show the king—the sin of pride. After the ambassadors were gone, the prophet Isaiah came to Hezekiah and informed him that the Lord was displeased with him for what he had done. So he humbled himself and all Jerusalem with him, by which God's wrath was turned away.

It is a great thing to know all that is in our own hearts. It is a true saying that conduct develops character. So it is when we leave the living way and commit sin. God sees it will work our ruin; so he leaves us, to try us, to develop our real character, that we may discover what manner of man we are of; and if we humble ourselves as did Hezekiah before God, then it will work out for us an exceeding and eternal weight of glory. We sometimes think we are about perfect before God; but when the Lord comes to place us where the goldsmith did the gold, we do not stand the fire.

There are two kinds of trials,—trials, and fiery trials. Some need the latter to keep them purified and ready. The apostle Peter was sure he was right before God, when he told the Lord he was ready to go with him into prison, and to death. But Jesus said unto him, "The cock shall not crow this day before that thou shalt thrice deny that thou knowest me." The Lord saw that Peter was not right, and he left him, to try him, that the sin might be manifested, that Peter could see himself; and in consequence of the denial there was on the part of Peter bitter weeping and repentance before God. Were we placed in Peter's stead, we might not succeed any better than did the holy apostle.

The object of God is to save us. None will ever be permitted to enter the New Jerusalem but those who possess the spirit of Christ,—those who love God and keep his commandments.

Dear reader, perhaps deep down in your heart may lurk some dreadful sin, which as yet has not been developed. The time may come when you will be placed in a position when that perhaps unthought of sin may develop. We sow the seed, the rain causes it to sprout and grow to become a fruitful plant, or flower; but in case there is no rain, the seed may remain the same unchanged forever. So it is with our hearts. The seed is there, either good or bad, and the development will only show the kind or quality. See that woman who was once virtuous, now going in the way to hell; the man who was once temperate, now a poor miserable drunkard. The person once humble before God has departed and become proud and wicked. God has held out every inducement to save these different characters, but they have rejected him and his truth, and hardened their hearts.

The day has come when men's real characters are being developed. "Multitudes, multitudes in the valley of decision; for the day of the Lord is near in the valley of decision." The great mass have decided against the great message of Christ's second coming, and the doctrines of the Bible. "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall." Let him that hath sinned sin no more. And should we be left of God to be tried, may it work the peaceful fruits of righteousness, that the end may be unto everlasting life. Let us humble ourselves before God, that we may be exalted in due time.

Remember in the hour of trial God's grace shall be sufficient for you. "Pray without ceasing; and in every thing give thanks." "Hold fast that which thou hast, that no man take thy crown." So that, when the generations of the saints who now sleep shall come forth to life, you may join them at the appearing of Christ, in everlasting thankfulness and joy.

For the World's Crisis.

THE "TWO WITNESSES."

There are several serious objections to the application of this prophecy to the Old and New Testaments.

First. The "time" of their prophecy (1260 days) if interpreted 1260 years, does not cover the period of the prophecy of either the Old or New Testament.

Second. These "two witnesses" are cotemporary as to their period of prophecy, which cannot be said of the two Testaments.

Third. If any one design to hurt them, fire issues from their mouth and eateth up their enemies, etc., which does not harmonize present or past records with such theory.

Fourth. These witnesses have power to shut heaven, so that "no rain shall come down in the days of their teaching." (Wakefield's trans.) And they have power over waters to turn them into blood, and to smite the earth with any punishments as often as they choose.

Fifth. When they are slain, "their dead bodies will lie in the streets of that great city, which is called spiritually Sodom and Egypt, where indeed our Lord was crucified," which was at JERUSALEM, and not in Paris.

Sixth. It is to be peoples, and tribes, and tongues, and NATIONS, which are to look on their "dead bodies."

Seventh. "And the inhabitants of the EARTH will rejoice over them," etc., "because these two teachers were a vexation to the inhabitants of the EARTH."

Eighth. At the moment of their ascension there was "a great earthquake (not a political commotion), and the tenth of the city fell down, and seven thousand men were killed by the earthquake." What city? The city where our Lord was crucified. The city where the "two witnesses" shall be slain. The city JERUSALEM! The "seven thousand" are so definite, that destruction by "earthquakes in divers places," and in fives or tens of thousands, cannot be applicable to this prophecy; the scene of which is so definitely laid in JERUSALEM, and is to affect "peoples, tribes, and nations."

Ninth. It is a judgment of the second woe, and its application is as universal as the prophetic annunciation is general, and so also of "the rest" who "were affrighted, and gave glory to the God of heaven."

Tenth. Immediately following is the sounding of the seventh trumpet, and the kingdoms of this world become the kingdom of our Lord,—the time of wrath, of judgment, of the resurrection of the dead, and destruction of the enemies of God who "destroy the earth"; and the time of this destruction is defined by Ezekiel and the Revelator (Rev. 20), to be at the end of the thousand years of judgment and restitution; and hence the "plagues that are written therein" are in the future.

O. T. HOBBS.

For the World's Crisis.

BELIEVE IN HIM.

"This is the work of God, that ye believe on him whom he hath sent."
"He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life."

Will any one say there are not words enough used in the above texts to express the conditions upon which were offered everlasting life? And yet three words express all—"Believe in Him." But this is the sum—the conclusion—the result of a longer process of investigation, of demonstration. A thing is never proved to us if we still doubt, for when a thing is fully proved, it "compels belief"; hence all that God has done and spoken to man is for demonstration, that truth may be set before the mind with perfect evidence;

But do all men believe? If so, then all men do the work of God,—then all have everlasting life. But as this is not true, we say truth was not set before their minds with perfect evidence. Why do the wicked still lack this witness? Our Savior says, "Ye will not come to me"; that is, ye will not receive the witness my Father witnesseth of me. And again, "As many as the Father hath given me shall come to me"; and "no man can come to me except the Father which hath sent me draw him; and I will raise him up at the last day."

How does the Father draw men to the Son? "It is written in your law, they shall be all taught of God; as many therefore as have heard and have learned of the Father cometh to me." It is by hearing and learning, then, that we receive the witness, and so are compelled to believe in Christ. "Search the Scriptures, ... they are they which testify of me." "If ye believe not Moses' writings, how shall ye believe my words?"

This is the way, then, men are drawn and given to Christ. But most men will not be thus drawn; they will not hear and learn of the Father. "Every plant," says the blessed Savior, "which my Father hath not planted shall be rooted up." This is the way the Father plants them, and those so planted can not be rooted up. All other plants, though they may appear never so fair, will certainly be offended and fall away. The truth—the whole truth—the truth alone, must save men.

Blessed Jesus, thou art the way, the truth, and the life. We will learn of thee. Father, we will learn of thee, and so believe in the Father and believe in thee, and work the work of God, and have everlasting life.

For the World's Crisis.

REMEMBER THE POOR.

Remember the poor, God's poor children, in these trying times, when wicked, speculating men are withholding the comforts of life from them. This constrains me to write, my feelings are such for my poor brethren. A feeling for God's poor characterized the old prophets and apostles, and all the primitive christians. They said much and did much for the poor. Jesus saved the poor, and associated himself with them in their sorrows, insomuch that he will say to them that have fed and clothed the poor, "Ye did it unto me." How much our salvation depends upon our giving to the poor, I know not, but I do know that God's blessing rests upon those who consider the poor, and they will have their reward.

Brethren, let us visit the poor in their sickness. They cannot dig, and sometimes their noble souls will not let them beg. Do not wait for them to come to you, but go to them, not only with words of comfort,—words alone are dry morsels to the hungry. They expect something more. While you are giving words of consolation they are expecting something more, and if you leave them with words only, you leave sorrow instead of joy. Your words may be few with a liberal gift of such as you have, and with God's blessing you will be to them an angel of mercy, making the heart glad. Soon God's poor children will be where they will hunger no more.

A PRAYER.

Hear! Father, hear thy children cry,
Make glad our hearts, our strength renew;
Like tender plants 'neath burning sky,
We crying faint, but cry anew.

Give us to drink, most gracious God,
That living water from on high
We find recorded in thy word,
That whoso drinks shall never die.

Beneath the shadow of that rock
Which, like thy word shall ever stand,
Hide us, dear Father, from the shock,
And shield us with thy loving hand.

Grant, Father, grant thy children's cry,
And cause to cease this dreadful dearth;
Soon may the mountain tower on high,
And its blest shadow fill the earth.

PRAYER.

Prayer is the act of supplicating or beseeching from one greater than ourselves some needed good. By prayer alone we have access to our heavenly Father. He has styled himself a prayer-hearing and a prayer-answering God. How sweet the title, and oh! how blessed the privilege to be permitted to approach the King of kings and the Lord of lords; to ask of him whatsoever we desire, knowing that if we ask aright, in faith believing that he hears, he will incline his ear unto our cry, and however feeble and imperfect our supplications, he will grant answers of peace.

And shall any needy, thirsty soul, refuse to ask a blessing from one so kind, so merciful? from one who has done so much for them? Hear his invitation. Listen to his call of mercy. Ho! every one that thirsteth, let him come and drink of the water of life freely. He invites all the poor as well as the rich. He says, "He that hath no money, let him come and buy milk and honey without money and without price."

Were there no such thing as prayer, what would the christian do in his hours of darkness, when the sun of righteousness seems almost eclipsed by the gloomy blackness of huge clouds of sin? Where, then, could he fly to escape the storm ready to overwhelm and destroy him? Sad indeed would be his condition; naught then could fill his bosom but stern despair; "bright hope" would take swift wings and fly away, and chilling, dread fear would fill the aching void.

But, thanks be to our heavenly Father, such is the condition of no one. Oh, no! the vilest sinner can come to him for mercy, and in the all prevailing name of Christ our Savior can find acceptance at the throne of grace.

HAVE PATIENCE.

"Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth."
"Blessed are the poor in spirit, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven."
"Blessed are ye when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely for my sake, . . . for great is your reward in heaven."

Then, brethren and sisters, if there are any among you that say they love Jesus, and are proud, deceitful, high-minded, have patience with them, for such can never travel with you the new earth. If there are any among you that are liars, tale-bearers, false-accusers, whoremongers, busy-bodies, that can sing, pray or preach, to make you think all is right; have great patience with them a little longer, for none such can ever enter the kingdom of heaven.

"Blessed are the pure in heart; for they shall see God." Then our intentions, our principles, and dealings with others must be pure; and our conversation must not be like the busybody, but like Christ, who is the author of all truth and purity. May the Lord help us to have patience in these last days. "In patience possess ye your souls."

"Blessed are the merciful; for they shall obtain mercy." If there are any among you ungrateful, unthankful, overbearing, taking the advantage of you at every point; have much patience with them a little longer, for soon will your trials end in an eternal weight of glory. If there are any among you that are rich, or have much of this world's goods that you may stand in need of, and withhold from you, envy them not, but have patience, and remember it is the "poor of this world, rich in faith," that will live in the kingdom of God.

Let us be patient, therefore, brethren and sisters, until the coming of the Lord; for then will all secret sins be made known, and be destroyed from off the whole earth. Then will all be true, holy and pure.

THE OPEN FOUNTAIN.

Christ, our ever ready Bethesda! All glory to his ever blessed name! He is ever ready to receive the sin-stained soul.

This morning I felt the need of a fresh application to his precious blood; and I applied not in vain. I felt its sin-atoning power. I felt forgiven and loved as if I never had sinned. O! herein is its sweetness—the sense of guilt removed—justified in him—complete in him,—to feel him our wisdom, righteousness, sanctification and redemption,—that we have this in him. What more can we ask? Is he not a complete Savior?

We do not have to work out a righteousness of our own and then bring it to Jesus to set his seal upon, and hand it in for us before his Father. Oh, no. We come to him just as we are, full of wounds, and bruises, and putrifying sores; we plunge into this fountain opened in the house of David for sin and uncleanness, and there we are made every whit whole. Glory be to God!

Our Savior in his completeness has been held up to us anew in a recent visit of our Bro. in Christ, Eld. James Morrison, pastor of a Free church in Philadelphia. As he read, in social converse, the sixth, seventh and eighth chapters of Romans, and the third of Colossians, one dear saint of God expressed herself relieved from a difficulty of years' standing, as she saw from these scriptures that Christ was her sanctification as well as her justifier on the confession of her faith,—that she had not to work out for herself her own sanctification. She was made to feel that Jesus was what his name signifies—the Savior from sin. All glory to his name! Amen.

Then on Lord's day, Aug. 7th, after accompanying us to the lake and witnessing another of the Lazarus race buried with Christ to rise to a new life, as we hope, our Bro. expounded to us, in the public congregation, the fifty-third of Isaiah, and in the evening the thirteenth of first Corinthians, in all of which the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world was exalted in an unusual manner. It did our hungry soul good, and that it may prove a blessing to others is our prayer and expectation. The leaven is in the meal here, and we can but see its workings.

The "Day-star of Zion" has made a sensation in our community, and is sought after. If any to whom it has been sent wish to make missionaries of their papers, they may send them to this office. They will find readers. Your Sister trimming her "lamp,"

PLAIN TRUTHS.

To all whom it may concern, this is to certify that I deem it to be the greatest and most important thing in the world for persons who make pretentions to piety, that they be truly consistent christians. O! may God help us to be such. God says to all christians, "Come out from the world, and be separate, and touch not the unclean thing." Now, is it right for us to speak and pray in unison with this command, and then follow the spirit and practice of the world, in all its self-gratifications of pride, anger, strife, or being busybodies in other men's matters, or following the vain and sinful fashions of the world? It is hard telling by the dress who are christians and who are not.

Again, the good Lord says, "Cleanse yourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of the Lord." Is not this all right for our christian prosperity and eternal salvation?

As it is a fact that all "the fearful, and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars, shall have their part (reward or portion) in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone, which is the second death"; is it not equally a fact that all who indulge themselves in the intemperate, unnecessary, abominable, filthy, debasing, and very sinful practice of chewing and smoking tobacco, or of taking snuff, or drinking strong tea and coffee; thus wasting their precious time and money which God has given them, will be rewarded accordingly?

N. B. There will be no such work in the kingdom of God. A word to the wise is sufficient.

☞ Always allow other people their opinions, and do not be too sure your own are right. Remember, if you are right in one particular, you may be wrong in others. Do not be defiant, nor boldly contradict; but calmly express your reasons, and patiently bear with those whose understanding is less clear or whose reason is disturbed by passion.

☞ It is not pomp or pretension, but the adaptation of the expression to the idea that clenches a writer's meaning—as it is not the size or glossiness of the materials, but their being fitted each to its place that gives strength to the arch.

LIGHT, OR DARKNESS?

BRO. GRANT:—I have received a copy of a new paper, which I suppose its supporters think is shedding new light from the chart, although I have failed to discover it, but rather that which seems tending to darkness. There are a few expressions in one article from one of its editors I wish to quote and compare with Scripture, good reason, good sense and judgment. It is this:

"There are two grand views advocated of the resurrection and judgment among those who believe in the immediate coming of Christ. One makes the resurrection general, the judgment an assize,—all men literally standing before the judgment-seat of Christ at one and the same time. * * But this required an interpretation, unjustifiable, warped, literal where it should be figurative, obscure and forced,—Adventists found it necessary to dissent from this more than twenty years ago."

Now that some Adventists may have dissented from the literal interpretation of plain Scripture may be true; but how to understand plain declarations of Bible and especially of Christ literally, may be called "unjustifiable," I do not know, or why it may be called "warped" is beyond my comprehension; or to say it is "obscure"; why, figures, it would seem to me, would be more likely to "obscure" their meaning.

To understand language literally does not seem to be an interpretation at all, at least not a "forced" one. If one had a suit being tried at law, and he should produce witnesses who should testify in plain straightforward language, would the jury be justified in understanding what they said as they said it? or would it be "unjustifiable"? Would it be "warping" or "obscuring" their testimony? Nay, verily. Let us try this case, then, by this rule. Let the readers of the Crisis be the jury. I will produce a few witnesses to testify before them. Remember the point is, "Will all men literally stand before the judgment seat of Christ?" Doubtless you will concede that the "day of wrath," "day of destruction," "perdition," etc., is the day of judgment.

The first witness is the man of Ur, Job,—"Have ye not asked them that go by the way? and do ye not know their tokens, that the wicked is reserved to the day of destruction? They shall be brought forth to the day of wrath."—Job 21: 29, 30. Where will the wicked be when that day comes? Answer. "Reserved" in their graves mostly. Well, will it "warp" or "force" this testimony to understand "brought forth to the day of wrath" to mean raised from the dead at that time?

Next witness is Solomon. Eccl. 12: 14,—"For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or evil." Perhaps you may say, This is not every "man," but his works. But why are his works brought up here if he is not to be confronted with them? God does not reward works but men for their works. Eccl. 11: 9,—"But know thou, that for all these things God shall bring thee into judgment." The one who does these works—"bad" and "good." I see no "warping" here, or need of "figures," unless we wish to "obscure" the testimony.

We will now introduce an unimpeachable witness, whose testimony is valuable and must not be disregarded with impunity. "[illegible] idle word that men shall speak they [illegible] account thereof in the day of judg[illegible] there anything in this plain, [illegible] language that can possibly be [illegible]ly not, unless it be "the day [illegible] If this be a figure, what is it [illegible] resent? Who can tell? [illegible] sinners of all ages must [illegible] can be no proxy in this [illegible] give account for his [illegible] stand the grand revie[illegible] this still more clear, [illegible] testify again. "Th[illegible] the queen of the S[illegible] judgment WITH this [illegible] demn it," etc. Her[illegible] different periods of tim[illegible] who question whether th[illegible] and "the queen of the So[illegible] eous: but this is immateri[illegible] one thing all will grant, tha[illegible] with whom they were to ris[illegible] were wicked men, and if [illegible] wicked men of past ages "rise up in [illegible] ment," all will; and as this witne[illegible] they shall thus "rise up together, I [illegible] it must be so, if indeed it is not "warping" his testimony, or taking things as "literal" where they should be figurative.

Again, "When the Son of man shall come in his glory, . . . and sit upon the throne of his glory; and before him shall be gathered all nations, and he shall separate them," etc. Here at the coming of Christ "all nations" are gathered before him. This is the judgment. Paul, what time does the judgment set? "Who shall judge the quick (living) and the dead at his appearing." But, we all believe that the living at the coming of Christ will be judged; now do you mean to say the dead are to be raised and judged too? Yes, "for we shall all stand before the judgment-seat of Christ." "Every one of us shall give account of himself to God." But, Paul, you say "us"; of course you mean believers only? O! no; "for it is written, As I live, saith God, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God." "For we must all appear before the judgment-seat of Christ, that every one may receive the things done in his body according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad." Well, Paul, you appear to believe in a general assize, when all are present and are rewarded for bad deeds as well as good ones. To this agreeth the words of the Alpha and Omega,—"Behold I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to give to every man as his works shall be." Amen.

THE DAY-STAR.

AIR—"Annie of the Vale."

The day-star is glowing, its clear beams bestowing,
Foreshadowing light the prophets long foretold;
The daylight is dawning, we'll soon hail the morning,
When heavenly light our King we shall behold!

CHORUS.

Come! come! come, sinner, come!
The Spirit and the Bride both say come;
The Savior is pleading, and angels are waiting
To carry glad tidings to their home.

Christ's kingdom is coming, the signs are fulfilling,
God's little flock are sighing for their home,
Men's hearts now are falling, they see trouble coming,
And darkness reigns where once the light has shone.

Then let us be waiting, with lamps trimmed and burning,
For soon our King will come on earth to reign;
The saints will be gathered, the wicked left severed,
To meet their doom among the nations slain.

Then haste, sinner, hasten, ere you shall awaken
To cry at last,—the day of grace is o'er;
The Spirit is pleading, and Christ's interceding
That you may come and share life evermore.

We'll watch and keep praying, and ne'er cease our singing,
Till Father calls—Good children, all come home,
To meet in the mansions of glorious redemption,
Where Christ will reign upon his Father's throne.

MY WESTERN TOUR.—NO. 4.

My last communication left me in the midst of an interesting meeting in the beautiful farming town of Utica, twenty miles west of Winona, Minn., where I felt very much at home with old and new friends around me, the friends of Jesus, who manifested a deep interest in his cause. Meetings each evening of the week with an increase of interest, as manifest by the numbers in attendance, several of whom came six miles each evening, and the good Spirit by which our meetings characterized, there being no schism in the body but a willingness to bear the cross; while the unconverted were apparently under conviction, and some started for the kingdom. The time in the season, in haying and the commencement of their heavy harvest of grain, with the wages of their help as high as three dollars or more a day, demonstrated our duty to be to continue the meeting over another Sabbath, hoping some might be saved in consequence, to inherit a glorious immortality.

On the Sabbath, July 11th, a day most oppressively warm, we had by far the largest congregation of our meeting, more than could possibly get into the house, so that many were seated in wagons at the windows and around the house, who were perfectly quiet while I preached a long sermon, arguing the nearness and character of "the end of all things," and the important practical duties belonging to us in view of these truths. I was never more gratified with the attention given to the word, than in this instance. After an intermission for refreshment, the house was filled for the exercises of a Sabbath School and interesting Bible class, in which most of the young people engaged with many elder ones, the readings and examinations of which were very interesting, Elders Page and Ramer taking part. We see in this exercise the promise of great usefulness, and hope that as often as the "first day of the week" returns, a large number of the young and old may gather there to learn and "search the Scriptures," and thereby be "made wise unto salvation," inspired by a worthy ambition to excel under the wise and kind superintendence of Bro. Barrett, and the instruction of their teachers. I shall think of them on future Sabbaths, and the pleasant seasons I had with them.

At five, P. M., I preached outside the house, on account of the intense heat, on the "sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow," and closed the services of our meeting of days by the observance of the "Supper," spreading a long table in the house, around which about thirty sat down to "eat the bread, and drink the wine" with mingled emotions, as we thought "of the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow" in a "little while."

"How bright the vision; oh! how long
Shall that glad hour delay?"

While eating, some good testimonies were given by elders and brethren present, and we "sung a hymn and went out," to separate to go our several ways. Oh, the bitterness of parting! I have realized it many a time, but the joy of the final meeting—how I long to share it. While bidding adieu to these brethren, "ready to depart on the morrow," I gave them my last words of counsel, which I hope will be remembered, and I got the promise from many that they would be faithful and meet me in the kingdom, while some who were deeply convicted in the meeting made the faithful promise to do the best they could to serve the Lord. I trust they will keep their pledge and be useful in the cause of truth. There are two youngerly men of good abilities who have enjoyed religion, and preached the word, who joined the army to fight with "carnal weapons," and lost the favor of God as we might expect, with whom I conversed, one of whom confessed his wrong in meeting and promised me, as I left him, that he would do his best to serve the Lord, which I hope he will do, and God will make him a blessing. I shall pray for him, and the other also.

Many in the places I have visited have urged me to sell my home east, and move into this western field to labor for God, and surely here is a chance for labor—an inviting field, large enough for several to occupy—with means enough to sustain them by taking a proper course. The advantages of the soil for a living are great, unequalled. It is hard for me to realize as I look out on the broad prairies under good cultivation, interspersed with groves and wood land, laid out in square fields fenced and supplied with comfortable houses for the most part, good and convenient roads that cost no labor to make them and keep them in repair, that I am in a country only from five to ten years old.

Only for this dreadful war, what a country this would be. At present the farmers are realizing great prices for their wheat. It has risen in a few weeks from sixty-five cents to as high as $2,10 per bushel, although it has fallen a little of late.

On Monday morning it became my sad duty to part with Mr. Leonard's family, mutually painful to us all. Sr. Leonard was the fruit of my labor in Canada East some years since. I baptized her, and with my companion have passed many sunny hours at her home with her interesting family. But as with all earthly pleasure interruption came. I moved farther east and they to the far west, and during their residence here, two years of church western life had greatly depressed Sr. Leonard's enjoyment and almost overcome her. But she has been much revived, and tells me she has got back where she was when living east at her sequestered home, she daily sought a dark room in her chamber, her frequent, her chosen place of prayer, which was often joyous as paradise, and gilded with the bright sunshine of heaven. May she henceforth have such an altar in her western home; and her husband to go with her to the "mercy seat," as he is now with her in theory, and her interesting daughters also. I love to think of my new acquaintances—brethren and kind friends in this place, as Bro. Shield's family, the Cheathams, Lovejoy and others. May God bless them all.

This day, a very warm one, I journeyed with my friend, Mr. Leonard, through a diversified country of beautiful prairie farms, oak openings, and deep, deep gorges, as Root river, which we reached by descending a deep valley three miles and left by a similar ascent. These deep beds of western rivers are romantic places, with the high bluffs over-hanging you, you pass down deep, narrow, winding ravines to the rivers as the Mississippi and other rivers. On these streams the greater part of the wood land is mostly oak, short and light compared with eastern forests; hence on account of these deep river-beds, much of this prairie land is drained of water, which is one inconvenience of the west, yet in many places on the prairies it is sufficiently plenty.

We put up rather late at night at a little Norwegian village in the town of Newburg, Minn., over forty miles south of Utica, near the Iowa line. We were well entertained. The Norwegians here are converts to Methodism, and have a church edifice and a minister of their own tongue, and are industrious and good citizens. I find there is a strange blending of nationalities in this great west, the refuge or place of resort of adventurers, of the homeless and the landless; and this is a fact that affects the proclamation of Bible truth here. All sorts of prejudices must be overcome, and all kinds of religious opinions dealt with. The odds and ends meet here.

After a night of refreshing rest, in good health I rose to behold a beautiful morning, to part with my kind friend, Mr. Leonard, who was under the necessity of returning to his business, leaving me to pursue my journey to Hesper, Iowa, my next place of stopping; and it being a busy season for the teams, for they do the mowing and reaping—and almost all the farm work, and single wagons being extremely scarce so that I must hire a double team if any, the distance to Hesper being but six miles, I concluded to start early and go on foot, which I did, shouldering my heavy valise and taking a small travelling bag in my hand, I pushed on with zeal over Richland Prairie, one of the richest, and well cultivated.

I reached the residence of an able farmer by the name of Thomson, a distance of three miles, where, being fatigued and thirsty, I called for drink. Here I found a pleasant family of Methodists, soon became acquainted with them, told them I was an Advent preacher, and had an interesting conversation with them, and a good breakfast with a hearty welcome. They did not seem to be cursed with bigotry like too many others, but were free to converse, confessing that the cause of religion was low among them, although not wanting in numbers; said that three of their last preachers had entered the army, and consequently they had no preaching this year. They confessed that it did not look right for ordained preachers of the gospel of PEACE to rush on to the angry conflict, and bathe their hands in the life-blood of their enemies, whom their Master had taught them to love. Strange times are these truly. Let us beware. Came on to Hesper, a beautiful village in an oak grove, whose boast is, that unlike to most western villages, strong drink has never been sold here, nothing stronger than tea can be obtained here. Hence it is not a drunken hole of filth of every kind, but a cleanly, thrifty looking place, the dominant or most numerous religious sect being the "Friends," who are a friendly people.

Among the pleasant homes of this village is the beautiful residence of Bro. John McKee, formerly of Stanbridge, C. E., who spent a large share of his boyhood days with his uncle, who was his tutor, on the little farm I now own. I found my way to this pilgrim home, and felt truly at home with his pleasant family. Had a large meeting last night, and was requested to continue longer, but had to decline doing so. I go to Burr Oak, six miles distant, to preach this evening, and shall continue this series of articles for the gratification of numerous friends, and the glory of God; and as heretofore, I request the prayers of the faithful. Yours in "the faith,"

NUMBER TWELVE.

THE DEATH OF JACOB.

The long and eventful life of Jacob is drawing to its close, and he gathers his children around him for the last time to give them his parting blessing. While they silently gather around his couch, his mind is wandering over the scenes of the [illegible], and come back to him now in all their bright reality.

Once more he recalls the blessing of his father Isaac, his long service for those he loved, his wrestling with the angel till he obtained the wished-for blessing of heaven—the promise of God that his posterity should obtain the possession of Canaan. Also the scenes of his many wanderings came up before him, wandering in a land he did not possess, but which should some day bloom in verdure around the happy homes of his descendants. He remembers, too, his sorrow for the supposed death of Joseph, and his joy in the happy reunion, and lastly his removal to the beautiful land of Goshen, where his last days had been spent in peace and quiet.

The vision of the past fades away, and he turns his eyes upon those who have obeyed his summons. Bestowing his benediction upon them in turn, he comes to Judah, and beholding the future glory of his tribe he exclaims, "Judah, thou art he whom thy brethren shall praise: thy hand shall be on the neck of thine enemies; thy father's children shall bow down before thee." Beholding his exaltation and triumph, he goes on: "Judah is a lion's whelp; from the prey, my son, thou art gone up; he stooped down, he crouched as a lion, and as an old lion; who shall rouse him up?" Then beholding the dawn of a still brighter day, the rising of a star of hope to the nations, he exclaims in an ecstasy of prophetic joy, "The sceptre shall not depart from Judah, nor a lawgiver from between his feet, until Shiloh come; and unto him shall the gathering of the people be."

Thus he gives a glimpse of the Redeemer—a promise bright with the ineffable glory of the far off future. Each of his remaining sons receives his last benediction, and he then charges them to bury him in the cave of Machpelah with his kindred. He has breathed a father's last words of counsel, and given his last charge according to the faith he has in the solemn promises of Jehovah that his seed should some day possess the goodly land where he had long wandered with his flocks.

He gazes out upon the fields once more, glowing with the freshness and beauty of Egypt's fairest province; the breath of the verdant fields kisses his time-wrinkled brow; he gathers up his feet upon the couch, and the long life of the patriarch is ended.

Deep is the mourning for their father. Solemn and impressive are the funeral rites. A host of mourners follow the bier of the patriarch to the sacred cave of Machpelah, which contains the dust of his wife and kindred. There they bury him, Jacob their father, by the side of those who had fallen in the years before him. There they leave him to slumber till the last trump shall awaken the dust in Machpelah to immortal life.

The heads of the tribes go back to Egypt feeling that a great prince had departed, but little dreaming how soon the wave of oppression would sweep over many who saw in childish wonder the pageant of the patriarch's burial.

SEWING MACHINES.

Among the marvels of these latter days there are few more convenient or wonderful than the sewing machine. It has wrought a revolution in many departments of human industry. The needle has been the reliance and ruin of multitudes. To "stitch, stitch, stitch," has been the tedious labor of many a fair and gentle-handed lady, and what with the stooping posture, the enforced confinement, and the scanty reward of patient and protracted toil, death has speedily closed up the wretched existence of many of those whose sole dependence was the needle.

The poor tired-out housewife, who, wearied with too many cares and labors, at last when the tired children and the fretful babe are safely locked in slumber sits down to sew by the midnight lamp, and interlace the thread of her own precious life amid the shreds and patches with which she clothes her little ones,—she, too, has found at last that the needle was her tyrant rather than her servant, and beneath its rule she has died.

The sewing machine changes all this. One sewing machine is equal to two "sewing societies" minus the mistakes, the bungling, the confusion, the tea, the talk, and the flirtations. On various kinds of sewing a smart woman can take from twenty to forty stitches per minute, but with a machine I have counted, I think, some eight hundred stitches; and while a fair ratio is from three hundred to six hundred stitches per minute, or twenty or thirty times as fast as hand sewing, they can be run at from fifteen hundred to two thousand stitches per minute. Just think of it,—a woman gets an hour to sew, and in that time with a machine she does a full day's work, and that without the fatigue and burden which any hand sewer must feel.

A housekeeper with a sewing machine needs to hire no seamstress; she has an iron one that never kills itself with tight lacing or dyspepsia, nor gives up by noon sick with the headache. A young woman with a sewing machine is independent. It will bring her in more money than many a husband would, and would never grumble when she uses it either; and besides it will neither smoke, drink, flirt with the girls, nor run up a board bill for her to pay. Still, notwithstanding all this, no doubt some silly girls will prefer beaux and husbands to a "Wheeler & Wilson"; but plenty who have tried husbands would like the chance to choose again and take the machine, I warrant you.

But the best of all is when having got a good husband, he, nice man that he is, goes and buys the sewing machine, and perhaps learns to run it himself; and while she sits and cuts and bastes the cloth, he runs it through the machine with a rush, and, like magicians who pull all sorts of things out of all manner of strange places, so he tumbles in bits of cloth at one end and pulls out at the other all manner of those men's clothes, women's clothes, boys' clothes, girls' clothes, and baby clothes, which are so handy to have in the house, where a happy couple live.

Now, my friend, hadn't you better go and get your wife a sewing machine? It will be better than to get a new wife when yours has sewed herself to death, won't it?

"What will it cost?"

O! any where from fifty to one hundred dollars and thereabouts.

"Can't afford it."

O, you can't! How long will it take you to make up that amount of money in cigars at present prices? Sell a cow, if you have several, and buy a machine. Sell a horse and buy a machine. Use the old furniture and buy a machine. Use the old wagon and buy a machine. Wear the old clothes and buy a machine. A machine is better than a melodeon. A machine is better than a piano; and besides with a machine first you can save and earn enough to buy many other things.

"What one shall I get?" Well, almost any of half a dozen different ones will help you wonderfully; but still it is as well to get the best when you are about it.

"But which is the best?" Well, I never used either. Still I have heard of some objections to several. One makes a ridge on one side of the cloth; one wastes thread; one is noisy; one gets out of order; one ravels too easy, etc., and the pretty general decision is that the "Wheeler and Wilson" machine is for all general purposes the best. This has been the verdict at some eighteen State Fairs, besides hundreds of other fairs. The prices range from $50 to $120—the difference being mainly in style, finish and ornamentation, the cheaper ones doing the same work equally well.

The other day I was conversing with a friend who for years had had charge of a large cloak manufactory in Boston; and he informed me that they used "Wheeler and Wilson's" machine exclusively, as did the other large manufacturers with which he was acquainted. It makes the lock stitch alike on both sides, will not ravel, and was decidedly the best for all general purposes, in his opinion.

The fact that the sales of this machine have steadily increased from 799 machines in 1853, to 21,306 in 1859, an increase of almost thirty-fold in seven years (and I know not how large it has been since 1859), shows that there must be good reasons for preferring this machine. The company's large and splendid manufactory, it is said, can produce five hundred machines per day.

Persons who wish for information, prices, descriptions, etc., can obtain circulars of the company's agents, or by addressing "Wheeler and Wilson Manufacturing Company, 505 Broadway, N. Y., or 228 Washington St., Boston."

I have been informed also that ministers of the gospel of all denominations can be accommodated with Wheeler and Wilson's machines at reduced prices, and I think few gifts would be more welcome to a poor worn-out preacher's wife than a good sewing machine. Who is willing to raise $50 or $75 to buy one for this purpose?

WHO WILL HELP FURNISH THE WESTERN TENT?

Hark! my friends. Listen to the voice that comes from the far West! The Lord God of Israel is still to be worshiped; his truth is still to be proclaimed; listening multitudes are yet to hear the proclamation of the speedy coming of the "King" who shall "reign in righteousness." Year after year have we heard the glad tidings in our favored region, and our hearts have been gladdened by the prospect before us, and now to the regions beyond do these same tidings need to be more fully published. And how shall they hear without a preacher? and how shall the preacher preach, except he have some place in which to preach? for ofttimes the rain, and again the scorching heat of the sun, render it impracticable to be in the open air entirely; and in some places there are no buildings suitable to be occupied for such a purpose; and when there are such, their occupancy is frequently forbidden to those whose minds have been enlightened in regard to the truth which should be proclaimed in thunder tones at the present time.

We have an efficient preacher in the western field. Bro. Himes, whose zeal and ability are well known, has, with a portion of that self-sacrificing spirit which characterized his Master, left the associations of his early home, and located himself in the West, for the express purpose of spreading light on the most important theme which can engage the attention of man. And now for the place in which he may address those who will gather to hear. Brethren, sisters, will you help furnish it?—not a costly structure, with a "towering spire, almost commingling with the skies;" nor a fixed one, which can only be serviceable for a single spot; but a temporary and movable one, like those in which the patriarchs of old sojourned. With such a place of worship the preacher may remove as occasion may demand, from one place to another. When his work is done in one place, he can go to the next; and so on, until the glad tidings have been proclaimed everywhere.

I know there is much to be done in the East; numerous and increasing are the calls for help which come to those whom the Lord has made stewards of his bounty; and the few whose hearts have been enlarged and are willing to heed these calls, hardly know which to respond to first; but can we not be a little more self-sacrificing—can we not deny ourselves of some luxury, or even comfort, that we may hear this call and help prepare the way by which the swarming population of the growing West can efficiently have the present truth proclaimed to them? I feel that it is a noble cause to aid; who else feels so? I will give my mite; who else will give theirs? I desire to have it said of me, "She hath done what she could;" who else has the same desire?

Come, ye expectants of the coming One, let us awake to the weighty responsibility that rests upon us, to be active in spreading the light we have received. It is no time to be hoarding treasures for the fires of the last day to consume. Better give liberally, and to the extent of our ability, giving up our possessions in the present world, seeking our portion in the world to come; and be among those to whom a crown immortal, a kingdom eternal, and a life evermore shall be given.

THE ABYSS OF SPIRITUALISM.

BRO. GRANT:—My attention was attracted to a letter of Sr. Willard's, with extracts from a correspondence from a sister, who had narrowly escaped "the abyss of Spiritualism," and to the "Remarkable Dream." It revived within me the conviction that I must write. But what to say! My ample experience with that inconceivably subtle and horrible delusion, makes me very confident that the dear sister does not yet know herself,—worse, does not know the workings of that truly awful power which she thinks she has escaped. But to declare it is not to prove it, and perhaps none but those thoroughly experienced in detecting the traces of that magnetic influence would at all believe me were I to state that her writings, especially the dream, bear strong traces of the delusion.

It is with hesitation that I speak thus, and I would assure the sister that only the kindest feeling and a sense of duty prompt me to it. I am sure when she is entirely free, when the spell is broken, she will see it herself, yet I should add, it may require many and terrible experiences to give her a full acquaintance with this mystery of iniquity. It will look presumptuous to those who are as yet untried, to write thus, and let me say, I do not write with a view to prevent their trial by the same means; for it is utterly impossible that human power should resist this superhuman magnetism, of which, as stated in the Crisis, the agents are wicked spirits, and powerful ones too. Watching and prayer are the only means which we can use. They save us through the goodness of God, but they do not prevent the trial.

Daniel wrote, "Many shall be made white and tried!" Every child of God must be made white, every one proved. It cannot be that any of the "elect" shall escape. As long ago as when he wrote that, the type of this ordeal was given, when the Hebrew children went through the fiery furnace; but the form of one like the Son of man went with them. The church is going through that furnace, and the fire is seven times hotter than the fires of any other trials we can endure; and this fact can only be understood by the experienced, for no others can conceive of the fiendish subtlety and power of Spiritualism. O! children of the Most High, look to your footing! You cannot be too vigilant, and write upon your hearts the precious words of Christ, uttered, as I believe, for this hour of all others that have passed since he stood on earth, "Because thou hast kept the word of my patience, I also will keep thee from the hour of temptation that shall come upon all the world to try them that dwell upon the earth."

In the dream which she relates, I see the identical workings of the illusion with those which I have experienced in wonderful visions, both waking and sleeping, which now I know were but the leading cords of those invisible seducers, to draw me deeper into their snares. They work by flattery. It can be traced in all their illusions. They pet self wherever it can be touched; for instance, they would have the sister believe that she was to give the offer of mercy to the multitude; and the deep fervor and warm zeal which she expresses are no evidence of the truth of her vision, because the most extreme devotion and zeal of the real christian are exactly imitated by the impostors and put upon their victims. O to be able to discern between the spirits which have gone out into the world!

As to the voices which she heard in her dream I have often heard them, even, as I thought, the very voice of God, with all the awful solemnity yet ineffable tenderness of the loving Father. Once he spoke to me (as I thought), and it was followed by another which I thought I detected to be the voice of a lying spirit, feigning to be his. I prayed to be saved from its power. Indeed I had been uncommonly diligent and earnest in prayer, but I did not perceive till long after that both were lying voices. The most fervent glow of devotion, the most radiant desire to do good, usually accompanied the illusions which they flung around me. Tongue cannot even feebly tell the unutterable intensity of feeling which at such times has tortured me to the extreme point of mental and physical endurance, varied by seasons of exquisite joy and peace, which also were entirely false.

She speaks of the voice, saying, "The seal is about to be set." So did the wicked ones exercise me on that point, and I was led to agonize that it might be set on my forehead. This was but a little episode in a wonderful drama which they enacted with me, playing upon my feelings in every way by which they could mislead. No doubt this is the sealing time, and they know it. But oh! beware! Let not Satan deceive you by taking a seasonable truth to do it with, for that is precisely his way. Do not be deceived by the plausible reasoning and real truths scattered through their teachings.

These "powers of darkness" have demoniac artfulness, and do not scruple to use God's own weapons to overcome His believers, as they are the most potent in dealing with those who have the truth.

Those "terrible flags"—no need of words to describe them, too well I understand the awful spirit that hovered about them like a breath of the sulphurous smoke, the gloom and horror of that Tartarean darkness, where probably the spirits formerly dwelt. No, dear sister, let us not think we have "escaped the abyss of Spiritualism." We shall be in the furnace, liable at any time to frequent and long contests with the enemy, until the battle of the last great day. Then, by the grace of God, we shall be more than conquerors, by as much as our enemies are more than human in their power and skill.

When I realize what frequent and truly terrible experiences I have passed through, my soul shudders, grows faint and sick with horror, and cries out, How long, O Lord, how long? But I feel that it cannot be long. At this rate of progress Satan will soon have gathered in his own; then shall the rising of a new day bring to us a joy and peace as real and enduring as the truth and immortality of God, and our elder Brother, the King of kings and Lord of lords, will take us to his victorious and everlasting rest.

THE GIFT.

I see before me a beautiful gift, and so bright and unsullied does it appear that I cannot compare it to any thing short of a "pearl of great price." But it is not one of earthly extraction, for an heavenly Friend obtained it from the deep fountain of eternal love. And I have learned from the word of truth, that if I live in obedience to the commands of this heavenly Friend, this invaluable gift is to be mine; and so anxious am I to obtain the prize, I feel like laying hold on it by faith, and holding it fast in hope. For I am aware that if I, through disobedience, forfeit my right and title to this free gift, death must be my portion. But if through faithfulness and obedience gain it, eternal life, unalloyed by sin, sorrow and death, will be mine. Rom. 6: 23. "For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord."

Dear friends, let us so run that we may win this sweet and precious boon—eternal life—which is the "free gift" of God through Jesus to fallen man.

Eternal life! eternal life!
We have it through the Savior;
Eternal life! Eternal life!
Oh! come, and live forever.

ANECDOTE OF DR. BEECHER.

The following anecdote of Dr. Beecher, communicated to the Northern Monthly by C. E. Stowe, gives a characteristic glimpse of the man, and at the same time illustrates a true principle of action:—

Beecher's simplicity, buoyancy and imperturbable good humor disarmed opposition when he came in personal contact with an opponent. An old wood-sawyer, whom we will call W——, a rough, strong, shrewd man, who belonged to a rival sect, was violently prejudiced against the Doctor, especially on account of his total abstinence principles. He had never seen him, and would not hear him preach. This man had a large lot of wood to saw opposite to the Doctor's house. The Doctor depended upon constant manual labor for keeping up his own health; and in Boston, where he could not enjoy the luxury of a garden to dig in, he was often puzzled to find means to keep himself in good working order. The consequence was that he sawed all the wood for his own large family; and often finding that too little, would beg the privilege of sawing at the wood-pile of a neighbor. He was fastidious in the care of his wood-saw, having it always at hand in his study, half concealed among minutes of councils, incomplete magazine articles and sermons, and the setting of his saw was often duly accomplished while he settled nice points of theology with his boys, or took counsel with brother ministers.

Looking out of his study window one day, when his own wood-pile was reduced to a discouraging state of order—every stick sawed and split—he saw, with envy, the pile of old W. in the street. Forthwith he seized his saw, and soon the old sawyer of the street beheld a man, without cravat and in his shirt-sleeves, issuing from Dr. Beecher's house, who came briskly up and asked if he wanted a hand at his pile; and forthwith fell to work with a right good will, and soon proved to his brother sawyer that he was no mean hand at the craft.

Nodding his head significantly at the opposite house W. said:

"You live there?"

B. "Yes."

W. "Work for the old man?"

B. "Yes."

W. "What sort of an old fellow is he?"

B. "Oh, pretty much like the rest of us. Good man enough to work for."

W. "Tough old chap, ain't he?"

B. "Guess so, to them that try to chaw him up."

So the conversation went on till the wood went so fast with the new comer that W. exclaimed:

"First rate saw that of yourn!"

This touched the Doctor in a tender point. He had set that saw as carefully as the articles of his creed—every tooth was critically adjusted, and so he gave a smile of triumph.

"I say," said W., "Where can I get a saw like that?"

B. "I do not know, unless you buy mine."

W. "Will you trade? What do you ask?"

B. "I do not know. I will think about it. Call at the house to-morrow and I will tell you."

The next day the old man knocked, and met the Doctor at the door, fresh from the hands of his wife, with his coat brushed and cravat tied, going out to pastoral duty.

W. gave a start of surprise.

"Oh," said the Doctor, "you are the man that wanted to buy my saw. Well, you shall have it for nothing—only let me have some of your wood to saw when you work on my street."

W. said that he then felt as if he wanted to crawl into an auger-hole.

LITTLE METTIE.*

Little Mettie is asleep,
Wherefore should his parents weep?
Fold his hands across his breast,
Let the little loved one rest.

Little Mettie had begun
Life's uncertain race to run;
For an hour he sojourned here
On this earth so dark and drear.

But his Shepherd, Christ, foreknew
Dangers living souls pass through;
Hence he bid him in the grave,
Shielding him from many a wave.

Mother, let the dear boy sleep,
Father, sister, do not weep;
Soon the glorious morn will break,
And the dead to life awake.

Brother, you will miss him here,
O'er his grave shed many a tear;
But if Christ your Shepherd be,
Soon the loved one you may see.

He shall live to die no more,
Lovelier, dearer than before;
You shall hear his cherub voice
Making heavenly hosts rejoice.

Over in the better land,
Near the Savior's throne he'll stand,
Singing loud and sweet and clear,
"Jesus leads the children here!"

I THOUGHT IT WAS MY MOTHER'S VOICE.

A friend told me not long ago, a beautiful story about kind words. A good lady passed a drinking saloon just as the keeper was thrusting a young man into the street. He was very young and very pale, but his haggard face and wild eyes told that he was very far gone in the road to ruin, and with an oath he brandished his clenched fists, threatening to be revenged on the man who had ill-used him. This young man was so excited and blinded with passion, that he did not see the lady who stood very near to him, until she laid her hand on his arm, and spoke in her gentle loving voice, and asked him what was the matter.

At the first kind word he started as if a heavy blow had struck him, and turned quickly round paler than before, and trembling from head to foot. He surveyed the lady for a moment, and then with a sigh of relief he said,

"I thought that was my mother's voice, it sounded strangely like! But her voice has been hushed in death these many years."

"You had a mother then, and she loved you," said she.

With that sudden revulsion of feeling which often comes to people of fine nervous temperaments, the young man burst into tears, and sobbed out, "Oh yes, I had an angel mother and she loved her boy! But since she died all the world has been against me, and I am lost to honor, lost to decency, and lost forever!"

"No, not lost forever; for God is merciful, and his pitying love can reach the chief of sinners," said the lady in her soft, sweet voice; and the timely words swept the hidden chords of feeling which had long been untouched in the young man's heart, thrilling it with magic power, and wakening a host of tender emotions, which had been buried very deep beneath the rubbish of sin and crime.

More gentle words the lady spoke, and when she passed on her way the young man followed her. He marked the house she entered, and wrote the name which was on the silver door-plate, in his memorandum book. Then he went slowly away with a deeper, earnest look on his pale face, and a deeper and more earnest feeling in his heart.

Years glided by, and the gentle lady had quite forgotten the incident we have related, when one day a stranger sent up his card, and desired to speak with her.

Wondering who it could be, she went down to the parlor, where she found a noble looking, well dressed man, who rose deferentially to meet her. Holding out his hand, he said:

"Pardon me, madam, for this intrusion; but I have come many miles to thank you for the great service you rendered me a few years ago," said he, in a trembling voice.

The lady was puzzled, and asked for an explanation, as she did not remember ever having seen the gentleman before.

"I have changed so much," said the man, "that you have quite forgotten me; but though I only saw your face once, I am sure I should have recognized it any where. And your voice, too, is so like my mother's."

Those last words made the lady remember the young man she had kindly spoken to in front of the drinking saloon so long before, and she mingled her tears with those which were falling slowly over the man's cheeks.

After the first gush of emotion had subsided, the gentleman told the lady how those few gentle words had been instrumental in saving him, and making him what he was then.

"The earnest expression of 'No, not lost forever,' followed me wherever I went," said he, "and it always seemed that it was the voice of my mother speaking to me from the tomb. I repented of my many transgressions, and resolved to live in Jesus as my mother would be pleased to have me; and by the mercy and grace of God I have been enabled to resist temptation, and keep my good resolutions."

"I never dreamed there was such power in a few kind words before," exclaimed the lady, "and surely ever after this I shall take more pains to speak them to all the sad and suffering ones I meet in the walks of life."—From Sunny Faces.

KEEPING THE GOLDEN RULE.

"Please, sir, will you ring the door-bell for me?" said a short, fat girl, to a gentleman who was passing a house before which she stood vainly trying to reach the bell-handle. The tall gentleman was either too proud or too busy with his own thoughts, to give much attention to Miss Annie's request. He merely glanced at her as he brushed past, and said,—

"Go away! I have nothing for you."

Poor Annie felt pained, for she was a nice little girl, and did not like to be mistaken for a beggar. So she sighed, looked at the door in despair, and said, half aloud,—

"Oh dear! what shall I do?"

Just then a stout boy, with a big basket filled with groceries, came walking toward her. "I won't ask him," said Annie to herself. "I don't believe he would help me, and he might make fun of me."

But the boy stopped at the door-step and put down his basket. He had seen her trouble as he came up the street, and had pitied her. His face was full of sunshine as he smiled on Annie, and said,—

"Can't you reach the bell? Let me ring it for you."

"Oh, I shall be so glad," replied Annie. "I've been waiting here ever so long, and I'm so tired."

The boy rang the bell, the door was opened, and Annie's trouble was ended.

Now the golden rule given by Jesus says, "Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so unto them." Did that proud gentleman keep this rule when he gave little Annie that rude answer?

You guess not, eh? You think if he had been in Annie's place and she in his he would have wanted her to ring the bell, eh? Very good.

And how about the boy? He kept the golden rule did he? Right again. Once more: how is it with you, Nellie Scornful? do you keep the golden rule when you toss your head and laugh at poor Ellen Dull because she can't say her lesson? How with you, Ned Lazybones, when you sat toasting your toes before the stove last winter, and left little Harry to do the chores alone? How with you all, my children? Do you all keep the golden rule of Jesus?—S. S. Advocate.

GOD TAKES CARE OF US.

A kind woman, hunting up the children of want one cold day last winter, tried to open a door in the third story of a wretched house, when she heard a little voice say, "Pull the string up higher." She looked up and saw a string, which, on being pulled, lifted the latch, and she opened the door upon two little half-naked children all alone. Very cold and pitiful they looked.

"Do you take care of yourselves, little ones?" asked the good woman.

"God takes care of us," said the oldest.

"And are you not very cold? no fire on a day like this!"

"Oh, when we are very cold, we creep under the quilt, and I put my arm round Tommy, and Tommy puts his arm round me, and we say, 'Now I lay me down to sleep,' then we get warm," said the little girl.

"And what do you have to eat, pray?"

"When granny comes home she fetches us something. Granny says God has got enough. Granny calls us God's sparrows; and we say, 'Our Father,' and 'daily bread' every day. God is our Father."

Tears came in the good woman's eyes. She had a mistrusting spirit herself; but these two little "sparrows," perched in that cold upper chamber, taught her a sweet lesson of faith and trust that she will never forget.

And have you, children, who have almost everything else, this sweet spirit of content and thankfulness?

THE SECRET.—There were two little sisters whom no one could see without loving, for they were always so happy together. No cross words, no pouts, no slaps, no running away in a pet. On the green before the door, trundling hoop, playing with Rover, they were always the same sweet-tempered little girls.

"You never seem to quarrel," I said to them one day; how is it you are always so happy together?"

They looked up, and the eldest answered—

"I 'spose 'tis cause Addie lets me, and I lets Addie."

DO NOT MAKE EXCUSES.—Children, do not form the habit of making excuses. If you have done wrong, be willing to own it. Do not try to hide it or throw the blame on another. A person who is quick at making excuses, is not very likely to be good for anything else, or to be loved and honored.

FINISH THY WORK.

Finish thy work, the time is short,
The sun is in the west;
The night is coming down—till then
Think not of rest.

Yes, finish all thy work, then rest;
Till then, rest never;
The rest prepared for thee by God,
Is rest forever.

Finish thy work, then wipe thy brow;
Ungird thee from thy toil!
Take breath, and from each weary limb
Shake off the soil.

Finish thy work, then sit thee down
On some celestial hill,
And of its strength reviving air
Take thou thy fill.

Finish thy work, then go in peace,
Life's battle fought and won,
Hear from the throne the Master's voice,
"Well done! well done!"

Finish thy work, then take thy harp,
Give praise to God above;
Sing a new song of mighty joy
And endless love.

Give thanks to Him who held thee up
In all thy path below,
Who made thee faithful unto death,
And crowns thee now.

THE WAR.
ITS ORIGIN—PROGRESS—END.

BY HENRY W. DANN.

(Concluded.)

END OF THE WAR.

When will this cruel war be over? what are the prospects to-day? are questions that agitate every heart. Some say the end is nigh at hand, others can see no gleam of light through the dark war-cloud that lowers over the sky.

In attempting to answer these questions, we must obtain clear views of the period of time in which we live. And all the light that is required for this purpose is furnished in the prophecies of the word of God.

We are living in the last days. The present age is full of evidence on this point; and to the student of the Bible and of history the events of to-day are but the fulfillment of prophecies uttered more than a thousand years ago. The kingdoms of this world are fast passing away.

The Babylonian kingdom, 677 B. C.; the Medo Persian, 538 B. C.; the Grecian, 332 B. C.; the Roman, 30 B. C.; are among the nations that were, but are not. The first three arose, shone, and passed away. The last, through divisions, has been shorn of all its strength and glory. These divided kingdoms exist to-day. But what say the Scriptures in reference to them? "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom that shall never be destroyed. . . . . It shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever." The age in which we live, then, is the age in which we look for the "everlasting kingdom of God" to be set up, by the appearance on earth of Jesus Christ, who will destroy the wicked by the brightness of his coming. Such being the fact we are not to look for the prosperous days that we have heretofore enjoyed; but on the contrary must expect commotion, distress and perplexity until the Lord shall come.

But the horrors of war may be very materially mitigated, and to a certain extent done away, by proper legislation, earnest prayer to God, and the co-operation of christian men. As a christian I should say, let fighting alone and the war will die a natural death. But I cannot hope for this so long as men continue to defy the Almighty God.

There will undoubtedly be a cessation of hostilities some time, but how shall we bring it about? The majority say, "Fight it out." Now allowing that this can be done, when we consider the frightful waste of life that it would occasion, it becomes us to inquire if there is not a better way. We answer emphatically, there is. To bring about a solution of our difficulties and end the war, that is so far as we can expect an end, we should immediately

1. Proclaim an armistice. This is imperatively demanded if we look no further than to rest an exhausted army. Again, it would give the rebellious people of the South a respite in which to think over the past and the prospects of the future. It would enable the people of this great nation to breathe more freely and discuss more calmly the great questions at issue. It would inspire the people with hope, it would cheer the despondent, and help to inaugurate a reign of peace.

2. Call a convention. Get the voice of the people on this mighty question. Let there be a gathering together of people from every State. Let there be a free expression of opinion and interchange of sentiment. Let the South be made to feel that we are not waging this war to crush and destroy them, but for the mutual interests of all concerned. At this convention let no party question be raised, no "vain strife about words" be indulged; but as far as possible let harmony prevail, and whatever difference there may be let it be honest and not from sinister or impure motives.

3. Consider terms of peace. Let that be the prime object before us. Let there be a mutual interchange of feeling between the different sections of country represented. And let it be fully understood that a suspension of hostilities has been ordered for the express purpose of bringing about a reconciliation. Let every effort possible be put forth to bring about this desired result. I tell you such a course savors of the purest patriotism and the highest type of loyalty, notwithstanding what political babblers may say to the contrary. The national honor and life are staked on this question of peace. The good of humanity and the welfare of this great republic are suspended on the question of a speedy termination of this terrible strife. I have no sympathy with those who cry peace, peace, while war lurks in every avenue of their hearts. Such cry peace from party motives, and have not the good of the nation at heart. A political peace is just no peace at all; and if it is gained will only rise up in the future to embarrass and overturn the government under which we live.

4. A firmer trust in Almighty God. In the midst of our former prosperity we had well nigh forgotten God. We have boasted in our strength, and neglected to look to the hills from whence it came. And the only wonder with me is that God has not cast us off forever, and driven us down to that land of darkness where mercy and hope are strangers for ever.

The Chicago Times says: "The physicians of this place hold secrets which, if made known, would cause the community to run stark mad with wonder. If the vice and crime and debauchery were exposed to the broad light of critical inspection, this fair earth would assume an aspect so hideous that angels would weep, devils laugh, and the good and virtuous would lift up their hands in holy horror, and sigh for the extinction of this sinful age." And were the truth known in regard to the state of morals in our country to-day we would stand appalled at the prospect before us. Let us, then, as a nation repent of our sins, and humble ourselves in the sight of God.

And finally, let the revealed will of God be the supreme law of the land and nation, and a change as great and glorious as can well be conceived will take place even here in this land of woe and death. Such are my views of the crisis through which we are passing to-day.

I have endeavored very briefly to set forth the origin, progres, and coming end of this cruel war. I have hinted at some measures calculated to inaugurate a reign of peace. But after all I do not look for permanent peace in these last days of the nation's history. But, thank God, there is "a peace which passeth all understanding," and fills the heart with love and joy.

I firmly believe the measures I have suggested for remedying our difficulties, if adopted at once, will result in great positive and lasting good; should they fail to accomplish a settlement I am content to leave the whole matter in the hands of God. All that I have written is merely suggestive. These thoughts might be extended indefinitely, but if what has been written shall convince one soul of his errors and lead him to the "land of life," I am satisfied. My daily prayer to Almighty God is, that he would bring deliverance to the captives, joy to the sorrowing, light to the blind, hope to the despairing, wisdom to the foolish, peace to the rebellious, and life to the dead; so that the United States may not be blotted out from history forever.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

"The kingdom of God shall be taken from you."—MATT. 21: 43.

What kingdom does the Savior mean? Let us briefly look at the different interpretations.

1st. Some claim that reference is made to the offers of the kingdom to the Jews. Not so. Jesus said not a word about witholding the offers of the kingdom from any one, nor is it true that the offer of the kingdom is withheld. It is freely offered to Jews and Gentiles on the same terms. "The kingdom of God"—not the offer of it—was to be "taken from" one class and "given" to another class. What kingdom?

2nd. Others claim that God set up a kingdom among the Israelites, and that Christ here alludes to that kingdom. Not so; for that kingdom was long previously "overturned," and was to be "no more TILL" the great Heir of David should reconstruct it on a deathless and perpetual basis. To say of a kingdom that had been taken from a certain people centuries before, it "shall be taken from you," would certainly be incorrect. The kingdom here mentioned remained to be taken from a certain class at a future period, when the Savior spake.

3d. It is evident from the context that the territorial kingdom is meant—"the kingdom prepared from the foundation of the world"—the very territory occupied by the wicked husbandmen who refused to render the fruits of holiness. A lovely "vineyard" or kingdom (our earth) was let out to man, who was required to render to God the fruits of righteousness, but man revolted, and refused to render the fruits of righteousness; so God sent servants and prophets to revolted man to prevail upon him to render the fruits, but the messengers are stoned and persecuted; but God continues to send messengers to the rebellious occupants of this vineyard, or territorial kingdom, and they are subjected to the same treatment; finally God sends his Son to revolted man, who occupies the vineyard or kingdom once let out to him; but they say, "This is the heir (to our vineyard or kingdom,) come, let us kill him, and let us seize on his INHERITANCE," or territorial kingdom which they were occupying. So they crucified the Son of God. Right here the Savior inquires, "When the Lord therefore of the vineyard COMETH, what will he do unto those husbandmen?" The approved reply is, "He will miserably destroy those wicked men, and will let out his vineyard to other husbandmen, etc." When? "When the Lord of the vineyard cometh."

On the strength of this, Christ adds, "Therefore say I unto you, The kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof." When? "When the Lord of the vineyard cometh." What kingdom? The same one formerly occupied by wicked husbandmen, who would not render the fruits, now to be given to those who "will" render the fruits. This proves the vineyard and kingdom identical.

Prominent among those wicked husbandmen stood the Jews, but they were not alone; hence, all the wicked will be "miserably destroyed" "when the Lord of the vineyard cometh,"—an event yet future,—and then this "vineyard" or "inheritance," or territorial "kingdom of God," once occupied by wicked husbandmen, will be given to a nation of holy ones, now slumbering in beds of death, who shall be born at once, and they "shall take the kingdom and possess the kingdom forever, even forever and ever," and "bring forth the fruits thereof."

GOD LEFT HIM TO TRY HIM.

"Howbeit, in the business of the ambassadors of the princes of Babylon, who sent unto him to inquire of the wonder that was done in the land, God left him to try him, that he might know all that was in his heart."—2 Chron. 32: 31.

The person here alluded to whom God left to try was Hezekiah, king of Israel. "In those days Hezekiah was sick to the death," and God by the prophet Isaiah healed him, and added to his days fifteen years. At that time the prince of Babylon sent letters and a present unto Hezekiah, for he had heard that Hezekiah had been sick. And Hezekiah hearkened unto them and showed them all the house of his precious things, the silver, and the gold, and the spices, and the precious ointment, and all the house of his armor, all that was found in his treasures; there was nothing in his house nor in all his dominion that Hezekiah showed them not.

Hezekiah had exceeding great riches and honor; he was a good man, and God had prospered him and given him much substance; but in the hour of his prosperity his heart was lifted up, he had become proud. Probably these ambassadors from the prince of Babylon were spies. He had heard of the growing power of Israel, and sent these ambassadors to spy out the land. Hezekiah could not have done them a greater favor than to do as he did in showing them all his treasures and all he had, for there was nothing in all his kingdom that he showed them not. In this unwise act he greatly displeased the Almighty. God saw that Hezekiah was proud, and so he left him, to try him, that he might know all that was in his heart.

When these ambassadors from the prince of Babylon arrived at Jerusalem, Hezekiah was in just the frame of mind to receive them; for it reads, "He hearkened unto them, and showed them all he possessed." So we see how foolish a wise king will be when left of God to be tried. There was a secret sin that God desired to show the king—the sin of pride. After the ambassadors were gone, the prophet Isaiah came to Hezekiah and informed him that the Lord was displeased with him for what he had done. So he humbled himself and all Jerusalem with him, by which God's wrath was turned away.

It is a great thing to know all that is in our own hearts. It is a true saying that conduct develops character. So it is when we leave the living way and commit sin. God sees it will work our ruin; so he leaves us, to try us, to develop our real character, that we may discover what manner of man we are of; and if we humble ourselves as did Hezekiah before God, then it will work out for us an exceeding and eternal weight of glory. We sometimes think we are about perfect before God; but when the Lord comes to place us where the goldsmith did the gold, we do not stand the fire.

There are two kinds of trials,—trials, and fiery trials. Some need the latter to keep them purified and ready. The apostle Peter was sure he was right before God, when he told the Lord he was ready to go with him into prison, and to death. But Jesus said unto him, "The cock shall not crow this day before that thou shalt thrice deny that thou knowest me." The Lord saw that Peter was not right, and he left him, to try him, that the sin might be manifested, that Peter could see himself; and in consequence of the denial there was on the part of Peter bitter weeping and repentance before God. Were we placed in Peter's stead, we might not succeed any better than did the holy apostle.

The object of God is to save us. None will ever be permitted to enter the New Jerusalem but those who possess the spirit of Christ,—those who love God and keep his commandments.

Dear reader, perhaps deep down in your heart may lurk some dreadful sin, which as yet has not been developed. The time may come when you will be placed in a position when that perhaps unthought of sin may develop. We sow the seed, the rain causes it to sprout and grow to become a fruitful plant, or flower; but in case there is no rain, the seed may remain the same unchanged forever. So it is with our hearts. The seed is there, either good or bad, and the development will only show the kind or quality. See that woman who was once virtuous, now going in the way to hell; the man who was once temperate, now a poor miserable drunkard. The person once humble before God has departed and become proud and wicked. God has held out every inducement to save these different characters, but they have rejected him and his truth, and hardened their hearts.

The day has come when men's real characters are being developed. "Multitudes, multitudes in the valley of decision; for the day of the Lord is near in the valley of decision." The great mass have decided against the great message of Christ's second coming, and the doctrines of the Bible. "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall." Let him that hath sinned sin no more. And should we be left of God to be tried, may it work the peaceful fruits of righteousness, that the end may be unto everlasting life. Let us humble ourselves before God, that we may be exalted in due time.

Remember in the hour of trial God's grace shall be sufficient for you. "Pray without ceasing; and in every thing give thanks." "Hold fast that which thou hast, that no man take thy crown." So that, when the generations of the saints who now sleep shall come forth to life, you may join them at the appearing of Christ, in everlasting thankfulness and joy.

THE "TWO WITNESSES."

There are several serious objections to the application of this prophecy to the Old and New Testaments.

First. The "time" of their prophecy (1260 days) if interpreted 1260 years, does not cover the period of the prophecy of either the Old or New Testament.

Second. These "two witnesses" are cotemporary as to their period of prophecy, which cannot be said of the two Testaments.

Third. If any one design to hurt them, fire issues from their mouth and eateth up their enemies, etc., which does not harmonize present or past records with such theory.

Fourth. These witnesses have power to shut heaven, so that "no rain shall come down in the days of their teaching." (Wakefield's trans.) And they have power over waters to turn them into blood, and to smite the earth with any punishments as often as they choose.

Fifth. When they are slain, "their dead bodies will lie in the streets of that great city, which is called spiritually Sodom and Egypt, where indeed our Lord was crucified," which was at JERUSALEM, and not in Paris.

Sixth. It is to be peoples, and tribes, and tongues, and NATIONS, which are to look on their "dead bodies."

Seventh. "And the inhabitants of the EARTH will rejoice over them," etc., "because these two teachers were a vexation to the inhabitants of the EARTH."

Eighth. At the moment of their ascension there was "a great earthquake (not a political commotion), and the tenth of the city fell down, and seven thousand men were killed by the earthquake." What city? The city where our Lord was crucified. The city where the "two witnesses" shall be slain. The city JERUSALEM! The "seven thousand" are so definite, that destruction by "earthquakes in divers places," and in fives or tens of thousands, cannot be applicable to this prophecy; the scene of which is so definitely laid in JERUSALEM, and is to affect "peoples, tribes, and nations."

Ninth. It is a judgment of the second woe, and its application is as universal as the prophetic annunciation is general, and so also of "the rest" who "were affrighted, and gave glory to the God of heaven."

Tenth. Immediately following is the sounding of the seventh trumpet, and the kingdoms of this world become the kingdom of our Lord,—the time of wrath, of judgment, of the resurrection of the dead, and destruction of the enemies of God who "destroy the earth"; and the time of this destruction is defined by Ezekiel and the Revelator (Rev. 20), to be at the end of the thousand years of judgment and restitution; and hence the "plagues that are written therein" are in the future.

BELIEVE IN HIM.

"This is the work of God, that ye believe on him whom he hath sent."
"He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life."

Will any one say there are not words enough used in the above texts to express the conditions upon which were offered everlasting life? And yet three words express all—"Believe in Him." But this is the sum—the conclusion—the result of a longer process of investigation, of demonstration. A thing is never proved to us if we still doubt, for when a thing is fully proved, it "compels belief"; hence all that God has done and spoken to man is for demonstration, that truth may be set before the mind with perfect evidence;

But do all men believe? If so, then all men do the work of God,—then all have everlasting life. But as this is not true, we say truth was not set before their minds with perfect evidence. Why do the wicked still lack this witness? Our Savior says, "Ye will not come to me"; that is, ye will not receive the witness my Father witnesseth of me. And again, "As many as the Father hath given me shall come to me"; and "no man can come to me except the Father which hath sent me draw him; and I will raise him up at the last day."

How does the Father draw men to the Son? "It is written in your law, they shall be all taught of God; as many therefore as have heard and have learned of the Father cometh to me." It is by hearing and learning, then, that we receive the witness, and so are compelled to believe in Christ. "Search the Scriptures, ... they are they which testify of me." "If ye believe not Moses' writings, how shall ye believe my words?"

This is the way, then, men are drawn and given to Christ. But most men will not be thus drawn; they will not hear and learn of the Father. "Every plant," says the blessed Savior, "which my Father hath not planted shall be rooted up." This is the way the Father plants them, and those so planted can not be rooted up. All other plants, though they may appear never so fair, will certainly be offended and fall away. The truth—the whole truth—the truth alone, must save men.

Blessed Jesus, thou art the way, the truth, and the life. We will learn of thee. Father, we will learn of thee, and so believe in the Father and believe in thee, and work the work of God, and have everlasting life.

REMEMBER THE POOR.

Remember the poor, God's poor children, in these trying times, when wicked, speculating men are withholding the comforts of life from them. This constrains me to write, my feelings are such for my poor brethren. A feeling for God's poor characterized the old prophets and apostles, and all the primitive christians. They said much and did much for the poor. Jesus saved the poor, and associated himself with them in their sorrows, insomuch that he will say to them that have fed and clothed the poor, "Ye did it unto me." How much our salvation depends upon our giving to the poor, I know not, but I do know that God's blessing rests upon those who consider the poor, and they will have their reward.

Brethren, let us visit the poor in their sickness. They cannot dig, and sometimes their noble souls will not let them beg. Do not wait for them to come to you, but go to them, not only with words of comfort,—words alone are dry morsels to the hungry. They expect something more. While you are giving words of consolation they are expecting something more, and if you leave them with words only, you leave sorrow instead of joy. Your words may be few with a liberal gift of such as you have, and with God's blessing you will be to them an angel of mercy, making the heart glad. Soon God's poor children will be where they will hunger no more.

A PRAYER.

Hear! Father, hear thy children cry,
Make glad our hearts, our strength renew;
Like tender plants 'neath burning sky,
We crying faint, but cry anew.

Give us to drink, most gracious God,
That living water from on high
We find recorded in thy word,
That whoso drinks shall never die.

Beneath the shadow of that rock
Which, like thy word shall ever stand,
Hide us, dear Father, from the shock,
And shield us with thy loving hand.

Grant, Father, grant thy children's cry,
And cause to cease this dreadful dearth;
Soon may the mountain tower on high,
And its blest shadow fill the earth.

PRAYER.

Prayer is the act of supplicating or beseeching from one greater than ourselves some needed good. By prayer alone we have access to our heavenly Father. He has styled himself a prayer-hearing and a prayer-answering God. How sweet the title, and oh! how blessed the privilege to be permitted to approach the King of kings and the Lord of lords; to ask of him whatsoever we desire, knowing that if we ask aright, in faith believing that he hears, he will incline his ear unto our cry, and however feeble and imperfect our supplications, he will grant answers of peace.

And shall any needy, thirsty soul, refuse to ask a blessing from one so kind, so merciful? from one who has done so much for them? Hear his invitation. Listen to his call of mercy. Ho! every one that thirsteth, let him come and drink of the water of life freely. He invites all the poor as well as the rich. He says, "He that hath no money, let him come and buy milk and honey without money and without price."

Were there no such thing as prayer, what would the christian do in his hours of darkness, when the sun of righteousness seems almost eclipsed by the gloomy blackness of huge clouds of sin? Where, then, could he fly to escape the storm ready to overwhelm and destroy him? Sad indeed would be his condition; naught then could fill his bosom but stern despair; "bright hope" would take swift wings and fly away, and chilling, dread fear would fill the aching void.

But, thanks be to our heavenly Father, such is the condition of no one. Oh, no! the vilest sinner can come to him for mercy, and in the all prevailing name of Christ our Savior can find acceptance at the throne of grace.

HAVE PATIENCE.

"Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth."
"Blessed are the poor in spirit, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven."
"Blessed are ye when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely for my sake, . . . for great is your reward in heaven."

Then, brethren and sisters, if there are any among you that say they love Jesus, and are proud, deceitful, high-minded, have patience with them, for such can never travel with you the new earth. If there are any among you that are liars, tale-bearers, false-accusers, whoremongers, busy-bodies, that can sing, pray or preach, to make you think all is right; have great patience with them a little longer, for none such can ever enter the kingdom of heaven.

"Blessed are the pure in heart; for they shall see God." Then our intentions, our principles, and dealings with others must be pure; and our conversation must not be like the busybody, but like Christ, who is the author of all truth and purity. May the Lord help us to have patience in these last days. "In patience possess ye your souls."

"Blessed are the merciful; for they shall obtain mercy." If there are any among you ungrateful, unthankful, overbearing, taking the advantage of you at every point; have much patience with them a little longer, for soon will your trials end in an eternal weight of glory. If there are any among you that are rich, or have much of this world's goods that you may stand in need of, and withhold from you, envy them not, but have patience, and remember it is the "poor of this world, rich in faith," that will live in the kingdom of God.

Let us be patient, therefore, brethren and sisters, until the coming of the Lord; for then will all secret sins be made known, and be destroyed from off the whole earth. Then will all be true, holy and pure.

THE OPEN FOUNTAIN.

Christ, our ever ready Bethesda! All glory to his ever blessed name! He is ever ready to receive the sin-stained soul.

This morning I felt the need of a fresh application to his precious blood; and I applied not in vain. I felt its sin-atoning power. I felt forgiven and loved as if I never had sinned. O! herein is its sweetness—the sense of guilt removed—justified in him—complete in him,—to feel him our wisdom, righteousness, sanctification and redemption,—that we have this in him. What more can we ask? Is he not a complete Savior?

We do not have to work out a righteousness of our own and then bring it to Jesus to set his seal upon, and hand it in for us before his Father. Oh, no. We come to him just as we are, full of wounds, and bruises, and putrifying sores; we plunge into this fountain opened in the house of David for sin and uncleanness, and there we are made every whit whole. Glory be to God!

Our Savior in his completeness has been held up to us anew in a recent visit of our Bro. in Christ, Eld. James Morrison, pastor of a Free church in Philadelphia. As he read, in social converse, the sixth, seventh and eighth chapters of Romans, and the third of Colossians, one dear saint of God expressed herself relieved from a difficulty of years' standing, as she saw from these scriptures that Christ was her sanctification as well as her justifier on the confession of her faith,—that she had not to work out for herself her own sanctification. She was made to feel that Jesus was what his name signifies—the Savior from sin. All glory to his name! Amen.

Then on Lord's day, Aug. 7th, after accompanying us to the lake and witnessing another of the Lazarus race buried with Christ to rise to a new life, as we hope, our Bro. expounded to us, in the public congregation, the fifty-third of Isaiah, and in the evening the thirteenth of first Corinthians, in all of which the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world was exalted in an unusual manner. It did our hungry soul good, and that it may prove a blessing to others is our prayer and expectation. The leaven is in the meal here, and we can but see its workings.

The "Day-star of Zion" has made a sensation in our community, and is sought after. If any to whom it has been sent wish to make missionaries of their papers, they may send them to this office. They will find readers. Your Sister trimming her "lamp,"

PLAIN TRUTHS.

To all whom it may concern, this is to certify that I deem it to be the greatest and most important thing in the world for persons who make pretentions to piety, that they be truly consistent christians. O! may God help us to be such. God says to all christians, "Come out from the world, and be separate, and touch not the unclean thing." Now, is it right for us to speak and pray in unison with this command, and then follow the spirit and practice of the world, in all its self-gratifications of pride, anger, strife, or being busybodies in other men's matters, or following the vain and sinful fashions of the world? It is hard telling by the dress who are christians and who are not.

Again, the good Lord says, "Cleanse yourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of the Lord." Is not this all right for our christian prosperity and eternal salvation?

As it is a fact that all "the fearful, and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars, shall have their part (reward or portion) in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone, which is the second death"; is it not equally a fact that all who indulge themselves in the intemperate, unnecessary, abominable, filthy, debasing, and very sinful practice of chewing and smoking tobacco, or of taking snuff, or drinking strong tea and coffee; thus wasting their precious time and money which God has given them, will be rewarded accordingly?

N.B. There will be no such work in the kingdom of God. A word to the wise is sufficient.

LIGHT, OR DARKNESS?

BRO. GRANT:—I have received a copy of a new paper, which I suppose its supporters think is shedding new light from the chart, although I have failed to discover it, but rather that which seems tending to darkness. There are a few expressions in one article from one of its editors I wish to quote and compare with Scripture, good reason, good sense and judgment. It is this:

"There are two grand views advocated of the resurrection and judgment among those who believe in the immediate coming of Christ. One makes the resurrection general, the judgment an assize,—all men literally standing before the judgment-seat of Christ at one and the same time. * * But this required an interpretation, unjustifiable, warped, literal where it should be figurative, obscure and forced,—Adventists found it necessary to dissent from this more than twenty years ago."

Now that some Adventists may have dissented from the literal interpretation of plain Scripture may be true; but how to understand plain declarations of Bible and especially of Christ literally, may be called "unjustifiable," I do not know, or why it may be called "warped" is beyond my comprehension; or to say it is "obscure"; why, figures, it would seem to me, would be more likely to "obscure" their meaning.

To understand language literally does not seem to be an interpretation at all, at least not a "forced" one. If one had a suit being tried at law, and he should produce witnesses who should testify in plain straightforward language, would the jury be justified in understanding what they said as they said it? or would it be "unjustifiable"? Would it be "warping" or "obscuring" their testimony? Nay, verily. Let us try this case, then, by this rule. Let the readers of the Crisis be the jury. I will produce a few witnesses to testify before them. Remember the point is, "Will all men literally stand before the judgment seat of Christ?" Doubtless you will concede that the "day of wrath," "day of destruction," "perdition," etc., is the day of judgment.

The first witness is the man of Ur, Job,—"Have ye not asked them that go by the way? and do ye not know their tokens, that the wicked is reserved to the day of destruction? They shall be brought forth to the day of wrath."—Job 21: 29, 30. Where will the wicked be when that day comes? Answer. "Reserved" in their graves mostly. Well, will it "warp" or "force" this testimony to understand "brought forth to the day of wrath" to mean raised from the dead at that time?

Next witness is Solomon. Eccl. 12: 14,—"For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or evil." Perhaps you may say, This is not every "man," but his works. But why are his works brought up here if he is not to be confronted with them? God does not reward works but men for their works. Eccl. 11: 9,—"But know thou, that for all these things God shall bring thee into judgment." The one who does these works—"bad" and "good." I see no "warping" here, or need of "figures," unless we wish to "obscure" the testimony.

We will now introduce an unimpeachable witness, whose testimony is valuable and mu[illegible] not be disregarded with impunity. "[illegible] idle word that men shall speak they [illegible] account thereof in the day of judg[illegible] there anything in this plain, [illegible] language that can possibly be [illegible]ly not, unless it be "the day [illegible] If this be a figure, what is it [illegible] resent? Who can tell? [illegible] sinners of all ages must [illegible] can be no proxy in thi[illegible] give account for his [illegible] stand the grand revie[illegible] this still more clear, [illegible] testify again. "Th[illegible] the queen of the S[illegible] judgment WITH this [illegible] demn it," etc. Her[illegible] different periods of tim[illegible] who question whether t[illegible] and "the queen of the So[illegible] eous: but this is immateri[illegible] one thing all will grant, th[illegible] with whom they were to rise [illegible] were wicked men, and if [illegible] wicked men of past ages "rise up in [illegible]ment," all will; and as this witnes[illegible] they shall thus "rise up together, I [illegible] it must be so, if indeed it is not "warping" his testimony, or taking things as "literal" where they should be figurative.

Again, "When the Son of man shall come in his glory, . . . and sit upon the throne of his glory; and before him shall be gathered all nations, and he shall separate them," etc. Here at the coming of Christ "all nations" are gathered before him. This is the judgment. Paul, what time does the judgment set? "Who shall judge the quick (living) and the dead at his appearing." But, we all believe that the living at the coming of Christ will be judged; now do you mean to say the dead are to be raised and judged too? Yes, "for we shall all stand before the judgment-seat of Christ." "Every one of us shall give account of himself to God." But, Paul, you say "us"; of course you mean believers only? O! no; "for it is written, As I live, saith God, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God." "For we must all appear before the judgment-seat of Christ, that every one may receive the things done in his body according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad." Well, Paul, you appear to believe in a general assize, when all are present and are rewarded for bad deeds as well as good ones. To this agreeth the words of the Alpha and Omega,—"Behold I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to give to every man as his works shall be." Amen.

Whom neither force nor fawning can
Unpin, or wrench from giving all their due."

Honest? Yes, every inch of him honest as the day is long. Honest within, honest without. He is the very picture of honesty. His whole contour indicates honesty, every thought, look, act, moving muscle. His honesty shines, beams forth, looms up. No one ever suspects him of dishonesty, of his defrauding in weights or measures. He gives his customers good articles, the very best, and good measure, pressed down and running over. This man is known abroad for his honesty. His customers are constantly increasing from the fact he is honest, and deals honestly. The truth is, it is more safe and pleasant for every one to deal with an honest man, than to deal with a rogue.

This honest man of whom we are now speaking, needs no public advertising in the dailies or weeklies.

The expense of advertising is saved, his honesty is the best advertisement, read and known of all men. Honesty, or being honest—strictly upright in all business transactions—is the best and cheapest way of advertising. Honesty is always the best policy, and a truly honest man in the sight of God, one that provides things honest in the sight of all men, is the noblest work of God.

Reader, beloved, do you wish to prosper in things temporal and eternal, be happy here, happy forever? to have a conscience void of offence? lie down and sleep sweetly and refreshingly?—be honest, live honestly, provide things honest in the sight of all men. Tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. "Buy the truth and sell it not, also wisdom, instruction, and understanding."

"Just balances, just weights, a just ephah, and a just hin shall ye have. I am the Lord your God." Lev. 19: 36.

"To do justice and judgment is more acceptable to the Lord than sacrifice."

Do justice—'tis thy God's command,
The mandate of thy King;
Be prompt in rendering dues to all,
And let no fraud spot, great or small,
Unto thy conscience cling.

In penning the foregoing, our eye was definitely on the beloved Samuel Wilde.... He died, as he lived, in peace. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." "The righteous are had in everlasting remembrance."

Friends, is it your desire to die as this good man died? Then live as he lived. Be honest in your business transactions; deal justly with all men; pay all dues, even the the smallest. Make conscience of strict punctuality in little things. Promise not a farthing without liquidation at the very time. Pay off your bills, little ones and great ones. "Owe no man anything but love."

Very many go on nettles all the time, restless, conscience-seared, simply from little aberrations, small deviations in business matters. "The little foxes destroy the tender vines."

"A little theft, a small deceit, Too often leads to more."

"He that is faithful in that which is least, is faithful also in much; and he that is unjust in the least, is unjust also in much."

"Little things—aye, little things,
Make up the sum of life."

Are you an honest man? Not if you are living beyond your means, borrowing money wherever you can, with no good prospect of repaying it; in other words, preparing for an assignment, by which you will pay ten, twenty, or fifty cents on a dollar to your creditors.

You are not honest if you have placed your property out of your hands to avoid paying your debts, and are living in luxury while many a poor man and woman, whom you owe, is toiling hard to procure the bare necessaries of life.

You are not, if you are habitually practicing frauds in your daily business, either by [illegible]king exorbitant prices, by giving a poorer [illegible] than you have contracted for, or repre[illegible] be, or by any low, mean arts, de[illegible] with whom you deal.

[illegible] are not an honest [illegible]ard-stick, "false [illegible]omination to the [illegible] delight." "Thou [illegible]." "A righteous [illegible]cked man is loath[illegible]." Prov. 13: 15. For the World's Crisis.

TO THE SAINTS.

BRN. AND SRS.:—Grace and peace be to all the Israel of God. How prosper your souls? Are you almost discouraged? Look up. Jesus is coming. Ye need not be sad. What though the storms do blow; soon a calm will come, and we be at rest,—safe, ever safe in the kingdom of God.

Dear pilgrims, these "light afflictions" are but "for a moment." Let us endure them as good, brave soldiers can endure. Every trial is permitted for our eternal good. We believe this; but when they come we say, "Why do we suffer?" Often do we think "strange concerning the fiery trial, as though some strange thing had happened" unto us. May God give us wisdom and patience, help us to believe his promises, which declare that these light afflictions shall work out glory for us in the end. Amen.

We are indeed passing through "perilous times," but the great Jehovah whom we serve has promised not to leave nor forsake us. O! bless God for all his wonderful goodness. My heart yearns for rest beyond this vale of tears. My soul longs for the joy and blessings of Home. O, dear Savior, let thy kingdom come!

Courage, ye saints, we'll soon be there. A few days more and bliss will be ours. Peace from God fill your souls. Amen.

A FAST.

In accordance with our usual custom, we would invite those who are interested in our great annual campmeeting at Wilbraham, to observe Friday, Aug. 19th, as a day of fasting and prayer, that the special blessing of the Lord may rest upon this meeting. Our aid must come alone from "the high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity." Let us all look to Him for help.

Our meeting will, no doubt, be one of unusual interest and importance. Let us unite to make it the best one we ever enjoyed.

We would suggest that the time usually allotted to supper be spent in prayer; and while thus employed, let us consecrate ourselves anew to the service of the Lord. We are most rapidly approaching the great day of the Lord, when it will be decided whether we shall live forever, or die "the second death."

CAMP WILBRAHAM.—We purpose to have a meeting on the camp-ground, at Wilbraham, Lord's day, Aug. 21st, provided the weather is favorable, at 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M., and one o'clock P. M. Those who can, will do well to come on Friday or Saturday, 19th and 20th, and put up their tents, so as to be all ready at the great meeting the following week.

THE COMING MEETING.

Our campmeetings at Wilbraham are the largest held in the United States by those who are looking for the speedy coming of Christ; and the one about to be held, we may expect to be one of more than usual interest. All things indicate that we shall not meet in that hallowed spot many times more before the coming of our King. The coming one may be our last. We shall expect to see a large number of christian soldiers at camp Wilbraham next week. Let all come fully equipped, having on "the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil." Be sure and "have your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace." Without these shoes, we shall be unable to march upon the rough ways of the enemy. See that every part of the armor is in good order before you leave home. Come determined to do your whole duty, and you will receive great strength.

Those who go to campmeeting should go as early in the week as they can, and remain to the close, if they expect to get a rich benefit. By no means go as a spectator, if you wish to get any good. We know of but one sure way to enjoy a campmeeting, and that is to take an active part in the prayer meetings; and by all means do it as soon as you can after you go upon the ground. Those who have had experience need not be told the importance of this course. It is very seldom that a spectator enjoys a campmeeting. Make some tent your home for meetings instead of wandering around to all. Dr. Franklin said, "a rolling stone gathers no moss;" we may say, a campmeeting rambler is a religious spendthrift. If you do your duty at the meeting, you will find it a heavenly place. Resolve, in the strength of the Lord, to consecrate all to his service. Let there be no reserve whatever. Our work is short but earnest. Feeble resolves, and heartless efforts accomplish nothing in these days. Now is the time for brave men, and daring deeds like those of Shadrach, Meshach, Abednego. Let none fear the fiery furnace or the lion's den.

BAPTISM.

We would remind those coming to campmeeting, who have not been baptized, that there is a very nice place near the camp ground to administer the ordinance of baptism, where many in past years have been buried with Christ in baptism, and received very rich blessings. We hope many more will come prepared to follow their worthy example, thus showing to an infidel world that they believe Jesus died and rose again; and that their only hope of a future life, if they die, is in "the resurrection of the dead."

CAMP FURNITURE.

Those who have not attended campmeetings may need a little advice. All should bring their overshoes, umbrellas, overcoats, and shawls. You will find them very useful, no doubt, during the meeting. Always go prepared for rain. Bring your own bedding. A quilt for each individual will be sufficient. You can put one half under you and cover yourself with the other half. Bring a pillow case and fill it with straw, or leaves, after you get there. Some bring bed-ticks and fill them with straw; but you can fix a pretty good bed in the straw of the tents, without the bed-ticks,—much better than soldiers have.

Put a piece of soap and a towel or two into your bag, a hair brush and comb.

Each tent's company will need a wash basin, wooden pail, looking glass, some nails, hammer, small cord; and if you can bring a crowbar, an inch-and-a-half, or two-inch augur, you will find them convenient in pitching your tent, and for other purposes. Bring a few tacks and matches. Lamps and oil will be furnished on the ground.

There will be extra tent room for those who cannot provide tents; but we hope all who possibly can, will bring them. Wear plain clothing that you will not be afraid of soiling by sitting on the straw. If you wear jewelry—hope you do not—you will do well to leave it at home, as you will be liable to lose it on the camp-ground. Have stout boots or shoes that will be a match for sticks and stubs. Come to work for the Lord, and you will go home rejoicing.

VISIT TO CANADA.

We presume our readers will be interested to hear the results of our late visit to the Queen's dominions. We left Boston Saturday, at 5 P. M. and spent a pleasant Sabbath at Portsmouth, N. H., where there is a living church, anxiously waiting for the coming of our Savior. We think its members are making progress in divine life. Several came from ten to twenty miles to attend the meeting. The congregations were large and attentive. Five requested prayers, and a deep interest seemed to pervade the minds of many others. The Spirit of the Lord rested upon us to comfort the saint and convict the sinner.

Monday morning, Aug. 1st, we left P. for Danville, C. E. On our way from Portsmouth to Island Pond, we passed many sad ravages of fires set by sparks from the R. R. engines. Many miles of fence have been destroyed and hundreds of acres of land been burnt over, doing much damage. We passed by many fires then raging by the way. After the darkness of the night set in upon us, the mountain fires presented a very interesting sight. The angry flames could be seen dashing through the brush, then leaping upon the trees, and climbing to the topmost branches, nibbling off their ends and dropping them for the winds to scatter, and thus kindle new fires on advance ground. These fiery raids are a great annoyance to the people, and often endanger their dwellings. Fighting fire is common business in this section. Every thing is so dry, that with a single spark it is easy work to start a very serious trouble. It could well be said, "Behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth."

After riding all night, we arrived in Danville at 4 1-2 A. M., and met a most cordial welcome by Bro. J. Porter, pastor of the Danville church. His is a genuine pilgrim's home,—a real resting place. We found the church in a pretty healthy state. Our meeting on Tuesday evening was one of profit and interest. Five requested prayers that they might become christians, and be ready to welcome the Savior at his appearing.

Wednesday evening, Aug. 3d, we bid our friends in Danville adieu, and started for Montreal, where we arrived about 10 o'clock P. M. and found another good home at Bro. Geo. Smith's. We learn that the truth is gaining ground in this city. Prejudice is giving away, and new ones are seeing the light. The opposition is still strong, but not successful. We learn that quite a number in the churches begin to see the truth, who have not yet confessed it openly. We visited an intelligent Scotch minister, who is teacher in one of the institutions of the city, with whom we had a very pleasant interview. He had been reading our tracts on the subject of the sleep of the dead and the destruction of the wicked, and had become satisfied they were in harmony with the Bible. He sees clearly the absurdity of the popular views of the soul. Our prayer is that he may have courage to tell the people the whole truth as he sees it. It would be almost equal to martyrdom to do it; but we know of no other way to be free in Christ. When we refuse to let the light shine that we see, because it will make us unpopular, we then become ashamed of Jesus' words, which puts us in a very dangerous position. Many are shipwrecked on the quicksands of popular opinion. The disciple of Jesus must keep clear of such influences, as would the man of health of a pestilential vapor. It is death to yield. Dear reader, beware of it, as of the bite of the rattlesnake.

Our meetings in Montreal continued to increase in interest from their commencement to their close. Several requested prayers, two young converts were baptized in the St. Lawrence, and we learn there are others who purpose to follow their example. Brethren, pray for this church.

APPOINTMENTS.—As we purpose to get our paper off one day earlier than usual campmeeting week, those who wish to have appointments inserted should send them so that they may be received as early as Monday morning, Aug. 22d.

EARLY MANHOOD.

Boys have a very mistaken idea about manhood. If they can smoke a cigar, chew tobacco, swear, and do as they please, then they think they are quite manly. We do not wonder at their conclusion, when they see so many who are called men practising these disgraceful habits. The boy thinks himself quite a gentlemen if he can walk the streets with a cigar in his mouth. To us he looks like a little fool, aping foolish men. The following, from one of our exchanges, is a sample of modern boyhood:—

"A six-year old boy that was walking with his mother on the street at Taunton, the other day, was puffing away lustily at a cigar. No doubt the mother thought it was manly."

TO WHOM ACCOUNTABLE.

In the Banner of Light, May 28th, 1864, we have a report of a conversation with one of the spirits. Among inquiries made of the spirit is the following:—

"Q.—To whom or to what, is the soul accountable?

A.—To no Deity outside the realm of its own being, certainly; to no God which is a creation of fancy; to no Deity who dwells in a far-off heaven, and sits upon a white throne; to no Jesus of Nazareth; to no patron saint; to no personality; to no principle outside our own individual selves."

A GOOD TIME TO PAY DEBTS.

A exchange remarks that the present is an excellent time to pay debts; for, "while a paper dollar will buy only about half the usual quantity of goods, and is worth less than half as much as formerly to lay by for future use, it will pay as much on a debt as ever. This fact is of great importance to persons who have been owing for their farms, or for anything else, and can now obtain money to pay. The poor man who owed a thousand dollars for his farm three years ago, can now pay it easier than he could pay five hundred then. If he pays now, the depreciation of the currency is his gain, but the loss of the capitalist whom he owes. He can turn his produce and labor at enormous prices into money, which his creditors must accept on an old debt at twice its real value. The farmers at the West were never before doing so well as they are now, because they are paying for their land at a cheap rate. And thousands of others are taking advantage of this fact, and are hastening to get out of debt. The man in debt should know exactly what to do with the proceeds of his labor now,—it will pay his debts twice as fast as ever before. The present, therefore, is the time to pay debts, and we advise all who can to improve the opportunity."

If those of our debtors, to whom we have recently sent bills, will act upon this very excellent advice, they will find it much to their own advantage, and not a little to ours. The office needs the money due. We have had responses from a few, and are waiting to hear from others. Shall we hear next from YOU?

OF THE TIMES OF DANIEL AND JOHN.

We shall have a quantity of these charts on hand for sale at the Wilbraham campmeeting. Brethren intending to get one will save expressage by buying them there. They will find it a great help to the study of the prophetic periods of Daniel and John, whether for use in the family, the Sabbath School, or the lecture room. Every student of prophecy and every minister should have one. Price, $5.00. W. B. H.

"The new chart is a grand affair. Larger in the square, more ample in its illustrations, the figures arranged more in accordance with the portion illustrated, and larger than in any other prophetic chart that has fallen under my notice. In its mechanical execution, it is well done. As an aid to the study, exhibition and defense of historical prophecy, I consider it above all price. Although it indicates, it does not positively assert '68 as the terminus of the prophetic periods, but leaves the particular date open for all the differences of opinion which exist among the different branches of the Advent body."—Voice of the West.

THE GENERAL CAMPMEETING IN ILLINOIS. The attention of brethren in the Western States is invited to the notice of this meeting in another column. Read the stirring call of the committee, brethren of the West, and go up, one and all, to the feast. You will get your spiritual strength renewed, and be better prepared for the present conflict and the coming glory.

INFORMATION WANTED.—We want the post-office address of the following persons:—Geo. F. Champlin, E. Whitney, J. W. Hazen, Geo. Dodge, J. F. Champlin. Will any one who knows, please inform us?

LETTER TO A MINISTER.

BRO. GRANT:—The following letter was written to my brother-in-law, whom I have not seen, a minister in the M. E. church in California. If you think proper you are at liberty to publish it, or extracts, as the topics treated upon are questions of interest to the readers of the Crisis.

DEAR BROTHER AND SISTER:—* * * You each betray a peculiar tenderness lest I should take offence at your remarks on my position or in defense of your own. Although it would give me pleasure to find both of you in the true position, I am not surprised to find you advocating doctrines more generally accepted, and with a zeal worthy of a better cause. I could, indeed, wish that you were traveling with me, cheered by the same blessed hope, and supported by the same prospect of speedy redemption; but Bro. William, whose portion of the letter to me I propose to answer at some length, expresses a wish that I were associated with you in church relation. I should have two objections to such a step. The first is, that I do not wish to change my church relation; and the other is, that I would wish to associate with a less worldly church than yours, if I did change.

I would not like to change my church relation; for when the Lord comes he recognizes as his people those who are "waiting" for him (1 Thess. 1: 10; 2 Thess. 3: 5; 1 Cor. 1: 7); "looking" for him (Titus 2: 13; Heb. 28: 3; Phil. 3: 20); "watching" for him (Luke 12: 36; Matt. 24: 42); who "love his appearing," who "look up and lift up their heads" when they see the fulfillment of the signs, assured that "their redemption draweth nigh" (Luke 21: 28), and who "are not in darkness that that day should overtake them as a thief." I thank the Lord that in his mercy he has cast my lot with such a people in this important hour, when he is about to make up his jewels, and that I am not ashamed to proclaim as a part of the everlasting gospel that "the hour (season) of his judgment is come." Rev. 14: 6, 7.

But why should you wish me to unite with your people? Do you not know that they are about as worldly as the world themselves? Although I sincerely love the early Methodists for their spiritual wisdom, holy zeal, and fervent love to God and man, I am equally pained with their present conformity to the world, in their objects of pursuit, policy of action, habits, maxims, dress, conversation, and nearly every thing which once distinguished them from the world. Almost any of the older people will tell me that they can recollect when a Methodist was known by his or her dress as far as they could see them! But who could distinguish them now by their dress? As we go from place to place preaching the Lord's coming, they are found among our most bitter opposers. They will neither preach the Lord's coming and signs of the times themselves, nor suffer others to do it.

Mr. Wesley says (Note on 1 Cor. 1: 7) that a love or dread for the revelation (coming) of Christ is a sure evidence of a true or a false christian. I fear that there are few among those who bear his name whose christianity would not suffer in the application of this test. Again he says in the preface to his Sermons, "I would no sooner use flowery language than I would wear a fine coat." I fear that on this point he has few standard-bearers among his professed people, or even anywhere. There are but few ministers in these days who are not the pets of society, delighting in "fine coats" and aspiring to "flowery language."

You speak of me as though I must be in sympathy with the rebels because I think that we are not allowed by the gospel to fight and indulge a thirst for blood. Have you never learned how John Nelson, one of the early Methodists, refused to fight on christian principles? Was he by so doing a "traitor to his country"? Do you judge that the Quakers have always carried a traitor's heart in their professions of peace? If you suppose me politically on the side of the rebels, you are mistaken, for I am in no sense a politician. If you judge me favorable to their principles, you are equally mistaken. But I am admonished by my Master not to resist evil, but to "love your enemies, bless them that curse you, and pray for them which despitefully use you and persecute you."

A few years ago, when three thousand New England clergymen, conscientiously opposed to that enactment known as the "Fugitive Slave Law," petitioned Congress for its repeal, they pleaded as their principal argument against its provisions that it was opposed to the law of God, which was a "higher law" than man's, and on this ground declined to obey it. From this time the "higher law" became the watchword of that party now in power. But whenever we, without any feeling of turbulence or disaffection toward the government, but in a conscientious devotion to the same "higher law," protest that as christians we cannot fight nor in any way indulge the spirit or practice of war, we are met by those who have so zealously pleaded this principle in the past with the accusation of "traitors" and "rebels"!

In your letter you charge me with being "against our beloved country"—"against civil and religious liberty"—"against millions of the oppressed and down-trodden of earth"; and finally, you assure me that the position I occupy places me "just as much on the side of the rebellion and slavery as if I were in the rebel army," and add that "such a man cannot be saved." You charge me with disloyalty to the Federal government, simply because I would live, in public and in private, in war and in peace, as a non-combatant! But do you not know that such a position is just as disloyal to the rebel cause? Will you say that loyalty to God is *dis*loyalty to government? If it be so, "we ought to obey God rather than men."

Had such charges as the above come from a mere worldly man, zealous in politics, but regardless of religion, it would be no more than I might expect from him; but there must be a deplorable state of things in the current religion when its ministers rate men's chances for salvation according to their zeal in politics and their thirst for blood.

The general tone and particular passages of your letter admit of no other construction than that you would have me understand that a proper obedience to God requires that I should write upon my banner—War! War! and "raise my voice, and if necessary my hands," willing to "suffer and if need be to die or go to prison" in defense of such a "holy (?) cause." Had I several probationary lives to spend, I might, perhaps, devote one of them to some secondary object, as my country; and if I were allowed to die a martyr as often, I might, perhaps, sacrifice one life to the same object; but having but one probationary life allotted to me, I cannot trifle that away for some supposed temporal good.

I know of no passage in the New Testament which inculcates the doctrine of the active co-operation of the followers of Christ with and for the governments of this world. But we are abundantly taught the duty of paying tribute and submission (yet submission only so far as consistent with our duty to God, for most of the martyrs have sacrificed their lives rather than obey a law of the State calculated to deprive them of their hope). This distinction between active co-operation and simple submission is obvious and important. The one makes it a man's duty to be zealously engaged in politics, in order to live the christian life; the other inculcates no active service, while it forbids the position of a traitor. The former is your position, as I understand you; the latter is my own.

You tell me to "render unto Cæsar," etc., using the passage as proof that I ought to share your zeal for politics and the war. You also refer me to Rom. 13, in the same connection and for the same object. But while these passages teach the duty of submission to Cæsar so far as consistent with our duty to God, they do not demand that active cooperation which you claim for them. The first, indeed, says, "Render unto Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's," the subject of tribute being under consideration; but Christ adds, "And unto God the things that are God's." You will allow that Cæsar's claims on the christian are subordinate to those of God, and therefore that the christian's service unto Cæsar may in no case interfere with his duty to God.

But what is his duty to God? He tells us to "love not the world, neither the things that are in the world;" that "if any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him"; that "he that would be the friend of the world is the enemy of God"; that we must be "crucified to the world," "dead to the world"; and that "he that warreth entangleth not himself with the affairs of this life." How these admonitions can be carried out consistently with a zeal in politics is more than I can understand. But we are clearly admonished to live as pilgrims and strangers on the earth, desiring a better country. Hence it is our duty to feel as our Master did, that "my kingdom is not of this world," and to live here dead indeed unto the world, but alive unto God," waiting and praying "Thy kingdom come." With such a frame of mind we shall find no inclination to mingle in politics, much less in war.

I think you cannot seriously urge that it is a christian's duty to go to war! War in the light of the gospel has no favorable picture—no bright side. Probably no other theatre in life invites and sanctions a more general indulgence of all the baser passions of the human heart. In that general havoc and desolation which attends the policy of war, to "burn, sink and destroy" all that the enemy has and is, the soldier must cast to the winds all his delicate notions of justice, all his feelings of tenderness, humanity and pity, and, hardened against the probability of being bribed by his feelings, he must be ever ready to perform any work of plunder, ruin, or death! And, in the rage and fierceness of battle, he must stifle all scruples about cruelty, and thoughts of mercy, and forgetting that he is a man must feel that he is a tiger, delighting only to indulge a thirst for blood! Such is and ever has been the accepted model for a soldier, in all ages and in all countries.

In Persia, where each class is designated by an appropriate symbol attached to their dress, the tiger is the chosen emblem for the military man. So also in Christendom, the model soldier must be "in war a tiger." And when we consider further that deception—strategy—is the common policy of generals, insomuch that the Greeks called their generals strategos; that profanity receives a popular sanction in war, as "the energetic idiom"; that, as Dryden says—and with these the untold other vices and crimes which ever attend war's ruinous march, I think I may hope that you will forbear urging me to go to war, or to look upon its spirit or practice in any other light than in direct opposition to the gospel.

"Drinking is the soldier's pleasure";

May I not hope better things from you than that you really approve of christians fighting? If you do, I can not see what you have to preach against consistently, unless it may be some violations of man's law. But in such a case you should call things by their right names, and not be dealing out politics under the name of the gospel. But if you consider war contrary to the gospel, why do you urge me and others to go to war in violation of the gospel? Is this the part of an ambassador of Christ, or of Cæsar? I am slow to believe that you can really approve of your own course in this matter. I will not charge you with it till I have better evidence that you do. Ponder, I pray you, upon your course. Have you not been giving to Cæsar's cause the time that you had pledged to God and his cause? Have you not been more jealous for Cæsar than for God? Judging from the tone of your letter, I feel that you have.

But why should you thus be hewing out cisterns which hold no water? Why feed the flock with that which can not satisfy? Why labor to enlist their interests and affections in devotion to a worldly object? Why lead them to the turbid stream, when the gospel affords pure and living water? Has the good news of divine love become stale and inefficient to the people? Have their ears become dull of hearing? Then "cry aloud, and spare not." Show the people their sins, and warn them to return to their first love, and prepare to meet their God. Be faithful to their eternal interests, which is your proper charge, and you will have no relish for politics, no heart for war, and no time for either. To this end, may the blessing of God attend you, and may we finally be permitted to meet in his everlasting kingdom, the prayer of

Your brother truly, I. K. LOMBARD.

Correspondence.

From Sr. M. L. Durand.

BRO. GRANT:—I have to-day met with a few of God's children at Bro. Cooper's house in North Haven, Ct., where Bro. Goodrich has before preached and seen good results; and if there be a denomination or class of believers who were not represented in that little assembly, it must be those who never assemble themselves together any where under any circumstances. I was reminded of Peter's congregation. See Acts 2nd,—"Parthians, Medes and Elamites, dwellers in Mesopotamia, in Judea and Cappadocia, in Pontus and Asia, Phrygia, Pamphylia and Egypt, in the parts of Lybia about Cyrene, and strangers of Rome, Jews and proselytes, Cretes and Arabians," each spoke in their own tongue of the wonderful works of God.

There are some vegetables I like very much, others I cannot eat; and were I invited to dine with a friend, and they should set before me one dish containing potatoes, another turnips, another carrots, and still another cabbage, I should relish the first two whereas the last two I could not eat. Now were they all cooked in one kettle, and served up minced in one dish, however nice it might seem to some, very little good should I receive from my invitation to dine.

So when a man says, I believe in the freeness of the gospel call, in salvation by faith, in the coming of Jesus Christ, in the kingdom of God,—and then places election forefront of the free call, salvation present by a peculiar faith, Jesus already come by taking up his abode in us, the kingdom set up in the heart by the subduing of all unholiness,—and there is a dish which is to my taste as insipid as "the white of an egg," and as nauseating as carrots and cabbage with my dinner.

I have mourned over my own slow advance in divine life, and expected to find those who used years ago to talk so much of the "highway of holiness" so far advanced that I should scarcely be able to discern their outlines in the dim distance; but I found nothing "new" with the "old," and I am glad in God to-night that I have a whole Bible, and that by grace divine I have learned to love its beauties, confide in its promises, watch the unfolding and fulfilling of its prophecies,—to take it as the light of my path and the lamp of my feet, my guide and instructor through the mazy labyrinths of these last days of many spirits, for without the word how could we "try the spirits" to see whether they be of God or no? 'Tis true there are symbols and metaphors, but even those may be as easily understood, with the same careful study and comparison, as the rules of any of the sciences. Then why is it called a "sealed book," or all spiritualized away to a system of meaningless inconsistencies?

"I love it, I love it, and who dares to chide
For my choice of all others, this book for my guide?
The Spirit indited, the Master said, Read;
Hearers, readers and doers are blessed indeed."

The sermon by Bro. Goodrich was "like apples of gold in pictures of silver," and the Spirit of God certainly enabled him so to dispense the word as to clear his soul from the blood of all who heard him. "Say ye to the righteous, it shall be well with him," etc., showing what, when, where and why all, both righteous and wicked, should be rewarded.

Your Sister in hope, M. L. DURAND.

Cheshire, Ct., May 17th.

From Bro. Miner Cawkins.

BRO. GRANT:—I know not how to give flattering titles; but perhaps I have been too backward in expressing what I feel. I have been highly pleased with the Crisis; and abundantly so with the manner in which it is conducted. I have seen no praises which I could not in truth endorse; yet my retiring disposition bade me say it not. But I know that private letters, speaking highly of my contributions to the Crisis, never raised pride in me, but helped to strengthen me and stay my hands. Yea, they did me good. Why then should not a kind word, fitly spoken, do Bro. Grant good; so much as to say I esteem you very highly in love for your works' sake?

Myself and dear companion came to this place about a year since, lone Adventists. I loaned my paper; distributed tracts; endeavored to let my light shine; and small as I am, I think it had some influence. Brn. Giddings and Lovesey came and assisted in the work. The people searched the Scriptures daily to see if these things were so. We organized a church of fourteen members, who are spiritual, walking with Christ in the ordinances of the gospel. I have heretofore said nothing of subscribers. But it is not because I have been doing nothing. But I think the leaven has worked well, and we shall now begin to reap. MINER CAWKINS.

Middle Creek, Kansas.

From Bro. W. M. Ingham.

BRO. GRANT:—I have not given up striving for the better country. After some months of toil and labor, with the blessing of the Lord, and help of kind brethren and friends, I have succeeded in getting a shelter for wife and family, while I go out in the highways and hedges to preach the glorious gospel of peace (not war) to my fellow men. I hope to be at the Wilbraham campmeeting, and spend some few weeks in my own native land before I return. Hope I shall go in all the fulness of the gospel of peace.

Dear brethren and sisters, as the general campmeeting is nearing, let us all strive to get in working order, that we may labor with success, and many be brought to a knowledge of the truth and shine as stars in the kingdom. WM. M. INGHAM.

SAMUEL A. PORTER.

Fell asleep in Christ, at Marblehead, Mass., Friday, July 1st, 1864, Samuel A. Porter, a deacon of "The church of Christ worshiping at Lowell Street Chapel, Boston," aged fifty-eight years.

Deacon Porter was formerly a member of the Congregational church, but for many years he has been among those who have waited for the consolation of Israel. When the church was "set in order" at Lowell Street Chapel, he was chosen a deacon, which office he filled during the remainder of his life. He had removed to Marblehead to spend the summer months, and while there felt that his health was failing, and consumption was fastening upon him.

The Monday preceding his death, I met him on the cars going to Boston, to help me about getting my tent ready for the Tremont campmeeting—it having been stored in his loft, he being, like the great apostle to the Gentiles, a tent maker. His health was then very poor, but he was trusting in the grace of Jesus Christ; he said he had "nowhere else to trust." He declined receiving pay for his trouble and care of the tent, saying it was used "for the good of the public," and I bade him good by. He returned home, grew worse rapidly, and died the following Friday. His death though sudden was peaceful. He was resigned, and unwavering in his trust in Him in whom he had believed. By his words and by his pen he had long confessed his faith in Christ, and in the trying hour his confidence was not cast away.

The writer being absent at the Tremont campmeeting, Elder R. Wendell was desired to conduct the funeral services, and present to the afflicted family the consolations of the christian's hope.

Bro. Porter leaves behind him a widow and two grown up children. They will feel his loss most deeply. The little flock at Lowell Street Chapel will miss another of their number stricken by the dart of "the last enemy"; but as they read the book of providence and the book of God, they look forward to the resurrection day, and hope to meet him among those who by an upright and consistent walk have endeared themselves to the community and to the church of God, while through faith in the blood of the crucified Redeemer they have been made meet for the eternal inheritance. May we behold him there in peace.

The following beautiful lines from his own pen, written some twelve years ago, may fitly close this notice:—

"WE SHALL ALL BE CHANGED."

BY S. A. PORTER.

Toil on, poor insect, drag thy cumbrous length,
Who formed thee, worm, each day will give thee strength;
Thy labor hard, thy food a paltry store,
A few brief suns, thy crawling life is o'er;
Or if of higher rank, whose well-wrought task
The finest texture human pride can ask,
A summer's toil shall weave thy silken tomb
With worms of meaner web, thou'lt have thy doom;
This reptile form will soon be laid aside,
Till winter's frosts are gone and storms subside;
And when the vernal sun earth's fetters breaks,
And nature to new life and beauty wakes,
Thy crusty shroud shall give a nobler form,
Of richer dress than ever clothed a worm.
In rainbow hues its Author will array
Thy better mould, and skill divine display,
And gilded pinions, adequate to bear
The new-born being through the unbounded air.
Toil on, poor pilgrim, o'er the rugged road,
Though faint and feeble, and life's cares a load,
Thy weary feet will soon the journey close,
Then lay thy burden down to find repose;
This wasted frame will soon be laid away,
To mingle with the mass of kindred clay.
But though the grave's environs hug thee round,
And the huge stone with seals secure be found,
And the strict watch be set to guard the dust,
No barriers there when God awakes the just.
Whose goodness stooped the loathsome world to change,
And gave him wings a higher sphere to range,
Shall change his ransomed ones to life divine,
And with a form that shall with seraphs shine.
If weary, worn-out nature fall and die,
Or should the ruthless flame his flesh destroy,
Or ocean's monsters on his carcass fed,
They're clothed alike when God shall call his dead.
The poor down-trodden, who with mangled frame
Hath borne the lash, and for his Lord the shame,
On that bright morning shall his Lord behold,
And wear a glorious form of heavenly mould.
Yes, all the saints are changed when Jesus comes,
Nor they alone who slumber in their tombs;
But all who are looking, longing for their King,
Will share his image, and on quickest wing
Shall mount to meet him, and his glories sing
Who conquers the last foe, and robs the grave
Of Victory—Omnipotent to save.
Go, pilgrim, on thy way, a little while
Thy Lord will come, and end thy tears and toil;
Wait thine appointed change, his word at hand,
For at the end of days thou in thy lot shalt stand.

Such was his hope, and he knew in whom he believed. H. L. H.

S. ANN HAYES.

Fell asleep in Jesus, in New Durham, N. H., July 18th, 1864, after a distressing sickness of fourteen weeks of disease of the stomach, my beloved sister, S. Ann Hayes, aged thirty-six years.

Sister Ann became a disciple of Jesus at the age of fourteen; and ever after lived devoted to his cause. During the past few years she sought more earnestly for a closer walk with God, and enjoyed much of the presence of her Savior. She expeted ere now to have been in the kingdom of God, but hope has been deferred. She sleeps in Jesus. Although her sickness was severe, she bore it without a murmur, and would often say, "Though I suffer, I love Jesus;" and her last words were "Glory! glory! O! how I love Jesus!" Thus sweetly did she go to rest. Her sufferings are over. Death has done his work; but soon she will hear the voice of Him who is "the resurrection and the life," and come forth to the enjoyment of that new world, where

"Death and the tomb can divide us no more."

Words of comfort were administered to us by Elder J. G. Smith, from Isa. 25 : 9.

HATTIE A. HAYES.

DANIEL G. RAMSAY.

Fell asleep in Jesus, in Exeter, N. H., Aug. 7th, 1864, Daniel G., only son of Charles C. and Emily T. Ramsay, aged two years, eight months, and twenty days.

The funeral was attended by Bro. A. Ross, who spoke words of comfort and consolation to us from the words of the prophet Jeremiah, 31: 16-17. He showed that death was an enemy, and those who were in his power were in an enemy's land; but they would come again from the land of the enemy, and come to their own border or inheritance. He spoke of the hope, and we felt to praise the Lord that it was ours. C. C. RAMSAY.

JAMES E. MCKELLAR.

Died in California, April 27th, 1864, of congestion of the lungs, James E. McKellar, eldest son of John and Lucy A. McKellar, of St. George, Me., aged twenty years, eleven months, and six days.

James was a young man of unexceptionable character, being beloved by all who knew him. He leaves a mother, brother, and three sisters to mourn, but they mourn not as those without hope. A short time before his death he gave his heart to God, and with the tidings of his death came also the tidings that he died a christian, rejoicing in the hope of reigning with Christ in a land where there is no death, and where parting scenes are unknown.

VOLNEY C. GREEN.

Died at Barracks Hospital, N. O., June 10th, of diphtheria, Volney C. Green, son of Daniel and Polly Green, aged twenty-two years, six months, and seven days.

He joined the 13th Maine Reg. in Nov., 1861, with which he remained until he was taken sick and carried to the hospital. A friend of his and a member of the same company and regiment writes he was sick about five weeks. The last few days of his sickness were very distressing, yet he bore it with patience, trusting the Lord Jesus who had washed away his sin and given him sweet peace in believing. P. G.

ALFRED ALONZO NICHOLS.

Died in Haverhill, Mass., Aug. 2nd, 1864, Alfred A., youngest child of Oliver F. and Maria Louisa Nichols, aged two years and four months.

Thus again we have been called to lay a little treasure away to rest from his pain; but I sorrow not as those that have no hope, for soon Jesus will come and raise my little Angellette and Affred to enjoy the glorious society of that dear Savior they both so much loved. Though very young, Alfred longed to have Jesus come, when he should suffer no more pain, but live with him forever.

M. L. NICHOLS.

For the World's Crisis.

A PILGRIM SICK.

DEAR BRO. GRANT:—Let me say to the brethren, I am sick; some of my appointments have failed, others may. My life is brought down to the sides of the grave. Pray for me, all ye who can pray. I believe in the prayer of faith; I believe in a God who hears prayer.

O, that I may live! Let me live, that I may praise God, and benefit my fellow men. I know full well that death cannot praise God, and that those who go down to the grave cannot celebrate his name, or declare his truth. No, the living alone can praise God, as I do to-day.

In weakness yours, B. SPAULDING.

Chelmsford, Mass., Aug. 13th.

Persons who wish for complete sets of these five volumes in cloth, must order them soon, as there is not a large stock on hand. I cannot make more than about two hundred complete sets in cloth now, and it is not certain that any more will be printed. So those who want them should speak soon.

Summary of News.

DOMESTIC.

New York, Aug. 10. The Herald's correspondent, writing from near Atlanta 1st inst., says the operations around the city have settled down to a regular siege. We are pounding away on every side. The city is doomed to be reduced. The rebels have garrisoned their forts and intrenchments with the militia and use the veterans to operate when required; their line runs so that they can be massed with great rapidity.

The Macon (Ga.) Telegraph of a late date notices the departure of 1600 militia from that place for Atlanta, and says a like number will leave daily for a week.

New York, Aug 12. Gen. Banks, under date August 6, telegraphs to his wife, now in this city, as follows:

"The steamer Clyde passed here this morning from the fleet, and reports that fourteen gunboats and three monitors had passed the forts at Mobile yesterday at 8 A. M.

One monitor was blown up opposite the forts by a torpedo.

The rebel ram Tennessee was captured. Her captain, Buchanan, lost a leg in the fight. This gives us possession." N. P. BANKS,

Maj. Gen. Commanding.

Washington, Aug. 11. Richmond papers of the 10th say their loss by the surrender of Fort Gaines was six hundred prisoners, fifty guns, and an immense amount of supplies of all sorts.

The colored people of this district have applied for permission to organize into companies for the defense of Washington, offering to pay their own drill-masters.

Official dispatches state that it was not the intention of Farragut to capture Mobile, but only to relieve a portion of the fleet.

Denver City, Aug. 10. Although the Indians have been very troublesome of late in attacking unarmed trains and murdering emigrants unable to defend themselves, there has as yet been no attack by them upon the mail coaches which now run regularly both ways.

The mails were ordered to be stopped at Atchison and this place to-day, by the Superintendent of the Overland line, owing to the stock being run off from some of the stations, but it is believed that our troops are being so distributed along the line as will fully protect it.

Omaha City, Nebraska, Aug. 11. Hostile marauding Indians infest the whole line from Fort Kearney to South Pass—a distance of 500 miles—and daily commit new outrages, making forays on stock and burning trains. A great number of travelers are stopping at Fort Kearney for protection. The Indians in bands of from ten to one hundred, move with celerity, and possessing thorough knowledge of the country elude pursuit. The telegraph is still in good order.

FROM THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.—Rebel Loss in the Late Fight Three Thousand. The army correspondent of the New York Times says that the flag of truce party which went out Monday morning to bury our dead in front of Petersburg found about twenty wounded men still alive, nearly all of whom were negroes. About three hundred bodies were buried, of which number not more than fifteen or twenty were white troops. Free intercourse was indulged in by parties from both sides. Gens. A. P. Hill, Bushrod Johnson, Adjt. Gen. Cooper, Gen. Mahone, and Acting Brig. Gen. Laundres were present, viewing the scene before them, and with field glasses examined our works closely. Quite a number of Englishmen, in semi-military dress, were noticed among the rebel officers. The rebels claimed the affair of Saturday as another valuable achievement in their favor, stating their loss among those in the fort destroyed to be about two thousand men, and their entire loss to be three thousand. They claim to have taken nine hundred and thirty-six prisoners from us. They say that eight men belonging to a North Carolina regiment were found alive and well in one of the bomb-proofs. The explosion made a hole or crater two hundred feet long and ninety-five in width. Three attempts were made by the rebels to capture the ruins, the first two of which were repulsed with terrible slaughter.—Journal.

FRANCE, MEXICO, AND THE UNITED STATES.—We take the following items from the Paris correspondence of the New York Commercial Advertiser:

"With regard to Mexico our French advices assert that the Emperor Maximilian has already received an assurance from Mr. Lincoln that the Washington Government will be happy to receive a Minister from the new Empire, and to accredit one to Mexico in return.

Mr. Preston, formerly United States Minister at Madrid, arrived in London from Havana on the 24th inst. He was originally sent by the Confederate Government to represent the Confederacy at Mexico under the new Empire, but when it was found that France had changed her tactics, and that under the advice of Napoleon the Emperor Maximilian would not officially receive him, he abstained from proceeding to that country. It is thought he may now probably proceed to Spain."

THE FAILURE AT PETERSBURG.—The army correspondent of the New York Commercial writes that the repulse at Petersburg was caused by delay. The programme was that immediately after the explosion the 9th corps should charge the rebel works before the enemy could recover from the shock. Instead of acting on these instructions, the intended charge was delayed for full half an hour, which was extremely fatal to us, inasmuch as it gave the enemy an opportunity to recover from the surprise, and mass a large number of troops at the opening we created by the explosion. The explosion was not so startling as had been expected. There was hardly any perceptible shock, and the only thing heard was a dull, rumbling sound, as that of a heavily packed wagon crossing a wooden bridge.—Journal.

SYMPATHY FROM A SCOTCH LADY.—Mrs. Ann Williamson, a Scotch lady, eighty-one years of age, living in Edinburgh, recently sent to Mrs. Lincoln, as a present, a Scotch plaid pattern of elegant quality and finish. In her letter of presentation, in which she terms, Mr. Lincoln, "My Lord President," she says, "As one deeply interested in your present struggle, I trust the Lord will bless all your endeavors for the peace of your country and the freedom of the slaves." The President has written a reply, in which the following sentence occurs: "I thank you for that pretty and useful present, but still more for those good wishes to myself and our country which prompted you to present it."

WHAT REBELLION IS DOING FOR SLAVERY.—The Nashville Union says: "The colored regiments reviewed last Wednesday were composed of stout, able-bodied, athletic men, in the prime and vigor of life. There was not one among them who, in 1860, would not have brought, as a slave, one thousand dollars on the block. No wonder the rebels who saw them grated their teeth and muttered curses. They saw millions of dollars' worth of human chattels, redeemed and disenthralled, enlisted in a patriotic service, in striking contrast with their cold-blooded treason."

THE DESOLATION AT CHAMBERSBURG.—An account of the rebel ravages at Chambersburg says the immense paper mill, the flouring mills, the ax factory, the chair factory, the carriage factory, the distillery and brewery, and all the places of business that give employment to the poor are swept away. The Court House, the printing offices, the City Hall, the bank, and all the hotels are gone. The finest private residences, two churches, and all the stores are destroyed. Reckoned at present prices, the loss was not less than four millions of dollars.—Journal.

LOUISIANA.—The first two articles of the Constitutional Convention of Louisiana, and to be submitted to the people, are as follows:

ART. 1. Slavery and involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime, whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, are hereby forever abolished and prohibited throughout the State.

ART. 2. The Legislature shall make no law recognizing the right of property in man.

STAMPS ON RECEIPTS.—The internal revenue law now in force requires that a two-cent stamp must be placed on every receipt for money amounting to more than $20; also, on all receipts for the delivery of goods. By not complying with this requirement, persons lay themselves liable to a fine of $50. All bank checks for sums of $10 or over require a two-cent stamp. Business men would do well to remember these things.

SPECULATING IN SUGAR.—It is stated that between twenty and twenty-five thousand hogsheads of sugar are now stored in the custom house of Philadelphia by a single firm. It commands from twenty-five to thirty cents per pound, and is expected to advance, although accounts from sugar growing countries abroad are of the most favorable character.

PORTLAND TO BE MADE A FORTRESS.—Collector Washburn, during some remarks at a meeting of the merchants at the Portland Exchange on Saturday, stated that he understood it was the intention of the government to make that city a fortress. It was for that purpose that work was suspended upon Fort Preble.

THE FLEET OFF MOBILE.—Admiral Farragut's fleet at Mobile comprises nineteen vessels, carrying 201 guns. The Mobilians are expecting an attack.

GENERAL CAMPMEETING AT WILBRAHAM, MASS.

Providence permitting, a GENERAL campmeeting will commence at Wilbraham, on the old ground upon the hill, Monday, August 22d, and continue one week.

Ample accommodations will be provided for board and horse keeping. Board at 70 cents per day. Single meal,—breakfast or supper,—25 cents; dinner 30 cents. The boarding department is under the charge of the Committee, and any profits accruing from the same will go to the support of the meeting.

Those going from Boston to the campmeeting can take the [illegible] A. M. train at the Boston and Worcester depot, and arrive at the camp-ground at 7.27 A. M., or they can take the 2.30 P. M. express train, and arrive in Worcester at 4 P. M., and then change to an accommodation train, which leaves Worcester at 4.15, and arrives at Wilbraham at 6.23 P. M. ~~No other trains stop at the camp-ground.~~

Arrangements have been made with the Eastern R. R. Co., by which those taking the cars from Portsmouth and intermediate places for Boston, paying full fares at the ticket offices, can have FREE RETURN PASSES by application to Geo. T. Adams, 167 Hanover street, Boston, or to him on the camp-ground.

On the Conn. R. R. from South Vernon, and intermediate places to Springfield, those going to campmeeting will buy a common ticket, and BE SURE AND ASK THE CONDUCTOR for a return CHECK from Wilbraham campmeeting. This Check must be endorsed by Geo. T. Adams, at the Wilbraham campmeeting. As it is most likely that the R. R. Co. from Bellows Falls to South Vernon will do the same as the Conn. R. R., all who come from Bellows Falls will also please ask the Conductor for a return pass.

On the Western R. R. and also the Worcester, arrangements have been made by which those going to campmeeting will buy second class tickets at the several ticket offices, which will be good in the first class cars. But let all remember that they are to call for SECOND CLASS TICKETS for Wilbraham, and then get in the first class cars.

Those taking cars at Boston, will get their tickets at the R. R. office. Fare from Boston to Wilbraham $1.90. Return ticket will be obtained at Wilbraham depot. Those who wish to take the cars at Framingham, Natick, Westboro, etc., will also call for SECOND CLASS TICKETS for Wilbraham.

The cars leave Springfield for the camp-ground, (distance nine miles,) at 7.15 and 11.15 A. M., and 5 P. M.

WILBRAHAM CAMPMEETING.

The arrangements have been finished with the Western R. R. to furnish SECOND CLASS TICKETS at all the stations from Albany East to Wilbraham, from August 20th to August 30th inclusive. Also from Worcester West do. Be particular to call for a campmeeting ticket to Wilbraham, and you will get a second class ticket and pay the second class fare, and ride in the first class cars. On returning, you can get the ticket at Wilbraham depot. This saves all the trouble of endorsing, and danger of losing your return ticket. Come, for all things are now ready. HIRAM MUNGER.

RUTLAND TO WILBRAHAM.

We are happy to say to all who wish to attend the Wilbraham campmeeting via. Rutland, Vt., and Bellows Falls, etc., that free return tickets will be given from Bellows Falls to Rutland by applying to the conductor on the way down. As free return tickets will probably be furnished from Springfield to Bellows Falls, the way is now open for visiting Wilbraham from Rutland for fare one way, which will not exceed $5.50. Shall we not have a goodly representation, then, from North Western Vermont? Come,—it may be our last gathering.

H. F. C.

Meeting of the Advent Christian Association.

The fifth annual meeting of this Society will be held at Wilbraham Grove, commencing at 4 o'clock P. M., Tuesday, Aug. 23d, 1864.

A full representation from all churches co-operating with this Society, and a full attendance of preachers thus co-operating is desirable at this meeting. Questions too important to admit of neglect or indifference on the part of the churches scattered abroad, or of the ministry, will come before this meeting. Does the Constitution require amendment? Shall there be any change in the editorial management of the Crisis? To whom as officers of the Society shall we intrust the funds and various interests of the same for the coming year? These, among many others that will arise, are questions to be decided at this meeting. Let no trifling pecuniary consideration, nor loss of time, prevent a general gathering of the friends of this Association. Each church (i. e., society of believers in Jesus Christ) co-operating, is entitled to one delegate, and one additional delegate for every fifty members above the number of twenty-five members.

Remember ☞ That all delegates sent by churches to the Advent Christian Association must be furnished with written credentials, or forfeit their right to membership. ☜

Meeting of the Board.

The Board of the Advent Christian Association will meet at Wilbraham Grove, Tuesday, Aug. 23d, 1864, at 9 o'clock, A. M. Punctual attendance requested. H. F. CARPENTER, Clerk.

General Western Campmeeting in Amboy, Illinois.

The healthful and life-giving interest of the Advent cause in the West is young and weak. Herculean work is to be done. The whole community is to be aroused by the gospel of the kingdom, and prepared for the judgment, or perish! Let us take upon our very heart of hearts this work, and do it. Do it bravely and heroically. Do not flinch or falter.

Come, then, to the general camp at Amboy, Aug. 29th. Let us sit in council. Let us impart new courage to each other in our work. Let us pray for a revival of the work of God. Let us use the gospel means to save souls from death. Let us not be satisfied without fifty or a hundred conversions and baptisms at Amboy. Pray for this. Expect it. Come to work for it. And let us send out a new inspiration and life, all through this great West, on the truth of the coming kingdom.

Ho, ye sleepers, "hid away among the stuff," come out and show yourselves! Ye timid ones, gather up courage, and come. Lovers of this present world, shake off the earthly, and seek the heavenly and divine. Ye double-minded, come, and get established. Perishing backsliders, come, and eat again at your Father's table. Sinners, come! Come all! Come from beyond the River, the Father of waters. Come! Come from the wide spreading prairies of Illinois. Come from the bluffs, valleys, and prairies of Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota, Michigan, and elsewhere. Come all who can and share in our glorious feast of tabernacles in Amboy.

We shall provide for horsekeeping at reasonable rates. Also, a table will be provided for any that wish board at reasonable rates. Board and lodging also can be got in the village near by. Lumber can be secured for family tents by writing to Eld. D. S. Clark at Amboy. The sides can be made of boards and the roof of cotton cloth. It will not be injured for other use afterwards. The boarding tents will be under the direction of the meeting, and the profits go to sustain the expenses of the camp-ground, etc.

Well, brethren, friends, one and all, we say once more, come up to the feast. Let this be the greatest and best meeting we have ever had in the West.

D. S. CLARK,
J. V. HIMES,
Committee.

Wisconsin Annual Conference.

The "Advent Christian Conference" will hold its yearly session in connection with the Wisconsin Campmeeting, at Okee, Columbia Co., Wis., twenty miles north west from Madison, by the way of Lodi, beginning September 11th, 1864.

Let every church send delegates, and every minister be in attendance if possible; otherwise be sure to report by letter. Churches and ministers who have not yet united, should be sure to do so this year, that we may move in order and harmony, and consequently with greater strength for good. Delegates should bring letters of appointment from churches, and ministers with whom we are not acquainted should bring letters of commendation.

Letters may be sent to me at Baraboo, Sauk Co., Wis. W. SHELDON, Secretary of Conf.

Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the Second Adventists hold regular meetings in North Adams, Mass., in Cady's Hall, on Eagle street, but have no steady preaching. Will some of our preaching brethren, who have the word like fire shut up in their bones, come this way and strengthen the things that remain, which are ready to die?

A. J. MCCULLOCK, in behalf of the church.

THE CONSTITUTION

Of the Advent Christian Association as now revised and amended.

ART. I. This Society shall be known by the name of the Advent Christian Association.

ART. II. The objects of this Society shall be the promulgation of Bible truth and the promotion of vital piety by the formation of a Christian Publication Society for the issue of books, tracts and periodicals.

ART. III. The officers of this Society shall be a President, Vice-President, Secretary, Treasurer and nine Directors, who, together with the Editor or Editors, shall constitute a Board of Managers.

ART. IV. The members of this Society shall consist of all pastors and evangelists co-operating, and of delegates from churches also co-operating, and of all officers of this Association. Each church shall be allowed one delegate and one additional delegate for every fifty members above the number of twenty-five members.

ART. V. The duties of the officers shall be the same as are usually performed by such officers. And the Board of Managers shall by means of Committees whom they shall appoint provide for the discharge of the duties indicated in the second article of this Constitution. A majority of the Board at any meeting duly notified and two-thirds present at any time without notice, shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business. The Board shall also fill vacancies occurring until the next annual meeting of the Society. The Board shall make annual reports of all funds received and disbursed, of business transacted, and of the condition of the various interests of the Society. The Board shall be chosen by ballot at the annual meeting of the Society.

ART. VI. The annual meeting of the Society shall be held at such time and place as shall be declared by adjournment of the Society, or appointed by the Board. Special meetings may be called by the Society, by public notice given at least three weeks previously, at the request of ten members, either preachers or delegates from the separate churches.

ART. VII. This Constitution may be amended by a majority at any regular meeting, when two months' notice of the proposed amendment has been given, or without such notice, by two-thirds of the members present at any annual meeting.

ART. VIII. The Editor or Editors of the World's Crisis shall be chosen by ballot at the annual meeting of the Advent Christian Association, or at any special meeting called for that purpose, provided six weeks' notice be given of the same through the columns of the Crisis.

Proposed amendment for Art. IV. now on the table:—"And each church living at such a distance that they cannot conveniently be represented by a delegate from among themselves, may note by written communication to the Secretary, or may select as their proxy any person whom they may designate, whether he reside among them or not."

NOTE. A church is defined in the words of Wesley, "A Society of believers in Jesus Christ."

General Campmeeting at Alton Bay, N. H.

Providence permitting, a general campmeeting will commence at Alton Bay, N. H., Sunday, Aug. 28th, holding through the week and over the following Sunday. Brn. Hastings, Carpenter, Damman and others, are expected the 28th, and Brn. Grant, Ross and others, during the week. We hope also to see a general gathering of the flock. We hope for a great meeting. Come, brethren, to this meeting, full of faith and the Holy Ghost, to work for God and the salvation of souls; and while we may say, as Paul said (Gal. 2: 4, 5), speaking against the Judaizing teachers, "to whom we gave place by subjection, no, not for an hour, that the truth of the gospel might continue with you," we extend the greatest gospel and christian liberty.

Ample accommodations will be provided for board and horse keeping. Board at 75 cents per day; single meal, breakfast or supper, 25 cents; dinner, 35 cents. The boarding department and lunch stand will be under the charge of Bro. J. S. Moulton and Mr. H. W. Herriman, men that are used to this business. Cars and steamers will run as follows, fare half price, or one way:

Passengers from Boston and on the line of the Boston and Maine R. R., by taking trains that leave Boston at 7.30 A. M., 12 M., or 3 P. M., via. Dover and Winnipissecogee R. R., will go through to Alton Bay without change of cars.

Passengers from Portsmouth take cars at Portsmouth and Concord depot at 5.45 A. M., or 4.40 P. M. Change at New Market for Alton Bay.

Passengers from Portland and on the line of the P. S. and P. R. R., will take the trains leaving Portland at 8.45 A. M., or 3 P. M. Change cars at Dover.

Passengers from Concord and on the line of the Boston, Concord and Montreal R. R., by taking trains that leave Concord at 10.31 A. M., 3.08 P. M.; Littleton, 9 A. M.; Wells River, 10.12 A. M.; Plymouth, 1.03 P. M.; will connect at Wier's Landing with steamers for Alton Bay.

From Lowell take trains leaving Lowell at 7.30 A. M., and 2.45 P. M. Connect at Lawrence with trains of Boston and Maine Railroad for Alton Bay.

Be sure and bring under beds to fill with straw on the ground, also other bedding. All that can will provide themselves with tents; but let none stay away that are without, for we will see that they have a place to lodge. We have been unable to get the fare reduced for the Vermont and Canada friends further than Wells River, but we hope this will not hinder our seeing a good number of the faithful from that section. Pray for God's blessing.

J. COUCH,
L. BOUTELL,
T. W. PIPER,
J. G. SMITH,
Committee of Arrangements.

Campmeeting.

There will be a campmeeting in Wolcott, Ct., commencing Sept. 5th, and continuing through the week and over the following Sabbath, on land owned by Bro. Hector Smith. This meeting will be in a beautiful grove near the highway, with an excellent spring of water on the ground, and with every other convenience desirable to make it an object for the brethren and sisters to come.

This is an entirely new field, and hopes are entertained that both preachers and brethren and sisters will come filled with faith that God will bless the effort to the saving of some. Bro. Smith and wife have stood almost alone in this place for twenty years witnesses to the truth of the Savior's speedy coming, and now ask the co-operation of the brethren while he makes this effort to benefit his fellow men.

We hope there will be a general rally of all the brethren and sisters from the surrounding towns. Come, bringing your tents, and stay through the meeting. Brethren coming by Railroad east or west, will stop at Bristol. This is on the Hartford, Providence, and Fishkill R. R., where teams will be in readiness to carry passengers to the ground. Those coming on the Canal Road will stop at Southington, where they will find conveyance.

Arrangements will be made for board on the ground for 75 cents per day. Also, horse keeping at reasonable prices. The meeting is four miles from Bristol, eight from Waterbury, four from Southington, and easy of access from all the towns. It is hoped there will be a large gathering.

ANSON H. SMITH,
RALPH WILLIAMS,
Committee.

General Campmeeting in Wisconsin.

This meeting is to be attended by Eld. Miles Grant, and a score of other ministers. Let all arrange to erect their tents on Sept. 10th. Hay free for all who bring tents. Stage transportation from Madison to Okee on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, starting early in the morning; and from Baraboo to Okee on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, starting early. Those coming by cars from Prairie Du Chien direction will leave the cars at Mazomanie, and take stage to Upper Sauk, (thence five miles to the meeting), or to Baraboo, thence twelve miles by stage to the meeting. Those coming from the East on the same line, will do the same. Those coming on the Lacrosse line will leave the cars at Killburn City, and take stage to Baraboo,—twelve miles; thence by stage to Okee. Those further East, on the same line, can do the same. Those, coming with teams from Dubuque region will come by the way of Mineral Point to Sauk, thence to the meeting. Okee is five miles from where the meeting was last year, and three miles from Lodi.

O. S. KNAPP,
C. STONE,
W. SHELDON,
Committee of Arrangements.

N. B. If it is impossible to bring tents, bring good provision and bedding, and we will try to furnish shelter, provided all such will drop me a line by the 25th of August, at Baraboo, Wis., so that I may know how matters stand. Don't omit to write, stating how many will come with you.

W. SHELDON.

Campmeeting in Wisconsin.

Probably our Wisconsin campmeeting will be held at Okee, Columbia Co., Wis., beginning on Sunday, Sept. 11th. Tents to be erected on Saturday, the 10th. Despite the hard times, we look for a grand rally. Particulars in time.

For the Committee, W. SHELDON.

Notice.

The New-Hampshire Advent Conference will hold its next annual session at Alton Bay, commencing Wednesday, Sept. 1st, at 1 o'clock P. M.

For the Committee, J. COUCH.

Campmeeting in Etna, Me.

There will be a campmeeting in Etna, Me., commencing Sept. 5th, and continuing one week, on the land owned by J. S. Rundlett. We shall have a boarding tent on the ground, if we can find a suitable man to furnish one. If you have tents, bring them, and bring a good supply of quilts, blankets and buffaloes, and a place will be provided to spread them under shelter. Teams will be provided to convey those that come in the cars to the camp ground. Ministering brethren and others who love to labor for the salvation of sinners and the upbuilding of the cause of Christ, come in the spirit of Christ, praying that his blessing may attend the meeting. Let us have a grand rally in the name of the Lord. If we can get the fare reduced on the railroad from Bangor and Kendall's Mills to this place, we will give notice.

JOS. S. RUNDLETT,
JOEL MORRELL,
JOHN U. PIPER,
Committee of Arrangements.

Campmeeting.

There will be a campmeeting in Savoy, commencing Aug. 29th, and continuing one week, on the old battle ground at Bro. Noah Mirick's. Horse keeping will be furnished by Bro. Mirick. There will be a victualing tent on the ground, where food can be had by the week or day, or single meal, or otherwise. As cotton cloth is so high, we do not expect brethren can get tents unless they have old ones. If you have tents, bring them; but come well provided with buffalos, quilts and blankets, and a place will be provided to spread them under shelter.

Come, brethren, let there be a general rally. Come with warm hearts, settle all difficulties, banish all hardness. Our campmeetings are almost done. Soon notice will be given from head quarters to go into camp on the new earth. No preaching brethren are engaged. We want all to come who love God and wait for his Son, and who will give meat in due season—the last crowning truths of the gospel. H. HADLOCK, for the Church.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON, CORNER OF CAUSEWAY AND LOWELL STREETS. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

S. ANN HAYES.

Fell asleep in Jesus, in New Durham, N. H., July 18th, 1864, after a distressing sickness of fourteen weeks of disease of the stomach, my beloved sister, S. Ann Hayes, aged thirty-six years.

Sister Ann became a disciple of Jesus at the age of fourteen; and ever after lived devoted to his cause. During the past few years she sought more earnestly for a closer walk with God, and enjoyed much of the presence of her Savior. She expeted ere now to have been in the kingdom of God, but hope has been deferred. She sleeps in Jesus. Although her sickness was severe, she bore it without a murmur, and would often say, "Though I suffer, I love Jesus;" and her last words were "Glory! glory! O! how I love Jesus!" Thus sweetly did she go to rest. Her sufferings are over. Death has done his work; but soon she will hear the voice of Him who is "the resurrection and the life," and come forth to the enjoyment of that new world, where

"Death and the tomb can divide us no more."

Words of comfort were administered to us by Elder J. G. Smith, from Isa. 25: 9.

HATTIE A. HAYES.

DANIEL G. RAMSAY.

Fell asleep in Jesus, in Exeter, N. H., Aug. 7th, 1864, Daniel G., only son of Charles C. and Emily T Ramsay, aged two years, eight months, and twenty days.

The funeral was attended by Bro. A. Ross, who spoke words of comfort and consolation to us from the words of the prophet Jeremiah, 31: 16–17. He showed that death was an enemy, and those who were in his power were in an enemy's land; but they would come again from the land of the enemy, and come to their own border or inheritance. He spoke of the hope, and we felt to praise the Lord that it was ours. C. C. RAMSAY.

JAMES E. MCKELLAR.

Died in California, April 27th, 1864, of congestion of the lungs, James E. McKellar, eldest son of John and Lucy A. McKellar, of St. George, Me., aged twenty years, eleven months, and six days.

James was a young man of unexceptionable character, being beloved by all who knew him. He leaves a mother, brother, and three sisters to mourn, but they mourn not as those without hope. A short time before his death he gave his heart to God, and with the tidings of his death came also the tidings that he died a christian, rejoicing in the hope of reigning with Christ in a land where there is no death, and where parting scenes are unknown.

VOLNEY C. GREEN.

Died at Barracks Hospital, N. O., June 10th, of diphtheria, Volney C. Green, son of Daniel and Polly Green, aged twenty-two years, six months, and seven days.

He joined the 13th Maine Reg. in Nov., 1861, with which he remained until he was taken sick and carried to the hospital. A friend of his and a member of the same company and regiment writes he was sick about five weeks. The last few days of his sickness were very distressing, yet he bore it with patience, trusting the Lord Jesus who had washed away his sin and given him sweet peace in believing. P. G.

ALFRED ALONZO NICHOLS.

Died in Haverhill, Mass., Aug. 2nd, 1864, Alfred A., youngest child of Oliver F. and Maria Louisa Nichols, aged two years and four months.

Thus again we have been called to lay a little treasure away to rest from his pain; but I sorrow not as those that have no hope, for soon Jesus will come and raise my little Angellette and Alfred to enjoy the glorious society of that dear Savior they both so much loved. Though very young, Alfred longed to have Jesus come, when he should suffer no more pain, but live with him forever.

M. L. NICHOLS.

For the World's Crisis.

A PILGRIM SICK.

DEAR BRO. GRANT:—Let me say to the brethren, I am sick; some of my appointments have failed, others may. My life is brought down to the sides of the grave. Pray for me, all ye who can pray. I believe in the prayer of faith; I believe in a God who hears prayer.

O, that I may live! Let me live, that I may praise God, and benefit my fellow men. I know full well that death cannot praise God, and that those who go down to the grave cannot celebrate his name, or declare his truth. No, the living alone can praise God, as I do to-day.

In weakness yours, B. SPAULDING.

Summary of News.

DOMESTIC.

New York, Aug. 10. The Herald's correspondent, writing from near Atlanta 1st inst., says the operations around the city have settled down to a regular siege. We are pounding away on every side. The city is doomed to be reduced. The rebels have garrisoned their forts and intrenchments with the militia and use the veterans to operate when required; their line runs so that they can be massed with great rapidity.

The Macon (Ga.) Telegraph of a late date notices the departure of 1600 militia from that place for Atlanta, and says a like number will leave daily for a week.

New York, Aug 12. Gen. Banks, under date August 6, telegraphs to his wife, now in this city, as follows:

"The steamer Clyde passed here this morning from the fleet, and reports that fourteen gunboats and three monitors had passed the forts at Mobile yesterday at 8 A. M.

One monitor was blown up opposite the forts by a torpedo.

The rebel ram Tennessee was captured. Her captain, Buchanan, lost a leg in the fight. This gives us possession." N. P. BANKS.
Maj. Gen. Commanding.

Washington, Aug. 11. Richmond papers of the 10th say their loss by the surrender of Fort Gaines was six hundred prisoners, fifty guns, and an immense amount of supplies of all sorts.

The colored people of this district have applied for permission to organize into companies for the defense of Washington, offering to pay their own drill-masters.

Official dispatches state that it was not the intention of Farragut to capture Mobile, but only to relieve a portion of the fleet.

Denver City, Aug. 10. Although the Indians have been very troublesome of late in attacking unarmed trains and murdering emigrants unable to defend themselves, there has as yet been no attack by them upon the mail coaches which now run regularly both ways.

The mails were ordered to be stopped at Atchison and this place to-day by the Superintendent of the Overland line, owing to the stock being run off from some of the stations, but it is believed that our troops are being so distributed along the line as will fully protect it.

Omaha City, Nebraska, Aug. 11. Hostile marauding Indians infest the whole line from Fort Kearney to South Pass—a distance of 800 miles—and daily commit new outrages, making forays on stock and burning trains. A great number of travelers are stopping at Fort Kearney for protection. The Indians in bands of from ten to one hundred, move with celerity, and possessing thorough knowledge of the country elude pursuit. The telegraph is still in good order.

FROM THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.—Rebel Loss in the Late Fight Three Thousand. The army correspondent of the New York Times says that the flag of truce party which went out Monday morning to bury our dead in front of Petersburg found about twenty wounded men still alive, nearly all of whom were negroes. About three hundred bodies were buried, of which number not more than fifteen or twenty were white troops. Free intercourse was indulged in by parties from both sides. Gens. A. P. Hill, Bushrod Johnson, Adjt. Gen. Cooper, Gen. Mahone, and Acting Brig. Gen. Laundres were present, viewing the scene before them, and with field glasses examined our works closely. Quite a number of Englishmen, in semi-military dress, were noticed among the rebel officers. The rebels claimed the affair of Saturday as another valuable achievement in their favor, stating their loss among those in the fort destroyed to be about two thousand men, and their entire loss to be three thousand. They claim to have taken nine hundred and thirty-six prisoners from us. They say that eight men belonging to a North Carolina regiment were found alive and well in one of the bomb-proofs. The explosion made a hole or crater two hundred feet long and ninety-five in width. Three attempts were made by the rebels to capture the ruins, the first two of which were repulsed with terrible slaughter.—Journal.

FRANCE, MEXICO, AND THE UNITED STATES.—We take the following items from the Paris correspondence of the New York Commercial Advertiser:

"With regard to Mexico, our French advices assert that the Emperor Maximilian has already received an assurance from Mr. Lincoln that the Washington Government will be happy to receive a Minister from the new Empire, and to accredit one to Mexico in return.

Mr. Preston, formerly United States Minister at Madrid, arrived in London from Havana on the 24th inst. He was originally sent by the Confederate Government to represent the Confederacy at Mexico under the new Empire, but when it was found that France had changed her tactics, and that under the advice of Napoleon the Emperor Maximilian would not officially receive him, he abstained from proceeding to that country. It is thought he may now probably proceed to Spain."

THE FAILURE AT PETERSBURG.—The army correspondent of the New York Commercial writes that the repulse at Petersburg was caused by delay. The programme was that immediately after the explosion the 9th corps should charge the rebel works before the enemy could recover from the shock. Instead of acting on these instructions, the intended charge was delayed for full half an hour, which was extremely fatal to us, inasmuch as it gave the enemy an opportunity to recover from the surprise, and mass a large number of troops at the opening we created by the explosion. The explosion was not so startling as had been expected. There was hardly any perceptible shock, and the only thing heard was a dull, rumbling sound, as that of a heavily packed wagon crossing a wooden bridge.—Journal.

SYMPATHY FROM A SCOTCH LADY.—Mrs. Ann Williamson, a Scotch lady, eighty-one years of age, living in Edinburgh, recently sent to Mrs. Lincoln, as a present, a Scotch plaid pattern of elegant quality and finish. In her letter of presentation, in which she terms, Mr. Lincoln, "My Lord President," she says, "As one deeply interested in your present struggle, I trust the Lord will bless all your endeavors for the peace of your country and the freedom of the slaves." The President has written a reply, in which the following sentence occurs: "I thank you for that pretty and useful present, but still more for those good wishes to myself and our country which prompted you to present it."

WHAT REBELLION IS DOING FOR SLAVERY.—The Nashville Union says: "The colored regiments reviewed last Wednesday were composed of stout, able-bodied, athletic men, in the prime and vigor of life. There was not one among them who, in 1860, would not have brought, as a slave, one thousand dollars on the block. No wonder the rebels who saw them grated their teeth and muttered curses. They saw millions of dollars' worth of human chattels, redeemed and disenthralled, enlisted in a patriotic service, in striking contrast with their cold-blooded treason."

THE DESOLATION AT CHAMBERSBURG.—An account of the rebel ravages at Chambersburg says the immense paper mill, the flouring mills, the ax factory, the chair factory, the carriage factory, the distillery and brewery, and all the places of business that give employment to the poor are swept away. The Court House, the printing offices, the City Hall, the bank, and all the hotels are gone. The finest private residences, two churches, and all the stores are destroyed. Reckoned at present prices, the loss was not less than four millions of dollars.—Journal.

LOUISIANA.—The first two articles of the Constitutional Convention of Louisiana, and to be submitted to the people, are as follows:

ART. 1. Slavery and involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime, whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, are hereby forever abolished and prohibited throughout the State.

ART. 2. The Legislature shall make no law recognizing the right of property in man.

STAMPS ON RECEIPTS.—The internal revenue law now in force requires that a two-cent stamp must be placed on every receipt for money amounting to more than $20; also, on all receipts for the delivery of goods. By not complying with this requirement, persons lay themselves liable to a fine of $50. All bank checks for sums of $10 or over require a two-cent stamp. Business men would do well to remember these things.

SPECULATING IN SUGAR.—It is stated that between twenty and twenty-five thousand hogsheads of sugar are now stored in the custom house of Philadelphia by a single firm. It commands from twenty-five to thirty cents per pound, and is expected to advance, although accounts from sugar growing countries abroad are of the most favorable character.

PORTLAND TO BE MADE A FORTRESS.—Collector Washburn, during some remarks at a meeting of the merchants at the Portland Exchange on Saturday, stated that he understood it was the intention of the government to make that city a fortress. It was for that purpose that work was suspended upon Fort Preble.

THE FLEET OFF MOBILE.—Admiral Farragut's fleet at Mobile comprises nineteen vessels, carrying 201 guns. The Mobilians are expecting an attack.

The arrangements have been finished with the Western R. R. to furnish SECOND CLASS TICKETS at all the stations from Albany East to Wilbraham, from August 20th to August 30th inclusive. Also from Worcester West do. Be particular to call for a campmeeting ticket to Wilbraham, and you will get a second class ticket and pay the second class fare, and ride in the first class cars. On returning, you can get the ticket at Wilbraham depot. This saves all the trouble of endorsing, and danger of losing your return ticket. Come, for all things are now ready. HIRAM MUNGER.

RUTLAND TO WILBRAHAM.

We are happy to say to all who wish to attend the Wilbraham campmeeting via. Rutland, Vt., and Bellows Falls, etc., that free return tickets will be given from Bellows Falls to Rutland by applying to the conductor on the way down. As free return tickets will probably be furnished from Springfield to Bellows Falls, the way is now open for visiting Wilbraham from Rutland for fare one way, which will not exceed $5.50. Shall we not have a goodly representation, then, from North Western Vermont? Come,—it may be our last gathering.

Meeting of the Advent Christian Association.

The fifth annual meeting of this Society will be held at Wilbraham Grove, commencing at 4 o'clock P. M., Tuesday, Aug. 23d, 1864.

A full representation from all churches co-operating with this Society, and a full attendance of preachers thus co-operating is desirable at this meeting. Questions too important to admit of neglect or indifference on the part of the churches scattered abroad, or of the ministry, will come before this meeting. Does the Constitution require amendment? Shall there be any change in the editorial management of the Crisis? To whom as officers of the Society shall we intrust the funds and various interests of the same for the coming year? These, among many others that will arise, are questions to be decided at this meeting. Let no trifling pecuniary consideration, nor loss of time, prevent a general gathering of the friends of this Association. Each church (i. e., society of believers in Jesus Christ) co-operating, is entitled to one delegate, and one additional delegate for every fifty members above the number of twenty-five members.

Remember ☞ That all delegates sent by churches to the Advent Christian Association must be furnished with written credentials, or forfeit their right to membership.

H. F. CARPENTER, Clerk.
Rutland, Vt., July 7th, 1864.

Meeting of the Board.

The Board of the Advent Christian Association will meet at Wilbraham Grove, Tuesday, Aug. 23d, 1864, at 9 o'clock, A. M. Punctual attendance requested. H. F. CARPENTER, Clerk.

General Western Campmeeting in Amboy, Illinois.

The healthful and life-giving interest of the Advent cause in the West is young and weak. Herculean work is to be done. The whole community is to be aroused by the gospel of the kingdom, and prepared for the judgment, or perish! Let us take upon our very heart of hearts this work, and do it. Do it bravely and heroically. Do not flinch or falter.

Come, then, to the general camp at Amboy, Aug 29th. Let us sit in council. Let us impart new courage to each other in our work. Let us pray for a revival of the work of God. Let us use the gospel means to save souls from death. Let us not be satisfied without fifty or a hundred conversions and baptisms at Amboy. Pray for this. Expect it. Come to work for it. And let us send out a new inspiration and life, all through this great West, on the truth of the coming kingdom.

Ho, ye sleepers, "hid away among the stuff," come out and show yourselves! Ye timid ones, gather up courage, and come. Lovers of this present world, shake off the earthly, and seek the heavenly and divine. Ye double-minded, come, and get established. Perishing backsliders, come, and eat again at your Father's table. Sinners, come! Come all! Come from beyond the River, the Father of waters. Come! Come from the wide spreading prairies of Illinois. Come from the bluffs, valleys, and prairies of Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota, Michigan, and elsewhere. Come all who can and share in our glorious feast of tabernacles in Amboy.

We shall provide for horsekeeping at reasonable rates. Also, a table will be provided for any that wish board at reasonable rates. Board and lodging also can be got in the village near by. Lumber can be secured for family tents by writing to Eld. D. S. Clark at Amboy. The sides can be made of boards and the roof of cotton cloth. It will not be injured for other use afterwards. The boarding tents will be under the direction of the meeting, and the profits go to sustain the expenses of the camp-ground, etc.

Well, brethren, friends, one and all, we say once more, come up to the feast. Let this be the greatest and best meeting we have ever had in the West.

D. S. CLARK, J. V. HIMES, Committee.

Wisconsin Annual Conference.

The "Advent Christian Conference" will hold its yearly session in connection with the Wisconsin Campmeeting, at Okee, Columbia Co., Wis., twenty miles north west from Madison, by the way of Lodi, beginning September 11th, 1864.

Let every church send delegates, and every minister be in attendance if possible; otherwise be sure to report by letter. Churches and ministers who have not yet united, should be sure to do so this year, that we may move in order and harmony, and consequently with greater strength for good. Delegates should bring letters of appointment from churches, and ministers with whom we are not acquainted should bring letters of commendation.

Letters may be sent to me at Baraboo, Sauk Co., Wis. W. SHELDON, Secretary of Conf.

Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the Second Adventists hold regular meetings in North Adams, Mass., in Cady's Hall, on Eagle street, but have no steady preaching. Will some of our preaching brethren, who have the word like fire shut up in their bones, come this way and strengthen the things that remain, which are ready to die?

A. J. MCCULLOCK, in behalf of the church.

THE CONSTITUTION
Of the Advent Christian Association as now revised and amended.

ART. I. This Society shall be known by the name of the Advent Christian Association.

ART. II. The objects of this Society shall be the promulgation of Bible truth and the promotion of vital piety by the formation of a Christian Publication Society for the issue of books, tracts and periodicals.

ART. III. The officers of this Society shall be a President, Vice-President, Secretary, Treasurer and nine Directors, who, together with the Editor or Editors, shall constitute a Board of Managers.

ART. IV. The members of this Society shall consist of all pastors and evangelists co-operating, and of delegates from churches also co-operating, and of all officers of this Association. Each church shall be allowed one delegate and one additional delegate for every fifty members above the number of twenty-five members.

ART. V. The duties of the officers shall be the same as are usually performed by such officers. And the Board of Managers shall by means of Committees whom they shall appoint provide for the discharge of the duties indicated in the second article of this Constitution. A majority of the Board at any meeting duly notified and two-thirds present at any time without notice, shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business. The Board shall also fill vacancies occurring until the next annual meeting of the Society. The Board shall make annual reports of all funds received and disbursed, of business transacted, and of the condition of the various interests of the Society. The Board shall be chosen by ballot at the annual meeting of the Society.

ART. VI. The annual meeting of the Society shall be held at such time and place as shall be declared by adjournment of the Society, or appointed by the Board. Special meetings may be called by the Society, by public notice given at least three weeks previously, at the request of ten members, either preachers or delegates from the separate churches.

ART. VII. This Constitution may be amended by a majority at any regular meeting, when two months' notice of the proposed amendment has been given, or without such notice, by two-thirds of the members present at any annual meeting.

ART. VIII. The Editor or Editors of the World's Crisis shall be chosen by ballot at the annual meeting of the Advent Christian Association, or at any special meeting called for that purpose, provided six weeks' notice be given of the same through the columns of the Crisis.

Proposed amendment for Art. IV. now on the table:—"And each church living at such a distance that they cannot conveniently be represented by a delegate from among themselves, may note by written communication to the Secretary, or may select as their proxy any person whom they may designate, whether he reside among them or not."

NOTE. A church is defined in the words of Wesley, "A Society of believers in Jesus Christ."

General Campmeeting at Alton Bay, N. H.

Providence permitting, a general campmeeting will commence at Alton Bay, N. H., Sunday, Aug. 28th, holding through the week and over the following Sunday. Brn. Hastings, Carpenter, Damman and others, are expected the 28th, and Brn. Grant, Ross and others, during the week. We hope also to see a general gathering of the flock. We hope for a great meeting. Come, brethren, to this meeting, full of faith and the Holy Ghost, to work for God and the salvation of souls; and while we may say, as Paul said (Gal. 2: 4, 5), speaking against the Judaizing teachers, "to whom we gave place by subjection, no, not for an hour, that the truth of the gospel might continue with you," we extend the greatest gospel and christian liberty.

Ample accommodations will be provided for board and horse keeping. Board at 75 cents per day; single meal, breakfast or supper, 25 cents; dinner, 35 cents. The boarding department and lunch stand will be under the charge of Bro. J. S. Moulton and Mr. H. W. Herriman, men that are used to this business. Cars and steamers will run as follows, fare half price, or one way.

Passengers from Boston and on the line of the Boston and Maine R. R., by taking trains that leave Boston at 7.30 A. M., 12 M., or 3 P. M., via Dover and Winnipissogee R. R., will go through to Alton Bay without change of cars.

Passengers from Portsmouth take cars at Portsmouth and Concord depot at 5.45 A. M., or 4.40 P. M. Change at New Market for Alton Bay.

Passengers from Portland and on the line of the P. S. and P. R. R., will take the trains leaving Portland at 8.45 A. M., or 3 P. M. Change cars at Dover.

Passengers from Concord and on the line of the Boston, Concord and Montreal R. R., by taking trains that leave Concord at 10.31 A. M., 3.08 P. M.; Littleton, 9 A. M.; Wells River, 10.12 A. M.; Plymouth, 1.03 P. M., will connect at Wier's Landing with steamers for Alton Bay.

From Lowell take trains leaving Lowell at 7.30 A. M., and 2.45 P. M. Connect at Lawrence with trains of Boston and Maine Railroad for Alton Bay.

Be sure and bring under beds to fill with straw on the ground, also other bedding. All that can will provide themselves with tents; but let none stay away that are without, for we will see that they have a place to lodge. We have been unable to get the fare reduced for the Vermont and Canada friends further than Wells River, but we hope this will not hinder our seeing a good number of the faithful from that section. Pray for God's blessing.

J. COUCH, L. BOUTELL, T. W. PIPER, J. G. SMITH,	Committee of Arrangements.

Campmeeting.

There will be a campmeeting in Wolcott, Ct., commencing Sept. 5th, and continuing through the week and over the following Sabbath, on land owned by Bro. Hector Smith. This meeting will be in a beautiful grove near the highway, with an excellent spring of water on the ground, and with every other convenience desirable to make it an object for the brethren and sisters to come.

This is an entirely new field, and hopes are entertained that both preachers and brethren and sisters will come filled with faith that God will bless the effort to the saving of some. Bro. Smith and wife have stood almost alone in this place for twenty years witnesses to the truth of the Savior's speedy coming, and now ask the co-operation of the brethren while he makes this effort to benefit his fellow men.

We hope there will be a general rally of all the brethren and sisters from the surrounding towns. Come, bringing your tents, and stay through the meeting. Brethren coming by Railroad east or west, will stop at Bristol. This is on the Hartford, Providence, and Fishkill R. R., where teams will be in readiness to carry passengers to the ground. Those coming on the Canal Road will stop at Southington, where they will find conveyance.

Arrangements will be made for board on the ground for 75 cents per day. Also, horse keeping at reasonable prices. The meeting is four miles from Bristol, eight from Waterbury, four from Southington, and easy of access from all the towns. It is hoped there will be a large gathering.

ANSON H. SMITH, RALPH WILLIAMS, Committee.

General Campmeeting in Wisconsin.

This meeting is to be attended by Eld. Miles Grant, and a score of other ministers. Let all arrange to erect their tents on Sept. 10th. Hay free for all who bring tents. Stage transportation from Madison to Okee on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, starting early in the morning; and from Baraboo to Okee on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, starting early. Those coming by cars from Prairie Du Chien direction will leave the cars at Mazomanie, and take stage to Upper Sauk, (thence five miles to the meeting), or to Baraboo, thence twelve miles by stage to the meeting. Those coming from the East on the same line, will do the same. Those coming on the Lacrosse line will leave the cars at Killburn City, and take stage to Baraboo,—twelve miles; thence by stage to Okee. Those further East, on the same line, can do the same. Those, coming with teams from Dubuque region will come by the way of Mineral Point to Sauk, thence to the meeting. Okee is five miles from where the meeting was last year, and three miles from Lodi.

O. S. KNAPP, C. STONE, W. SHELDON,	Committee of Arrangements.

N. B. If it is impossible to bring tents, bring good provision and bedding, and we will try to furnish shelter, provided all such will drop me a line by the 25th of August, at Baraboo, Wis., so that I may know how matters stand. Don't omit to write, stating how many will come with you.

W. SHELDON.

Campmeeting in Wisconsin.

Probably our Wisconsin campmeeting will be held at Okee, Columbia Co., Wis., beginning on Sunday, Sept. 11th. Tents to be erected on Saturday, the 10th. Despite the hard times, we look for a grand rally. Particulars in time.

For the Committee, W. SHELDON.

Notice.

The New-Hampshire Advent Conference will hold its next annual session at Alton Bay, commencing Wednesday, Sept. 1st, at 1 o'clock P. M.

For the Committee, J. COUCH.

Campmeeting in Etna, Me.

There will be a campmeeting in Etna, Me., commencing Sept. 5th, and continuing one week, on the land owned by J. S. Rundlett. We shall have a boarding tent on the ground, if we can find a suitable man to furnish one. If you have tents, bring them, and bring a good supply of quilts, blankets and buffaloes, and a place will be provided to spread them under shelter. Teams will be provided to convey those that come in the cars to the camp ground. Ministering brethren and others who love to labor for the salvation of sinners and the upbuilding of the cause of Christ, come in the spirit of Christ, praying that his blessing may attend the meeting. Let us have a grand rally in the name of the Lord. If we can get the fare reduced on the railroad from Bangor and Kendall's Mills to this place, we will give notice.

JOS. S. RUNDLETT, JOEL MORRELL, JOHN U. PIPER,	Committee of Arrangements.

Campmeeting.

There will be a campmeeting in Savoy, commencing Aug. 29th, and continuing one week, on the old battle ground at Bro. Noah Mirick's. Horse keeping will be furnished by Bro. Mirick. There will be a victualing tent on the ground, where food can be had by the week or day, or single meal, or otherwise. As cotton cloth is so high, we do not expect brethren can get tents unless they have old ones. If you have tents, bring them; but come well provided with buffalos, quilts and blankets, and a place will be provided to spread them under shelter.

Come, brethren, let there be a general rally. Come with warm hearts, settle all difficulties, banish all hardness. Our campmeetings are almost done. Soon notice will be given from head quarters to go into camp on the new earth. No preaching brethren are engaged. We want all to come who love God and wait for his Son, and who will give meat in due season—the last crowning truths of the gospel. H. HADLOCK, for the Church.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON, CORNER OF CAUSEWAY AND LOWELL STREETS. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

S. ANN HAYES.

Fell asleep in Jesus, in New Durham, N. H., July 18th, 1864, after a distressing sickness of fourteen weeks of disease of the stomach, my beloved sister, S. Ann Hayes, aged thirty-six years.

Sister Ann became a disciple of Jesus at the age of fourteen; and ever after lived devoted to his cause. During the past few years she sought more earnestly for a closer walk with God, and enjoyed much of the presence of her Savior. She expected ere now to have been in the kingdom of God, but hope has been deferred. She sleeps in Jesus. Although her sickness was severe, she bore it without a murmur, and would often say, "Though I suffer, I love Jesus;" and her last words were "Glory! glory! O! how I love Jesus!" Thus sweetly did she go to rest. Her sufferings are over. Death has done his work; but soon she will hear the voice of Him who is "the resurrection and the life," and come forth to the enjoyment of that new world, where

"Death and the tomb can divide us no more."

Words of comfort were administered to us by Elder J. G. Smith, from Isa. 25: 9.

HATTIE A. HAYES.

DANIEL G. RAMSAY.

Fell asleep in Jesus, in Exeter, N. H., Aug. 7th, 1864, Daniel G., only son of Charles C. and Emily T. Ramsay, aged two years, eight months, and twenty days.

The funeral was attended by Bro. A. Rose, who spoke words of comfort and consolation to us from the words of the prophet Jeremiah, 31: 16–17. He showed that death was an enemy, and those who were in his power were in an enemy's land; but they would come again from the land of the enemy, and come to their own border or inheritance. He spoke of the hope, and we felt to praise the Lord that it was ours. C. C. RAMSAY.

JAMES E. MCKELLAR.

Died in California, April 27th, 1864, of congestion of the lungs, James E. McKellar, eldest son of John and Lucy A. McKellar, of St. George, Me., aged twenty years, eleven months, and six days.

James was a young man of unexceptionable character, being beloved by all who knew him. He leaves a mother, brother, and three sisters to mourn, but they mourn not as those without hope. A short time before his death he gave his heart to God, and with the tidings of his death came also the tidings that he died a christian, rejoicing in the hope of reigning with Christ in a land where there is no death, and where parting scenes are unknown.

VOLNEY C. GREEN.

Died at Barracks Hospital, N. O., June 10th, of diphtheria, Volney C. Green, son of Daniel and Polly Green, aged twenty-two years, six months, and seven days.

He joined the 13th Maine Reg. in Nov., 1861, with which he remained until he was taken sick and carried to the hospital. A friend of his and a member of the same company and regiment writes he was sick about five weeks. The last few days of his sickness were very distressing, yet he bore it with patience, trusting the Lord Jesus who had washed away his sin and given him sweet peace in believing. P. G.

ALFRED ALONZO NICHOLS.

Died in Haverhill, Mass., Aug. 2nd, 1864, Alfred A., youngest child of Oliver F. and Maria Louisa Nichols, aged two years and four months.

Thus again we have been called to lay a little treasure away to rest from his pain; but I sorrow not as those that have no hope, for soon Jesus will come and raise my little Angellette and Alfred to enjoy the glorious society of that dear Savior they both so much loved. Though very young, Alfred longed to have Jesus come, when he should suffer no more pain, but live with him forever.

M. L. NICHOLS.

For the World's Crisis.

A PILGRIM SICK.

DEAR BRO. GRANT:—Let me say to the brethren, I am sick; some of my appointments have failed, others may. My life is brought down to the sides of the grave. Pray for me, all ye who can pray. I believe in the prayer of faith; I believe in a God who hears prayer.

O, that I may live! Let me live, that I may praise God, and benefit my fellow men. I know full well that death cannot praise God, and that those who go down to the grave cannot celebrate his name, or declare his truth. No, the living alone can praise God, as I do to-day.

In weakness yours, B. SPAULDING.

Summary of News.

DOMESTIC.

New York, Aug. 10. The Herald's correspondent, writing from near Atlanta 1st inst., says the operations around the city have settled down to a regular siege. We are pounding away on every side. The city is doomed to be reduced. The rebels have garrisoned their forts and intrenchments with the militia and use the veterans to operate when required; their line runs so that they can be massed with great rapidity.

The Macon (Ga.) Telegraph of a late date notices the departure of 1600 militia from that place for Atlanta, and says a like number will leave daily for a week.

New York, Aug 12. Gen. Banks, under date August 6, telegraphs to his wife, now in this city, as follows:

"The steamer Clyde passed here this morning from the fleet, and reports that fourteen gunboats and three monitors had passed the forts at Mobile yesterday at 8 A. M.

One monitor was blown up opposite the forts by a torpedo.

The rebel ram Tennessee was captured. Her captain, Buchanan, lost a leg in the fight. This gives us possession." N. P. BANKS.

Maj. Gen. Commanding.

Washington, Aug. 11. Richmond papers of the 10th say their loss by the surrender of Fort Gaines was six hundred prisoners, fifty guns, and an immense amount of supplies of all sorts.

The colored people of this district have applied for permission to organize into companies for the defense of Washington, offering to pay their own drill-masters.

Official dispatches state that it was not the intention of Farragut to capture Mobile, but only to relieve a portion of the fleet.

Denver City, Aug. 10. Although the Indians have been very troublesome of late in attacking unarmed trains and murdering emigrants unable to defend themselves, there has as yet been no attack by them upon the mail coaches which now run regularly both ways.

The mails were ordered to be stopped at Atchison and this place to-day, by the Superintendent of the Overland line, owing to the stock being run off from some of the stations, but it is believed that our troops are being so distributed along the line as will fully protect it.

Omaha City, Nebraska, Aug. 11. Hostile marauding Indians infest the whole line from Fort Kearney to South Pass—a distance of 800 miles—and daily commit new outrages, making forays on stock and burning trains. A great number of travelers are stopping at Fort Kearney for protection. The Indians in bands of from ten to one hundred, move with celerity, and possessing thorough knowledge of the country elude pursuit. The telegraph is still in good order.

FROM THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.—Rebel Loss in the Late Fight Three Thousand. The army correspondent of the New York Times says that the flag of truce party which went out Monday morning to bury our dead in front of Petersburg found about twenty wounded men still alive, nearly all of whom were negroes. About three hundred bodies were buried, of which number not more than fifteen or twenty were white troops. Free intercourse was indulged in by parties from both sides. Gens. A. P. Hill, Bushrod Johnson, Adjt. Gen. Cooper, Gen. Mahone, and Acting Brig. Gen. Laundres were present, viewing the scene before them, and with field glasses examined our works closely. Quite a number of Englishmen, in semi-military dress, were noticed among the rebel officers. The rebels claimed the affair of Saturday as another valuable achievement in their favor, stating their loss among those in the fort destroyed to be about two thousand men, and their entire loss to be three thousand. They claim to have taken nine hundred and thirty-six prisoners from us. They say that eight men belonging to a North Carolina regiment were found alive and well in one of the bomb-proofs. The explosion made a hole or crater two hundred feet long and ninety-five in width. Three attempts were made by the rebels to capture the ruins, the first two of which were repulsed with terrible slaughter.—Journal.

FRANCE, MEXICO, AND THE UNITED STATES.—We take the following items from the Paris correspondence of the New York Commercial Advertiser:

"With regard to Mexico, our French advices assert that the Emperor Maximilian has already received an assurance from Mr. Lincoln that the Washington Government will be happy to receive a Minister from the new Empire, and to accredit one to Mexico in return.

Mr. Preston, formerly United States Minister at Madrid, arrived in London from Havana on the 24th inst. He was originally sent by the Confederate Government to represent the Confederacy at Mexico under the new Empire, but when it was found that France had changed her tactics, and that under the advice of Napoleon the Emperor Maximilian would not officially receive him, he abstained from proceeding to that country. It is thought he may now probably proceed to Spain."

THE FAILURE AT PETERSBURG.—The army correspondent of the New York Commercial writes that the repulse at Petersburg was caused by delay. The programme was that immediately after the explosion the 9th corps should charge the rebel works before the enemy could recover from the shock. Instead of acting on these instructions, the intended charge was delayed for full half an hour, which was extremely fatal to us, inasmuch as it gave the enemy an opportunity to recover from the surprise, and mass a large number of troops at the opening we created by the explosion. The explosion was not so startling as had been expected. There was hardly any perceptible shock, and the only thing heard was a dull, rumbling sound, as that of a heavily packed wagon crossing a wooden bridge.—Journal.

SYMPATHY FROM A SCOTCH LADY.—Mrs. Ann Williamson, a Scotch lady, eighty-one years of age, living in Edinburgh, recently sent to Mrs. Lincoln, as a present, a Scotch plaid pattern of elegant quality and finish. In her letter of presentation, in which she terms, Mr. Lincoln, "My Lord President," she says, "As one deeply interested in your present struggle, I trust the Lord will bless all your endeavors for the peace of your country and the freedom of the slaves." The President has written a reply, in which the following sentence occurs: "I thank you for that pretty and useful present, but still more for those good wishes to myself and our country which prompted you to present it."

WHAT REBELLION IS DOING FOR SLAVERY.—The Nashville Union says: "The colored regiments reviewed last Wednesday were composed of stout, able-bodied, athletic men, in the prime and vigor of life. There was not one among them who, in 1860, would not have brought, as a slave, one thousand dollars on the block. No wonder the rebels who saw them grated their teeth and muttered curses. They saw millions of dollars' worth of human chattels, redeemed and disenthralled, enlisted in a patriotic service, in striking contrast with their cold-blooded treason."

THE DESOLATION AT CHAMBERSBURG.—An account of the rebel ravages at Chambersburg says the immense paper mill, the flouring mills, the ax factory, the chair factory, the carriage factory, the distillery and brewery, and all the places of business that give employment to the poor are swept away. The Court House, the printing offices, the City Hall, the bank, and all the hotels are gone. The finest private residences, two churches, and all the stores are destroyed. Reckoned at present prices, the loss was not less than four millions of dollars.—Journal.

LOUISIANA.—The first two articles of the Constitutional Convention of Louisiana, and to be submitted to the people, are as follows:

ART. 1. Slavery and involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime, whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, are hereby forever abolished and prohibited throughout the State.

ART. 2. The Legislature shall make no law recognizing the right of property in man.

STAMPS ON RECEIPTS.—The internal revenue law now in force requires that a two-cent stamp must be placed on every receipt for money amounting to more than $20; also, on all receipts for the delivery of goods. By not complying with this requirement, persons lay themselves liable to a fine of $50. All bank checks for sums of $10 or over require a two-cent stamp. Business men would do well to remember these things.

SPECULATING IN SUGAR.—It is stated that between twenty and twenty-five thousand hogsheads of sugar are now stored in the custom house of Philadelphia by a single firm. It commands from twenty-five to thirty cents per pound, and is expected to advance, although accounts from sugar growing countries abroad are of the most favorable character.

PORTLAND TO BE MADE A FORTRESS.—Collector Washburn, during some remarks at a meeting of the merchants at the Portland Exchange on Saturday, stated that he understood it was the intention of the government to make that city a fortress. It was for that purpose that work was suspended upon Fort Preble.

THE FLEET OFF MOBILE.—Admiral Farragut's fleet at Mobile comprises nineteen vessels, carrying 201 guns. The Mobilians are expecting an attack.

☞ The Chicopee river is lower than it has been known for many years. At Chicopee Falls the mills, though not all in full operation, can be run only a part of the day.

☞ It should be known to photographers that American petroleum will answer as a solvent for india-rubber as well as benzole, and that it costs less than half the amount.

☞ A party visiting the White Mountains ascended Mount Washington on Friday last and encountered a severe snow storm of three hours' duration.

☞ Two hundred thousand acres of land in Ireland have been permitted to fall to waste and sterility the past year.

☞ It is estimated that the plunder carried off and the damage inflicted by the rebels in Maryland will amount to four millions of dollars.

☞ The Bangor Times reports the potatoes in that section of Maine much damaged by the drouth.

☞ The mortality in London of late has risen above the average of the previous ten years.

GENERAL CAMPMEETING AT WILBRAHAM, MASS.

Providence permitting, a GENERAL campmeeting will commence at Wilbraham, on the old ground upon the hill, Monday, August 22d, and continue one week.

Ample accommodations will be provided for board and horse keeping. Board at 70 cents per day. Single meal,—breakfast or supper,—25 cents; dinner 30 cents. The boarding department is under the charge of the Committee, and any profits accruing from the same will go to the support of the meeting.

Those going from Boston to the campmeeting can take the [illegible] A. M. train at the Boston and Worcester depot, and arrive at the camp-ground at 7.27 A. M., or they can take the 2.30 P. M. express train, and arrive in Worcester at 4 P. M., and then change to an accommodation train, which leaves Worcester at 4.15, and arrives at Wilbraham at 6.23 P. M. No other trains stop at the camp ground.

Arrangements have been made with the Eastern R. R. Co., by which those taking the cars from Portsmouth and intermediate places for Boston, paying full fares at the ticket offices, can have FREE RETURN PASSES by application to Geo. T. Adams, 167 Hanover street, Boston, or to him on the camp-ground.

On the Conn. R. R. from South Vernon, and intermediate places to Springfield, those going to campmeeting will buy a common ticket, and BE SURE AND ASK THE CONDUCTOR for a return CHECK from Wilbraham campmeeting. This Check must be endorsed by Geo. T. Adams, at the Wilbraham campmeeting. As it is most likely that the R. R. Co. from Bellows Falls to South Vernon will do the same as the Conn. R. R., all who come from Bellows Falls will also please ask the Conductor for a return pass.

On the Western R. R. and also the Worcester, arrangements have been made by which those going to campmeeting will buy second class tickets at the several ticket offices, which will be good in the first class cars. So let all remember that they are to call for SECOND CLASS TICKETS for Wilbraham, and then get in the first class cars.

Those taking cars at Boston, will get their tickets at the R. R. office. Fare from Boston to Wilbraham $1.90. Return ticket will be obtained at Wilbraham depot. Those who wish to take the cars at Framingham, Natick, Westboro, etc., will also call for SECOND CLASS TICKETS for Wilbraham.

The cars leave Springfield for the camp-ground, (distance nine miles,) at 7.15 and 11.15 A. M., and 5 P. M.

WILBRAHAM CAMPMEETING.

The arrangements have been finished with the Western R. R. to furnish SECOND CLASS TICKETS at all the stations from Albany East to Wilbraham, from August 20th to August 30th inclusive. Also from Worcester West do. Be particular to call for a campmeeting ticket to Wilbraham, and you will get a second class ticket and pay the second class fare, and ride in the first class cars. On returning, you can get the ticket at Wilbraham depot. This saves all the trouble of endorsing, and danger of losing your return ticket. Come, for all things are now ready. HIRAM MUNGER.

RUTLAND TO WILBRAHAM.

We are happy to say to all who wish to attend the Wilbraham campmeeting via. Rutland, Vt., and Bellows Falls, etc., that free return tickets will be given from Bellows Falls to Rutland by applying to the conductor on the way down. As free return tickets will probably be furnished from Springfield to Bellows Falls, the way is now open for visiting Wilbraham from Rutland for fare one way, which will not exceed $5.50. Shall we not have a goodly representation, then, from North Western Vermont? Come,—it may be our last gathering.

H. F. C.

Meeting of the Advent Christian Association.

The fifth annual meeting of this Society will be held at Wilbraham Grove, commencing at 4 o'clock P. M., Tuesday, Aug. 23d, 1864.

A full representation from all churches co-operating with this Society, and a full attendance of preachers thus co-operating is desirable at this meeting. Questions too important to admit of neglect or indifference on the part of the churches scattered abroad, or of the ministry, will come before this meeting. Does the Constitution require amendment? Shall there be any change in the editorial management of the Crisis? To whom as officers of the Society shall we intrust the funds and various interests of the same for the coming year? These, among many others that will arise, are questions to be decided at this meeting. Let no trifling pecuniary consideration, nor loss of time, prevent a general gathering of the friends of this Association. Each church (i. e., society of believers in Jesus Christ) co-operating, is entitled to one delegate, and one additional delegate for every fifty members above the number of twenty-five members.

Remember ☞ That all delegates sent by churches to the Advent Christian Association must be furnished with written credentials, or forfeit their right to membership. ☜

H. F. CARPENTER, Clerk.

Rutland, Vt., July 7th, 1864.

Meeting of the Board.

The Board of the Advent Christian Association will meet at Wilbraham Grove, Tuesday, Aug. 23d, 1864, at 9 o'clock, A. M. Punctual attendance requested. H. F. CARPENTER, Clerk.

General Western Campmeeting in Amboy, Illinois.

The healthful and life-giving interest of the Advent cause in the West is young and weak. Herculean work is to be done. The whole community is to be aroused by the gospel of the kingdom, and prepared for the judgment, or perish! Let us take upon our very heart of hearts this work, and do it. Do it bravely and heroically. Do not flinch or falter.

Come, then, to the general camp at Amboy, Aug. 29th. Let us sit in council. Let us impart new courage to each other in our work. Let us pray for a revival of the work of God. Let us use the gospel means to save souls from death. Let us not be satisfied without fifty or a hundred conversions and baptisms at Amboy. Pray for this. Expect it. Come to work for it. And let us send out a new inspiration and life, all through this great West, on the truth of the coming kingdom.

Ho, ye sleepers, "hid away among the stuff," come out and show yourselves! Ye timid ones, gather up courage, and come. Lovers of this present world, shake off the earthly, and seek the heavenly and divine. Ye double-minded, come, and get established. Perishing backsliders, come, and eat again at your Father's table. Sinners, come! Come all! Come from beyond the River, the Father of waters. Come! Come from the wide spreading prairies of Illinois. Come from the bluffs, valleys, and prairies of Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota, Michigan, and elsewhere. Come all who can and share in our glorious feast of tabernacles in Amboy.

We shall provide for horsekeeping at reasonable rates. Also, a table will be provided for any that wish board at reasonable rates. Board and lodging also can be got in the village near by. Lumber can be secured for family tents by writing to Eld. D. S. Clark at Amboy. The sides can be made of boards and the roof of cotton cloth. It will not be injured for other use afterwards. The boarding tents will be under the direction of the meeting, and the profits go to sustain the expenses of the camp-ground, etc.

Well, brethren, friends, one and all, we say once more, come up to the feast. Let this be the greatest and best meeting we have ever had in the West.

D. S. CLARK,
J. V. HIMES,
} Committee.

Wisconsin Annual Conference.

The "Advent Christian Conference" will hold its yearly session in connection with the Wisconsin Campmeeting, at Okee, Columbia Co., Wis., twenty miles north west from Madison, by the way of Lodi, beginning September 11th, 1864.

Let every church send delegates, and every minister be in attendance if possible; otherwise be sure to report by letter. Churches and ministers who have not yet united, should be sure to do so this year, that we may move in order and harmony, and consequently with greater strength for good. Delegates should bring letters of appointment from churches, and ministers with whom we are not acquainted should bring letters of commendation.

Letters may be sent to me at Baraboo, Sauk Co., Wis. W. SHELDON, Secretary of Conf.

Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the Second Adventists hold regular meetings in North Adams, Mass., in Cady's Hall, on Eagle street, but have no steady preaching. Will some of our preaching brethren, who have the word like fire shut up in their bones, come this way and strengthen the things that remain, which are ready to die?

A. J. MCCULLOCK, in behalf of the church.

THE CONSTITUTION

Of the Advent Christian Association as now revised and amended.

ART. I. This Society shall be known by the name of the Advent Christian Association.

ART. II. The objects of this Society shall be the promulgation of Bible truth and the promotion of vital piety by the formation of a Christian Publication Society for the issue of books, tracts and periodicals.

ART. III. The officers of this Society shall be a President, Vice-President, Secretary, Treasurer and nine Directors, who, together with the Editor or Editors, shall constitute a Board of Managers.

ART. IV. The members of this Society shall consist of all pastors and evangelists co-operating, and of delegates from churches also co-operating, and of all officers of this Association. Each church shall be allowed one delegate and one additional delegate for every fifty members above the number of twenty-five members.

ART. V. The duties of the officers shall be the same as are usually performed by such officers. And the Board of Managers shall by means of Committees whom they shall appoint provide for the discharge of the duties indicated in the second article of this Constitution. A majority of the Board at any meeting duly notified and two-thirds present at any time without notice, shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business. The Board shall also fill vacancies occurring until the next annual meeting of the Society. The Board shall make annual reports of all funds received and disbursed, of business transacted, and of the condition of the various interests of the Society. The Board shall be chosen by ballot at the annual meeting of the Society.

ART. VI. The annual meeting of the Society shall be held at such time and place as shall be declared by adjournment of the Society, or appointed by the Board. Special meetings may be called by the Society, by public notice given at least three weeks previously, at the request of ten members, either preachers or delegates from the separate churches.

ART. VII. This Constitution may be amended by a majority at any regular meeting, when two months' notice of the proposed amendment has been given, or without such notice, by two-thirds of the members present at any annual meeting.

ART. VIII. The Editor or Editors of the World's Crisis shall be chosen by ballot at the annual meeting of the Advent Christian Association, or at any special meeting called for that purpose, provided six weeks' notice be given of the same through the columns of the Crisis.

Proposed amendment for ART. IV. now on the table:—"And each church living at such a distance that they cannot conveniently be represented by a delegate from among themselves, may note by written communication to the Secretary, or may select as their proxy any person whom they may designate, whether he reside among them or not."

NOTE. A church is defined in the words of Wesley, "A Society of believers in Jesus Christ."

General Campmeeting at Alton Bay, N. H.

Providence permitting, a general campmeeting will commence at Alton Bay, N. H., Sunday, Aug. 28th, holding through the week and over the following Sunday. Brn. Hastings, Carpenter, Damman and others, are expected the 28th, and Brn. Grant, Ross and others, during the week. We hope also to see a general gathering of the flock. We hope for a great meeting. Come, brethren, to this meeting, full of faith and the Holy Ghost, to work for God and the salvation of souls; and while we may say, as Paul said (Gal. 2: 4, 5), speaking against the Judaizing teachers, "to whom we gave place by subjection, no, not for an hour, that the truth of the gospel might continue with you," we extend the greatest gospel and christian liberty.

Ample accommodations will be provided for board and horse keeping. Board at 75 cents per day; single meal, breakfast or supper, 25 cents; dinner, 35 cents. The boarding department and lunch stand will be under the charge of Bro. J. S. Moulton and Mr. H. W. Herriman, men that are used to this business. Cars and steamers will run as follows, fare half price, or one way.

Passengers from Boston and on the line of the Boston and Maine R. R., by taking trains that leave Boston at 7.30 A. M., 12 M., or 3 P. M., via. Dover and Winnipiseogee R. R., will go through to Alton Bay without change of cars.

Passengers from Portsmouth take cars at Portsmouth and Concord depot at 5.45 A. M., or 4 40 P. M. Change at New Market for Alton Bay.

Passengers from Portland and on the line of the P. S. and P. R. R., will take the trains leaving Portland at 8.45 A. M., or 3 P. M. Change cars at Dover.

Passengers from Concord and on the line of the Boston, Concord and Montreal R. R., by taking trains that leave Concord at 10.31 A. M., 3.08 P. M.; Littleton, 9 A. M.; Wells River, 10.12 A. M.; Plymouth, 1.03 P. M.; will connect at Wier's Landing with steamers for Alton Bay.

From Lowell take trains leaving Lowell at 7.30 A. M., and 2.45 P. M. Connect at Lawrence with trains of Boston and Maine Railroad for Alton Bay.

Be sure and bring under beds to fill with straw on the ground, also other bedding. All that can will provide themselves with tents; but let none stay away that are without, for we will see that they have a place to lodge. We have been unable to get the fare reduced for the Vermont and Canada friends further than Wells River, but we hope this will not hinder our seeing a good number of the faithful from that section. Pray for God's blessing.

Campmeeting.

There will be a campmeeting in Wolcott, Ct., commencing Sept. 5th, and continuing through the week and over the following Sabbath, on land owned by Bro. Hector Smith. This meeting will be in a beautiful grove near the highway, with an excellent spring of water on the ground, and with every other convenience desirable to make it an object for the brethren and sisters to come.

This is an entirely new field, and hopes are entertained that both preachers and brethren and sisters will come filled with faith that God will bless the effort to the saving of some. Bro. Smith and wife have stood almost alone in this place for twenty years witnesses to the truth of the Savior's speedy coming, and now ask the co-operation of the brethren while he makes this effort to benefit his fellow men.

We hope there will be a general rally of all the brethren and sisters from the surrounding towns. Come, bringing your tents, and stay through the meeting. Brethren coming by Railroad east or west, will stop at Bristol. This is on the Hartford, Providence, and Fishkill R. R., where teams will be in readiness to carry passengers to the ground. Those coming on the Canal Road will stop at Southington, where they will find conveyance.

Arrangements will be made for board on the ground for 75 cents per day. Also, horse keeping at reasonable prices. The meeting is four miles from Bristol, eight from Waterbury, four from Southington, and easy of access from all the towns. It is hoped there will be a large gathering.

ANSON H. SMITH,
RALPH WILLIAMS,
} Committee.

General Campmeeting in Wisconsin.

This meeting is to be attended by Eld. Miles Grant, and a score of other ministers. Let all arrange to erect their tents on Sept. 10th. Hay free for all who bring tents. Stage transportation from Madison to Okee on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, starting early in the morning; and from Baraboo to Okee on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, starting early. Those coming by cars from Prairie Du Chien direction will leave the cars at Mazomanie, and take stage to Upper Sauk, (thence five miles to the meeting), or to Baraboo, thence twelve miles by stage to the meeting. Those coming from the East on the same line, will do the same. Those coming on the Lacrosse line will leave the cars at Killburn City, and take stage to Baraboo,—twelve miles; thence by stage to Okee. Those further East, on the same line, can do the same. Those coming with teams from Dubuque region will come by the way of Mineral Point to Sauk, thence to the meeting. Okee is five miles from where the meeting was last year, and three miles from Lodi.

W. SHELDON,
} Committee of Arrangements.

N. B. If it is impossible to bring tents, bring good provision and bedding, and we will try to furnish shelter, provided all such will drop me a line by the 25th of August, at Baraboo, Wis., so that I may know how matters stand. Don't omit to write, stating how many will come with you.

W. SHELDON.

Campmeeting in Wisconsin.

Probably our Wisconsin campmeeting will be held at Okee, Columbia Co., Wis., beginning on Sunday, Sept. 11th. Tents to be erected on Saturday, the 10th. Despite the hard times, we look for a grand rally. Particulars in time.

For the Committee, W. SHELDON.

Notice.

The New-Hampshire Advent Conference will hold its next annual session at Alton Bay, commencing Wednesday, Sept. 1st, at 1 o'clock P. M.

For the Committee, J. COUCH.

Campmeeting in Etna, Me.

There will be a campmeeting in Etna, Me., commencing Sept. 5th, and continuing one week, on the land owned by J. S. Rundlett. We shall have a boarding tent on the ground, if we can find a suitable man to furnish one. If you have tents, bring them, and bring a good supply of quilts, blankets and buffaloes, and a place will be provided to spread them under shelter. Teams will be provided to convey those that come in the cars to the camp ground. Ministering brethren and others who love to labor for the salvation of sinners and the upbuilding of the cause of Christ, come in the spirit of Christ, praying that his blessing may attend the meeting. Let us have a grand rally in the name of the Lord. If we can get the fare reduced on the railroad from Bangor and Kendall's Mills to this place, we will give notice.

JOS. S. RUNDLETT,
JOEL MORRELL,
JOHN U. PIPER,
} Committee of Arrangements.

Campmeeting.

There will be a campmeeting in Savoy, commencing Aug. 29th, and continuing one week, on the old battle ground at Bro. Noah Mirick's. Horse keeping will be furnished by Bro. Mirick. There will be a victualing tent on the ground, where food can be had by the week or day, or single meal, or otherwise. As cotton cloth is so high, we do not expect brethren can get tents unless they have old ones. If you have tents, bring them; but come well provided with buffalos, quilts and blankets, and a place will be provided to spread them under shelter.

Come, brethren, let there be a general rally. Come with warm hearts, settle all difficulties, banish all hardness. Our campmeetings are almost done. Soon notice will be given from head quarters to go into camp on the new earth. No preaching brethren are engaged. We want all to come who love God and wait for his Son, and who will give meat in due season—the last crowning truths of the gospel. H. HADLOCK, for the Church.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON, CORNER OF CAUSEWAY AND LOWELL STREETS. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

COULD'ST THOU NOT WATCH ONE HOUR?

The night is dark—behold the shade was deeper
 In the old garden of Gethsemane,
When that calm voice awoke the weary sleeper,
 Couldst thou not watch one hour alone with me?

Oh! though so weary of thy self-denials,
 And so impatient of thy little cross,
It is so hard to bear thy daily trials,
 To count all earthly things a gainful loss,

What if thou always suffer tribulation,
 And if thy christian warfare never cease;
The gaining of the quiet habitation
 Shall gather thee to everlasting peace.

But here we all must suffer, walking lonely
 The path that Jesus once himself hath gone;
Watch though in patience through this hour only,
 This one dark hour before the eternal dawn.

The captive's oar may pause upon the galley,
 The soldier sleep beneath his plumed crest,
And peace may fold her wing o'er hill and valley,
 But thou, oh! christian, must not take thy rest;

Thou must walk on, however man upbraid thee,
 With Him who trod the wine-press all alone;
Thou wilt not find one human hand to aid thee,
 One human soul to comprehend thine own.

Heed not the images forever thronging
 From out the foregone life thou livest no more;
Faint-hearted mariner, still art thou longing
 For the dim line of the receding shore?

Wilt thou find rest of soul in thy returning
 To that old path thou hast so vainly trod?
Hast thou forgotten all thy weary yearning
 To walk among the children of thy God?

Faithful and steadfast in their consecration,
 Living by that high faith to thee so dim,
Declaring before God their dedication,
 So far from thee, because so near to him.

Canst thou forget thy christian superscription—
 "Behold, we count them happy which endure"?
What treasure wouldst thou in the land Egyptian,
 Repass the stormy water to secure?

And wilt thou yield thy sure and glorious promise
 For the poor fleeting joys earth can afford?
No hand can take away the treasure from us
 That rest within the keeping of the Lord.

Poor wandering soul, I know that thou art seeking
 Some easier way, as all have sought before,
To silence the reproachful inward speaking—
 Some landward path unto an island shore?

The cross is heavy in thy human measure,
 The way too narrow for thy inward pride,
Thou canst not lay thine intellectual treasure
 At the low footstool of the Crucified.

Oh! that thy faithless soul one hour only
 Would comprehend the christian's perfect life,
Despised with Jesus, sorrowful and lonely,
 Yet calmly looking upwards in its strife.

For poverty and self-renunciation,
 Their Father yieldeth back a thousand fold;
In the calm stillness of regeneration,
 Cometh a joy they never knew of old.

In meek obedience to the heavenly Teacher,
 Thy weary soul can only find its peace,
Seeking no aid from any human creature,
 Looking to God alone for his release,—

And he will come in his own time and power,
 To set his earnest-hearted children free;
Watch only through this dark and painful hour,
 And the bright morning yet will break for thee.

For the World's Crisis.

MY WESTERN TOUR.—NO. 5.

Dear brethren of the "household of faith":—My last communication left me the day of my meeting at Burr Oak, a pleasant village on the western side of Looking Glass Prairie, a beautiful farming tract six miles west of the town of Hesper, where I went with Bro. McKee and wife and others to preach in the evening. Met a small congregation at the school-house in the village, and had a very fair time in speaking to them. Had some conversation with Bro. Waggoner, and returned to my place of sojourn at Hesper. After a short sleep, rose to hail the light of another beautiful day of harvest in this lovely west, and to see the laborers "go forth unto" their "work, until the evening"; and here, as in many other places, help is so scarce in consequence of the drain from the country of young men, caused by the cruel war now raging, and the harvest so great, women went forth to share the toil of their husbands and drive the reapers, thus in this place performing the part of a man, while others more hardy bind the precious grain.

A. M. Visited the pioneer family of the place, at the residence of R. Tabor, formerly of Vermont, who is wealthy, and some of whose relatives I number among my personal friends in Canada East. Had a pleasant interview with them, which occupied until 11 A. M., when I went in to the Thursday meeting of the "Friends" convened at their house of worship, a humble place indeed, but perfectly neat and comfortable. In all, forty persons were present, who came in one after another and took their seats in silence, two elders of their order being present. The silence remained unbroken for a long three quarters of an hour, during which time I observed that several of the "Friends" yielded more or less to the influence of and who could blame them? surely I could not, for only for the interest I felt in watching for the moving of the Spirit, I might have lapsed into the same condition.

"Tired Nature's sweet restorer, balmy sleep";

At the point I have indicated, a Sister rose and ended the (to me) painful silence, commencing with, "Is there not a single voice to be raised to God for his blessing? a single voice to be raised to God for his mercies to be bestowed upon us, the few here and elsewhere who serve him; and not only upon us, but upon all others, that the gospel of PEACE may end cruel war? If we loved our enemies, could we kill them? And did not our Savior teach us to love them?" with a little more of this kind, which was very good; when she sat down, and I was just on the point of rising to speak, when the ruling elder, who sat directly before me, extended his hand to the one next him in "Friend"-ly salutation, and it passed through the house as they rose to their feet to depart; at which point I distinctly announced that there would be a sermon preached at the school-house at early candle-light that evening.

As I stood with others at the door giving the friendly hand to several, the Elder above referred to approached me, giving me his hand, saying,

"Thee told us there would be preaching this evening, but did not say who would preach, or what they would preach."

I replied, I expect to preach, but am not now prepared to say what I shall preach."

"What denomination does thee belong to?"

"I am sometimes known as an Adventist."

"O! they have made so many mistakes, and have set so many times, I did not know but they had given it up."

"True, some of the Adventists have been mistaken with reference to the time," I said, "but, probably not more so than those that oppose them. I claim to be a 'friend' of Jesus, by doing his commands. Is not that right?"

"Yes, 'ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you.'"

To which I assented, and added, "If we do WHATSOEVER He commands, that is, ALL his commands; and I find this plain command among them (Matt. 24:33)—When ye shall see all these things (the signs promised), know that it (margin—HE, the Son of man) is near, even at the doors.'" Do you understand that passage?

"O! well, we are commanded to study the things that make for peace, and look for the second coming of Christ in our hearts to set up his Spiritual kingdom."

"Where is such a command recorded in the Scriptures? I profess entire ignorance of such a command; will you give me the proof of your assertion?"

"We have no time for controversy; we might say a great deal."

"I do not ask this, but you have made a plain statement, and I require you to sustain it by proof. Where in the Scriptures are we commanded or taught to look for the SECOND coming of Christ in our hearts? I would like the proof."

"O! we have not time"; and thus the conversation ended.

There is a large society of Friends here, or rather two societies, holding separate meetings, the followers of Wilbur and Gurney. They are a quiet, orderly people, and surely the morals of the place speak well for them; and I was told such a thing as a regular ball had never been known in the place, but that on the 4th of July this year some ended the day with dancing, which was a source of great grief to some of the older Friends, who wept on account of the giddiness of the young. In the evening met a large congregation of very attentive listeners, and had a good time in speaking upon the "exceeding great and precious promises" of God; and from what I witnessed of the interest and attention of the people who heard me in Hesper, I judge that a proper religious effort would result in great good. The cause of Christ and his truth needs reviving there, as in many other places. May the Lord send them help, and the "few" there be faithful. Staid over night with Bro. Rowe, whose wife has relatives in the East whom I know. Our visit was pleasant.

On the morning of July 22nd, after a season of prayer and solemn song with the family of Bro. McKee, and a walk with them to the retired spot where his first wife rests in hope with the congregation of the dead,—a place of solemn reflection, and where the value of God's promise of a future life is realized,—I parted with them, and Bro. McKee's son conveyed me by the way of Decorah to Frankville, a distance of twenty-seven miles, to the residence of my wife's sister, where I met a friendly greeting, and felt quite at home in the Frankville House, as my kind friends were there; and it has been my lot on this tour to be the guest of landlords, where I have had the opportunity of observing some things not so agreeable, such as drinking and profanity.

On Saturday visited former christian friends in the vicinity; and with my brother-in-law, J. S. Walker, and his wife, returned to the Frankville House at night in time to have an interesting conversation with the Methodist minister of the place, Rev. Mr. Barnes (in the presence of a number), who of course opposed my views, but I felt satisfied with my side of the questions discussed, and the arguments I was able to bring; and perhaps he felt equally satisfied with his argumentation; yet he conceded some important points, and when he felt the necessity of doing so, for the want of something better, of course, said the Adventists reminded him of a preacher of whom he had heard, who after taking a text told his hearers that he would, "1st, tell them some things which he knew and they did not; 2ndly, he would tell them things which they knew and he did not; and thirdly, things which neither he or they knew." He thought the Adventists had undertaken the last division. Our conversation ended, however, when he must go, and we parted on friendly terms.

The ecclesiastical "powers that be" here are the Presbyterian and Methodists, and are about equally balanced as it respects numbers and influence, only that the former have, by some turn of the wheel of fortune, "providentially" or somehow, acquired a little superiority in the control of a small church edifice in the village, built mainly by a wealthy man in the place, who has no preference or love for any religious sect, but started the church edifice to build up the place. Feuds have been going on between the above named denominations, the first keeping a little ahead, until last spring, when they undertook to keep the Methodists out of the house altogether; when the wealthy man above mentioned, hearing of the warfare, ended it and proclaimed equal rights by saying he would burn the house down unless hostilities ceased. So they now alternate in its use.

My friends wished me to occupy the church on Sabbath afternoon, as it happened that Mr. Crawford, the Presbyterian pastor, only preached at eleven A. M., and it would be unoccupied in the P. M. Word went about the village that a stranger would preach the next day in the P. M.; some said "Lorenzo Dow," some said no, but a relative of his, and an immediate result was that the attendance next day was unusually large, several being out that had not attended meeting in Frankville before. Morning came, and I found my way to the church with my Bible in hand, among the first to go in to the Sabbath School at nine o'clock A. M. Soon the pastor came in, and noticed me as a serious-looking stranger, took a seat beside me, spoke with me, and inquired if I could sing. I replied, and he would have me go forward and sing; and as the teacher of the first class was absent, he requested me to take charge of it, and so I did, giving it such instruction as I saw fit, and between the close of the school and the sermon he entered into conversation with me.

Finally, I inquired if he knew that a stranger was to preach in the village in the afternoon; he said, No. "But," said I, "I supposed you had been spoken to about it. Does the house belong to the Presbyterians?" To which he replied, "Yes."

"Well, I am the stranger who expects to preach, an Advent minister of The Northern Vt. and Canada East Conference of Adventists. I am visiting at the Frankville House, and in the vicinity, and my friends wish me to preach," with more by way of explanation.

At this point I saw a change come over his countenance, and he inquired,

"What is the difference between the Adventists and other denominations, except on the coming of Christ?"

In reply I said, "There are several differences; on the inheritance, the kingdom, millennium, Jews' return, etc., etc."

"But what do you think about the soul? Does it sleep with the body?" Which being a fair question, I answered fairly. When he said,

"About your having the house to preach in this afternoon I cannot say, without consulting the members. If I should consent, it might make trouble between myself and them, and your teaching being different might embarrass me and have a bad effect."

I told him that I believed in and taught practical godliness, and bore my own responsibility, and did not wish to have him injure himself by an effort to accommodate me.

He then inquired what the practice of the churches East was with reference to allowing the Adventists to occupy their places of worship. "O!" said I, "a few of them who are liberal, noble-minded christians, confident that they have the truth, and that truth is the best defence, allow us to use their houses; but by far the most of them exclude us, being afraid that the people will receive our views if they have a chance to hear them."

While this conversation took place near the pulpit, the house was filled, and the minister went into the lobby with his deacons, and remained out some time. At length he came in, and commenced the services, taking no further notice of me. What transpired affected him very much, however, as was quite apparent, and the congregation was affected also, as the result of a collection after the sermon plainly showed.

At the close, after the "doxology" was sung, as I stood near the desk, the minister said to me in a whisper,

"Do you wish to give out your appointment for this afternoon at the school-house?" To which I replied,

"Will you be so kind as to do it for me?" which he did in rather an embarrassed manner, and the scene ended.

At 4 o'clock I met a large congregation of attentive listeners at the school-room, to whom I proclaimed the gospel. CHAS. P. DOW.

HOW TO HAVE A GOOD CAMP MEETING.

Much that is appropriate and good might be said on this subject. But I want to say the very best thing that can be said. I want to come to the point—to the gist of the matter, the very essence of it. Here it is: get the Holy Spirit!

1. Get it positively; no guess work about it; no mere hoping you have it,—plenty of that to be seen every day.

2. Get him to dwell in you, make his abode with you. John 14: 17.

3. But how shall I know it? Just as you know the mind; his operations in our hearts is like the mind upon our person. John 3: 8.

4. Now, though you may have a hundred good things at the campmeeting, if the Holy Spirit does not take full possession of your heart, you will return home dissatisfied.

5. Beloved, I mean all I say. There is no comfort, no enjoyment, no satisfaction in believing without the Spirit. But how shall I get it? Ask for it. Luke 11: 13. Continue asking; ask until you get it; determine you will never cease asking. It is a question of life and death. Have it you must, or perish! What, is it really so? Is it so important? Yes, my brother and sister,—nothing is so important. Think of the day of Pentecost.

6. Finally, believe your Father does give it to you. It is not enough to believe that he will do it; that is right; but you must go further; plead the promise, and do not be afraid to say he does give it to me. Be not afraid; only believe. Mark 5: 36. And Mark 11: 23, "Therefore I say unto you, what things soever ye desire when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them." SAMUEL CURRY.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

To the scattered flock:—In my last article, you left me safely deposited at Bro. Howland's, in the great city of New York. My visit and meetings with the dear brethren and sisters there were very pleasant, and I trust profitable to us all. Met with them in their different localities, also in Brooklyn, and had some precious seasons in the worship of our God. Some were looking for the blessed Savior to come to redeem them with all the jewels in the month of June. Hope in their disappointment they will not be discouraged, but continue to look, watch and wait a little longer, for yet a little while and He that shall come will come and will not tarry. Then the scattered will be gathered and the reward will be given.

"Savior, haste! our souls are waiting
For the long expected day."

Went to Newark, N. J. Spent a week with the friends there. Met some whose names had been familiar for years, and it seemed like meeting old friends, and although our brethren are in rather a divided state, we hope the time will come when they may be better united, which would be for the glory of God and the advancement of his cause. O that our preaching brethren would labor more earnestly to gather with Christ rather than to scatter!

I was cordially received by friends in Newark, New York and Brooklyn, and left with the blessed assurance that I had not sown the seeds of discord among brethren. I leave it with Christ to judge if any good was accomplished.

The first of June bade good bye to the friends in New York and stepped on board the steamer "Elm City" in the evening, and when morning dawned landed in New Haven, Conn., and from thence I was borne away in the cars to Bristol, where I found my old home with Bro. and Sr. Bradley. Have labored with the friends here in Bristol three Sundays and some week day evenings, which I trust has been to good acceptance. God has a people here watching for morning, and I doubt not will be ready to hail the glad day.

Bantam Falls, Sunday, June 12th. Here the scattered ones gathered together and we had a blessed season. Met with the friends of Jesus in New Preston, where God has a few jewels. The strong man of years who had never known Christ bowed in tears before God, and the youth gave their hearts to God and enlisted in the army of the Lord, to fight for a crown that will never fade. Tarried with the friends two weeks. Held meetings almost every evening, and when we left we felt that we had done them no harm.

Northfield, Sunday, June 19th. Had an old-fashioned meeting in Bro. Humphreville's old kitchen. Plymouth Hollow, July 10th and 24th. Here God has a few that are holding fast the faithful word. God help them to get a little nearer to Christ, and draw more closely together by the strong chords of love and heavenly union.

My work is nearly done in Connecticut for the present. My next appointment is in Collinsville; and from thence, if the Lord will, Sunday, Aug. 14th, to Waterbury; then I bid farewell to the friends, and start on my way to Springfield, Mass., and the Wilbraham campmeeting. Have sown in weakness and tears, and hope to reap in joy when the morn of millennial glory shall dawn upon the church of God. God bless the scattered flock, and speed the day when the great Deliverer shall come and gather them to Mount Zion.

SUMMER MUSINGS.

I stand upon the mountain's rugged height,
And gaze upon the varied scenes below;
I mark the river winding through the vale,
A thread of silver on the mantle green
That with such regal grace now decks the earth.
A lowly cottage nestles at my feet,
Embowered 'mid waving trees and climbing vines,
It seems the fitting home of dove-eyed Peace.
Near by the village church upreare its spire,
Forever pointing to the throne of God;
And, shadowed by its consecrated walls,
The village seems to nestle sweetly down,
No evil fearing in its holy calm.
The sun pours down his floods of liquid gold,
That glitters on the distant city's spires,
Until they seem one mass of argent flame,
Outshining Nero's palaces of gold,
Reminding of the city Christian saw
In beauty gleaming o'er the bridgeless wave.
Broad fields of verdure spread their wealth around;
The cattle on a thousand hills are fed;
A blue mist lingers on the distant heights,
Joining the earth to heaven's cerulean dome.
And there—its bosom heaving 'neath the smile
Of heaven, ocean's majestic waves roll on,
All its wild tumult hushed, its passions quelled,
Held by the magic of the breezeless calm.
How beautiful is Nature! How the smile
Of God seems resting on each hill and dale;
But oh! wild storm may change the face of heaven,
The earth may tremble at the bolts of God,
Or shake with strong emotion when the fires,
Upheaving, yield their garnered wreath of wrath.
Yet, insignificant in all their might
Are these compared to passions fierce that dwell
Within the human heart. There ne'er were storms
That left such desolation in their track
As discord sown of human passions. God
Alone can quell their tumult. He alone
Restore to earth its pristine beauty fair,
And then to man his innocence and peace.
How quickly then shall earth be flush'd with flowers,
The wilderness all blooming like the rose,
And notes of praise like incense shall ascend
To the eternal throne. Then shall the earth
Put on her robes of joy. Each sea-girt isle
Shall rise and clap its hands in perfect praise;
And man no more shall fear the frowns of heaven,
But in the blessed consciousness of God's
Own smile shall walk the earth with gladness free.

REPORT OF THE MAINE CENTRAL QUARTERLY CONFERENCE.

This conference was convened at South Livermore, commencing June 9th, at 3 o'clock P. M. Prayer and social meeting. A goodly number present, and an interesting season. June 10th, 9.30 A. M. Prayer and social meeting; testimonies encouraging and interesting, and an evident watchfulness for the appearing of our Lord. 1.30 P. M. Remarks by Bro. J. Dudley from ninth chapter of Isa., also by Bro. Wight from Dan. 10: 1. The meeting was still continued, with appropriate remarks by Bro. Howard on the signs of the times. 4.30 P. M. Preaching by Bro. Stratton from Eph. 4: 30. Bro. S.'s sermon was well chosen and listened to with much interest.

June 11th. 10.30 A. M. Sermon by Bro. Rhodes, from John 5: 24. Bro. R. presented his subject very clearly, and we felt that it was meat in due season. 1 o'clock P. M. Sermon by Bro. Howard from 1 Cor. 6: 20. 4.30 P. M. Sermon by Bro. Stratton from John 9: 27.

At the close of this meeting we met at Bro. Dennis' to attend to the business of the conference. Watchmen present:—Brn. L. L. Howard, D. M. Hanscomb, E. M. Haggett, I. Wight, C. Stratton, J. Dudley, L. Rhodes, and J. Wheeler. Chose E. M. Haggett, President, and D. W. Griffin, Clerk for the ensuing year. Agreed that our next conference be convened at the call of the clerk. Voted that a report of this conference by the clerk be published in the "World's Crisis."

June 12th, 9 o'clock A. M. Social meeting, time fully occupied, testimonies brief and interesting. Half past 10 A. M., sermon by L. L. Howard, from Luke 21: 24, and Acts 17: 26. Two o'clock P. M., sermon by Bro. Howard, from Acts 15: 16. The afternoon discourse was a continuation of the forenoon subject, which was the final restoration of David's throne upon the new earth.

The meetings of the last two days were held in an orchard, near Bro. Timberlake's, where seats had been previously prepared by the brethren of South Livermore. The congregation was quite large the last day, estimated at six hundred. All seemed much interested. At the close of the afternoon sermon Bro. J. Wheeler was set apart for the ministry by the laying on of hands. A goodly number of the waiting ones then met at Bro. Dennis', and partook of the Lord's supper. We had a blessed season, and felt that it was good to be there. May the Lord help us so to live that we may be permitted a seat at the marriage supper of the Lamb.

I would say for the encouragement of the brethren, that these meetings seem to result in good; prejudice is removed, the brethren at South Livermore are encouraged and strengthened, doors are being opened, and an interest awakened in the regions round about; and while there is such a demand for labor, may the Lord help us to sustain those now in the field, and may there still be "added to the church such as shall be saved."

D. W. GRIFFIN, Clerk.

ADVICE GRATIS.

In order to prevent another financial crisis, and sundry other terrible events "too numerous to mention," we wish to give a little advice to our fellow citizens of the whole grumbling fraternity.

1. Stop grumbling.
2. Get up early in the morning and begin to do something useful outside of your regular profession.
3. Stop grumbling.
4. Mind your own business, and allow other people to practice the same virtue.
5. Stop grumbling.
6. Live within your means. Sell your horse if necessary. Give away or kill your dog. Smoke your cigars through an air-tight stove. Eat with moderation, and go to bed early.
7. Stop grumbling.
8. Talk less of your own peculiar gifts and virtues, and more of those of your friends and neighbors.
9. Stop grumbling.
10. Do all you can to make other people happy. Be cheerful. Bend your neck and back more frequently when you pass those outside of "select circles." Fulfil your promises. Pay your debts. Be yourself all you wish to see others. Be a good man—a true christian, and then you will be very likely to,
11. Stop grumbling.

NEATNESS.

The following article is too good to be lost. We hope many will receive a benefit from its perusal. Reader, if this should be applicable to you, please reform at once, and thus add to the joy of your household. The writer of the following is not the only one thus afflicted. Do not give this article a careless reading, but consider it well, and resolve if it means you now, that it shall never be applicable to you again after this day. May the Lord help you to overcome the bad habit.—ED.

INTERESTING COMMUNICATION FROM A SLOVENLY MAN'S WIFE.

To the Editor of the Ledger:—As you seem to have become the oracle of the people, I would like to consult you in regard to a matter of great importance to my comfort, at least, if not to my real happiness.

Because a woman has a kind-hearted and honest husband, is it sufficient reason why she should patiently endure, in his habits, all sorts, and almost all degrees, of—of—well, of un-neatness—to speak as gently as possible of the fault of my lord and master? Do tell me, Mr. Bonner, in your next issue, if you think such behavior ought to be borne; and if not, how in the wide world am I to prevent it? Howard loves me dearly. I am sure of that—he makes more fuss over me than almost any man that I know does over his wife—he would freely spend every cent of his property for my benefit—he is always willing and ready to wait upon me anywhere, or in any way, and I do love the great, noble-spirited, handsome fellow better than I do my own life—when I can forget his careless and slovenly habits.

But they are a terrible trial and affliction to me; they disgust my orderly and cleanly soul to such a degree that I am often obliged to go through a severe struggle with myself before I can make any response to his affectionate attentions. In fact, sir, I seriously fear that a continuance of the same habits in my husband will set me utterly against him; and I look to the future with dread and horror. What can be done? I was not aware of his faults when I married him. I did know that he sometimes smoked a cigar; but then all young fellows do that, or so many of them do, that one may as well say all. I objected to the practice and [illegible] the cigar from his lips and tossed it into the street. This was when we sat together on my father's verandah at my girlhood's home. Now, if I open my mouth against the fumes of tobacco, away goes—not the cigar, nor the old, hateful pipe—for 'tis a pipe most of the time—but away goes my husband to finish his smoke elsewhere. He spits about everywhere, for not only does he smoke, but chews, (ugh! horrid! I abhor the vile habit), and 'tis squirt, squirt, squirt, wherever he may chance to be—in dining-room, parlor or chamber, no matter where, you may know when Howard has been there by the intolerable odor and the tobacco puddles. This is not all. My husband's breath is poisoned; it is obnoxious to me as is the deadly exhalation from the Upas tree. The kisses that once were sweeter and dearer to my heart than words can tell, are now—and that by a strong effort—only endured. I cannot tell him this; but you may print it, just as I have written it—his name and all; and if this don't cure him I shall know that he is past cure.

He has many other un-neat tricks, but I am truly ashamed to mention them; and, besides, I believe that if the tobacco dirtiness could be overcome, all kindred faults would vanish with that. I long to have my husband neat and clean, and to think of him with no effort to keep off disgust. Yet had I been the only wife so afflicted I should never have had courage to address you thus. But I am persuaded that there are hundreds of women who are in the same distress; and as all the world, and particularly all man-kind, read your paper, my loud complaint can give voice to all these troubled women, and, perhaps, reform all these troublesome men. I do entreat you, let not this appeal remain unnoticed. Sincerely yours.

WHY AM I NOT A CHRISTIAN?

1. Is it because I am afraid of ridicule, and of what others may say of me?

"Whomsoever shall be ashamed of Me and of my words, of him shall the Son of man be ashamed."

2. Is it because of the inconsistencies of professing christians?

"Every man shall give an account of himself to God."

3. Is it because I am not willing to give up all for Christ?

"What shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"

4. Is it because I am afraid that I shall not be accepted?

"Him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out?"

5. Is it because I fear I am too great a sinner?

"The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin."

6. Is it because I am afraid I shall not "hold out."

"He that hath begun a good work in you, will perform it unto the day of Christ Jesus."

7. Is it because I am thinking that I will do as well as I can, and that God ought to be satisfied with that?

"Whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all."

8. Is is because I am postponing the matter, without any definite reason?

"Boast not thyself of to-morrow, for thou knowest not what a day may bring forth."—Boston Young Men's Christian Association.

VAST ARMIES.

There have been vast armies and grand movements in ancient times. Here is a record of some of them:

Sennacherib, the Bible tells us, lost in a single night 185,000 by the destroying angel.

The city of Thebes had a hundred gates, and could send out at each gate 10,000, fighting men and 200 chariots, in all 1,000,000 men and 20,000 chariots.

The army of Trerah, King of Ethiopia, consisted of 1,000,000 men and 300 chariots of war.

Sesostris, King of Egypt, led against his enemies 600,000 men, 24,000 cavalry and 27 scythe-armed chariots—1491 before Christ.

Hamilcar went from Carthage and landed near Palermo. He had a fleet of 2000 ships and 3000 small vessels, and a land force of 200,000 men. At the battle in which he was defeated, 150,000 men were slain.

Ninus, the Assyrian King, about 2200 years before Christ, led against the Bactrians an army of 1,700,000 horses and 16,000 chariots armed with scythes.

Semiramis employed 2,000,000 men in building Babylon. She took 105,000 prisoners at the Indus, and sank 1000 boats.

A short time after the taking of Babylon, the forces of Cyrus consisted of 600,000 foot, and 120,000 horses, and 2000 chariots armed with scythes.

An army of Cambyses, 50,000 strong, was buried up in the desert sands of Africa by the south wind.

When Xerxes arrived at Thermopylæ, his land and sea forces amounted to 2,614,610, exclusive of servants, eunuchs, women, sutlers, etc., in all numbering 5,283,220. So say Heredotus, Plutarch and Isocrates.

The army of Artaxerxes, before the battle of Cunaxa, amounted to 1,200,000.

Ten thousand horses and 100,000 foot fell on the fatal field of Issus.

When Jerusalem was taken by Titus, 1,100,000 perished in various ways.

The army of Tamerlane is said to have amounted to 1,600,000, and that of his antagonist, Bajazet, 1,400,000.

NOT PREPARED.

Seldom have I heard a more affecting incident than that related by a country physician. He was called to see a lady who had been sick but three days. Her husband took him into the next room, and asked what he thought of her case. He said it must terminate fatally. When they came back to her bedside, she saw something in their countenances which led her to say:

"Doctor, what have you been telling my husband? Did you say I could not live?"

The doctor, with extreme reluctance, felt obliged to say, "Yes."

Instantly she threw her arms towards him and setting her anxious, glazed eye upon him, exclaimed:

"O, doctor, you must not let me die. You must keep me a little longer in the world, for I have made no preparation."

He carried the story no farther, except to say that it made an impression on him which he hoped would never be effaced.

I remember a case much like it: that of a bright, attractive young lady, amiable, and much esteemed; to all appearance "gay and happy," and without the least inclination to religion. She was healthy and of a good constitution; but sickness came, and ere she was aware the hand of death was upon her. Feeling very strangely, she cried to the lady who sat by her:

"Is this death? Oh! I cannot die, I cannot die, I cannot die!" and immediately expired.

I ask myself, shall I be in this awful condition when my hour comes? Oh, God forbid. And that I may not, let me be prayerful and careful now while death is not quite in sight.

THE ANT TRAP.—As the season is now at hand for these pests, the ants, housewives and others who are troubled with them may probably use the following trap to advantage:

"Procure a large sponge, wash it well, and press it dry, which will leave the cells quite open; then sprinkle over it some fine white sugar, and place it near where the ants are troublesome. They will soon collect upon the sponge and take up their abode in the cells. It is only necessary to dip the sponge in scalding water, which will wash them out dead by the tens of thousands. Put on more sugar and set the trap for a new haul. This process will soon clear the house of every ant."

HOW TO GET A GOOD CROP OF POTATOES.—A correspondent informs us that Captain S. Hayden, of Hollis, adopts the following plan in planting potatoes, and has had good luck: On ground plowed in the spring he furrows as deep as he can without turning up the turf. He prepares his manure by putting in the green manure some loam, ashes, and brine of salt not very strong. He cuts his potatoes so that one as large as a hen's egg would be divided into three or four pieces, and puts three pieces in a hill, the skin side up in a triangle of about five or six inches apart. He then puts a shovelful of manure on the top of the potatoes. He takes good sized potatoes to plant. The result is that they yield at the rate of from eight to ten hills to the bushel.—New England Farmer.

Hygiene.

"This is for your health."—Paul.

"MENTAL HYGIENE."

Dr. Isaac Ray, of Providence, R. I., in his work on Mental Hygiene, says: "The efficiency of the mental powers is determined in a high degree by the hygienic condition of the bodily organs, especially the brain;" and again:—"Whatever improves the physical quality of the brain, also improves in some way or other, the qualities of the mind." "If," says Pro. Moleschott, "food is transformed into blood, blood into nerve and muscle, bone and brain, must not the ardor of the heart, the strength of the muscles, the firmness and activity of the brain, be dependent upon the constituents of the food?" What, in view of these facts, can we think of men and woman who eat flesh of animals for food; who drink tea, coffee, wine, and all kinds of stimulating and intoxicating liquors; who smoke and chew vast quantities of tobacco and opium; who indulge in highly concentrated and rich food of all kinds; who depart so far from that which is natural that the artificial, unnatural, and therefore sinful, comes to be the rule of life instead of the exception?

In these wrong methods and habits of living, we find the principal cause for all our chronic invalidism, and every-day sicknesses, and premature death; for our bald-headed, toothless, dried up, mummy-like, sallow men and women, in place of health, and rosy beauty; for our vast increase of crime, intemperance, immorality and rascality of every species, from the whiskey gambling at Washington to the falling out between man and wife, child and parent, neighbor and neighbor, state and state, nation and nation; for our social and domestic unhappiness, our loss of integrity, of character, our blindness to the truth, and our weakness to do that which we know to be right.

CHILDREN'S FEET.

Life-long discomfort, disease, and sudden death often come to children through the inattention, ignorance, or carelessness of the parents. A child should never be allowed to go to sleep with cold feet; the thing to be last attended to, in putting a child to bed, should be to see that the feet are dry and warm. Neglect of this has often resulted in a dangerous attack of croup, diphtheria, or fatal sore throat.

Always, on coming from school, on entering the house from a visit or errand in rainy, muddy, or thawy weather, the child's shoes should be removed, and the mother herself should ascertain if the stockings are the least damp; and if so, should require them to be taken off, the feet held by the fire, and rubbed with the hand until perfectly dry, and another pair of stockings be put on and another pair of shoes, while the other stockings and shoes should be placed where they can be well dried, so as to be ready for future use at a moment's notice.

There are children not ten years of age, suffering from corns from too close fitting shoes, by the parent having been tempted to "take" them because a few cents were deducted from the price, while the child's foot is constantly growing. A shoe large enough with thin stockings is too small on the approach of cold weather and thicker hose. No child should be fitted with shoes without putting on two pair of thick woollen stockings, and the shoe should go on moderately easy even over these. Have broad heels, and less than half an inch in thickness.

Tight shoes inevitably arrest the free circulation of the blood and nervous influences through the feet, and directly tend to cause cold feet; and health with habitually cold feet is an impossibility.

The parent is guilty of a criminal negligence who does not always see to it that each child enters the church and school-house door with feet comfortably dry and warm. Grown persons of very limited intelligence know that, as to themselves, damp feet endanger health and life, however robust; much more so must must it be to the tender constitution of a growing child.—Hall's Journal of Health.

REARING CHILDREN.

First. Children should not go to school until six years old.

Second. Should not learn at home during that time more than the alphabet, religion excepted.

Third. Should be fed with plain, substantial food, at regular intervals of not less than four hours.

Fourth. Should not be allowed to eat any thing within two hours of bed time.

Fifth. Should have nothing for supper but a single cup of warm drink, such as weak tea of some kind, or warm milk and water, with a slice of cold bread and butter—nothing else.

Sixth. Should sleep in separate beds on hair mattresses, without caps, feet first well warmed by the fire, or rubbed with the hands until perfectly dry; extra covering on the lower limbs, but little on the body.

Seventh. Should be compelled to be out of doors for the greater part of daylight, from after breakfast until half an hour before sundown, unless in damp, raw weather, when they should never be allowed to go outside the door.

Eighth. Never limit a healthy child as to sleeping or eating, except at supper; but compel regularity as to both; it is of great importance.

Ninth. Never compel a child to sit still, nor interfere with its enjoyment, as long as it is not injurious to person or property, or against good morals.

Tenth. Never threaten a child; it is cruel, unjust and dangerous. What you have to do, do it, and be done with it.

Eleventh. Never speak harshly or angrily; but mildly, kindly, and, when really needed, firmly—no more.

Twelfth. By all means, arrange it so that the last words between you and your children at bed time, especially the younger ones, should be words of unmixed affection.—Jour. of Health.

SLOW TO LEARN.

It is remarkable how slow men are to learn the value of common things, the worth of every-day privileges, the importance of familiar truths; but one thing is most remarkable, viz: the habit people have of overlooking the preciousness, and even questioning the soundness and denying the healthfulness of that which is nevertheless the vital thing in their well being. If you go into the country, you find that some men and women are afraid of nothing so much as sunshine and air. They live in musty rooms of old houses without a sunbeam, and without a suspicion of ventilation. The women keep in doors from morning till night, never dreaming of the advantages of exercise. They are unacquainted with all the qualities of water save that of quenching thirst, and would no more think of taking a bath than jumping into the fire. To bathe the whole person in the pure element every day, seems to them an act of severe penance, if not actual suicide. Of course, they are victims of dyspepsia, head-ache, cough and consumption. They are thin, crooked, pale, weak, dim eyed, low spirited, nervous,—open the closet door and look in. There is a deep shelf crowded with bottles—physic of every mixture, physic of every school, each patent medicine advertised in the papers, pill and tincture, powder and lotion, all the ingenious devices for undermining their constitutions, and putting a speedy end to their miserable being.—Voice of the West.

EATING ECONOMICALLY.

What kind of food has the most nourishment and costs the least? is a question of great practical importance. A dollar's worth of meat, at twenty-five cents a pound, goes as far as fifty cents' worth of butter at half a dollar a pound. Three pounds of flour, at eight cents a pound, is said to contain as much nutriment as nine pounds of roast beef, which at twenty-five cents is $2 25; that is, twenty-five cents of flour goes as far as nine times that much money spent for roast beef, as weighed at the butcher's stall. A pint of white beans, weighing one pound and costing seven cents, contains as much nutriment as three pounds and a half of roast beef, costing eighty-seven and a half cents. Of all the articles that can be eaten, the cheapest are bread, butter, molasses, beans and rice. A pound of corn meal (Indian) goes as far as a pound of flour, so that with family flour at sixteen dollars a barrel in New York City in July, 1864, and corn meal at four cents, the latter is just one-half less expensive. If corn and wheat were ground, and the whole product, bran and all, were made into bread, fifteen per cent. of nutriment would be saved, with much greater healthfulness.—Boston Journal.

VENTILATION OF BEDROOMS.—Two persons occupying a bedroom will weigh at least a pound less in the morning than at night. This is owing to the escape of matter that has passed off in the meantime through the skin and lungs. The exhalation is carbonic acid gas, which is poisonous. This is diffused in the air or absorbed by the bedclothes. The fact suggests the necessity for ventilating sleeping-rooms, and airing bedclothes in the morning, before making a bed.—Ex.

For the World's Crisis.

LONG WE HAVE WAITED.

Long upon the mountain weary
Have the scattered flock been torn;
Dark the desert paths, and dreary,
Grievous trials have they borne.
Now the gathering call is sounding,
Solemn in its warning voice;
Union, faith, and love abounding,
Bid the little flock rejoice.

In that world of light and beauty,
In that golden city fair,
Soon its pearly gates they'll enter,
And of all its glories share.
There divine the soul's expansions,
Free from sin, and death, and pain;
Fears will never dim those mansions
Where the saints immortal reign.

Soon He comes with clouds descending,
All his saints entombed arise,
The redeemed in anthems blending
Shouts of victory through the skies.
O! we long for thine appearing,—
Come, O Savior, quickly come!
Blessed hope! our spirits cheering,—
Take thy ransomed children home.

"RELIGION NOT CHRISTIANITY."

"A Gospel Tract addressed to inquiring sinners, by the Rev. H. B. Wray, of New Glasgow, C. E., published at Prescott, C. W."

There are but few ministers at the present day who have a full, deep conviction of the wants of the people who gather to hear the words they may utter. There is on the part of many a simple idea of conforming to the church creed, which is either written out or to be found in large, musty volumes of theological works. They may sometimes, as far as their creeds will allow, make appeals to the emotions; but there is not often the exposition of truth with all its scriptural connections and supports that will build up the people in pure Bible faith; but the author of the above pamphlet has taken a position so far independent of creeds as to be able to see clearly the conditions of the people and the want of the true light. In a private conversation he remarked—

"It is remarkable how little real truth there is in the churches. It has been but a little while since the word was withheld from the people, and now there is but little that is clear and satisfactory. I am a minister of the English church, and sometimes I have it said to me, with reference to some things I preach, that 'it is not according to the Church' (meaning of course the Episcopal church); but I do not consider that the Church has all the truth, and I am not satisfied like some to read the service, etc. For instance, I have been thinking recently about the nature of the penalty for sin, and the Lord's reason for putting the flaming sword to guard the way to the tree of life (a Bro. had lent him "Pauline Theology"), and I wrote a short article to our Church paper asking questions about the subject, and the only answer I got was a short letter saying that the author believed me to be in error."

He claimed with us that the Lord guarded the tree of life to keep man from living forever as a sinner. In the course of a pleasant interview, the tract noticed above was put into my hands, and I found so many excellent thoughts in it that I deemed best to make extracts for the benefit of the readers of the Crisis.

The question as to the distinction between religion and christianity, or whether one can exist without the other, has puzzled some minds, and the so called "free thinkers" have taken advantage of the fact to mystify christianity by stating the difference and then declaring that "a Hindoo, or Brahmin, or Buddhist, is as religious as a Christian; that he has the spirit of worship and sacrifice; and christianity only attests what heathenism does, that this reverence for religion is simply a superstition."

The author of this book takes a true, christian position with reference to the matter; and with the light he throws upon the subject there is, according to the "free thinkers'" charge, a great amount of what is only Religion, and not Christianity, nearer home than the East Indies.

He makes the distinction between Religion and Christianity to be the difference between the natural and supernatural; the former being found in such theories of God and his judgment as will lead the creature to try to propitiate for himself, while the latter is the revelation of God respecting the salvation or propitiation for sinners by Jesus Christ. All men having much of the former are naturally religious, while but few have the latter; and "even the majority of professing christians do not know what christianity is," because "the majority of professedly christian instructors, instead of teaching the distinctive principles of christianity, teach the ethics that are common to Heathen, Jewish, Pagan, and all false systems of belief;" so that "were you to ask the accomplished young lady, whose education was finished at a first class boarding school, what christianity is, perhaps she would answer, 'It is the religion of Christians,' and perhaps with no more accurate knowledge of the subject than if she said, 'Hindooism is the religion of the Hindoos.'" He says further—

"I am convinced that much of the infidelity, rationalism and skepticism of our age is in a great measure attributable to defective public instruction, because not sufficiently elementary and expository. There is too much vague, mere moral, exhortatory preaching, addressed to the feelings, and far too little clear, distinctive Scripture teaching. The loose, negative theology of all churches has taught the world the first principles of infidelity by suppressing, spiritualizing and explaining away all express teaching and positive theology of the Bible. Thus sceptics have been emboldened to carry out these principles which the church has sanctioned to their fullest development, in the absolute denial of those truths which distinguish christianity from all human systems of religion."

How aptly these remarks apply to the sanctioning by the church of the old Platonic theories of the immortality of the soul, out of which has sprung prolific evils as corrupting to the faith of a pure christianity, or as a barrier against embracing it, as any other that has ever been taught; "Purgatory," which dispenses to a great extent with the atonement of Jesus, and makes men on the principles of these "human systems of religion" seek to "propitiate themselves"; and "intermediate" punishment, which implies that God may reverse and set aside a former decision; and, not to enumerate all, communication with "departed spirits (?), whose teaching is to lead entirely away from Jesus and his atonement, and builds up these "human," self-propitiatory "theories," when, as the author asserts, "Christ is all in the volume of inspiration," "the central sun," "the hidden treasure," and all in the christian's salvation.

As a still further reason why there is so much ignorance among men as to pure, simple, Bible truth, the author attacks the "topical" style of preaching and charges it with great responsibility in the matter. And I wish every preacher who belongs to the class referred to could be thoroughly convinced that the popular methods of reading a text, drawing from it a topical inference which may be as much a fancy or spiritualized view of the text, and more so, than otherwise, and often not having any reference to the subject at all, only selected for convenience, to give an air of Biblical authority to whatever motto may be constructed as the real subject elucidated, or, perhaps, mystified, while the text is no longer of use after its first reading.

The author says, "Texts are selected as mottoes, but the mind of the Spirit in the context is not sought after, or the primary application of the language as a whole is not elucidated; hence in the midst of religious privileges there is a deplorable lack of Scripture knowledge, and a substitution of intermittent excitement, instead of instruction in righteousness. All religious truths must be tested, not by their mere agreement with ethical theories, but with the Scriptures."

It is certain that if this course were pursued there would be less of creeds and more of truth; for, as the author wisely remarks, the question properly to be asked with reference to any theories is, "Are they scriptural?" for when the Bible is the "text book" and sole authority, there is a more plain and comforting agreement of its teachings than the theories which the "spiritualizing" efforts of ministers in bending the text to these theories develop.

The author's principal effort is, to show how much the want of understanding of the way to the cross is chargeable to the minister; but though he does not directly state that all the inspired word is harmonious and a help, all being intended to make a straight, plain path, so that the broken-hearted sinner can find Christ,—he implies it in the quotations cited above, and without fear of successful contradiction it can be plainly stated that the "historic" forms of faith in the churches in which they have taken the Platonic and other theories during the 1260 years of moral night have been, by edicts, bulls, and otherwise, incorporated into the papal catechism and received by the Protestant churches without the least detraction.

Luther's Reformation was not a full and complete departure from Papal notions, though in a century or so his adherents were not careful to re-produce all his faith about the state of the dead, etc.; and Wesley's reformation has its imperfections; for after all the "immortal soul" theory was held with dogmatic tenacity as really as though it were as true as the fact that God exists.

But they did good. Luther aroused the world to see the difference between living by faith, and by penance; and Wesley brought out more perfectly the truth that true faith produces holiness of heart, and is accompanied by the witness of the Spirit of God with our own that we are his children. But were the world to continue long enough, a history of a reformation in the style of preaching the interpretation of Scripture, and reforms in the faith as to what the Bible teaches, could be written of the present day more glorious than any in the past.

But it is too nearly God's pure truth to get a universal acclamation; for the Protestant clergy oppose it as strongly as the Romanists, and so identify themselves with the Councils that declared that any who did not believe the doctrines should be accounted as an heretic.

We may not have and do not desire to have a wave of popular favor to float us into the harbor; but we have the consolation that the very course recommended by our author as to taking the expository method of preaching and allowing the natural and obvious meaning of the text, has led us into the simple truth of the doctrine of "immortality through Christ alone"; and by the grace of God we will preach it, being satisfied that, while the first principles of infidelity have been taught by explaining away and spiritualizing the "word," these truths have saved more infidels during the time they have been preached than any so called evangelical church has done with its popular theology; and we thank God, and labor on, willing to bear the reproach and reap the reward.

THE FINAL RESIDENCE OF THE REDEEMED.

The final residence of the redeemed,—where is it? Is it on high? Up yonder? Above the sky? On some remote orb? So we are often told. But we are no wiser; for, after all, no locality is designated.

The final residence of the redeemed is this earth. That is the doctrine of the Bible everywhere. Not this earth, as it now is, polluted by sin and blighted and banned by the curse, but this earth as it shall be after the devil and his angels, sin and death and the grave, have been "cast into the lake of fire and brimstone," and it is restituted to purity, beauty, and glory surpassing those in which it shone when it emerged from the plastic wing of the Spirit brooding over chaos,—sparkling with brighter jewelry than the pristine dewy brilliants of holiness, bridal-robed in the smiles of Him who redeemed it with his blood, and vocal with his praise, never to be disturbed by the sin of man; then this earth will be the fit and final home of the redeemed.

This is distinctly taught in God's covenant with Abraham, when he says, "I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan for an everlasting" (eternal) "possession; and I will be their God." This land Abraham and his seed have not yet got; but, to secure the fulfillment of this covenant, God has sworn that he will bring "them up out of their graves that they may possess it." From this covenant with Abraham, and which was renewed with Isaac and Jacob and their seed after them, it is manifest that this earth is to be their everlasting residence. Could God have declared it in stronger terms? If they are to inhabit the earth forever, after they are raised from the dead, or "come up out of their graves," if then it is to be given to them for an everlasting possession, it is evident this earth must be the place of their everlasting residence. So says Ezekiel (chapter xxxvii. 25): "And they shall dwell in the land that I have given unto Jacob my servant, wherein your fathers have dwelt; and they shall dwell therein, even they, and their children, and their children's children" (perpetual generations) "forever" (to eternity), "and my servant David" (or the beloved, that is, Christ) "shall be their Prince forever (or eternally)." If language could teach eternal residence anywhere, this teaches the eternal residence of the resurrection children of Abraham in Canaan upon this earth; for it is most positively declared by Jehovah that they and their children's children, through unceasing generations, shall dwell therein forever. But all the saved are to be with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom: consequently, this earth will be the kingdom and the final residence of the saints.

The same doctrine is clearly taught by Daniel (ch. vii. 27: "The kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heavens, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him." The "kingdom under the whole heaven" must mean this earth, for we know of no other kingdom under the heaven, and the Bible speaks of none, and this kingdom is to be given to the saints. It is peculiarly worthy of notice that this kingdom is not "on high," nor "above the heavens," nor "away up yonder," as the kingdom of the saints is frequently said to be, but "under the heavens." Here the common teaching of men and that of the Spirit of God are in direct conflict. Men say the final residence of the redeemed is on high,—above the heavens,—somewhere (but they know not where) in the unexplored regions of space; but Daniel, by the Spirit, positively teaches it is "under the heavens;" that is, the kingdom which the God of heaven shall set up upon this earth, and which shall "never be destroyed," "but which shall break in pieces" and "consume all these kingdoms upon earth," and which shall stand "forever," or to eternity. The same doctrine is taught by John in Revelation (ch. xi. 15:) "The kingdoms of this world (earth) are become the kingdoms of our Lord and his Christ; and he shall reign for ever and ever." It is a common saying, and one often used to conceal our ignorance, "Where Christ is, there will be heaven." We admit the truth; it is herein taught that the kingdoms, not of a world on high, or above the sky, but of this world, earth, are to become the kingdom of Christ, and that here he is to reign for ever and ever, or to eternity and eternity. If, then, Christ is to be on this earth forever, when renewed, and his dwelling-place is to be the dwelling-place of the redeemed, then beyond all controversy this earth is to be the final dwelling-place of his saints.

This doctrine is everywhere taught in the Prophets, the Psalms, the Epistles and Revelation of John; but we shall not attempt at present to present it as exhibited in these. Enough has been said to convince every unprejudiced student of the Bible that this earth, restituted at the time of the restitution of all things, will be the final home and everlasting dwelling-place of the redeemed.

Instead, then, of looking for a home beyond the skies, to which we are to be taken by Christ after the Judgment, of which the Bible says not a word (for it never says that Christ will leave this earth after he comes to judgment), let us be looking for the renewal of this earth, which shall be accomplished at the "times of the restitution of all things which God has spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began," and for which prophets and apostles, according to the promise of God, with one hope and faith looked; for this will be our glorious dwelling-place forever. Then his tabernacle will be with us, and our communion with him will be more intimate than that of Adam and Eve with him in Paradise before the fall. Here, on this earth, the second Adam, the Lord from heaven, with his glorious Bride,—the redeemed children of men,—will dwell for ever and ever.—Prophetic Times.

THE DISCIPLINE OF LIFE.

Severe the life that fits for God;
One day the thorns, one day the rod:
Ever on bleeding back the cross;
Ever the fire to burn the dross.

Smoothly along we cannot sail;
One day the calm, one day the gale;
Ever the rocks on either side,
Ever the prow against the tide.

Shorter the life by every breath;
One day disease, and one day death;
Ever the falling shades of night;
Ever the open grave in sight.

Nearer the port by every wave;
Be strong, my soul; my heart, be brave!
Theirs is the gain who suffer loss,
Theirs is the crown who bear the cross.

POWER OF THE CROSS OF CHRIST.

They were living to themselves; self, with its hopes, and promises, and dreams, still had hold of them; but He began to fulfill their prayers. They had asked for contrition, and He sent them sorrow; they had asked for purity, and He sent them thrilling anguish; they had asked to be meek, and He had broken their hearts; they had asked to be dead to the world, and He slew all their living hopes; they had asked to be made like unto Him, and He placed them in the furnace, sitting by "as a refiner of silver," till they should reflect His image; they had asked to lay hold of His cross, and when He reached it to them it lacerated their hands. They had asked they knew not what, nor how; but He had taken them at their word, and granted them all their petitions. They were hardly willing to follow on so far, or to draw so nigh to Him. They had upon them an awe and fear, as Jacob at Bethel, or Eliphaz in the night visions, or as the apostles when they thought they had seen a spirit, and knew not that it was Jesus—they could almost pray Him to depart from them, or to hide His awfulness. They found it easier to obey than to suffer,—to do than to give up,—to bear the cross than to hang upon it: but they cannot go back, for they have come too near the unseen cross, and its virtues have pierced too deeply within them.

He is fulfilling to them His promise, "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me:" but now their turn is come at last, and that is all. Before, they had only heard of the mystery, but now they feel it. He has fastened on them His look of love, as He did on Mary and Peter, and they cannot but choose to follow. Little by little, from time to time, by fitting gleams the mystery of His cross shines out upon them. They behold Him lifted up,—they gaze on the glory which rays forth from the wounds of His holy passion; and as they gaze, they advance and are changed into His likeness, and His name shines out through them, for He dwells in them. They live alone with Him in unspeakable fellowship; willing to lack what others own, and to be unlike all, so that they are only like Him.

Such are they in all ages who follow the Lamb whithersoever He goeth. Had they chosen for themselves, or their friends chosen for them, they would have chosen otherwise. They would have been brighter here, but less glorious in His kingdom. They would have had Lot's portion, not Abraham's. If they had halted anywhere,—if he had taken off His hand, and let them stray back,—what would they not have lost? What forfeits in the morning of the resurrection? But He stayed them up, even against themselves. Many a time their foot had well nigh slipped; but He, in mercy, held them up: now, even in this life, they know all He did was done well. It was good for them to suffer here, for they shall reign hereafter,—and that not their will but His was done on them.—Selected.

SALT OF THE EARTH.

"Then they also which have fallen asleep in Christ are perished."—1 Cor. 15: 18.

Paul is here setting forth the importance of the resurrection, and shows that if the dead rise not (as some taught), they who have fallen asleep in Christ are perished. This makes the resurrection so important that without it we have no ground for a future hope. The dead cannot be in conscious existence, according to Paul's understanding of the gospel, else it would be of far less moment whether they rise or no. And if Paul supposed them in heaven, how could he say they are perished? No; Paul evidently understood that if the dead rise not, then we can "have hope in Christ only in this life;" wherefore, we go not direct to heavenly enjoyment at death, but are perished. While here, "we are of all men most miserable," and when dead "are perished."

But no; Paul does not believe this doctrine. He believes in a resurrection, and argues the importance of it; because without it there is no hope. Without it there is no life. Without it there is no salvation,—his preaching was vain, and the christian faith is vain. But if the dead go direct to heaven, how foolish was Paul to say they are perished! What matter if the body should not rise? But, if Paul thought with the wise man, (Eccl. 9: 5), that "the dead know not anything," then he might with propriety say, If the dead rise not, then death is the end of man. "Let us eat and drink, for to-morrow we die," and that is the end of us. Let us therefore enjoy life as it goes, for there is no hereafter. The very fact that he comes to this conclusion, shows that he did not believe the departed now in heaven. Hence the importance of the resurrection.

Spiritualism teaches that man goes from this life direct to a spirit land, where the spirit is alive and active,—thus subverting the authority of the Scriptures; setting aside a necessity for the resurrection; making Paul's preaching vain, and the doctrines of Christ vain. Yea, they would overthrow the foundation of the Christian's hope. These false doctrines are growing with rapid strides, in fulfillment of the prophecy of Paul, (1 Tim. 4: 1), "Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, [not come up from the world, but from the church], giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils." The onward strides of Spiritualism bid fair, to all human appearance, to overwhelm the church and deluge the world. And they "shall show great signs and wonders, insomuch that (were it possible) they shall deceive the very elect."—Matt. 24: 24.

Faith becomes so poor and meagre in the churches in the last days, that our Savior breaks forth in the astonishing expression: "Nevertheless, when the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" A searching question! But may be there are yet seven thousand who have not bowed the knee to Baal. But where are they? Where is the "salt of the earth"? Up, O man of God! Call upon all the churches in christendom to fight these doctrines of devils and seducing spirits! But, alas! the majority of the churches teach the same delusive doctrines. They came out of Catholicism with so much fog in their eyes, that they have not been able to discern the truth. O, poor blind leaders of the blind. Where is the "salt of the earth"? Who are there, of all christendom, to contend earnestly for the truths of the Bible, which tend to subvert Spiritualism, except those who believe in the sleep of the dead? Then, dear brethren and sisters, the more responsibility rests on us.

THE CHURCH AND THE WORLD; OR, CHRIST AND BELIAL.

"While men slept, the enemy came and sowed tares among the wheat, and went his way."—Matt. 13: 25.

"The church and world amalgamate,
A union worse than with the state,
Though motives are the same;
The love of pleasure and of gold,
On some professors have such hold
They oft forget their name."

Is money to be raised for church debts, church building or repairing? For a Sabbath school or a missionary enterprise? For the increase of the minister's salary? Is money wanted to relieve the poor, or for any benevolent operation? What now? How is this money to be forthcoming? In a sober, rational, gospel way? Nay, a feast is prepared, a soiree introduced, a fancy fair, a pic nic, a concert or exhibition of some kind, a donation, tea or strawberry party, a sleigh ride, oyster supper, a tin or gold wedding, something to inflame the passions, excite and enlarge the appetite, produce a little fun or vulgar merriment. The entire community is put in requisition for weeks. The excitement is intense, out-bursting on the right and on the left. To open the purse-strings worldly policy is resorted to, foolish talking and jesting, feasting and frolicking! These festivals are the rage and fever of the day; the world is on fire with them! Where is there a church or society, white or colored, Popish or Protestant, that does not resort to these unholy excitements, these strategems of Satan, to raise funds for some object of benevolence? It is money, money! Money we want, money we will have, gospel or no gospel, heaven or no heaven. Gospel and soul saving are laid aside. "Away with serious or sober looks, away with them. On for a spree, a jolly time of feasting!" "On with the dance, let joy be unconfined." "Know ye not, friends, that the friendship of the world is enmity with God?" "Whatsoever is not of faith is sin."

"Will ye play, then, will ye dally
With your music and your wine?
Up! it is Jehovah's rally!
God's own arm hath need of thine!"

Let us glance at the Pic-nics. Pic-nic religion is on the increase—the order of the day. Conviviality is the ultimatum, the first and the last. "Let us have a jolly time, eat, drink and be merry, for to-morrow we die." Curtail in the least the joyfulness of the little folks or the great folks? Not for the world. Our joy is increased with their joy. We delight evermore to see parents and children, teachers and pupils, on the wing of happy, joyful ecstasy, always abounding in cheerful vivacity. But how is this joyfulness to be, save in the Lord, in all purity and loveliness; save in seeking first the kingdom of God and his righteousness; things true, honest, just, pure, lovely, and of good report? The question is whether this pic-nic or convivial religion is gospel, pure, undefiled, such as meets the emergencies of the day, and is well pleasing in the sight of Heaven. It is more than possible that pic-nics may be harmless, the amusements connected therewith, the relaxation, also, lawful and healthy; but are they so? Are pic-nics profitable, spiritually or religiously, the way they are generally managed? Do they tend to reform, enlighten the mind, convict and convert the soul? Instead of exerting a saving, salutary influence, do they not frequently prove detrimental to spiritual life and hope? The excitement for weeks is more or less dissipating, swallowing up every thought of the soul's welfare. Children are on fire for a spree,—and what else are very many of these pic-nic excursions but sprees or frolics?

We rejoice to see a waking up on this question. A valuable correspondent of the Boston Recorder inquires whether Satan is not spreading his net hereabouts; whether there is not now an excess of this pic-nic and sleigh-ride development in our religion, and whether we are not losing sight of the spiritual in the animal. All false religions seek to attract interest by amusements and animal gratifications. The worshipers of the golden calf sat down to eat and drink the oblations to their new god, and then rose up to play. And a bait of sensuality in some form has always been the lure to heathen worship. Popery has always followed in the same line. Even its Sabbath worship connects a dance with the mass. And throughout the whole structure of that "mystery of iniquity," the sensual and the comic are interwoven with the pomps and ritual of worship. And one of the most common methods by which decay advances upon sound churches is by pleas of amusements to give an attractive and hilarious character to religion—which usually are so many pleas for conformity to the world. I am not unaware of the value of a cheerful religion. I respond to the reasonableness of the command to "rejoice evermore." And yet I read that the "joy of the Lord is your strength," and that our rejoicing must be in God, to make it a religious joy. It is not a religious joy, where professedly religious men indulge in gratifications that are worldly, sensual and frivolous.

"There is a path that leads to God;
All others go astray."

What are Sabbath Schools for? To tickle the fancy? to gather in the "little ones" for sport? This blessed institution, intended exclusively for soul saving, is frequently a gospel-hardening, conscience-searing process. The truths taught here, instead of being a savor of life unto life, are a savor of death unto death! Children grow up infidels, go out into the world infidels, reprobates under the mid-day sun-light of the gospel, take seats with the scornful. How seldom do we hear of any special revivals in Sunday Schools at the present day. And when awakenings do occur, alas! how superficial, how short-lived! "like the morning cloud and early dew." Is there not a cause for this dearth and spiritual death? Is it not this perpetual rush for the visionary?

"If the salt have lost its savor, wherewith shall it be salted?"

To make Sabbath Schools scenes of hilarity, merriment, fun and frolic, is to defeat the special object in view. Children are naturally excitable, inclined to pride, folly, and self-complacency. And instead of fostering these reptiles, every possible means should be resorted to, to counteract and exterminate them, and lead them directly to the feet of Jesus. Very many of our common school exhibitions tend to puff up or inflate juvenile minds. Pic-nics and Sabbath School exhibitions, as they are now generally conducted, are evil and only evil.

1. They excite envy in the children. Those who are not selected to speak envy those who are.

2. They encourage pride of spirit and pride of dress—that is, pride of talent in the speakers; and pride of dress, because the girls and young ladies are often dressed as for a show.

3. They are destructive of spiritual interest in the school, especially in seasons of revival.

4. They create confusion and disorganization in the school, owing to the attention given to preparation and to efforts to enlist children in the sale of tickets.

5. They have a reactionary tendency, throwing the school backward for weeks after they are over.

5. They are mere money making affairs, and to make them popular with irreligious persons the pieces selected are often irreligious and of evil tendency.

The beloved Wm. A. Alcott, M. D., who "being dead yet speaketh," after dwelling at length on the mischievousness of this smash down business in Sabbath Schools, closes thus: "How unlike the spirit of Christ! I rebuke these things in all kindness, but rebuke them I must."

"Never engage in deeds which must
An insult to all justice prove,
Each fetter forced upon the mind,
Let thy strong hand remove."

For the World's Crisis.

MEEKNESS.

"Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart."

If we would be ruled by the word of God, as it lies before us, we shall find that meekness and quietness are as much our duty as they are our ornament. Our Lord was a pattern of these graces. When he was reviled he reviled not again, and when he was persecuted, threatened not. He was very meek toward his enemies; and all through his mock trial he returned love for hatred, and kindness for insults. Hear his mild reply to him that smote him: "If I have spoken evil, bear witness of the evil. If well, why smitest thou me?" And when his friends forsook him, leaving him to agonize alone, he did not censure them, but said, "The spirit is willing, but the flesh is weak." He passed by all their unkindness, and forgave their neglect. He considered their frame. He could have compassion on the ignorant, and on them that are out of the way.

Now in all this our Savior has left us an example. We must follow him, if we would enjoy his approbation and possess his spirit. We must receive reproof with meekness, and give it with meekness. We must follow after meekness, bear reproaches with meekness, and make profession of the hope that is in us with meekness. This grace of meekness and quietness, with love, joy, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, and all other christian duties, fully lived out, will furnish us with abundance of peace, and we shall be clothed with a robe of righteousness without spot.

Finally, beloved, let us walk in love, as Christ loved us; forgive, as Christ forgave us; and please one another, for Christ pleased not himself. Let us strive to keep the faith, following Christ fully, and a rich reward will be ours in the last great day.

SILENCING WOMEN IN WORSHIPING ASSEMBLIES.

Is this right? Females are allowed to sing, and do sing before an audience of thousands, applaudingly, by ministers and people. They can, and often do take the lead, fluently, in the domestic circle, in social gatherings, at the pleasure or wedding party, before the lords of creation, unrebuked. But how is it when a lovely, graceful, intelligent, and consistently pious female opens her lips in prayer or testimony in meetings for worship, where the other sex are present? Is she allowed to speak, encouraged to witness for Jesus, tell modestly, meekly, what the Lord has done for her soul? utter the word of exhortation, or address the mercy-seat? Is her testimony for her blessed Lord received gratefully, joyfully, when delivered in humble submission, in silvery tones, with angelic sweetness and eloquent propriety? Or is she, in very many church organizations, hushed into silence, prohibited from opening her mouth for her dying Lord?

"Were I a persuasive female voice,
That could travel the wide world through,
I would fly on the beams of the morning light,
And speak to men with a gentle might,
And tell them to be true;
I would fly, I would [illegible] o'er land and sea,
Wherever a human heart might be,
Telling a tale or singing a song,
In praise of the Right, in blame of the Wrong."

The wife of a Congregational minister makes the following inquiries relative to women's keeping silence in these social meetings of worship:

"Who called Miriam to be a prophetess? Who made Deborah both prophetess and supreme judge of God's chosen people?

Who made Huldah chaplain to the king, instructress of the high priest, and professor in the theological seminary at Jerusalem? What indications have we that anybody thought Anna, the prophetess, was out of her place in talking so much about Christ to the crowds at the temple as to deserve mention in the sacred record?

Whose spirit was prophesied and poured out upon the sons and the daughters, the servants and the handmaidens, that they might all prophesy? By what authority are Philip's four daughters put down by the inspired writer as prophetesses 'without note or comment'? And what did they do when they prophesied?

What did the women do of whom Paul says, 'Help those women which labored with me in the gospel, with Clement also, and other of my fellow-laborers whose names are in the book of life?'

What was Phebe's office in the Church at Cenchrea?

Why was Irenia of note among the apostles? Did Paul forbid women to pray and prophesy in public; and then give them directions as to how they should appear to honor the gospel when they did pray and prophesy in public?

Does Revelation harmonize with reason, and to save it from merited condemnation, must it be so interpreted as that it shall agree with the plain and spontaneous teachings of what is called 'common sense?'"

The apostle gave directions how the women should behave in the exercise of their gifts. 1 Cor. 11: 5. He uses the words "prayeth" and "prophesieth," which he certainly would not have done had it been prohibited. He not only gave such directions, but he mentions, with peculiar regard, certain women that had labored with him in the gospel. Phil. 4: 3.

We find also that in the prophecy of Joel, as quoted by Peter (Acts 2: 17, 18,) the promise of the effusion of the Holy Spirit was to sons and daughters, servants and handmaidens. The promise of the Spirit is as positive to the daughters and handmaidens, as to the sons ond servants. And Peter says (verse 39), "For the promise is to you and your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call." Then where is the authority for saying that females should not receive a gift of the Holy Spirit in these last days? Verily God hath promised it; and we would to God that more of his handmaidens were endued with power from on high.

The prophetess, Anna, testified to the coming of the Messiah, as did also Elizabeth, the mother of John the Baptist. It was a woman to whom that clear exposition of worship was given at Jacob's well; and she immediately commenced inviting others to come and see a man that had told her all that ever she did. Is not this, said she, the Christ? And so effectually did she preach Christ, that many believed from her testimony, and sought him for themselves. And how many there are in these days that can say that it was under the exhortations or prayers of females that they were led to consecrate themselves to God.

It was a woman that first announced the glorious tidings of the resurrection of our blessed Lord; and let it be remembered that these "glad tidings" were preached to the apostles themselves, who at that time were sunk into despair. They were then scattered as sheep without a shepherd, and all their prospects were involved in gloom. How cheering then the message Jesus sends by a woman, "Go to my brethren and say unto them, I ascend to my Father and to your Father, etc. John 20: 17. Priscilla, as well as Aquila, instructed the eloquent Apollos more perfectly in the nature of the gospel dispensation.

We are informed on the authority of divine revelation that male and female are one in Christ Jesus; that in the relation in which they both stand to him, the distinction is as completely broken down as between Jew and Gentile, bond and free.

THY KINGDOM COME!

"Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven."

This was the prayer our Savior taught his disciples more than eighteen hundred years ago. And since that time it has been the earnest and heartfelt petition of millions of his tried and persecuted followers.

"Thy kingdom come!" Oh! how often have these precious words lightened hearts of sorrow-burdened and care-worn pilgrims, as they pursued their weary way. How often have they sweetened the cup of sorrow so bitter that no eye could pity, no heart sympathize, and no ear be trusted, only that of Jesus, our dear friend, who is touched with the feeling of our infirmities. What words of healing balm to the bruised, wounded and bleeding heart, when the dearest ties of earthly friendship have been severed by the hand of death, or by the still more ruthless hands of malice, envy or strife. How sweet, then, to pray "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done." For we know that when His kingdom comes, and his will is done on earth as it is done in heaven, sorrows, griefs, trials, temptations, persecutions, heart-rending separations from those we love, will forever be at an end.

Thy kingdom come—Oh! day of joy,
When praise shall every tongue employ,
When hate, and strife, and war shall cease,
And man with man shall be at peace.

Take courage, fellow pilgrims; though the answer to this prayer seems to be long delayed, it will surely come. "For the Lord is not slack concerning his promise as some men count slackness." Neither would he have taught his trusting disciples to pray for anything that they were never to receive. But just as sure as the sun is in the heavens, just so sure will his kingdom come; and just so sure will his will be done on earth as it is in heaven.

We are often told that his kingdom has come; that the church is his kingdom. If so, then why is not his will done in the church? Some even tell us that it is, but surely not as it is done in heaven; or else heaven must be a place of greater discord than I ever imagined it. So far from its being done by the church, that it is not done by any individual of the church, we have only to look each one into our own hearts, and we shall find here and there a "not so, Lord."

But the day is not far distant when his glorious kingdom shall come in such a manner that none can be mistaken in it. Then will he make our "officers peace and our exactors righteousness." Then will the knowledge of the Lord cover the earth as the waters cover the sea; no dark spots of heathen ignorance and barbarity; for, "as I live, saith the Lord, the whole earth shall be filled with my glory." And "the moon shall be confounded, and the sun ashamed, when the Lord of Hosts shall reign in Mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously." There has been no reign sufficiently majestic and glorious to confound the moon or make the sun blush with shame. But such will be the case when "the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout;" when he shall come in the "glory of his Father and all the holy angels with him."

O, glorious day! O, blessed hope! may it soon be realized by all who look for and love the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ. Pray on, dear waiting ones. When trouble presses heavily, pray, "Thy kingdom come." When poverty and want come, pray, "Thy kingdom come." When friends forsake and foes seek to accuse you wrongfully, pray, "Thy kingdom come." When surrounded by the perils of the last days, pray, "Thy kingdom come." Let every petition bear aloft these precious words, and let every good child respond, "Amen, even so, come, Lord Jesus." Yours, waiting for the kingdom.

For the World's Crisis.

PROSPECTIVE REALITY.

Amid the unexampled corruption of church ordinances and the perversion of gospel faith, the dark crimes and deepening misery that mingle with the groans and travails of creation, the faithful pilgrim foresees the distant rays of the "bright and morning Star." Looking through the prophetic glass, he rejoices that the coming of the Just One draws nigh. He longs to be delivered from a land whose very atmosphere is pregnant with pestilence and death; whose blighted and blasted soil brings forth briars and thorns, resisting the labor and pains of man in the sweat of his brow; and whose smiles and most pleasant scenes, ever find a counter in sorrow and tears.

With a firm trust in that Word which says, "This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven," together with the multiplied testimony of patriarchs, prophets, apostles and the verity of his own teaching, the christian looks forward with earnest expectation to the day, when leagued oppression against the Prince of peace shall be suddenly broken by the "Stone cut out without hands." He will return to earth, no more the man of sorrows, no more the despised Nazarene, but the King triumphant, to be enthroned on Mount Zion, in the city of David. He will leave the right hand of his Father's throne, no longer to intercede and advocate in behalf of sinners—probation will have ended; the Master of the house will have closed the door of mercy for ever, while those without, in unavailing sorrow, will cry, "Lord, Lord, open unto us."

But, amid the culminating omens of earth's final hour; the gathering elements of her desolation, so awful and terrific to those who have no life in Christ, there will be a class who will rejoice with uplifted heads, because their redemption draweth nigh. How loudly will they exult in anthems of praise, as they gather from the four winds of heaven! How their hope enlarges as they see the eventful hour just at hand, when the seed of Abraham, the Prince of peace, shall lay the usurper in the dust, and, with a glorious triumph over sin and death, reign for ever, King of kings and Lord of lords!

Having kept the way of wisdom and walked in the paths of peace, what consolations swell the believer's bosom, as he nears the long promised hour of his Lord's return! In prospect, he beholds the renovated earth, the glorified kingdom, the city of God, whose length, and breadth, and height are equal, and the foundations of whose jasper walls are garnished with all manner of precious stones; and whose every several gate is of one pearl, and the street of the city pure gold, as it were transparent glass.

But, above all, is the faithful believer consoled with the consciousness of his being an heir of God and joint-heir with Christ, to an incorruptible and fadeless inheritance. "He that overcometh shall inherit all things."—Rev. 21: 7. W. A. MANNING.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Tuesday, Aug. 23, 1864.

☞ NOTICE.

All orders and monies for the World's Crisis, or for Books and Tracts for sale at this Office, and all matters pertaining to the business of the Office, must be addressed to the Business Agent,

MILES GRANT, Crisis Box, Boston.

☞ TORN OR MUTILATED BILLS.—In sending Government bills or postal currency to this office, please be careful to send us bills that are not torn or mutilated, as all such are taken only at a discount, according to the size of the mutilation.

NO PAPER NEXT WEEK.

We propose to give our help in the office a rest next week, while we attend our great annual campmeeting. They have served us very faithfully during the past two years, without any vacation; and we think they deserve, at least, one week for themselves.

It is also proposed to give the cost of next week's paper to the poor, by omitting that number, thus making twenty-five copies instead of twenty-six copies in the present volume. We think our readers will be willing to make this little sacrifice for the benefit of the hundreds of those who have the paper free. It will be only four cents each, yet it will amount to considerable in the aggregate.

THE PRICE OF PAPER.

Nearly all publishers of newspapers have been obliged to advance their prices from twenty to fifty per cent. The dailies, which were sold at two cents three years ago, are now sold at five. This is on account of the great advance in the price of white paper, which now costs about three times what it did three years since, besides the advance in the price of wages. We have nearly doubled the size of the Crisis since its first issue; we use much better paper now than then; we have no paid advertisements, and send between six and seven hundred free to the poor; hence if any paper has cause to advance, we think that ours has. Sending out the Crisis for $2.00 a year, at the present price of paper, as we have been doing, we find that we are now running behind at the rate of about four thousand dollars a year. Of course our readers do not wish to have us get in debt; neither do they wish the paper stopped.

After a careful and prayerful consideration of the subject, we see no other way, while expenses continue as they are, than to advance the price of our paper, at the beginning of the next volume, to $2.50 or $3.00 a year. The price will be determined at the next meeting of the Society at Wilbraham. We trust, however, that this advance, whatever it may be, will be but temporary, and that some reduction will yet be made in the cost of paper and expenses of publication, so that we may soon come back again to the old prices. In the meanwhile, brethren, hold on to the Crisis, and let the thousands of hearts and homes that have been so long cheered and lightened by its weekly visits, be still made glad by its continuance.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION OF SPIRITUALISTS.

We suppose many of our readers are desirous to hear the results of the National Spiritualist Convention held in the city of Chicago, Ill., Aug. 9th to 14th, 1864.

On Monday morning, Aug. 8th, we bade our friends adieu in Montreal, C. E., and took the cars on the Grand Trunk R. R. en rout, for Chicago. After riding for twenty-four hours, we arrived in Detroit six minutes too late to make a connection onward. For the first hundred miles from Montreal, the crops of wheat, oats, and other crops, excepting corn, are looking well. After witnessing the sad results of the drouth in New England, and reading of it elsewhere, it was a delightful sight to see vegetation in a state of prosperity as it is in C. E. The land on the line of the railroad is quite level, productive, and quite easy of cultivation,—some like the prairie land of the west.

After arriving in C. W., we came again where the sad effects of the drouth became visible, and increasingly so, till the pasture fields looked almost as bare as in New England and other parts of the country.

At Detroit we had a very pleasant interview with Bro. G. W. Sprague, formerly of Poultney, Vt. We also met an intelligent Scotch minister in Detroit, who has become very much interested in the doctrine of the sleep of the dead and destruction of the wicked. He has been instrumental in awakening much thought in the minds of other preachers, which has caused some to investigate and others to oppose. The truth is working, and we think the seed already sown by Bro. Sprague and family, the Scotch minister and others, will produce a good harvest to the glory of the Lord.

At 5 o'clock, P. M., we took the cars on the Michigan Central R. R. for Chicago, where we arrived Wednesday morning, at 5.30. We hardly need say any thing to our readers relative to the city of Chicago, which has grown up more rapidly, perhaps, than any other city in the world. It is but about thirty years since the first buildings were erected, and now the population is said to be equal to that of Boston,—about one hundred and sixty-eight thousand.

We found the city crowded, as usual. At the public house where we stopped, it was necessary for even favored guests to sleep on the floor, because every other place was occupied before their arrival.

We now come to the doings of the Convention. It has been a success on the part of Spiritualism, though they did not do all that many of their number wished to see accomplished. Among their delegates were many intelligent men and women, most of whom have been members of the different churches in our land, and several have been preachers. They have in their ranks some fine specimens of humanity, who have become dissatisfied with the theology of these last days, as well as with the many poor specimens of nominal christianity, all of which has caused them to turn aside to the fables of the seducing spirits, who promise something good, but only serve, as an ignis fatuus, to lead them into the swamps of infidelity, where they are "ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth."

We did not arrive in the city until Wednesday morning, when we found the following in the Chicago Daily Tribune, for Tuesday:—

"The National Convention of Spiritualists in Chicago, which commences its sessions this morning, in Bryan Hall, promises to be a large gathering. The friends of the cause in this city are already taxed to their utmost in providing accommodations for visitors, and the hotels are not without their visitants. Probably ere nightfall there will be fully two thousand delegates in the city."

In the same paper, we also found the following resolution:—

"Resolved, That this Convention deem it incumbent upon all the friends of impartial justice and liberty, and of universal progress, to use all the social, moral, religious and political influence, which, in their opinion, they possess, to secure the re-election of Abraham Lincoln in the impending presidential canvass."

After considerable discussion, this resolution was passed. Yeas 303, nays 44.

Much time was spent in discussing the subject of organization. Different plans were presented, none of which seemed to be sufficiently matured to suit the majority. Several of their most able men and women were in favor of immediate organization, while the more conservative part thought best to delay the matter for one year, and in the mean time form local associations, discuss the subject of organization, and mature the best possible system for a great national union, at their next annual gathering. The spirits seemed to favor the latter plan, as far as they represented themselves through their mediums.

Dr. Gardner, of Boston, who has taken a very active part in getting up the convention, offered the following resolution:—

"Resolved, That this Convention proceed to constitute itself an association of Spiritualists, by electing a United States Central Committee, consisting of —, whose duty shall be to call a National Convention of Spiritualists, at such time and place as they think necessary, during the next year, to present a specific plan or plans for general organization of Spiritualists; said convention to consist of regularly appointed delegates, to be appointed by local organizations or associations of Spiritualists throughout the country, in the ratio of one delegate to every one hundred members, provided always that every society or association shall have the right to send one delegate."

This resolution called forth quite a warm debate, which caused a spirit to take possession of one Mr. Pinkham, delegate from California, and ask permission to speak to the audience. The request was granted, and the following address given:—

"We have noticed the angry discussions of this Convention, and have determined that they are useless, for we have taken charge of the matter ourselves and will read what is intended to settle it. (Reads)

'There will be a World's Convention of Spiritualists at New York City, commencing on Washington's birthday, Feb. 22d, 1865, at 10 o'clock in the morning, in the largest hall in the city, to be continued until all the business is through with. Then a great Circle of the world will be inaugurated, a new Bible revealed, and the old one revised and thoroughly explained; also rules for the promulgation of reform throughout all society, given under the direction of God Almighty, through Jesus Christ and the coadjutors, on the right wings of the celestial spheres. All persons, notwithstanding color or sex, are invited to attend if they will observe the rules; but a small admission fee will be charged. The meeting when it adjourns will move out to a large domain of land, to be selected between now and then. To all who feel attracted we propose this as a final settlement of the question.'"

It was finally decided to defer the national organization till another year. Quite a number of the leading speakers were opposed to this delay, but the majority voted against them, with the understanding that all should go to work and prepare the way as fast as possible for future and more extended action. All were in favor of adopting some measures for associated effort, but thought it not best to be in too much haste about the work, lest some of their arrangements should be imperfect.

Next came up the social reform question, when the following resolutions were presented by Dr. Parker, of Boston, chairman of the committee, and afterwards adopted:—

"Resolved, That we recognize perfect and entire equality of rights as between the sexes, including equal property, equal marital, equal parental, equal civil, political, and equal religious rights, and that we reject the absurd pretext that sex in any instance whatever confers the slightest authority.

Resolved, That true marriage is the free, loving, life-long union of one man with one woman, and all modern as well as ancient attempts to institute any other less sacred and permanent relation in its place, under whatever name it may be called, meet at our hands only prompt, unqualified rejection and reprobation."

It will be observed that the second resolution contains the real "free-love" principle. According to this resolution, "true marriage" consists in the love existing between one man and one woman. Hence, when the love ceases they are unmarried; and when these find others whom they love better, and who love them, then they are married again; and so on as often as their love fancies change, which may be as sudden as Ammon's for Tamar. Of course, they have no objection to the idea of having one man love one woman for a lifetime; but in case he or she find others that they love better, they can separate, and unite with their "affinities" at pleasure, and claim there should be no law against such a course. This corresponds with Paul's description of the "seducing spirits" of "the latter times." He says they will speak "lies in hypocrisy, . . . forbidding to marry." This is one part of the coming "social reform." We have not time now to say more about their doings at this convention.

For eight years we have been expecting what we saw commenced at Chicago; namely, preparations for the political, religious and social organization of Spiritualists, and the adoption of plans to control the government of this world in harmony with the direction of demons. We think strange events are about to open upon us. A leading Spiritualist remarked to us, that they intended to have a platform broad enough to take on everybody, —drunkards, liars, prostitutes and murderers. We replied, "Dr., will the platform admit one like ourself?" He replied it would not, because we did not believe in the immortality of the soul. They have no test of fellowship but a belief that man is immortal, and may communicate with his friends in this world after his death. We felt very thankful that there was no room for us on their platform.

We were desirous to secure an opportunity to expose the cause of Spiritualism, and show that human spirits have nothing to do with the manifestations. But no opportunity offered till Saturday evening, when we learned that the Spiritualists were obliged to move to another hall for their Sunday meeting, as Bryan Hall was previously engaged for the evening. We went at once, and engaged it for morning and afternoon, where we had the privilege of speaking to an intelligent audience on the cause of the phenomena of Spiritualism, and its morals and doctrines. Several Spiritualists were present and asked questions. It was a season of much interest.

We have arranged to have a discussion in Chicago, on the subject of Spiritualism, with Mr. J. G. Fish, formerly a Baptist minister, to commence Tuesday evening, Sept. 27th. Pray for us.

"DEVILISH RELIGION."

July 23d, 1864, we received a letter from A. L. E. Nash, a Spiritualist, in which he finds fault because we published in the Crisis what we heard stated relative to some Spiritualists in Lynn, who had renounced Spiritualism in consequence of hearing our discussion with Eld. Moses Hull. After quoting our own language as follows:—"It is very seldom that a Spiritualist can be persuaded to turn away from the bewitching delusion of Spiritualism," he says,

"That is so. You never knew of an instance of that kind. And furthermore, you never knew of an instance where a Spiritualist was ever turned from his own way of thinking by such a gloomy, hopeless, faithless, devilish religion as taught by the Second Adventists, which does not amount to so much as husks and chaff before the wind.*

You say those under the influence of Spiritualism are like the man in the current just above the Niagara; but let me tell you, that if you had said that the man who puts his dependence on the Bible, as a whole, was in such danger, there would have been some sense in the remark. . . . You say that there is a 'know so' to your faith. I think so, and that is, it is diabolical nonsense, conceived in ignorance, and brought forth by bigotry. The fool who has no reason, the bigot who will not exercise it, and the fanatic who dare not, may establish their true character by believing this absurdity, or any other, however disgraceful or revolting."

* We have known several instances.

Now let it be remembered that this very same Spiritualism proposes to remodel all the present systems of government, also the social and religious institutions, and form a foundation, as its supporters say, for a "new church and state," which shall be "cosmopolitan in its character, not confined to any people or country, and when it is brought into action, the whole race of man will feel its quickening and elevating influence."

Is it not time for christians to awake? and for conservative men to take a positive position, and stand up boldly for Jesus and his word? Will professed men of God still strive to secure a reputation among his enemies, and thus cripple all their influence for good? Is it not high time to "come out from among them and be . . . separate," as the Bible requires? There is not a moment to be lost. The invading foe is at our doors, already securing his victims by the thousand in the churches, among our friends, and in our families. Shall we be conservatively indifferent over all this? Is it possible that the majority of nominal church members are so intoxicated with the pleasures and habits of this vain, wicked world, that they see no danger in the bold advance of the mustering infidel hosts of these last days? Well may we exclaim, in the language of Charles Beecher: "Oh, woful day! Oh, unhappy church of Christ! Fast rushing round and round the fatal circle of absorbing ruin! Thou sayest I am rich, and increased in goods, and have need of nothing; and knowest not that thou art poor, and miserable, and blind, and naked."

If such language as the foregoing was justifiable ten years ago, what shall be said at the present time, when the state of things is much worse? Oh, that a thousand Luthers and Wesleys might arise to help sound the alarm!

ONE SPIRIT IN THEM.

The following interesting remarks on the "spirit in man," are from the notes in Geo. R. Noyes' translation of Ecclesiastes 3: 19. They contain truth that all Bible students should know. These remarks are more valuable because coming from an able Hebrew scholar who believes in the immortality of the soul. He very wisely remarks in his notes, "It ought not to appear strange to any one, that the writer (Solomon) did not believe in doctrines which had never been revealed to him, or to his countrymen." But we may well say, it would be very strange that the Lord should withold all evidence of the immortality of the soul, or spirit from his people, and from Solomon so noted for wisdom, and leave them to learn the doctrine from the heathen.

When speaking of the meaning of the word rendered spirit in Eccl. 3: 19, Dr. Noyes says:—

"One spirit in them: i. e. the spirit of life. Comp. ch. 8: 8, 12: 7; Judges 15: 19; 1 Sam. 30: 12; Ezek. 37: 8; Hab. 2: 19. Sometimes this vital spirit is called the spirit or breath of God, as having been imparted by him, breathed by him into the nostrils of men, and as returning to him again. See Job 27: 3. In Job 34: 14, he is said to take back his spirit when men die. Comp. Ps. 104: 29, 30. From a comparison of the preceding references, it will appear that, according to Hebrew usage, the return of the spirit to God denotes simply death, and not a return to a state of happy existence with God after death.

Whether it goes upward, etc. This is the rendering of the Septuagint and all the ancient versions, as also of Luther, and appears to agree better with the Hebrew idiom, and with the connection, than that of the common version. The term spirit in this verse is the same in the original as in verse 19, where it is said that one spirit is in men and brutes. In both cases I understand it as denoting the animal or vital spirit. It seems to me improbable, that, in a sentence so closely connected with verse 19, there should be any change in the meaning of the term spirit, especially as it is here applied to brutes as well as to men, and as the spirit of all mankind, the bad as well as the good, seems to be spoken of in comparison with that of brutes. The preacher seems to me to express a doubt whether man, whom he represents to be like the brutes in many respects, differs from them in this, that the spirit of man ascends upward, or returns to God, and that of brutes goes downward, or mingles with dust. I do not understand him to refer to the personal, conscious immortality of either; for, in verse 19, he says, 'One lot befals both. As the one dies, so dies the other. Yea, there is one spirit in them, and a man has no pre-eminence above a beast.' The doubt is, whether the vital spirit of man is more honorably disposed of after death than that of a brute. In ch. 12: 7, it is true, he positively affirms that the spirit of man 'returns to God.' But it is not very probable that he doubts here what he affirms there. The doubt is, whether any different disposition is made of the soul of a man and that of a brute; whether the latter may not go upward as well as the former. The foregoing exposition of the passage seems to be confirmed by the inference which is drawn from it in verse 22. If the writer had believed that man was distinguished from beasts by a destiny to an immortal conscious existence, and to a state of righteous retribution, and had, as many suppose, intended to express his surprise that so few regarded, as the writer did the different destiny of the spirits of men and brutes, would his inference from the passage have been exactly what it is in verse 22? Is not this inference rather drawn from what the writer considers as the resemblance of man to the brutes in all the points in which he compares them? It ought not to appear strange to any one, that the writer did not believe in doctrines which had never been revealed to him, or to his countrymen."

ANCIENT CORRESPONDENCE.

We are indebted to Bro. J. C. Stoddard, of Worcester, for the following correspondence, over two hundred years old. It is worth preserving. How different the tone of the old christianity from the modern. The latter is full of vanity; while the ancient is more like the old gold; it has real worth in it. This fact will appear in the following letter from John Elliot, of Guilford, to his brother Benjamin Elliot, of Roxbury; being an answer to the question, "HOW TO LIVE IN THIS WORLD, SO AS TO LIVE IN HEAVEN." It does not read much like most of the writing of modern preachers.

GUILFORD, May 18th, 1864.

Dear Bro.:—Yours I received and thought on. The question is, How so to live in this world, as yet to live in heaven. It is one of the common places of my heart that I have often occasion to study, and therefore takes me not unprovided. It is hard to keep the helm up among so many cross winds and eddies, and outlands, and boarding of creatures, as we meet withal upon this sea of glass and fire. And truly that man knoweth not his own heart who finds it not difficult to break through the entanglements of the world. Creature smiles stop and entice away the affections from Jesus Christ; creature frowns discompose and tempestuate the spirit, that it thinks it doth well to be angry. Both ways, grace is a loser. We had all need to watch and pray lest we enter these temptations. The greatest of your conflicts and causes of your complaints seem here to have their original. Temptations follow tempers. As there are two predominant qualities in the temper of every body, so there are two predominant sins in the temper of every heart; and pride is one in all men in the world, the other is care about futurities. I will tell you familiarly what God hath done for my soul, and in what track my soul keeps towards himself. 1st. I am come to a conclusion to look for no great matters in the world, but to know Jesus Christ and him crucified. I make best way in a low gale. A high spirit and a high sail together will be dangerous, and therefore I prepare to live low. I desire not much, I pray against it. My study is my calling; so much as to attend that without distraction, I am bound to plead for, and more I desire not. By my secluded retirements I have advantage to observe how every day's occasions insensibly wean off the heart from God and bury it in itself, which they that ever live in the noise and lumber of the world, cannot be sensible of.

2d. I have learned to see a need of every thing that God gives me, and to need nothing that he denies me. There is no dispensation though cross and afflictive, but either in or after it, I find I could not be without it; and nothing that I am without, whether it be taken from me or not given to me, but sooner or later God quiets me in himself without it.

3d. I cast all my care on the Lord, and live securely on the wisdom and care of my heavenly Father. My ways are you know in some sense hedged up with thorns and grow darker and darker daily, but yet I mistrust not my good God in the least, and live more quiet in the absence of all, by faith, than I should do, I am persuaded, if I possessed them. I think the Lord deals kindly with me to make me believe for all my mercies before I have them; they then will be Isaac's sons of laughter for the less reason hath to work upon, the more freely faith casts itself on the faithfulness of God. I find that while faith is steady nothing can disquiet me, and when faith totters nothing can establish me. If I ramble out among means and creatures I am presently lost and can come to no end, but if I stay myself on God and leave him to work in his own way and time, I am at rest and can lie down and sleep in a promise though a thousand rise up against me. Therefore my way is not to cast beforehand, but to work with God by the day. Sufficient to the day is the work thereof. I find so much to do continually with my calling and my heart, that I have no time to puzzle myself with peradventures and futurities. As for the state of the times, it is very gloomy and tempestuous; but why do the heathen rage? Faith lies at anchor in the midst of the waves, and believes the accomplishment of the promise through all these overturnings, confusions and seeming impossibilities. Upon this God do I live, who is our God forever, and will guide us to the death. Methinks I lie becalmed in his bosom as Luther in such a case. I am not much troubled. Let Christ see to it. I know prophecies are now dark; the books are sealed, and men have all been deceived, and every vision fails, yet God doth continue faithful; it's he that promiseth, who will also do it. I believe these dark times are the womb of a bright morning. Many things more I might have added, but enough.

Oh, brother, keep close to God and then you need fear nothing. Maintain secret and intimate acquaintance with him, and then a little of the creature will go a great way. Take time for duties in private; crowd not religion into a corner of the day. There is a Dutch proverb, Nobody will get by thieving or lose by praying. Lay up all your good in God, so as to overbalance the sweetness and bitterness of all creatures. Spend no time in forehand contrivances for this world; they never succeed. God will run his dispensations another way. Self-contrivances are the effects of unbelief and can speak by experience; would men spend those hours they wear out in plots and devices in communion with God, and leave all on him by venturesome believing, they would have more peace and comfort. The Lord Jesus be with your spirit. Pray for your own soul, pray for Jerusalem, and pray hard for your poor brother. JOHN ELIOT."

SPIRITUALISM.

The following extract of a letter from one of our correspondents will prove of interest to our readers:—

"Your frequent protests against Spiritualism are particularly valuable. I believe there are but few who understand the full extent of evil it comprises. A very intelligent lady, who was partially ensnared by it, said,

'No one who has not been under the actual influence of Spiritualism can ever know its fearful power for evil. They may think they know it, from the representations of others; but they must feel it, to know it to its full extent.' 'I,' she said, 'was brought, body, soul, and spirit, to the brink of destruction.'

She was brought under its influence by a personal friend, in high life, refined, cultivated, and, apparently, eminently pious. Her Spiritualism was secret and insidious,—neither the church nor the world knew of it, except a circle of three, and this lady never suspected it until too far under its influence to recover herself. Neither is she yet recovered.

Although she hates Spiritualism now, and avoids it, yet its depressing influence remains. She speaks of her internal agony as beyond the power of words to describe. She said, 'My life is dead. A blight has come over me, mind, body, and spirit.'

She is a type of many, both in and out of the church. But it does much more harm in the church than out of it; especially when members of good standing remain such, and follow it covertly."

THE COMING DRAFT.

A large number of our brethren, who are liable to be called upon to serve in the army, have been informed that they must either fight or send a substitute. Such is not the case.

The following extract from the new law regulating future drafts, will show that the government has made a provision for all such as have conscientious scruples about using deadly weapons. The government allows the peaceable saint to pay $300 and stay at home, or, if not able to raise the amount, they can go into the hospitals. It being right for us to render to Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's (greenbacks), and to God the things which are God's (obedience to all his commands), we should thank the Lord that the rulers have been considerate of the claims of the conscientious, and that we still have the liberty of worshiping according to the dictates of our own consciences, with none to molest or make us afraid. The following extract is from the New York Day-Book of Aug. 6th, 1864:—

"Second, The commutation clause, by which a person who was drafted might be released upon payment of three hundred dollars, is repealed, with a single exception in the case of persons conscientiously opposed to bearing arms, who may commute upon payment of three hundred dollars, or otherwise be considered as 'non-combatants,' and if drafted be held to service for hospital duty, or in the care of freedmen. Persons physically incapable of duty are exempted upon surgical examination." MOSES H. PIPER.

MEETING AT DARIEN, N. Y.

BRN. AND SRS.:—Our annual two days' meeting for 1864 in Western New York is appointed at Darien, Sept. 9–11. Let us all rally and come up to the feast. All are invited who love the appearing of our Lord, and are striving to obey his new commandment, John 13: 34. Should self-righteous bigots and exclusive Pharisees come, we hope it will be to "see how these christians love one another," and to admire and repent.

Those coming from the west, will leave Buffalo on the P. M. mail train Sept. 9th, and be met by conveyances at Corfu station at 4 o'clock P. M.; and from the east as given in Bro. B. C. Simonds' notice of the meeting. As hay and oats are high, let all who consistently can come by the railroad, and let our wealthy brethren and sisters fill their baskets with cooked provisions, and bring with them, that "they may have, and to give to him that needeth." Come, then, in the name of the Lord. We expect a glorious meeting. Let us pray for God's blessing upon us and the meeting, that we may not be disappointed.

"THE VOICE OF THE WEST."

This is a good sized weekly sheet, published at $2 per year, well filled with readable matter, and designed to fill a vacancy and occupy an important position in the great West. It is in experienced hands, who have doubtless counted its cost; but still the enormous advance in the prices of paper and labor must embarrass it with its limited resources and circulation. If a few hundred brethren and sisters, who are able and willing, would order the paper, and send on their subscriptions or donations, they might benefit themselves and help a struggling enterprise along. Address J. V. HIMES, Buchanan, Mich. H. L. H.

OF THE TIMES OF DANIEL AND JOHN.

We shall have a quantity of these charts on hand for sale at the Wilbraham campmeeting. Brethren intending to get one will save expressage by buying them there. They will find it a great help to the study of the prophetic periods of Daniel and John, whether for use in the family, the Sabbath School, or the lecture room. Every student of prophecy and every minister should have one. Price, $5.00. W. B. H.

"The new chart is a grand affair. Larger in the square, more ample in its illustrations, the figures arranged more in accordance with the portion illustrated, and larger than in any other prophetic chart that has fallen under my notice. In its mechanical execution, it is well done. As an aid to the study, exhibition and defense of historical prophecy, I consider it above all price. Although it indicates, it does not positively assert '68 as the terminus of the prophetic periods, but leaves the particular date open for all the differences of opinion which exist among the different branches of the Advent body."—A. HALE.

PROFITABLE FAMILY READING.

BRO. GRANT:—I received some time ago H. L. Hastings' five volumes, and think them as profitable a collection of important truths as can be found in any five volumes ever published. I would rejoice to know that they had found a place in every christian family. I would heartily recommend them to all, and in a most especial manner to scattered families who do not enjoy the privilege of attending public meeting.

FREDERICK CORKER.

Correspondence.

From Sr. F. S. Bradford.

BRO. GRANT:—You have experienced, perhaps, the cold, chilling wind of a wintry day while walking on the high road, and the severity of the blast has caused you to wrap your cloak more closely about you as you strode rapidly forward. Though the sun shone brightly in the heavens, you felt that all was drear and cheerless around you. But as you pressed on through opposing difficulties, you entered, somewhat abruptly, a grove of our New England spruce pine, where the rays of the sun made all warm and pleasant, and you felt at once that this was a more genial spot; and as your path wound along through the wood which shut out the wintry wind you became warmed under the influence which surrounded you, and you almost forgot that outside there was a chilling blast raging.

Thus it was with me last week when the Crisis reached me. Surrounded as I am by infidel Spiritualists, Orthodox Spiritualists, and people filled with the war spirit, and nearly every spirit of evil, I almost felt that there was no peace on earth, or among men. But the Crisis came, and as I turned from all to peruse its welcome pages I immediately felt its peaceful influence stealing over me, and ere I had spent one hour in reading its sacred columns, I felt transformed from a state of coldness, to one of christian zeal and fraternal love, and ready to exclaim, Bless God for the Crisis.

But from whence do these holy teachings emanate? From whence comes this harmony of sentiment which pervades our paper? Do they emanate from the editorial department, that quiet little sanctum, the motto of whose occupant is, "Be good," or from the other departments of the office? From neither!

Its teachings are from God, the great source of all harmony and love. What but the Spirit of the true God could cause the correspondents of the Crisis to breathe forth one and the same spirit? They are scattered over the length and breadth of our land; yet, although the chain of Rocky Mountains may separate us, as individuals, not a link in the chain of sentiment is broken. No discordant note mars the harmony, no bone of contention marks our paper, but all is praise to God and love to one another. Let us go on, cheering each other, animated by the blessed hope that in a little while our blessed Lord will come and receive us to himself. But in the meantime let us not forget that there are many not saved, and sound the alarm to them to flee for their lives to the Rock Jesus while there is time. The devil is doing up his last work, or if he isn't I do not wish to live to see him do it; and we should be on the watch-tower, not once in a while, but all the time, knowing that time is short.

FANNIE S. BRADFORD.

From Bro. O. D. Woodruff.

BRO. GRANT:—The meeting at Wallingford yesterday was one of interest. Brethren and sisters for miles around came in, and the little chapel was filled to overflowing. The meeting commenced in the Lord's order, and continued so through the day. The children came there expecting a blessing, asked for it, and received it. The different gifts of the members were brought in, and the blessing followed. God never determined that all the gifts of the different members of the church should be concentrated in one man or woman, but that each one should exercise his or her gift as God had bestowed.

The tithes were brought in abundantly in the morning, and about two o'clock P. M. there seemed to be opportunity to go to the water, where thirteen persons were buried in baptism by Bro. Hitchcock. After returning to the chapel, the Spirit in an especial manner rested upon the congregation, and all the tithes were brought into the storehouse. From fifty to sixty spoke, as the Spirit gave them utterance. A halo of glory rested down upon the place, and it was indeed a foretaste of that glory to be revealed when Christ shall appear to gather the faithful ones home.

After the brethren and sisters had used their liberty in speaking, some having friends out of Christ stood up and wanted the children to pray for them; and after requesting any in the room who felt that they would like the prayers of the Lord's children to arise (some thirty or more stood up), we all united in laying their cases before the Lord, knowing that he can save, and that as soon as there is a willing mind. After prayer, the sufferings and death of our Lord and Master were commemorated, in the use of the bread and wine. A solemnity rested upon every one in the house. The very presence of God could be felt. After singing a hymn they went out, each one to his home, and rejoicing in hope of the glory of God, to be brought when Christ shall appear.

The day of the Lord is near and hasteth greatly. Soon the loved ones now sleeping in the dust of the earth will hear the voice of the Life-giver and come forth to die no more. May the Spirit of God direct and quicken these mortal bodies, that we may meet the raised ones in the last day, and reign in an earth filled with eternal glory. Your Bro. in Christ, O. D. WOODRUFF.

Southington, Ct., Aug. 1st.

From Sr. Lucia A. Gorham.

DEAR CRISIS:—I come to you, a stranger in person, but, blessed be God! not so in spirit. I hardly know how to address my brethren and sisters, as this is my first attempt at writing for public view, yet I feel a great desire to testify to all mankind what great things my Redeemer has done for me and mine.

For six years I was numbered among the professed followers of Christ, yet I scarcely know what I believed, or on what rested my hope; and, as a matter of course, I learned to care nothing about such religion, and became cold and careless concerning my salvation. Last spring, Bro. Grant came among us, and by the all-sufficient grace of God, I was led to see the error of my ways, and blessed be his name, I saw the holy light and, truth of the gospel of peace. Ten thousand thousand thanks to God for lifting my feet from this miry clay, and planting them on the Rock, Christ Jesus! A few days since, husband and myself were buried with Christ in baptism, to rise (as we believe) at the resurrection in his likeness.

Truly it is good to obey the commandments of our Heavenly Father. Pray for us, dear brethren and sisters, that we walk worthy of our calling—ever be found doing our Master's will, and at last be permitted to meet you all in God's everlasting kingdom. Though we go down to the land of the enemy and abide among the pale sleepers of the dust, yet in the bright morning of the resurrection, our great Life-giver will awake us to glory and immortality. Amen.

Yours in "like precious faith,"

Castleton, Vt. LUCIA A. GORHAM.

From Bro. G. S. Harwood.

BRO. GRANT:—In looking over the Crisis, I find that you are compelled to beg, and for your just dues. Is it possible that any one can be looking for the Lord, and not pay for sending him the gospel? For I believe it is the Lord's paper. If I did not, I believe a man is entitled to his pay when he works for it. I took the Advent Herald for about twenty years, and every once in a while it was begging delinquents to pay what they owed. Now I believe the Lord will not hold such people guiltless. If they have not got the money, why don't they say so, or get some one to say so for them, and be honest.

I think I take about as much comfort in reading the Crisis as I did once in reading the Midnight Cry and Herald. I am glad to see the brethren so awake to the signs of the times. We are living in a grand and awful time. I am glad to see you so earnest in warning the people. Keep on, brother. If you are faithful, you will have your reward when the Master comes.

Rehoboth, Mass. GEO. S. HARWOOD.

From Bro. H. A. King.

BRO. GRANT:—I wish I had money to give instead of just merely paying. I love the Crisis above all other papers. First, because the articles are short and to the point; and second, because it teaches "the substance of things hoped for," not passing by the weightier matters of the law, but teaching love and mercy. Of the kingdom it teaches that it shall be on the earth, a real kingdom, leaving those punctilious about little matters to settle their differences among themselves. And it is the same of the Lord's coming, the resurrection of the dead, and destiny of the wicked. I don't think this teaching an uncertain sound either, but hope our God will keep us during this time of trial.

I think there ought to be a resolution passed at the Wilbraham campmeeting to show that we are the old christian church (commonly called Second Adventists) should be included with those intended to be favored by the law, which excuses those who belong to churches whose creeds forbid fighting. Although our creed, the New Testament, does forbid the use of carnal weapons, they will not take that as evidence; and I think we had better furnish those liable to be drafted with evidence suited to the court in which they will be tried. If you will notice this, you will oblige me, for I had rather go to the hospital than to prison; for if they send me to the hospital, I shall preach the gospel of the Prince of peace, and his soon coming kingdom. H. A. KING.

Nevada, Ohio.

From Sr. H. A. Linden.

BRO. GRANT:—My husband and self were led into the faith of the gospel in the following manner. One day in early winter two strangers came into our neighborhood, one of them calling at our house and leaving some tracts which he requested us to read. He talked so strangely, we took him for an infidel, but told him we were not afraid to read Voltaire or any other book. He preached in the evening at a small school-house near here, but was not permitted to preach there again. However, we read the books which the stranger left, and comparing them with the Bible we found them to contain the true gospel of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. And I, being a backslider from the Methodist Episcopal church, was lost in amazement at the boundless love of our Father which is in heaven. I was overwhelmed with tender emotions, and from my heart exclaimed with the prophet of old, "Praise the Lord for his mercy; for his mercy endureth for ever." My husband was a wild youth, but he, too, shortly began to pray, telling me he thought it best to seek for eternal life.

A short time after he fell sick with consumption, and in about two years died. He never ceased his family devotions while strength enough remained to attend them, and his faith was unshaken to the last. He left me with three children, and since that time my struggles with poverty, temptations and oppression, have been severe; and although I have not always lived worthy of the great love and favor of our Savior, yet I rejoice in the hope that he will soon come with his mighty angels to take us from this bondage of temptation and sin. HESTER A. LINDEN.

Mina, N. Y.

From Bro. P. B. Hoyt.

BRO. GRANT:—The cause of truth is steadily advancing here. We have been greatly blessed of late by the labors of Bro. and Sr. Mansfield. They are workmen of whom we need not be ashamed. Much prejudice has been removed, and the cause of truth set on better footing than ever before. To the Lord be all the praise.

We shall soon have a good chapel, as we have purchased a building formerly occupied by the Methodists, and after repairs are completed will make a nice and convenient place for worship. Bless the Lord for his goodness to us.

Of all men we ought to lift up our heads, for redemption draweth nigh. How fast the signs thicken. Soon we shall have passed the last landmark. Soon Jesus, our Beloved, will come. Can we truly say Amen, even so, come, Lord Jesus? How ought we carefully to examine ourselves; for if our hearts condemn us, "God is greater than our hearts, and knoweth all things."

The Lord bless you in your labors of love, and may we soon meet in his heavenly kingdom. Yours in hope, P. B. HOYT.

Norwalk, O.

From Bro. S. Hart.

DEAR BRETHREN:—I feel that our work is almost done. It seems to me the bolted hearts of mankind are locked for ever against the mercy of God. His wooing Spirit has pleaded gently with them, but of little avail. They scoff at the man of God, and laugh at the threatening judgments of Jehovah, and mock at the signals of the approach of the day of God. They despise goodness and reject salvation, and in a little while they must reap what they have sown. The threatening storm that gathers in blackness will soon burst upon the foe of God. How sad the thought! But rejoice, oh ye bride of Christ, for beyond the misty future gleams the city of delight, and we soon shall be there. How glorious the thought! May we who are of God put on the whole armor of righteousness, and fight the glorious warfare till Jesus comes.

Unionville, Ct. SANFORD HART.

From Bro. L. C. C. Bailey.

BRO. GRANT:—I have no excuse to offer for not paying up before. Your paper is good. It points out many evils that we ought to abstain from; one of them is tobacco, which I have been in the habit of using, but now, by the grace of God, I will leave it off, and desire to have my name on the list of Tobacco Reformers, as I am satisfied a man cannot worship God acceptably when he indulges in such a filthy habit. I want to see the King in his beauty, and in order to see him we are required to present our bodies a living sacrifice, and holy. To this end I hope you will pray for me, that I may be able to overcome and be found of Him in peace.

I think my tobacco bill will pay for the paper, so you may send it.

BRO. GRANT:—I never wished that I was rich in worldly goods so much as at present, that I might use them in spreading the gospel of Jesus. About sixteen years ago I experienced religion under Freewill Baptist preaching, and united with that church; but I gradually sunk in darkness, and for years have lived in sin. Within a few weeks the Lord put it in the heart of an Advent brother to talk to me, and, praise His name, my eyes were opened. I saw that I must come out from the world or give up all hopes of a place in the kingdom of God. I have been reading the Crisis and have now subscribed for it. How much good those letters from the dear brethren and sisters have done me. Pray for me. M. J. S.

BRO. GRANT:—I have been a reader of the Crisis for nearly a year. I think I never saw a paper more to be prized. I should be lost without its weekly visits. I pray the good Lord to bless all connected with its publication. I am alone in my family in believing the truth that you as a church advocate. I hope that my family will ere long embrace the religion of the gospel. Pray for us, that we may be an unbroken family in the kingdom. ELIZABETH BRONDRAGE.

DULCENIA ELLINWOOD.

Fell asleep in Jesus, in Athol, Mass., Aug. 6th, Dulcenia Ellinwood, wife of Daniel Ellinwood, aged fifty-three years and three months.

She calmly looked death in the face and said, "The grave has lost its terrors. I can walk through the valley with Jesus for a staff to lean upon," and often said, "All will be well; the will of God be done." The last week of her life she suffered exceedingly, and the most of the last four months, yet murmured not. Consumption has done its work, and she has left an husband and eight children to mourn her absence, and toil on alone amidst life's cares and sorrows. Her faith was in Jesus and the resurrection, and she spoke of the time being near when she should meet her family in the everlasting kingdom, and exhorted them to meet her there. She has been a careful observer of the signs of the times, and thought the earth's harvest near.

Eld. J. Hemenway spoke words of comfort and consolation from 1 Thess. 4: 13, and was assisted in the exercises of the funeral occasion by Rev. J. F. Norton, of this place. M. C. ELLINWOOD.

LABAN HARRIMAN.

Died at Sebec, Me., July 29th, 1864, of consumption, Bro. Laban Harriman, aged forty-nine years.

He leaves behind a wife, a father of eighty years, a brother and sister, and many relatives and friends. Bro. H. was strong in the faith of the gospel, and believed that his future life depended upon a resurrection from death when Jesus should come in person. He has died the death of the righteous, and we hope to meet him in the kingdom. We spoke to the friends on this mournful occasion from Rev. 21: 4. F. A. BAKER.

FRANKLIN RICH.

Died at Newburg, Me., Aug. 11th, 1864, Franklin, youngest son of Samuel and Lorana Rich, after an illness of three days, aged twenty-six years and twenty days.

The family are greatly afflicted, but they leave a bright evidence that their son and brother has fallen asleep in Christ, and are resolved to live so that they may meet him in the resurrection morning, where sickness and pain and death will never come. We tried to speak words of comfort to them from 1 Cor. 15: 26. F. A. BAKER.

EMMA B. CRAM.

At Lawrence, Mass., July 22d, 1864, of diphtheria and croup, Emma B. Cram, only daughter of R. F. and Susan P. Cram, aged five years, nine months.

Her parents are comforted by the hope of meeting her with all the blessed in the coming kingdom of God. Bro. Boutell addressed the afflicted family with words of consolation and good hope. May God bless them in their sorrow, and bring them to eternal joy at last. H. L. H.

HARVEY C. JOYCE.

Killed at Cold Harbor, Va., June 9th, 1864, Harvey C. Joyce, of the 19th Regt. Me. Vols., son of Wm. and Matilda Joyce, of Rockport, Me., aged twenty years, seven months, and ten days.

Also, died in Lincolnville, Me., Aug. 10th, infant daughter of Eld. I. S. and Phebe Richards, aged five months. N. F. NASON.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

From Liverpool the 6th inst.

Admiral Simpson, of the Chilian Navy, has arrived in England, empowered to buy war vessels and order iron-clads.

THE DANISH QUESTION. It is confirmed via Copenhagen, that Denmark completely cedes the Duchies to Austria and Prussia, together with Jutland, Enclaves and the town of Ribe excepted, also that the occupation of Jutland continues until the final conclusion of peace.

The President of the Danish Council communicated the matter to the Rigsraad at a private sitting, and on the following day a motion was offered and supported by a considerable number of members, declaring that the silence with which the announcement was received must not be construed into an approval of the conduct of the Government.

Furloughs have been granted to all undergoing preliminary drill.

The troops were returning to Copenhagen from Funen.

The German papers assert that the Duchies are surrendered in their entirety without reservation, and Austria and Prussia have full liberty to dispose of them.

The Austrian Government has addressed a circular note to its Representatives abroad, giving an analysis of the preliminaries of peace, and stating that all questions relative to the future disposal of the Duchies will be arranged by Austria in concert with the Federal Government.

POLAND. M. Trangoff, the head of the Polish National Government, together with four chiefs of Departments, were hanged on the 5th at the citadel. The sentence of death on eleven other officials of the National Government had been commuted.

TURKEY. The missionary question has been settled between Sir. Henry Bulwer and the Porte. The missionary stations are to be re-opened. The converts for the present are to be sent to the provinces.

The Constantinople correspondent of the London Times dwells upon a new reactionary movement which has sprung up there against the christian missionaries, and which threatens to affect the Turkish Government. Its rise is thus sketched: "It would seem that the movement among the Mussulman population has been for some time gaining ground, although it is but very lately that it has attracted any very serious attention. Some time ago a Turk, a resident in the capital, openly abjured his faith, and, together with the whole of his family, adopted the christian religion. Having qualified himself for ordination, he was received in the Church of England as a minister of the gospel, and has since, under an English name, been preaching and proselytizing among his countrymen. No molestation was offered either to him or to those who assisted him in this work, so long as it was conducted unobtrusively and quietly; but, encouraged perhaps by this tolerance, the missionaries have prosecuted their object in a manner which has attracted the attention of the Government, and is awakening in the breasts of the Ulemans and the old Mussulman party that spirit of fanaticism which was gradually, as far as may be judged by outward signs, disappearing in the country."

DOMESTIC.

New York, Aug. 13. The Herald's Washington special says: "The Commissioner of Indian Affairs is informed by Gov. Evans, of Colorado, that he is satisfied that nearly all the Indian tribes of the Western Plains are combined in a war against the Whites, and that it will be the largest Indian war this country has ever had, extending from Texas to the British Territories.

New York, Aug. 17. The Tribune's Shenandoah valley correspondent sends the following:

August 15. Our forces are now in possession of Strasburg. On our advance toward the town the enemy, whose force consisted of but a skirmish line, fell back out of the town, leaving it in our possession. The enemy has abandoned his works beyond the town, and it is believed that he is retreating toward Mount Jackson.

Gen. Grant's operations on the north bank of James river thus far have been entirely successful. The enemy were completely surprised by the movement and have not yet awakened to its importance.

Washington, Aug. 18. Intelligence has been received here of the operations of the Army of the Potomac up to Tuesday night. Considerable hard fighting was done on that day, and our lines were advanced about a mile.

We have captured four rebel battle-flags and over four hundred prisoners. The dead bodies of two rebel generals are now in our hands.

The colored troops are said to have behaved splendidly, and were in the extreme front all the time.

New York, Aug. 19. The Herald's Washington dispatch states that Gen. Sheridan is pushing up the Shenandoah Valley, and in every encounter from Winchester to beyond Strasburg has driven the rebels. It is probable that the recent unexpected movement of Gen. Grant caused an order of a portion of Lee's army to go into the valley to be countermanded.

Meredith's cavalry completely routed a force of rebel infantry near Front Royal, capturing several hundred prisoners, including forty-seven officers and three battle flags.

Mobile. A Washington dispatch says: "The expectant public need not be disappointed if the present expedition against Mobile should not immediately result in anything of more obvious importance than hermetically sealing that port for all blockading purposes, by holding the mouth of the harbor by forts and a small blockading force. The rebels have a large infantry force at Mobile, which permanent occupation by our army would liberate."

New York, Aug. 20. Rebel dispatches of the 12th, 13th and 15th report a number of houses struck by our shot and shell; that Sherman extended his lines on the 12th, but withdrew to his original position again; that the attack on their centre pickets on the 14th were repulsed; that Federal cavalry dashed into Decatur on the evening of the 15th, moving in the direction of Cobb's mill, indicating another movement against the rebel right, and that lively skirmishing was going on in the rebel centre on the evening of the 15th.

Lee's total force is estimated by our secret service at about 70,000 men.

The Tribune's correspondent with Gen. Grant, under date of the 18th, says there are indications of immediate action on a grand scale.

St. Louis, Aug. 13. Information from the Plains indicates concerted action among the Indians, and preparations for the most extensive war ever yet waged against the whites. Rebels have been among them distributing gold, stating that the Federal Congress had passed a bill depriving them of their land, that the Yankees intend to drive them from the country, urging them to take up arms, and that the South would protect them and give them the West for their special use. For several months past the Indians have been moving their families away from the traveled routes, and it is very seldom that any of them now are seen. Everything leads to the belief that the Indians are determined upon war, and that the determination has been brought about by rebel emissaries.

Gen. Curtis has returned to Fort Leavenworth, after a trip of over 800 miles. New stations have been established on the Santa Fe and Smoky Hill roads, and everything put in trim for vigorous movements against the Indians. During the late robberies by these savages, 200 horses were captured from the government, and 800 from the Santa Fe and Kansas Stage Companies and from citizens.

SUCCESSION TO THE FRENCH THRONE.—Louis Napoleon is reported to be not well, and the baths of Vichy seem to do him no good. He is fifty-six years old, and as he has constitutional difficulties, his demise is an event which may not be many years distant. But it will be an event of vast importance to the destiny of France. The succession to the throne will be left in a curious state. The Bonaparte dynasty, it is well known, is one of the three having claims on the throne of France. The two present outstanding heirs, if we may so call them, to the succession are, the Bourbon grandson of Charles X., generally known as the Count de Chambord, and the eldest grandson of Louis Philippe, the Count de Paris, who was for a time a volunteer in our Union army. Both are exiles from France.

On the other hand, the Bonapartist heir to the throne, on the death of Louis Napoleon, is his son, the Prince Imperial, now in his ninth year. In the event of his death without issue, the throne would go to Prince Napoleon Jerome, and then to his two sons, the one born in 1862 and the other a few weeks ago. If the present Emperor should die before his son reached the years of manhood, it is probable that the empire would be placed under a Council of Regency, with Eugenie at the head, until Napoleon IV. became of age. This would be a critical situation, exposed to plots in the interest of the other claimants to the throne. It is probable, however, that the French army, a consolidated body of 600,000 men, would decide the point of succession beyond, and there is little doubt that they would rally around the son of Louis Napoleon, their victorious commander in the Italian war. —Journal.

END OF THE DANISH WAR.—Denmark has made peace with her conquerors in the recent war. And a hard measure it is they have meted out to the gallant little kingdom, now littler than ever. They take the Duchies of Schleswig, Holstein and Lauenburg, with the islands belonging to them, comprising the whole of the isthmus uniting Denmark proper with the Continent, and containing several excellent ports and two or three strong fortresses.

Thus one-third the Danish territory and more than a third of the population are stricken off at a blow. Denmark might have done better in the Conference, but she counted on Lord Russell's diplomatic intimations of English assistance. She has now found out her mistake. It yet remains to be seen who are to be the chief gainers by her loss. Prussia and Austria nominally take the ceded Duchies, and the former wants to appropriate a large share permanently. But the German Confederation protests, and Austria shows a disposition to yield. The Duke of Augustenburg is waiting to claim the territory for his rule. It will be some time before the difficulties are cleared up. In the mean time neither England nor France are viewing the whole arrangement with any satisfaction.—Journal.

THE CROPS.—The following appears as a leading article in the New York Herald:

"We are receiving good reports from all parts of the country respecting the crops. From New England we learn that the damage to what may be called the staples of that section has not been so great as the exaggerated accounts from particularly exposed localities would lead the country to suppose. The hay crop was very large, and has been secured under circumstances unusually favorable. Probably a fully three-quarters crop of potatoes will be raised, and onions—a large product of New England—promise an extraordinary yield. In the West, of the great staples—wheat and corn—nearly an average crop will be harvested. The chinch bug has not committed half the ravages we were led to suppose, and the late copious rains have probably totally eradicated that pest for the season. In many portions of the West corn and potatoes never looked better at this season or promised a heavier yield. The fruit crop, in spite of all the terrible stories about the ravages of the canker and other worms, will probably be large. Early apples have undoubtedly suffered to some extent; but the winter crop is very promising. Peaches are plenty and fine, and are reaching market in large quantities. On the whole, accounts are decidedly favorable, and we have reason to be thankful that to the horrors of war is not to be added the scourge of famine."

OUR GENERALS.—Gen. Dix is the oldest employed General now prominently before the public. He was born in New Hampshire in 1798; Hunter was born in Washington in 1802; McClernand in Kentucky in 1812; Meade in Spain of American parents in 1816; Canby in Kentucky in 1817; Butler in New Hampshire in 1818; Hooker in Massachusetts in 1819; Sherman in Ohio in 1820; Grant in Ohio in 1822; Franklin in Pennsylvania in 1823; Hancock in the same State in 1824; Burnside in Indiana in 1824; Sigel in Germany in 1824; and Slocum in New York in 1827.

WHAT BECOMES OF ALL THE CENTS?—There was coined at the U. S. Mint in Philadelphia during the month of July 5,360,000 cents and 2,270,000 two-cent pieces. When it is remembered that the cent coinage at the mint has averaged about half a million per month for the last two years, and knowing as we do that there are not quarter enough in circulation for change of even the small fractional paper currency, the question may well be put, "What becomes of all the cents?"

ITEMS.

☞ The gossips in Paris are already arranging the affair of the succession to the throne of Mexico. Maximilian has never been favored with an heir, and to meet the emergency of his not having one, it is said the King of Belgium, the father of the new Empress Charlotte, proposes to marry his second son, the Count of Flanders, to the Princess Anna Murat, and to guarantee to their offspring the right to the new throne.

☞ The nurses sent out by the Army Relief Association wear a neat uniform, consisting of a blue jacket with bright buttons, a tunic of moderate length (Indian style and no hoops), and pants. The costume will be appropriate, modest, and much more convenient than the usual female dress for a nurse in attendance at the hospitals.

☞ A discussion is now going on among English physicians as to the effect of alcoholic stimulant in cases of fever. Some of the best educated and most successful of them contend that a large percentage of the sick treated with alcoholic stimulants die of the treatments.

☞ The last London Spectator says "the star of England is overcast, her allies are plundered, her diplomatists worsted, her statesmen ingloriously foiled;" and it might have added she violates the code of neutrality, assists rebellion, and has joined hands with slavery.

☞ A refugee who came within our lines states that the rebels have ordered all aliens to organize themselves into militia for future service. Those who refuse are imprisoned in Castle Thunder. All are endeavoring to escape from the South, but the difficulties are so great that few succeed.

☞ A robin's nest was found recently in a tree at the Oneida Community, which had interwoven in its structure twenty-nine lady's collars, all of which had been purloined by the birds from the grass plot where they had been placed after the wash.

☞ Charcoal has been discovered to be a sure cure for burns. By laying a piece of cold charcoal upon a burn the pain subsides immediately. The remedy is cheap and simple, and deserves a trial.

☞ Pearl hunting is quite successful in Montpelier, Vt., now-a-day. Over $1500 worth have been found in Winooski river and its branches within a fortnight.

☞ A new telegraph cable has arrived at Fortress Monroe from England. When it is laid, communication between Washington and Grant's army will be perfect.

☞ Orders have been received at the Philadelphia Navy Yard to get the frigate New Ironsides ready for sea with all possible dispatch.

☞ The Chicago Tribune says there is more than double the amount of wheat and corn in store in that city than there was a year ago.

NINE NEVERS.—Never write a letter or a line in a passion.
Never spit or blow your nose on the sidewalk.
Never find a fault until you are as sure as you are of your existence that a fault has been committed.
Never say what you would do under any given circumstances.
Never disparage another by name in a letter.
Never get in a rage.
Never utter a syllable in a passion.
Never refuse to pay a debt when you have the money in your pocket.
Never take physic until you have tried patience.

General Campmeeting at Alton Bay, N. H.

Providence permitting, a general campmeeting will commence at Alton Bay, N. H., Sunday, Aug. 28th, holding through the week and over the following Sunday. Brn. Hastings, Carpenter, Damman and others, are expected the 28th, and Brn. Grant, Ross and others, during the week. We hope also to see a general gathering of the flock. We hope for a great meeting. Come, brethren, to this meeting, full of faith and the Holy Ghost, to work for God and the salvation of souls; and while we may say, as Paul said (Gal. 2: 4, 5), speaking against the Judaizing teachers, "to whom we gave place by subjection, no, not for an hour, that the truth of the gospel might continue with you," we extend the greatest gospel and christian liberty.

Ample accommodations will be provided for board and horse keeping. Board at 75 cents per day; single meal, breakfast or supper, 25 cents; dinner, 35 cents. The boarding department and lunch stand will be under the charge of Bro. J. S. Moulton and Mr. H. W. Herriman, men that are used to this business. Cars and steamers will run as follows, fare half price, or one way:

Passengers from Boston and on the line of the Boston and Maine R. R., by taking trains that leave Boston at 7.30 A. M., 12 M., or 3 P. M., via. Dover and Winnipissegee R. R., will go through to Alton Bay without change of cars.

Passengers from Portsmouth take cars at Portsmouth and Concord depot at 5.45 A. M., or 4.40 P. M. Change at New Market for Alton Bay.

Passengers from Portland and on the line of the P. S. and P. R. R., will take the trains leaving Portland at 8.45 A. M., or 3 P. M. Change cars at Dover.

Passengers from Concord and on the line of the Boston, Concord and Montreal R. R., by taking trains that leave Concord at 10.31 A. M., 3.08 P. M.; Littleton, 9 A. M.; Wells River, 10.12 A. M.; Plymouth, 1.03 P. M.; will connect at Wier's Landing with steamers for Alton Bay.

From Lowell take trains leaving Lowell at 7.30 A. M., and 2.45 P. M. Connect at Lawrence with trains of Boston and Maine Railroad for Alton Bay.

Be sure and bring under beds to fill with straw on the ground, also other bedding. All that can will provide themselves with tents; but let none stay away that are without, for we will see that they have a place to lodge. We have been unable to get the fare reduced for the Vermont and Canada friends further than Wells River, but we hope this will not hinder our seeing a good number of the faithful from that section. Pray for God's blessing.

J. COUCH,
L. BOUTELL,
T. W. PIPER,
J. G. SMITH, } Committee of Arrangements.

☞ Will any of the Lord's stewards make a feast at the Alton Bay campmeeting for the poor, the maimed, the halt and blind, and trust the Lord till the resurrection for their recompense? We will find tent room.

General Western Campmeeting in Amboy, Illinois.

The healthful and life-giving interest of the Advent cause in the West is young and weak. Herculean work is to be done. The whole community is to be aroused by the gospel of the kingdom, and prepared for the judgment, or perish! Let us take upon our very heart of hearts this work, and do it. Do it bravely and heroically. Do not flinch or falter.

Come, then, to the general camp at Amboy, Aug. 29th. Let us sit in council. Let us impart new courage to each other in our work. Let us pray for a revival of the work of God. Let us use the gospel means to save souls from death. Let us not be satisfied without fifty or a hundred conversions and baptisms at Amboy. Pray for this. Expect it. Come to work for it. And let us send out a new inspiration and life, all through this great West, on the truth of the coming kingdom.

Ho, ye sleepers, "hid away among the stuff," come out and show yourselves! Ye timid ones, gather up courage, and come. Lovers of this present world, shake off the earthly, and seek the heavenly and divine. Ye double-minded, come, and get established. Perishing backsliders, come, and eat again at your Father's table. Sinners, come! Come all! Come from beyond the River, the Father of waters. Come! Come from the wide spreading prairies of Illinois. Come from the bluffs, valleys, and prairies of Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota, Michigan, and elsewhere. Come all who can and share in our glorious feast of tabernacles in Amboy.

We shall provide for horsekeeping at reasonable rates. Also, a table will be provided for any that wish board at reasonable rates. Board and lodging also can be got in the village near by. Lumber can be secured for family tents by writing to Eld. D. S. Clark at Amboy. The sides can be made of boards and the roof of cotton cloth. It will not be injured for other use afterwards. The boarding tents will be under the direction of the meeting, and the profits go to sustain the expenses of the camp-ground, etc.

Well, brethren, friends, one and all, we say once more, come up to the feast. Let this be the greatest and best meeting we have ever had in the West.

D. S. CLARK,
J. V. HIMES, } Committee.

HOW TO GET TO AMBOY, ILL.

From Chicago, take the Burlington and Quincy R. R. to Mendota, thence to Amboy by I. C. R. R. (the best route), or the Quincy and Burlington R. R. to La Salle, thence to Amboy by I. C. R. R. Fare $3.35.

Coming from the South, take the Illinois Central R. R. Fare from El Paso, $2.65; from La Salle, $1.20; from Mendota, 65 cents.

From the North, on the Illinois Central R. R. Fare from Dunleith, $3.90; from Freeport, $1.75; Dixon, 45 cents.

Amboy is on the I. C. R. R., between Mendota and Dixon. Bring bedding, and we will find you a place to sleep. Bring in produce, and we will find a place for you to cook. D. S. CLARK.

Campmeeting.

There will be a campmeeting in Wolcott, Ct., commencing Sept. 5th, and continuing through the week and over the following Sabbath, on land owned by Bro. Hector Smith. This meeting will be in a beautiful grove near the highway, with an excellent spring of water on the ground, and with every other convenience desirable to make it an object for the brethren and sisters to come.

This is an entirely new field, and hopes are entertained that both preachers and brethren and sisters will come filled with faith that God will bless the effort to the saving of some. Bro. Smith and wife have stood almost alone in this place for twenty years witnesses to the truth of the Savior's speedy coming, and now ask the co-operation of the brethren while he makes this effort to benefit his fellow men.

We hope there will be a general rally of all the brethren and sisters from the surrounding towns. Come, bringing your tents, and stay through the meeting. Brethren coming by Railroad east or west, will stop at Bristol. This is on the Hartford, Providence, and Fishkill R. R., where teams will be in readiness to carry passengers to the ground. Those coming on the Canal Road will stop at Southington, where they will find conveyance.

Arrangements will be made for board on the ground for 75 cents per day. Also, horse keeping at reasonable prices. The meeting is four miles from Bristol, eight from Waterbury, four from Southington, and easy of access from all the towns. It is hoped there will be a large gathering.

ANSON H. SMITH,
RALPH WILLIAMS, } Committee.

General Campmeeting in Wisconsin.

This meeting is to be attended by Eld. Miles Grant, and a score of other ministers. Let all arrange to erect their tents on Sept. 10th. Hay free for all who bring tents. Stage transportation from Madison to Okee on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, starting early in the morning; and from Baraboo to Okee on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, starting early. Those coming by cars from Prairie Du Chien direction will leave the cars at Mazomanie, and take stage to Upper Sauk, (thence five miles to the meeting), or to Baraboo, thence twelve miles by stage to the meeting. Those coming from the East on the same line, will do the same. Those coming on the Lacrosse line will leave the cars at Killburn City, and take stage to Baraboo,—twelve miles; thence by stage to Okee. Those further East, on the same line, can do the same. Those coming with teams from Dubuque region will come by the way of Mineral Point to Sauk, thence to the meeting. Okee is five miles from where the meeting was last year, and three miles from Lodi.

O. S. KNAPP,
C. STONE,
W. SHELDON, } Committee of Arrangements.

N. B. If it is impossible to bring tents, bring good provision and bedding, and we will try to furnish shelter, provided all such will drop me a line by the 25th of August, at Baraboo, Wis., so that I may know how matters stand. Don't omit to write, stating how many will come with you.

W. SHELDON.

Campmeeting.

There will be a campmeeting in Savoy, commencing Aug. 29th, and continuing one week, on the old battle ground at Bro. Noah Mirick's. Horse keeping will be furnished by Bro. Mirick. There will be a victualing tent on the ground, where food can be had by the week or day, or single meal, or otherwise. As cotton cloth is so high, we do not expect brethren can get tents unless they have old ones. If you have tents, bring them; but come well provided with buffalos, quilts and blankets, and a place will be provided to spread them under shelter.

Come, brethren, let there be a general rally. Come with warm hearts, settle all difficulties, banish all hardness. Our campmeetings are almost done. Soon notice will be given from head quarters to go into camp on the new earth. No preaching brethren are engaged. We want all to come who love God and wait for his Son, and who will give meat in due season—the last crowning truths of the gospel. H. HADLOCK, for the Church.

Campmeeting in Etna, Me.

There will be a campmeeting in Etna, Me., commencing Sept. 5th, and continuing one week, on the land owned by J. S. Rundlett. We shall have a boarding tent on the ground, if we can find a suitable man to furnish one. If you have tents, bring them, and bring a good supply of quilts, blankets and buffaloes, and a place will be provided to spread them under shelter. Teams will be provided to convey those that come in the cars to the camp ground. Ministering brethren and others who love to labor for the salvation of sinners and the upbuilding of the cause of Christ, come in the spirit of Christ, praying that his blessing may attend the meeting. Let us have a grand rally in the name of the Lord. If we can get the fare reduced on the railroad from Bangor and Kendall's Mills to this place, we will give notice.

JOS. S. RUNDLETT,
JOEL MORRELL,
JOHN U. PIPER, } Committee of Arrangements.

Wisconsin Annual Conference.

Let every church send delegates, and every minister be in attendance if possible; otherwise be sure to report by letter. Churches and ministers who have not yet united, should be sure to do so this year, that we may move in order and harmony, and consequently with greater strength for good. Delegates should bring letters of appointment from churches, and ministers with whom we are not acquainted should bring letters of commendation.

Letters may be sent to me at Baraboo, Sauk Co., Wis. W. SHELDON, Secretary of Conf.

THE MORNING COMETH.

When will it be morning? when will it be day?
Says the lone watcher in sleepless unrest;
All through the long hours of darkness he lay,
This querying longing awake in his breast.
When will it be morning?
When will it be day?

Hush! look thee! lone waiting one, out through the gloom,
See ye not the bright beams of orient light,
The sunbeam's rare fingers just opening its tomb,
Preparing a glorious pathway so bright?
It soon will be morning,
It soon will be day!

When will it be morning? when will it be day?
The watcher still crieth, as he wrestles for life
Mid the darkness of sin and frailty of clay,—
Mid hoping, despairing, he follows the strife,
And cries for the morning,
And cries for the day.

When will it be morning? when will it be day?
Comes up from the myriads of martyred ones;
O! when shall the life-giving Spirit have sway,
And loosen death's fetters from Zion's sons?
O when, when the dawn
Of that bright coming day?

Hark! slumberers of dust, now morning doth dawn;
Take courage, brave watcher, give not up the toil;
The DAY STAR, long since by promise foreshown,
From Bethlehem arose thy foes to despoil;—
He liveth forever,
And bringeth that day!

MY WESTERN TOUR.—NO. 6.

My last left me at Frankville, Iowa, and reported "proceedings" to the close of Sabbath, July 24th, on which day I suppose I preached the first sermon in defense of our views ever delivered in that village, which produced considerable excitement, for some said to me in substance, "May we know what this new doctrine whereof thou speakest is? For thou bringest certain strange things to our ears." It became the theme of conversation in the stores, taverns, and other places of gathering. There are but few Adventists in the place, and these lately arrived. They were all very glad of the opportunity of hearing the "Gospel of the Kingdom" once more, and at the close of the Sabbath meeting requested me to remain longer, and I concluded to stay three days longer, giving up a visit I had designed.

Here, as also in the other places visited in this Western field, I was urgently requested to move West and locate my family; one man pledging fifty dollars a year, and others making offers of one kind and another, which I have not as yet accepted. This Western field is large, and in some respects inviting, but the laborers are few. My meetings during the three evenings were well attended, all things considered. One female walked three miles and returned each evening, so great was her interest. Several spoke in the last meeting, and an interest was manifested on the part of some of the unconverted, who listened with manifest feeling, and could a protracted effort be made by some good Advent preacher at Frankville, a permanent interest would be established, we fully believe. May some one go there.

On Wednesday, at six o'clock, P. M., our meeting being at the school-room at eight, I attended the weekly prayer-meeting at the Presbyterian church already referred to, and took such part in the service as I was permitted to, the two ministers of the place being present, and after the meeting I had a very pleasant conversation with the Methodist minister, who inquired how long I would continue my meetings in the place, and said he meant to have attended, but was prevented by sickness in his family. He appears like a Christian.

Thursday morning, July 28th. Parted with friends at Frankville, to labor in other places. Came by stage fourteen miles to Laona, thence twenty miles by rail to McGregor, and found the fare so high on the Mississippi, and the difficulties of traveling so great, on the account of the extreme low water, that I concluded to cross to Prarie Du Chien, and go by rail two hundred and twenty-seven miles to Chicago, then west by the Dixon line to Dekalb, the place of my next appointment. Found this journey quite fatiguing, as the weather was very warm, but passed much of the time in deeply serious reflection, as the 28th of July completed my forty-first year of earthly sojourn, and it became me to retrospect the past, and form purposes for the future. O, the brevity of life!

"Our life as a dream,
Our time as a stream,
Glides swiftly away"——

and the little we can do should be done with our "might." May the Lord strengthen me for the work my hands, my heart, my tongue, may yet find to do. "Bless me, and make me a blessing." I will try to be faithful. Let us be true to our trust.

The country west from Chicago, sixty miles to Dekalb, is one unbroken prairie, almost a perfect level, with but few trees, only those that have been planted about the homes of the farmers by their hands, some having considerable groves obtained in this manner, which grow very fast, as all forms of vegetation do in the rich prairie soil. This is a beautiful country, and the farmers are becoming wealthy, but the curse in varied forms is here, as actually as elsewhere, and society is restless, looking forward for something better, selling and moving West. Oh that they would look in the right direction, look for Jesus, our deliverer, the great restorer, and the kingdom soon to come. Some in this vicinity are thus looking.

On reaching Dekalb, a flourishing village, although a stranger in a strange land, found myself in the midst of warm-hearted, sympathizing friends, who made me welcome to their homes, several of whom I visited. Bro. H. G. McCullock resides here, as the pastor of the church of Adventists, numbering about thirty members, and is highly esteemed by them. In Elder McCulloch, who invited me to his field of labor, I found a faithful coworker, with whom I could feel entire sympathy, and also found a resting-place at his quiet home. May his labors of love be greatly blessed. I know how to feel for men in his condition. Those that think that the ministers of the Word have an easy time of it, and no severe ordeal to pass, are mistaken. But the "trial of our faith is precious," after all. May we be enabled to "endure unto the end," that we may "be saved." Brethren, pray for us.

On the Sabbath I preached three discourses in the Hall, to fair congregations. Elder N. W. Spencer, of Shabbona, was present, and took part in the meetings. There is in Dekalb a variety of religionists, some ten kinds, who more or less frequently have religious services in the village on the Sabbath. I was forcibly reminded, while here, of what Prof. Phinney, of Oberlin, Ohio, wrote some time since. Hear him:

"Nine-tenths, and perhaps I might say, ninety nine-hundredths, of both ministerial effort has lost its power by reason of a sectarian spirit. Go where you please over this great West, and over the East, too, and what do you see? Why! in a small village with a population perhaps just enough to make one respectable congregation, you find half a dozen or more churches, of divers sects, with as many half-starved, and deservedly half-starved ministers, keeping up their sectarian bars, and perhaps undesignedly keeping alive the very prejudice that prevents the success of the gospel. One man comes on to the ground to attend to the Presbyterian or Congregational interests in that place and region. Another must be thrust in to attend to the close Baptist interests, and another to attend to the Freewill Baptist interests.

Next, there must be two or three Methodist ministers to attend to the Episcopal interests and the Wesleyan Methodist interests, and then there must be the high church Episcopal interests, and the low church Episcopal interests; next, but not least, the New School interests, and the Old School interests, and among them all, they seem very generally to attend pretty thoroughly to the devil's interest. I mean that by this arrangement the devil's interest is really in the best way secured; not that they really intended any such thing; God forbid that I should make any such insinuation. They really mean, (as they profess), to secure the interests of their denominations.

But in this way they most effectually hinder the success of the cause of Christ. In this way just those jealousies are kept up which grieve the Spirit, alienate the hearts of christians from each other, weaken the hands of the ministers, disgust the impenitent, and please the devil."

If an Adventist should speak thus plainly, it would be called "harsh," "slanderous," but is it not true to the letter, and in every direction? So it is here. All the "isms" grow in this prolific soil. But seeds of truth have fallen here, and are producing fruit "unto holiness, and in the end the result will be eternal life." Dekalb can boast of having about all the varieties of religion common in this latitude.

As an incident of travel I will mention that while here I called at the residence of a Mormon Elder, John E. Page, with whom I had an interesting conversation. He was one of the original twelve apostles of "Gen. Joseph Smith," the Nauvoo prophet; and as being the oldest of the class, claims that it belongs to him to succeed him in office, and hence has but little sympathy for young Joseph, and none for Brigham Young and his class. He is sanguine in his opinions, and a man of considerable talent, but greatly mistaken, I think, of course. Our interview was pleasant, and I learned some things by it.

My last meeting in Dekalb was the best of the series,—good congregation and interest, and many expressed a wish that I might remain longer, which was not practicable. I trust my visit will prove a blessing to them. Kind brethren and friends remembered my wants, and communicated to me in temporal things liberally, for which they have my hearty thanks and earnest prayers. May God bless them, and cause them to remember their beloved pastor and supply his wants, that he may labor without embarrassment; give him their prayers and sympathy; be united and faithful in God's service everywhere, and so be established, be happy and useful. I trust this will be so.

I go from here to Clinton, fourteen miles distant, to "preach the Word," and expect that God will bless me. Brethren, pray for me, that I may "serve God acceptably" in my missionary labor in this distant, yet important field. Your brother, looking for Christ,

CHARLES P. DOW.

AUTHENTICITY OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.

The following excellent proofs for the truth of the New Testament, have been selected from Dr. W. W. Sleigh's Defensive Dictionary, and are well worthy of a careful reading:—

The New Testament does not abrogate the Old, but it is a fulfillment of it. The council of Laodicea, A. D. 364, did not pretend then first to settle what the canon of the New Testament was, but simply to give their sanction, as a public body, to those books which had from the first century been recognized by separate churches as constituting the sacred canon; and thus to guard the world against imposition and counterfeit books. The books of the New Testament were referred to, both by friends and foes, from the very beginning. Moreover none of the spurious or apocryphal gospels were quoted or referred to (except to censure them) for three hundred years after the birth of Christ.

In corroboration of the antiquity of the New Testament, we may observe,

1. We have a number of manuscripts found in different countries, all anterior to the art of printing.

2. We have some versions of these, written in languages which have not been for many ages spoken in any part of the world.

3. The very style and language in which the Gospels were originally written, prove incontrovertibly that they were written by men who lived in those very times; for it is not the style either of the classic authors, or of the ancient Christian Fathers; but Greek coming from men of Hebrew origin! Who could have forged them? Christian Fathers were for the most part ignorant of Hebrew: they, therefore, could not! And it is equally certain the Greek classical authors could not, for they were heathen.

4. The Gospels were written in Greek, (a peculiar kind of Greek, it is admitted, that is abounding with Hebrew and Syriac idioms,) because Greek was then the most generally spoken language in the East: it was like the French language in modern times in Europe, almost generally understood. And the power with which the apostles were endowed, of speaking in all languages, peculiarly facilitated the spread of the gospel, and the translation thereof into other languages.

5. That the New Testament was written by men who actually lived at the very time we say they did, that is, before the destruction of Jerusalem, that is, within forty years after the resurrection of Christ, is incontrovertibly proved, not only by the preceding internal evidence, but by numerous external circumstances, consisting of no less than forty-one distinct historical events, related by the sacred writers, and corroborated by the works of enemies; collected together by Dr. Lardner, epitomized by Paley.

Paley, after adducing by name the testimony in relation to this subject, states the following allegations as incontrovertibly established by proof:

1. That the historical books of the New Testament, meaning thereby the four Gospels and the Acts of the Apostles, are quoted or alluded to by a series of christian writers, beginning with the apostles, or who immediately followed them, and proceeding in close and regular succession from their time to the present.

2. That when they are quoted or alluded to, they are quoted or alluded to with peculiar respect, as books sui generis; as possessing an authority which belonged to no other books; and as conclusive in all questions and controversies amongst christians.

3. That they were, in very early times, collected into a distinct volume.

4. That they were distinguished by appropriate names and titles of respect.

5. That they were publicly read and expounded in the religious assemblies of the early christians.

6. That commentaries were written upon them, harmonies formed out of them; different copies carefully collated, and versions of them made into different languages.

7. That they were received by christians of different sects; by many Heretics as well as Catholics; and usually appealed to by both sides in the controversies which were in those days.

8. That the four Gospels, the Acts of the Apostles, thirteen Epistles of Saint Paul, the first Epistle of John, and the first of Peter, were received, without doubt, by those who doubted concerning the other books which are included in our present canon.

9. That the Gospels were attacked by the early adversaries of christianity as books containing the accounts upon which the religion was founded.

10. That formal catalogues of authentic Scriptures were published; in all which our present sacred histories were included.

11. That these propositions cannot be affirmed of any other books claiming to be the books of Scripture; by which are meant those books which are commonly called apocryphal books of the New Testament.

The following corroborating testimony is taken from the writings of TWELVE of the GREATEST ENEMIES Christianity ever had: six or seven of whom were actually contemporaries with the apostles; three were contemporaries with the disciples of the apostles; and the remaining two removed from the latter by only one generation. These extracts corroborate the New Testament in no less than TWENTY-FIVE IMPORTANT EVENTS—including the time, country, character, miracles, death and resurrection of JESUS THE CHRIST, etc.

During the reign of Tiberius Cæsar, while Herod was Tetrarch of Galilee, and Pontius Pilate governor of Judea, a country inhabited by a people called Jews, and tributary to the Romans, there appeared in that place a good man, a doer of wonderful works, called Jesus the Christ. He made many disciples both of Jews and Gentiles, who are hence called to this day Christians. He was condemned, by Pilate the Procurator, to the cross, but appeared again alive after three days to his disciples. He enjoined on them the strictest morality. He had a brother, by name James, who was put to death by Herod. Although the sect of which this man was the founder are harmless, and have not been actually convicted of any crime except hatred to our gods, yet they are punished with the greatest severity; many are put to death, some thrown to wild beasts, some burnt alive, and others crucified; but at these punishments some appear to rejoice, declaring they are confident of everlasting happiness. They are detested by all men for their superstition and bigotry; and so they ought, for they will not worship any of our gods, neither the image of Cæsar, nor of Jupiter, Juno, Mars, Bacchus, nor Venus; but only this Christ, who was put to death; but whom they confidently affirm (even after the most excruciating tortures) to be alive.

Notwithstanding all this persecution, and in defiance of the exertions of our government to extinguish this detestible superstition, it has spread rapidly like a pestilence from Judea, where it first commenced, throughout the whole world; and has infected not only the country parts and villages, but our chief towns and cities, even to Rome, where every bad thing finds its way. So that the temples of our gods have been almost totally forsaken, and there are but few purchasers for the sacrifices. At length our great emperor Constantine has been contaminated, and now openly professes christianity. The life of this Christ has been written by his disciples.

He was preceded by another good man, called John the Baptist, who commanded the Jews to exercise virtue, both as to righteousness to one another and piety towards God, and so come to his baptism in water. Herod sent this man to prison, and afterwards had him put to death.

The authors from whose works the substance of the above facts is taken, are—Tacitus, Josephus, Suetonius, Juvenal, the younger Pliny, Martial, Epictetus, Marcus Aurelius, Lucian, Celsus, Porphyry, the Emperor Julian, corroborated by the following friends: Barnabus, Clemens, Polycarp, Irenæus, Ignatius, Quadratus, Justin Martyr, Tertullian, Eusebius.

Still further corroborated by one hundred and twenty other christian authors, within the first four or five centuries of the Christian era. Thus stands the external testimony:—

Sacred writers	7
Enemies	12
Friends	120
Total,	139

Making, on an average, a writer for every three years, for the first four centuries.

N. B. To this may be added the testimony of the Jewish records themselves, as contained in the Talmud.

The Talmuds are two in number, the Babylonish and Jerusalem. They consist of two parts, the Mishna or text, and the Gemara or commentary. They contain a mass of Jewish records, traditions, laws and precepts. The Babylonian Talmud was commenced in Babylon, 311 years before Christ, by Rab. Ase; and after his death was continued by Rab. Maremar, and finally finished A. D. 500, by Rab. Avina; Rab. Abraham, Ben David. Fol. xxxiv. 1.

The little said in these Jewish records respecting Christ has been a matter of astonishment among the learned, and could only be accounted for on the ground that the Jews, not knowing what excuse to make for not receiving their Messiah, deemed to say little or nothing on the subject, the wisest policy. However, they did not pass over, in total silence, the history of Christ, but absurdly ascribed his power of performing miracles, (which they freely admitted), to his having clandestinely acquired the right pronunciation of the SHEMMAPHORESH, or the ineffable name of God, which they say he stole out of the temple! Hence we find neither Jew nor heathen denied for the first four centuries the power possessed by the Divine Friend of Sinners of performing miracles. The latter attributed his power to magic arts! The following extract of some of the particulars relative to Christ, as recorded in the Babylonish Talmud, I have taken from the Hebrew Lexicon, (under the article "kashaph"), of my learned and very talented friend, W. L. Roy, Esq., Professor of the Oriental languages in New York. The reader is referred to the New York discussion, published in that city, for the remarkable and triumphant discomfiture of the infidels on this subject when they brought forward a Jew to deny that the Babylonish Talmud mentioned Christ. No one who was then present can forget the ability, activity and zeal evinced by my friend, Mr. Roy, on that occasion. In his Hebrew Lexicon he writes as follows:—

"KA-SHAPH. The Talmud applies this opprobrious epithet to our blessed Savior. It mentions Jesus of Nazareth in the following passages: Tal. Jerus. Schab. fol. 14, 14; Tal. Babyl. Sanh. fol. 107, 2; Tract Avoda, Sara., fol. 16; Tal. Babyl. Sanh., chap. vi. 4, fol. 43. The disciples of Jesus—Matthew, James and John—are named in particular in Tal. Babyl. Sanh., chap. vi. fol. 43. The power of working miracles is ascribed to them in Avoda Sara., fol. 27. 2. The crucifixion of Jesus of Nazareth, and the hour of the day at which it took place, are expressly mentioned. It is stated to have been in the evening (afternoon) of the Pesach (Passover) at three o'clock. Tal. Babyl. Sanh., fol. 43. 67. 1. His wonderful miracles, such as healing the sick, cleansing the lepers, and raising the dead to life, (particularly Lazarus,) are admitted in Tal. Babyl. Sanh. fol. 107. 2; Schab. fol. 104. 2; Jerus. Tal. Schab. fol. 13. 1. A miraculous cure is affirmed to have been wrought by one of his disciples, in the name of Jesus, on the son of Rab. Joses, son of Levi. Tal. Jerus. Schab. fol. 14. 4, Avoda, fol. 40. 4. The Talmud, however, imputes the power by which he wrought those miracles to magic."

Thus we perceive that several of the principal transactions, including the crucifixion of Christ, some of his miracles, and also those of his disciples, are mentioned in this credible record, kept by the most acrimonious enemies christianity ever had.—Ex.

LINES.

Harsh words, how quick they crush to earth
The newly opened flower!
And joys that scarcely have their birth,
Wither beneath their power.

Speak kindly to the erring one,
Seventy times seven forgive;
Perchance unkindness made him rove,
He yet may turn and live.

Speak kindly! haste not to condemn
The brother overcome;
If pardoning love you'd free obtain,
Let mercy then be shown.

Speak soberly! those trifling words
The Holy Spirit grieve;
Then let each word, savored with grace,
Tell that in Christ you live.

He that offendeth not in word,
Is perfect, and shall be
Clothed with our Savior's righteousness—
A robe of purity.

For the World's Crisis.

IDLE WORDS.

In these evil and portentous times, when war is deluging the world with blood, and thousands upon thousands of beings created in God's likeness are hourly experiencing death, mutilation, and lifelong disfigurement, to gratify individual rapacity, and national pride,—when vice of the most revolting and dangerous descriptions is everywhere and alarmingly prevalent, and the love of many is waxing cold,—it behooves us as christians, and as highly important in the way of example to those who are unfortunately without a hope, to attend more faithfully than ever to those precious sayings of our Lord and Savior, the repetition and observance of which are esteemed even among professors of our holy religion unfashionable and obsolete.

In the matter of idle words, we cannot, as heirs of a kingdom in which nothing impure, unclean, or unseemly may dwell or effect an entrance, be too careful or over-scrupulous in the selection of our words, in our style of conversation. When we remember what our Pattern, our Priest, our prospective King said on this subject, we should as lovers of him and of his appearing be particularly anxious and persevering, in rallying all our strength of will in conjunction with his grace, in combatting so pernicious an evil so manifestly fraught with peril to our immortal interests, —whether it be an innate principle, the effects of habit, or, what appears to me as still worse, the result of a man-fearing, man-pleasing policy.

Methinks I hear many of the brethren,—though they may not all belong to one fold—I am addressing no particular sect,—exclaim, "It is frequently unavoidable, or it is oftentimes indispensable in order to find favor with our neighbors, our acquaintance, our customers, or the public, to substitute frivolity for decorum,—or, when we are in Rome we must do as Romans do. Both of which apologies for the commission of a glaring error may for the sakes of emphasis and brevity be characterized as the devil's parables.

When our Savior said, "If any man love me he will keep my sayings," he did not add by way of compromise, Providing those sayings are acceptable to those in whose society you may find youself. No; we are to keep his commandments inviolate, regardless of what man may do or say unto us.

Said our Savior, "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." Can silly speeches, and indelicate allusions, or great, swelling words have their origin in a heart inspired with a love for Christ and his sacred teachings? O! my friends, and especially those who are looking for the final advent of Him who loves us, and who washed away our sins in his own blood,—I appeal to you. Knowing as we do that these things whereof we read must shortly come to pass, let us have our conversation in heaven, from whence also we look for the Lord Jesus Christ. Even so, Lord Jesus, quickly come.

TO MINISTERING BRETHREN.

In order to prevent confusion, and to promote the spiritual welfare of this church, we would submit the following to the brethren in the ministry, who may wish to visit us:

1st. Write to the Clerk of the church always. Any communication to any other Bro. in the church will not be considered as addressed to us.

2nd. Defer your appointment until you have an answer from the Clerk. An answer from any one else will not be considered as from the church.

We wish no ministers to make application to come who belong to the class of hobby riders. We wish men who are studying to be what Paul urged upon Timothy. 2 Tim. 14: 16.

Again, we have long believed it to be the best plan for preachers visiting a place to arrange so as to stay one, two, three or four weeks. These flying visits so common among our preachers we believe to be unprofitable. Come and stay long enough to ascertain the spiritual wants of the church, labor to benefit and build up, not to distract and divide, urging the importance of keeping the unity of the Spirit in the bonds of peace.

Approved by the church worshiping at Rocky Brook, Aug. 7th, 1864.

CHAS. F. DIXON, Clerk.

☞ Never affect to be other than what you are. Learn to say, "I do not know," and I "cannot afford it," with most sonorous distinctness and emphasis. Men will then believe you when you say, "I do know," and "I can afford it." Never be ashamed to pass for what you truly are, and who you are, and you are on solid ground. A man is already of consequence in the world when it is known that we can implicitly rely on him—that when he says he knows a thing, it is so.

SPIRITUALISM.

The following honest and truthful confession is copied from the Review and Herald of Jan. 27th, 1863. It needs no comment, but will explain some things relative to the writer's position, and the labor that has been bestowed upon him. We have never known one so fully crazed by the power of the Devil which attends Spiritualism, to be fully restored to soundness of mind and faith. Let others take warning.—Review and Herald.

"NOT A UNIVERSALIST, SPIRITUALIST, NOR AN INFIDEL.

BRO. WHITE:—I see that reports are going the rounds that I have renounced Adventism, and am preaching, some say Universalism, others say Spiritualism and Infidelity. These false reports I wish to silence, and ask the privilege to correct them through the Review.

It is true that I held a discussion in the village of Paw Paw, Mich., with a trance-speaker, or rather with some demon professing to be the spirit of Mr. Dowing, speaking through W. F. Jamieson. I now doubt the propriety of discussing with such spirits. It is also true that I went to engage in that discussion without the counsel of my preaching brethren; that I went alone, and too much in my own strength, into a community where we have no church, but where Spiritualism has a strong hold. This I now regard as very imprudent in me. God's Holy Spirit was grieved, and I was left, in a measure, to fall under the power of the Devil, and the seducing charms of Spiritualism.

There was not only an unseen intelligence speaking through Mr. Jamieson, but there was an influence over the audience, and I am now satisfied, over myself, such as I had never before witnessed; the power of which was so strong that for several days I was not only bewildered, but was really not myself. I imagined that I was outgrowing my Advent clothes; that I was getting upon higher ground than that occupied by my brethren. In this state of mind I made some concessions to certain friendly Spiritualists, which I now very much regret.

I now have in my own unfortunate experience the proofs of the deceptive power of Spiritualism which I have warned others against from God's Word for the past five years, and can better warn others to beware of it. The arguments given through Mr. Jamieson were no stronger than those used by normal speakers with whom I have debated, but the influence I was not prepared to resist. I hope to profit by the things I have suffered, and hereafter not be ignorant of the devices of Satan.

I am well nigh recovered from the snare of the Devil ingeniously set for me. Since the discussion referred to, I have had great freedom in presenting the evidences of christianity, and have been happy to see several infidels soundly converted.

TAKE CARE OF YOUR THOUGHTS.

Sin begins in the heart. If you keep your thoughts pure, your life will be blameless. The indulgence of sinful thoughts and desires, produces sinful actions. When lust hath conceived, it bringeth forth sin. The pleasurable contemplation of a sinful deed is usually followed by its commission. Never allow yourself to pause and consider the pleasures or profit you might derive from this sin. Close your mind against the suggestion at once, as you would lock and bolt your doors against a robber. If Eve had not stood parleying with the devil, and admiring the beautiful fruit, the earth might have yet been a paradise.

Your imagination is apt to paint forbidden pleasures with gay and dazzling colors. It is the serpent's charm. Gaze not upon the picture. Suffer not the intruder to get a lodgment. Meet the enemy at the threshold, and drive it from your heart. As a rule, the more familiar you become with sin, the less hateful it appears; so that the more completely you preserve your mind from unholy and wicked thoughts the better. Avoid the society where obscenity or blasphemy is heard. Cultivate the society of the virtuous. Read nothing which is unchaste or immoral. Make a covenant with your eyes. Familiarize not your mind with the loathsome details of crime. Never harbor malicious or envious thoughts. Direct your thoughts toward pure and holy subjects. Contemplate the character of the spotless and perfect Son of God. Keep your spirit untainted, your thoughts uncontaminated, so shall your life be virtuous. As a man thinketh so is he. Take care of your thoughts —the actions will take care of themselves.

HINT TO MOTHERS—SPEAK LOW.

I know some houses, well built and handsomely furnished, where it is not pleasant to be even a visitor. Sharp, angry tones resound through them from morning till night, and the influence is as contagious as measles, and much more to be dreaded in a household. The children catch it and it lasts for life, an incurable disease. A friend has such a neighbor within hearing of her house when doors and windows are open, and even Poll Parrot has caught the tune and delights in screaming and scolding, until she has been sent into the country to improve her habits. Children catch cross tones quicker than parrots, and it is a much more mischievous habit. Where mothers set the example, you will scarcely hear a pleasant word among the children in their plays with each other. Yet the discipline of such a family is always weak and irregular. The children expect just so much scolding before they do anything they are bid; while many a home where the low, firm tone of the mother, or a decided look of her steady eye is law, never think of disobedience, either in or out of her sight.

O, mothers, it is worth a great deal to cultivate that "excellent thing in a woman"—a low, sweet voice. If you are ever so much tired by the mischievous or wilful pranks of the little ones, speak low. It will be a great help to you to even try to be patient and cheerful, if you cannot wholly succeed. Anger makes you wretched, and your children, also. Impatient, angry tones, never did the heart good, but plenty of evil. Read what Solomon says of them, and remember he wrote with an inspired pen. You cannot have the excuse for them that they lighten your burdens any—they make them only ten times heavier. For your own as well as your children's sake, learn to speak low. They will remember that tone when your head is under the willows. So, too, would they remember a harsh and angry voice. Which legacy will you leave to your children?—N. Y. Chronicle.

PILGRIM STANDFAST.

A staunch old pilgrim he was, as ever set out for the celestial city. No persecutions, nor any allurements of pleasure could turn him aside from the right way. Such a pilgrim was sturdy John Knox, who, when the lords of Queen Mary's court bade him stop his preaching, giving him but one alternative—"silence or the gallows"—would make answer: "My lords, you are mistaken if you think you can intimidate me by threats to do what conscience and God tell me I shall never do. Be it known to you that it is a matter of no importance to me, when I have finished my work, whether my bones shall bleach in the winds of heaven, or rot in the bosom of the earth."

The same Standfast blood beat strong in the heart of the martyr Hooper, when he went with a firm step to the fatal stake. "I have come hither to end this life," he said, "because I will not gainsay the truth I have formerly taught you." And when a pardon from the Queen was set before him, he cried out with a determined voice, "If you love my soul, take it away, take it away." The price of that pardon, he well knew, must be a denial of the faith. So Bishop Latimer, when summoned before "the bloody Mary," said, "I go as willingly to London, to give an account of my faith, as ever I went to any place in my life." As he rode through Smithfield—that spot which had such a baptism of martyr's blood—he said, "Smithfield has groaned for me a long time."

Perhaps it is quite as hard for Standfast to pursue his integrity amidst the temptations and pleasures of the world, as in the fires of persecution. Where persecution has slain its thousands, worldliness has slain its tens of thousands.

A poor woman in India, who had embraced christianity, was offered back the jewels and money which had been taken from her, on condition that she would return to her old religion; but she replied: "Oh, no, I would rather be a poor christian than a rich heathen."

And still another: Mr. Judson tells us of one who was very fond of her jewelry, yet desired to follow Christ. When he asked her if she were willing to sacrifice them for his sake, she was for a time disturbed; but at length, taking off the gay necklace, which was her especial pride, she said, with sweet and touching simplicity: "I love Christ more than this."

Can we all, when the world holds out its glittering baits to us, lay them aside with the same steadfast spirit, and say with her, "I love Christ more than these?"

GLUE FOR READY USE.—We find the following receipt in the Maryland Farmer and Mechanic.—To any quantity of glue use common whiskey instead of water; put both together in a bottle, cork it tight, and set it away for three or four days, when it will be fit for use without the application of heat. Glue thus prepared will keep for years, and it is at all times fit for use, except in very cold weather, when it should be set in warm water before using. To obviate the difficulty of the stopper getting tight by the glue drying in the mouth of the vessel, use a tin vessel with the cover fitted tight to the outside, to prevent the escape of the spirit by evaporation. A strong solution of isinglass, made in the same manner, is an excellent cement for leather.

ON THE DEATH OF LITTLE EDGAR WHARFF.

He smiled when dying; it may be
That angels whispered, hovering round;
That notes of angels filled his ears,
When he could hear no mortal sound.

He smiled when dying; sweet the thought
That holy angels gazed on him,
And smiled to see him pass away
Without one single stain of sin.

He smiled when dying; lovely babe,
Released from pain and suffering here;
When Jesus takes his jewels home,
Then little Edgar will be there.

"I HA'N'T ANY MOTHER LIKE THE REST."

The weather had been unusually mild for two or three days before Christmas, so that the ice of the big pond was rather rotten; but daring Harry thought he could brave it; 'twould be a pity to spoil the fun now, and so many admiring eyes fixed upon him, too! He made a bold dash—his little figure, upright and graceful, was balanced upon the ice. Then there was a crash! the dangerous cake gave way; and with a loud cry, Harry fell amid the rush of ice and water.

The group at the window seemed for a moment paralyzed with horror. Then there was a scattering for the pond, and a screaming from one and all. "He's under the water! —father! father! Harry's going under the ice!" Every particle of color had gone from Farmer May's face; he trembled in every limb, and threw up his hands wildly. His strength seemed to have ebbed away in the tide of grief. "O help me!" he cried. "My boy—my boy! and I can't swim!" "But I can!" shouted a voice, brave and clear as an angel's almost. "I can swim, and I'll save him!" and dashing past weeping Mother May, Joseph Craig plunged headlong into the freezing water, swimming for dear life. How they watched him, breathless and excited, their hearts hanging by a thread as it were! How they shuddered when they saw him grasp once, twice, at a dark object under the water, and then rise, his face gashed and bleeding from contact with the ugly ice corners. He was some way out now, and made a third dive; then there was a faint hurrah, and breasting the ice, he just managed to swim to the bank, with one arm holding up poor Harry.

"My child! my boy!—thank God!" cried the happy parent, folding him in his arms. They bore him to the roaring fire in the sitting room, and rubbed him until he opened his eyes and smiled. Very soon he was able to sit up, and laugh and talk naturally. And where was Joseph all this time? Sitting on the kitchen floor, squeezing his wet clothes and rubbing the great painful gashes in his arms and face, from which the blood was still streaming.

"Joseph!" He listened; it was Farmer May's voice, unusually soft and tender. The poor apprentice lad shook like a leaf; before he was aware a strong arm came round behind him, lifting him from the floor. He found himself as if by magic, sitting beside Harry, and Harry's bright head resting on his bosom, with great tears rolling down the grateful boy's cheeks.

"If there's anything you wish for now, Joseph," said the farmer, huskily—"anything you'd like to have, just name it, my boy. You have saved us many a year of sorrow, and given us cause to remember this Christmas before all others. Come, speak out, my boy." How could he speak, when he felt so happy? Twice he tried to gulp down the sobs rising in his throat, sobs of joy they were. "Only be kind to me, sir," he gasped out at length; "only drop kind word now and then, for I ha'n't any mother like the rest."

How was it now with Farmer May? He felt all at once what great lack there had been in his otherwise kindly heart. It quite broke him down, that appeal to his better nature; so he leaned on Mother May's shoulder, and sobbed aloud. Joseph sat as if in a dream; his beautiful Christmas had come at last, no more hunger and thirsting of spirit now. How the joyous red sparks of firelight ran up the white wall, the whole room shining! Harry squeezing him tightly with one arm, and Tiny, her cheeks flushed with crying, thrusting her doll into his lap, whispering, "There, there! keep it, Joseph, I don't want it, indeed, and double deed, I dont," and then running away in the corner, her face turned to the wall, lest by looking back she might repent the immense sacrifice.

Well—well, tears cannot always last, and very soon the May family were bright and smiling again, Joseph the happiest of all. And when the Christmas dinner was set on, and all the friends were gathered about it, they made a place for Joe among the children; and Mother May could not heap his plate enough with the good things; and the poor lad felt as if he were more ready to cry than laugh, at all the kindly words which every one had for him.

Oh, what a blessing there is often in a few kind words!

THE SHORTENED VISIT.

"Why have you come home so soon?" said Mrs. More to her daughter Julia. "Was not Susan at home?"

"Yes ma'am," said Julia, "she was at home."

"Why did you leave her; I hope you have not left in a quarrel?"

"No, mother, I did not leave in a quarrel, but I left to avoid getting into a quarrel. Susan was so unreasonable that I was afraid that if I stayed I should be provoked to quarrel with her."

"Did you tell her why you left her?"

"Yes, mother. At first I was going to tell her that perhaps you wanted me, but then I thought that would not be right, so I told her the real reason."

"You did right, my daughter. We should always avoid temptation when we can with propriety; when we cannot avoid it we must pray for grace to resist it.

A TOUCHING INCIDENT.

A little boy had died. His body had been laid out in the darkened room, waiting to be laid in the cold, lone grave, His afflicted mother and bereaved little sister went in to look at the face of the precious sleeper—for his face was beautiful even in death. As they stood gazing on the face of one so beloved and cherished, the little girl asked to shake his hand. At first the mother thought it was not best, but the child repeated the request, and seemed very anxious about it. She took the cold, bloodless hand of her dead boy, and placed it in the hand of his weeping sister.

The dear child looked at it a moment, caressed it fondly, and then looked up to her mother, through tears of love, and said—

"Mother, this hand never struck me."

What could have been more touching and lovely?

TWO GOOD BOYS.

Amos and Andrew were little boys, and Fanny sent two presents to them: one was a little soldier's cap, and the other a book; but she did not tell who was to have the soldier's cap and who the book. Their father showed the presents to Andrew and Amos. Both looked at the cap as if both wanted it. "Choose," said the father, holding them up.

"I choose the book," said Amos; "Andrew may have the cap."

"I choose the book," said Andrew; "Amos may have the cap."

"Do you both choose the book?" asked the father.

"No, sir; we both choose the soldier's cap," said the little boys, "but we both rather give up to the other."

Was not that a lovely spirit? What a happy home must that be where two such little boys live.

THE BETTER WORLD.

An English piece, as sung by Bro. and Sr. Mansfield at Wilbraham Campmeeting, Sunday, Aug. 28th, 1864. (Author unknown.)

There is a better world, they say,—
O, so bright! O, so bright!
Where sin and want are done away,—
O, so bright! O, so bright!
Music fills the balmy air,
And angels with bright wings are there,
With harps of gold in mansions fair,—
O, so bright! O, so bright!

No clouds there pass along the sky,—
Happy land! Happy land!
No tear-drop glistens in the eye,—
Happy land! Happy land!
They drink the gushing streams of grace,
And gaze upon the Savior's face,
Whose glory fills that holy place,
Happy land! Happy land!

And wicked things, and beasts of prey,
Come not there!—come not there!
And ruthless death, and fierce decay,
Come not there!—come not there!
There all are holy, all are good,
And hearts unwashed in Jesus' blood,
And guilty sinners, unrenewed,
Come not there!—come not there!

And though we're sinners every one,
Jesus died! Jesus died!
And though our crown of peace is gone,
Jesus died! Jesus died!
We may be cleansed from every stain,
We may be crowned with bliss again,
And in that land of pleasure reign,—
Jesus died! Jesus died!

Then, parents, sisters, brothers, come!
Come away!—come away!
We long to reach our Father's home,
Come away!—come away!
O, come! the time is slipping past,
And men and things are fleeting fast,
The Judge will surely come at last,—
Come away!—come away!

This world is—oh, so dark and drear,
Take us there!—take us there!
We never can be happy here,—
Take us there!—take us there!
O, listen to that music sweet;
It comes so rich from yonder seat,
Where all the good in glory meet,—
Take us there—take us there!

For the World's Crisis.

THE SEVEN HEADS.—NO. 1.

"And I stood upon the sand of the sea, and I saw a beast rise up out of the sea, having seven heads and ten horns, and upon his horns ten crowns, and upon his heads the name (names, margin) of blasphemy."—REV. 13: 1.

We learn from this verse that the governments symbolized by the seven heads were in some way connected with a system of blasphemy; and by a further examination of this chapter, as found recorded in the fifth, sixth, and seventh verses, we learn also that after the union of these two powers was complete, some of their leading characteristics consisted in blaspheming the name of God, making war against the saints and overcoming them. We also learn that power was given them to continue this blasphemous and destructive work for "forty and two months" (1260 years.)

Again, by an examination of the seventeenth chapter, we find a record of an association so exactly like the one in the thirteenth chapter, under consideration, they must be the same. This blasphemous power is symbolized in this chapter by a "woman drunken with the blood of saints, and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus." She is also represented as being united with the kings, or governments of the earth, in accomplishing this bloody work. The second verse reads as follows: "With whom the kings of the earth have been made drunk with the wine of her fornication." As it is admitted by almost all Bible students that the woman spoken of in this chapter symbolizes the Roman Catholic Church, I shall not be under the necessity of arguing that point in this article, but shall only need to refer to that power by way of aiding me in ascertaining what governments are symbolized by the seven heads, or, in other words, what kings are referred to in the verse quoted above, who are said to have committed fornication with her.

By reference to the tenth verse, we learn that the kings (or governments) with whom this woman has been committing fornication, and together with whom she has been making war on the saints, consist of seven; hence I understand that the seven kings or governments spoken of in this chapter are the same as those symbolized by the seven heads of the thirteenth chapter. The tenth verse referred to above reads as follows: "And there are seven kings; five are fallen, and one is, and the other is not yet come; and when he cometh he must continue a short space." We learn from this verse that those kings or governments were not all upon the stage of action at one time, but they had their rise, or became the dominant power, each in succession, as the one before it fell or became extinct, till the seven had passed the stage of action, as brought to view in the prophecy.

We have now learned from the thirteenth and seventeenth chapters that the apostate church of Rome was to be united with seven kings, or governments, for the accomplishment of her wicked work of destroying the saints of God; and that the seven kings were to appear upon the stage of action, one at a time, for a period of 1260 years; therefore three questions will naturally arise: First, what kingdoms, dynasties, or governments, are symbolized by the seven heads? Second, at what point of time in the history of the world did they have their rise? Third, when did they fall, or become extinct, as brought to view in the prophecy?

In answering these questions I shall be as brief as possible, and make my views plain. I am aware many brethren have published their views concerning the subjects contained in the above questions, and they have nearly all differed more or less in their conclusions. While I thank them for what light I have gained from their investigations, I kindly ask them to read my conclusions, for I have been carefully investigating history to ascertain the correct answers to the above questions. I deem it of great importance to the church at the present time that we correctly understand which kings are symbolized by those seven heads, and the time occupied by them, as brought to view in the prophecy; for it involves an understanding of the beginning and ending of the 1260 days (years) period, and shows us our near proximity to the judgment.

First. The first head symbolized the Eastern or Greek empire. I need only show in this article the point of time where it became connected with the apostate church, and consequently was recognized as the first head, as brought to view in the prophecy. The historian says:

"As soon as Justin, the emperor of the east, had vested his nephew Justinian with the imperial purple (A. D. 527), he (Justinian) aspired to be the legislator of mankind. Therefore, in the first year of his reign he appointed Tribonian, with eleven of the most eminent lawyers in his realm, to revise and abridge, according to his dictation, the laws of the nations that had existed before him. This work was accomplished in fourteen months; and the laws thus made were denominated the Code of Justinian." Concerning this code the historian says: (Milman's Latin Christianity, vol. 1., p. 485)—"That Justinian was a Christian emperor appears in the front of his jurisprudence. * * * The Christian emperor treats all mankind as his subjects, in their religions as well as in their civil capacity. The emperor's creed, as well as his edicts, is the universal law of the empire. * * * His code opens with the Imperial Creed on the Trinity, and the Imperial Anathema against Nestorious, Eutyches, and Apollinaris. Justinian declares, indeed, that he holds the doctrine of the church of the apostles and their successors. He recognizes the authority of the four great councils. He even recognizes the supremacy of the Roman church, and commands all churches to be united with her."

Again, page 452—"Justinian aspires to be the legislator, not of the empire alone, but of Christendom; enacts ordinances for the whole church, and established the doctrines of Nice and Chalcedon as the religion of the empire." Page 513;—"The Justinian Code defines all as heretics who do not believe the Catholic faith. Gibbon, vol. 4, p. 531;—"In the creed of Justinian the guilt of murder could not be applied to the slaughter of unbelievers, and he piously labored to establish with fire and sword, the unity of the christian faith. * * * In the first years of his administration, he signalized his zeal as the disciple and patron of orthodoxy. The reconciliation of the Greeks and Latins established the tome of St. Leo as the creed of the emperor and the empire; the Nestorians and Eutychians were exposed, on either side, to the double edge of persecution; and the four synods of Nice, Constantinople, Ephesus and Chalcedon, were ratified by the code of a Catholic lawgiver."

I think I have now quoted sufficient to show that the code of Justinian established the supremacy of the Catholic church. Therefore if we can find the date for the year in which this code became the law of the empire, I think we may safely say that we have found the date for the commencement of the 1260 days. On this point I will say that Gibbon (vol. 4) gives the date for the accomplishment of this work in A. D. 529. In Encyclopedia Metropolitana, vol. 3, p. 410, the historian says: "The Justinian code was solemnly proclaimed as the universal law of the empire in A. D. 529." Again, Blair's Chronological Tables, p. 129;—The Justinian code was promulgated in A. D. 529, April 7th, to be in force on the 16th." Concerning the manner of transmitting this code to his subjects throughout the empire, Gibbon (vol. 4, p. 331) says, "The new code of Justinian was honored with his name, and confirmed by his royal signature. Authentic transcripts were multiplied by the pens of notaries and scribes; they were transmitted to the magistrates of the European, the Asiatic, and afterwards to the African provinces; and the law of the empire was proclaimed on solemn festivals at the doors of the churches."

Now although the books containing those laws, called the Pandicts and Institutes, were not published till A. D. 583, and alterations and additions made thereto in A. D. 535, yet it appears plain to me, from the above positive statements in history, that the Justinian code of laws was completed, and attained to be the universal law of the empire, in A. D. 529. If so, then that must be the date for the union of the church and state, the supremacy of the Catholic church; and consequently the date for the commencement of the 1260 days. In this same year (A. D. 529), the emperor issued an edict, wherein "The insufficient term of three months was assigned for the conversion or exile of all heretics." See Gibbon, vol. 4, p. 528; also Blair's Chronological Tables, p. 229.

It will be remembered that I have shown in a former article that, while the eastern Roman or Greek empire maintained the imperial title of the Cæsars, that nation continued to exist as the first head of the seven seen on the leopard beast; and again that the Greek empire was termed the first beast by virtue of its being the first head of the seven; for, permit me to repeat, the first mention we have of the term first beast is found in the thirteenth chapter of Rev., twelvth verse; where we read that it was "the first beast whose deadly wound was healed." Now as we are told in the third verse of the same chapter that it was one of the seven heads who received as it were the deadly wound, and its deadly wound was healed, it is evident that the terms "head" and "beast," when used as symbols of the same government, are used interchangeably; even as they are in the third verse, where we are told that when the head was healed "all the world wondered after the beast"; and it would seem reasonable that a beast could not exist without a head. And permit me still further to repeat, if the above reasoning is correct, then it must have been the first head who received the deadly wound and its deadly wound was healed.

Again, when the eastern Roman or Greek empire had become so weakened that it could no longer maintain the imperial government, as a matter of course it lost the imperial title, and with it the power to maintain its position as connected with the apostate church. And again, as I have shown in process of time the imperial title became vested in the western Roman or German empire, it is evident the German empire had at that time become the most powerful nation in Europe; and consequently the German nation became the image to the first beast, or Greek nation; because it occupied from that time onward the same position in its relation to the papal church which the Greek nation had formerly occupied. Therefore, as there is no intimation in the prophecy that the imperial title was again transferred to any other nation, during the supremacy of the apostate church, it is evident the remaining six of the seven heads must be found among the most powerful ruling houses, or dynasties, which in succession were regularly elected to the imperial throne of Germany. Koch, the historian, says: "From the time of Otho First, of the Saxon house, the Germans held it to be an inviolable principle that as the imperial dignity was strictly united with the royalty of Italy, kings elected by the German nation should at the same time, in virtue of that election, become kings of Italy, and emperors."

But before I proceed to show which they were, I wish to make a few remarks concerning them.

First, after the death of Charlemagne, his successors became so weak in the exercise of the imperial government of the empire that they had allowed the most powerful among the vassals to become almost independent; consequently there was a separation of the empire into several independent kingdoms, which became the appendages of several sons, in general the most deadly enemies to each other; consequently they became a system of hostile and conflicting states, of which the boundaries, the powers, the wealth, the resources, were in incessant change and vicissitude.

These states were divided and subdivided, until at one time there were one hundred separate temporalities, with their ruling house or dynasty. See Kohlrausch's History of Germany; also Milman's Latin Christianity, and the Cyclopedia of Europe.

Again, in consequence of the divisions mentioned above, after the extinction of the Carlovingian race, the German empire became an elective monarchy. The electors came together at the appointed place, and elected the most powerful prince among them to mount the imperial throne, and be their common sovereign. These sovereigns, with their successors, were invested with the imperial dignity, and were styled the Emperors of the Holy Roman German empire.

The reason of my writing the above is to bring out a point, which is this: that during the reign of several of these German imperial houses, the regular succession was frequently interrupted by princes from different ruling houses usurping the imperial throne, after being elected by opposing contending parties during times of terrible disorder and anarchy, and also during the minority of the heir to the throne. Sometimes there were two emperors elected at once, at another there were three, while at another time there were twenty years during which no prince could be found who would accept the imperial dignity, on account of the anarchy that prevailed in the empire. Therefore I understand, in order to be successful in finding the right ruling houses, or dynasties, symbolized by the last six of the seven heads, and rightly arranging them, we should begin with the Carlovingian dynasty, trace it out and find with whom and at what point of time it became extinct; then find which is the next regularly elected power to the imperial throne, trace it out till we find it has become extinct, and so on until we have found the required number; and although princes from different houses may usurp the imperial throne, or be placed there by usurpers during the life of the regularly elected house, yet in the prophecy they are not noticed; for the prophecy represents that they have their rise, continue for a time, and fall, each in succession; and a power can not be said to have fallen, in the sense of the prophecy, until it has become extinct.

But lest some may think the view I take may not be correct, I will refer them to what is said concerning the rulers of the Greek empire, during the time which all agree that it was recognized as the first head; which was from the time of Justinian, certainly as late as to that of Leo III.; during which time there were five usurpers who mounted the imperial throne, one of which maintained the imperial authority for one hundred years. Therefore I understand, as long as the imperial title is vested in the Greek nation, and it stands connected with the papal church, it is recognized in the prophecy as the first head, without reference to how many different heads may have usurped the imperial title during that time.

So also of the remaining six heads; as each in succession, after the extinction of the Carlovingian dynasty, became elected to the imperial throne and government of Germany, they were also constituted by that act emperors of Rome (as was Charlemagne), and therefore were styled Emperors of the Holy Roman German empire (see Cyclopedia of Europe); therefore I understand they were necessarily united to the Church of Rome on their election to the imperial throne of Germany.

I AM WEARY.

I am weary, and would rest
Far from earth's sorrow and sin,
With all the saints, in the land of the blest,
Away from the world's rude din.

Yes, I would rest by crystal streams,
Rippling through pastures green;
Where life's fair tree is blooming bright,
And fadeless flowers are seen.

Where living saints, in white array,
Roaming o'er streets of gold,
Unto the Lamb their praises sing,
In strains that can't be told.

I am weary of sorrowing earth,
Where loved ones fade and die,
Where death a tyrant ever reigns
To sunder each precious tie.

I am weary, and long for rest;
O! when will the moment come
That Christ shall gather his elect,
And bear them safely home?

THE TWO WITNESSES.

There are various opinions as to what is meant by the Two Witnesses. I have never been altogether satisfied with the interpretation which is generally given of this scripture and its connections, it being too intricate or mystical. I am glad the subject has been brought up of late, for we wish light upon it. I wish to present a few thoughts; if light, we can receive it; if darkness, reject it.

It seems to me that the angel has given us to understand what they are in Rev. 11: 4. He says: "These are the two olive trees, and the two candlesticks standing before the God of the earth." Now if inspiration has given us any intimation what the olive tree and candlestick are symbols of, then we have a key to the mystery.

In the beginning of the revelation the same angel told John what the candlestick stands for. He says, "The seven candlesticks which thou sawest are the seven churches" (ecclesia). Any public assembly, a congregation, a christian assembly, a church.—Greenfield's Lexicon. Then perhaps as good an understanding of the idea intended to be given is, a company of believers standing before the God of the earth as his messengers, to give light to the world. The candlestick is not the light, but a bearer of the light; so God's people are messengers or bearers of the light, which is the word of God. "Christ is the true light, that lighteth every man that cometh into the world." "For in him was life, and the life was the light of men"; and says he, "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life." So John was a "witness," and came to bear witness of that light. John 1: 7. The apostles were "witnesses" of Christ, of his resurrection, and of the words which he spake. Luke 24: 48; Acts 2: 32; 3: 18. They were a company of believers, and they were witnesses.

Again, the olive tree is a symbol of a church or a company of believers. Paul in the eleventh of Romans very distinctly uses it as such. The believing Jews were the good olive tree, but some of them were broken off because of unbelief; and the Gentiles, which were of the wild olive tree, were grafted into the good olive tree Paul here brings to view the "two olive trees" in language very simple and plain and easy to be understood. The "mystery" of which Paul speaks is the grafting process, or the time of the grafting the two olive trees or branches together. "For blindness in part is happened to Israel until the fullness of the Gentiles be come in: and so all Israel shall be saved."

"Israel" then is the good olive tree, and the Gentile believers the wild olive tree. They "stand by faith," and become the children of the promise by virtue of their belonging to Christ, by being baptized into Christ; so put on Christ; and in this way they become heirs according to the promise. The Jews or old Israel were never baptized into Christ, they never put on Christ; consequently they are a distinct tree or body of believers; and their blindness which happened unto them will remain "until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in; then all Israel shall be saved." I think that will occur when the two sticks of Ezek. 37: 16, 22 will be joined together, and all the sleeping saints come forth from their dusty beds, quickened by the spirit of the living God, and God will bring them into their own land upon the mountains of Israel, and God will make them one nation, "and one King shall reign over them; they shall no more be two nations or two kingdoms." This is the grafting time, and the "mystery" of grafting.

Again. In Zech. 3, the prophet had a vision of two olive trees, and the prophet asked the question,—"What be these two olive branches which through the two golden pipes empty the golden oil out of themselves?" The answer was, "These are the two anointed ones that stand by the Lord of the whole earth." Who are the anointed ones? David was the anointed of God. The priests were the anointed. Christ was anointed; and in many places we find that God's people are the anointed ones; but nowhere can I find the Old or the New Testament called the anointed.

Solomon built in the house of the Lord, in the most holy place, two cherubims of olive trees. They were no doubt symbols of something. I think they could not represent the two Covenants or Testaments. A cherub is a messenger of God, not a message or covenant. So these two cherubims of olive trees, representing God's messengers, stand watching over the tables of the covenant as the holy oracle of God. In Jer. 11: 16, the Lord calls Israel and Judah by the name of "a green olive tree."

But I have brought testimony enough, I think, to prove that the "two witnesses" may with more propriety be called God's two covenant people than the two covenants. And this idea does not militate at all against the generally received opinion of the commencement or ending of the sackcloth state of the church. It does, however, bring us to different conclusions as to their final end. "When they have finished their testimony, the beast that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit shall make war with them, and shall overcome them and kill them."

I think we must conclude that this beast that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit is a persecuting power; and what evidence have we that it will ever be anything better after it begins its persecution? Why may we not conclude that it is in the reign of the eighth and last head that "goeth into perdition," which many believe to be the present emperor of France; and the same that had power to give life unto the image of the beast, that the image of the beast should both speak and cause as many as would not worship the image of the beast should be killed? I see no reason why they are not one and the same power, the last; and a persecuting power that will exercise that power in putting to death saints unto the end. I think this in harmony with Rev. 6: 11, and with Daniel's time of trouble (12: 1), Paul's perilous times, and also of the revelation of that "wicked one" whom the Lord shall "consume with the spirit of his mouth, and destroy with the brightness of his coming"; whose "coming is after the working of Satan with all power and and signs and lying wonders."

It is after they have finished their testimony that this beast makes war with them. Have the two testaments ever finished their testimony? God's people have not, certainly; but there is a time coming when they will have finished it.

Paul speaks of a restraining power that is to be taken out of the way (2 Thess. 2: 7), "For the mystery of iniquity doth already work; only he who now letteth (hindereth, holds in check, or restraineth) will let until he be taken out of the way; and then shall that wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume," etc. Do we not understand by this that God will by and by take away his restraining grace or Spirit from the world? It now holds wicked men in check, but "his Spirit will not always strive with man"; and when it is taken away then that wicked power will be fully developed. The man of sin will then have full control over the wicked people and nations of earth. God's people will then have finished their testimony.

And why may not this take place three and one half years (prophetic days) before the Lord comes, when the spirit of life from God shall enter into the sleeping martyrs and they stand up, and ascend to meet the Lord in the air? For at this time Christ comes, the seventh angel sounds, and the kingdoms of this world become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ. So I understand it.

But whether I am correct in this view or not, I am satisfied that there are perilous times before us; and it becomes us as children of the light to watch lest we be overtaken in the snare. For, if "possible, they will deceive the very elect."

Yours for the light and truth,

S. K. GIBSON.

THE JUDGMENT YET FUTURE.

1st. What is meant by judgment? It signifies the passing of a decision, and the execution of that decision, preceded by an examination. In the case of the saints, it implies a decision and its execution in their favor; while in the case of the ungodly it signifies a decision, and its execution against them; hence there can be no reward for either saint or sinner till the judgment.

2nd. What is the chronological location of the judgment? Not at death, but in the last day: "The word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him IN THE LAST DAY."—Matt. 12: 48. Hence, the passing and execution of the decision for the saint, or against the sinner, is reserved till "the last day" arrives; consequently if men go either to hell or heaven before "the last day," they must go there voluntarily, and not as the result of a decision executed for or against them; and if men go, voluntarily, to their respective destinations before a decision has been passed or executed in their case, it would be safe to conjecture that heaven would contain a thousand sinners to one saint, and hell be vacant; for who would voluntarily take up a line of march for a boiling lake of fire so long before a decision or compulsion imposed that doom upon him?

If one class were allowed to choose his location before the execution of a decision, certainly the other class must be allowed the same privilege, seeing there is no decision against the one class, nor for the other. If men go to hell or heaven before "the last day," not voluntarily, but as the result of a decision executed in their case, that decision and its execution would constitute the judgment, and form a practical denial of Christ's location of the judgment "in the last day." Certainly "the last day" is not at the hour of death, but beyond death's reign, for Christ in speaking of the sleeping saint, affirms, "I will raise him up at the last day."—John 6: 40.

Thus "the last day" is interwoven with the resurrection, and not identical with the dying hour. These facts are invulnerable, and stand unflinchingly opposed to the doctrine of a past reward for saint or sinner. Both classes must wait till "the last day" for the passing and execution of a decision in their case, which will be their reward. Then away with that theory which discards Jehovah's location of the judgment, by saying that saints are already in heaven, and sinners already in hell —whether a hell of perpetual fire, or of perpetual death, is claimed.

The execution of a decision cannot precede the decision itself; hence it would be absurd to claim a present execution of endless death upon the sinner, and a future decision; nor can the decision and execution both be placed in the past without setting aside Christ's arrangement of a judgment "in the last day."

PERILOUS TIMES.

"This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy; without natural affection, trucebreakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good; traitors, heady, highminded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof: from such turn away."—2 TIM. 3: 1-5.

I. These all have "the form of godliness." They are not worldlings, but of the church. It has been common heretofore for those of the world to love self supremely, to be covetous, boasters, proud, despisers of those that are good, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; but these things were not so much as named as becometh saints. Now are not these things common in the churches? Wherefore we do know that it is the last days.

II. Let us consider why these may emphatically be called "perilous times." What is there in the idea of a man being covetous, proud, or a lover of self, that could be so perilous to us? If they shall despise those that are good, how shall it hurt the good? If they do love pleasure more than they love God, how shall that peril us? Observe, they are of the church; they are brethren and sisters in the churches. And why Paul considered these such perilous times, was not that the covetousness of the brethren would rob us of our substance; or that being proud, they would crow over us to our hurt; that being fierce, they would devour us.

But Paul saw that in the last days Satan would change his policy. Having become drunk with the blood of martyrs, he concluded to curb his rage and try sophistry. Whatever the standard of piety is in any land or age, so will be the mass of professors. For instead of taking pattern after the true pattern, Jesus Christ, it is so natural and common to measure themselves by themselves, and compare themselves among themselves; that is, to pattern after one another, that this becomes the standard. Hence the danger, the peril of which Paul speaks;—"Lovers of their own selves." Pattern after this, and what will become of us? The only change I know of to constitute a christian is a change from supreme self-love to supreme love of God. And what if we find the professor loving self more than God? Why, then it is conclusive evidence that he is not a child of God. Hence the danger of patterning after him. And so, as I conceive, with covetousness, pride, etc., the great peril is in following them. Hence,

III. The importance of the apostle's injunction;—"From such turn away." Or, as he said to the Corinthians, "wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord."—2 Cor. 6: 17. So long as we remain in church with such, so long, right or wrong, we shall more or less be influenced by them. The only safe rule, then, is to "turn away," or come out from among them." Then we may be unshackled, and ready to be influenced by the word of God only. We have never know a church reformed after the mass was corrupt.

Had the Jews, as a body, received Christ, the church would have continued, though under a new dispensation. Had the Catholic church been kept uncorrupted, there would have been no Protestantism. So from corrupt Protestantism it has always been the duty of the people of the Lord to "come out from among them." Rack off the cask, take the pure, and leave the sediment. When we came out of Catholicism, we had so much fog in our eyes that it is no marvel we do not all see clearly yet. But, as far as we do see, let us practice with an unrelenting hand, and search for more light.

COMMUNITIES.

Every age has had its communities of men and women, who, tired and sick of the world have left it in disgust and shut themselves up in the monastery or nunnery, or united with others in a social community of individuals and families, in order, as they hoped, the better to serve God, and glorify his name.

Some among the Adventists, have from time to time left us, and gone to the Shakers and others, to seek seclusion from the world. We have been invited to unite with such communities, and even in some cases we have been pressed to organize a new community and gather the believers in the faith to some kind of a Mount Zion. But not having faith in these institutions, either the earlier or later ones, we have been obliged to set our face against them. There may have been good in these institutions; but they have their evils with other forms of society. And to us, the gospel teaches that we are not to hide our light by retiring from the world, but we are to let it shine before men; and in the midst, even, of a crooked and perverse nation, we are to "shine as lights." We are also said to be the "salt of the earth, and the light of the world." The best way to fulfill our great mission on earth is to live in the world, while we are not of it. Give them the benefit of our example of patience, faith, love, and every grace. We are to be heroic, and faithful, and carry out our mission till Jesus comes.

Of late a few of our brethren, of whom Bro. Armstrong is leader, have bought, or redeemed a lot of land in Sullivan Co., Pa., and had it deeded to Almighty God, and so are to form a new community. Their place is called Celesta. Bro. A. has started a paper also, which is free to all who send for it, in which he has given his views, with others of the same faith. They commence with a very serious and fatal error, like the Seventh-day Adventists, viz., that the prophetic periods are ended; and they add a perfectly original idea, which is this; the periods ending in 1843—4, the Lord will come in just forty years from that time, in 1873—4. These, of course, are mere assumptions. But to them it seems to be truth. And then other things grow out of these bold assumptions. The "times of the Gentiles" are past, and hence they cannot have anything more to do with the world, or civil government. Consequently they are to be themselves a government, and the incipient stage of the kingdom of the Stone. Dan. 2: 34. They are also to constitute the 144,000 sealed ones, of whom none are to die till Jesus comes!

We are acquainted with some of these brethren, and know them to be much better christians than expositors of the Holy Word. We have no feeling in our hearts but kindness to them. We wish them well in the truth, but look upon Celesta in Pennsylvania, as no place for the location of Mount Zion, and the company that may gather there to be a very different thing from the "stone cut out of the mountain without hands," which is to fill the whole earth. Yet if they think otherwise, let them enjoy their opinions. We shall all be gathered soon, and may we be faithful to the end.—Voice of the West.

THE BEAUTIFUL EMILY; OR, A SECRET WORTH KNOWING.

And why was Emily beautiful—very beautiful? What made her beautiful? Was it her personal beauty, the elegance of her form, her beautiful countenance, her rosy cheeks, her ruby lips, the smile of courtesy and affability? Was it her earthly treasures, her external decorations, that made her beautiful? her fine dress, fashionable costume, ornaments of gold, pearls, and costly array? Nay, it was something infinitely superior to personal beauty or external decoration. Emily was not handsome, no one called her beautiful in the sense the world calls beautiful. Yet she was beautiful; she had a calm, dignified, virtuous, benevolent countenance; a sweet, heavenly smile played upon her lips. Her heart glowed seraphically! Her peace flowed as a river. Her whole appearance was exceedingly pleasant and agreeable.

Emily was not clad in rich, beautiful or costly raiment, or fashionable clothing; she always appeared neatly and modestly dressed, and in good taste; and when once attired, she seemed not even to think of her personal appearance, as many others do.

Her costume was plain, neat, simple, modest, economical. What then the secret of Emily's beauty, her constantly increasing loveliness? Ladies, are you not desirous to know this secret?

The secret of secrets is out: she adhered unwaveringly to the apostolical record in 1 Pet. 3: 3, 4;—"Whose adorning let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting the hair, and of wearing gold, or putting on of apparel; but let it be the hidden man of the heart, in that which is not corruptible; even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price."

This was Emily's standard. And is it not sad the times and the styles have so changed as to make this fashion of dress and adornment so little valued and practised by society; especially when it is declared that God so highly esteems and prizes it? Lovely Emily!

"Pray that God may keep her
From the world pure and unspotted;
That no stain of sin may settle,
Like the dust on wayside daisies,
On her soul, to soil its whiteness."

Female piety; what more lovely, beautiful, graceful, powerful? What robe so rich, so white, so becoming, so enchanting, as the robe of righteousness? It is the grace of graces, the heart of hearts—more precious than rubies.

Female piety is the gem of all others which enriches the coronet of a lady's character. Nature may lavish much on her person—the enchantment of the countenance—the grace and strength of her intellect—yet her loveliness is uncrowned till piety throws around the sweetness and power of her charms.—She then becomes unearthly in her desires and associations. The spell which bound her affections to the things below is broken, and she mounts on the silent wings of her fancy and hope to the habitation of the blest.

Piety communicates a divine lustre to the female mind. Wit and beauty, like the flowers of the field, may flourish and charm for a season; but, like the flowers, whose gifts are frail and fading, age will nip the bloom of beauty; sickness and misfortune will stop the current of wit and humor. In the gloomy season piety will support the drooping soul like the refreshing dew upon the parched heart. Such is piety, like a tender flower, planted in the fertile soil of a woman's heart, it grows expanding its foliage, and imparting its fragrance to all around, till transplanted and set to bloom in perpetual vigor and unfading beauty in the paradise of God. Follow this star, it will light you through every labyrinth in the wilderness of life, gild the gloom that gathers round the dying hour, and bring you safely over the tempestuous Jordan of death into the heaven of promised rest.

D. F. NEWTON, Author of Hope Threats.

☞ A holy silence allays all tumults in the mind and makes a man in patience to possess his own soul, which, next to his possession of God, is the choicest and sweetest possession in all the world.

APPEAL TO CHRISTIANS.

Such is the end of the course of this age. Its commerce and its pleasures, its politics and its religion, its philanthropy and its misanthropy, its hypocrisy and its blasphemy, its morality and its open wickedness, all find their termination here. Christian readers, what shall we say to these things? We have glanced through Scripture and gathered up the sum of its testimony as to the judgments which are impending. And now with all these predictions before us, what is to be the effect of the inquiry on our souls? Shall we not look into these things, and prayerfully and patiently inquire whether we have as yet understood God's mind respecting them? When he speaks so constantly and impressively of judgment, can we have been right in taking it for granted that the gospel would silently progress, christianity gradually spread, and the world's condition continually improve, till the millennium should commence? And can we think of these things—can we look at the unconverted around us hastening unconsciously to destruction, without being moved? Can we behold the worldling like a man in a boat drifting down a rapid stream, with his back to the danger, entertaining himself, as he looks up the river, with all the gay, pleasant objects which are flitting past him, whilst each moment bears him onward to the falls, where he must ere long be dashed to pieces, without attempting to rescue him from the overthrow? Can we think of such a doom as awaits the world in which we sojourn, and not weep over its guilty, condemned inhabitants? Did Jesus weep over one city, and say, "If thou hadst known, even thou, at least in this thy day, the things which belong unto thy peace! but now they are hid from thine eyes," and shall not our hearts melt—shall not our tears flow, for a whole world that lieth in wickedness, and daily ripens for destruction?

The hour of judgment, near as it may be, has not yet come. The door of mercy still stands open: yea, as yet it opens into the the scene of those heavenly delights and bridal glories which Christ and the church shall share, ere he comes forth from the wedding to execute vengeance on his foes. And shall we not use the opportunity to sound forth the gospel of God's grace? Shall we not warn and entreat our poor fellow-sinners, and earnestly beseech them, as the apostle Paul did, to be reconciled to God? Knowing the judgments which await the world around us, knowing that grace has rescued us from these judgments, and that when they are executed, we ourselves shall be with Him who executes them, is it possible that we can selfishly enjoy the thought of our own security, and leave the poor world unwarned, the grace of Christ and the Father's love unproclaimed, or poor sinners uninvited, unurged, UNINTREATED to flee to the shelter of his open arms? O for more earnest love to Christ and deeper compassion for poor souls.

Brethren, the time is short. The moments glide rapidly away. Soon will the only opportunity be gone that we shall ever have of confessing our Master, and seeking his glory, in the midst of a world which either rejects him openly, or the more decidedly rejects him in reality, for owning him in appearance and in word. May his own Spirit animate us. May our hearts be soft, and tender and humble. May communion with him cause the fountains of compassion for those around us to gush forth. May souls be gathered to his arms of mercy. May his people be stirred up to pray, and watch, and labor. May we humble ourselves, and stir up and exhort one another, and so much the more as we see the day approaching!

For the World's Crisis.

MINISTERIAL FOLLY.

Among the great variety of foolish things which some men who wish to carry their points at all hazards teach, is one so entirely without foundation, and contrary to truth, that it can scarcely seem possible for any really honest person to believe it; yet we have learned that the human heart is much more ready to accept error and falsehood than to receive the truth.

The notion alluded to is that "the Pope made Sunday," or, properly speaking, it is extensively taught by the "Seventh-day Sabbath keepers" that the Pope set apart Sunday as the day for the christian church to keep the Sabbath, and made it binding on them by legal enactment. When proof is demanded, those who know it is wanting twist their assertions round and say, the civil power of Rome did so at the request of the Pope, etc., etc.

A few days ago, in passing over a circuit in Maine where our seventh-day friends have lately sown their seed and made their assertions, I found many brethren and sisters who of course do not know the history of these matters, and they often asked me, "Why do you keep the Pope's day?" I was aware where they had heard the nonsense taught, for I had heard it and seen it in print nearly twenty years ago.

I tell our friends, this story about the "Pope's Sunday" is a base forgery, but that probably the most of those who believe and teach it know nothing of the history of the matter. Somebody has taken the responsibility to make and tell the lie, and others who have all the means of knowing it is false take the responsibility of circulating it instead of exposing it.

Now as there are many honest christians who wish to be undeceived, and ask for the truth touching this point, I will here give it, and may hereafter give some other facts which will expose the sham statements often made to lead christians to turn to Moses.

In A. D. 316 Constantine, who had been a Pagan, and ruled a Pagan empire, having professed conversion to Christ, and commenced the observance of the Lord's day (First day), as did all christians throughout the empire, enjoined the religious observance of the Lord's day, not only upon all his own household, but commanded that it should be kept as a day of rest throughout the Roman empire. This law was not for christians, for they all observed that day; but for Jews and Pagans, that they might not desecrate the Lord's day, and that uniformity, or order might be observed by all classes resting on the same day. After this the council of Laodicea made some demonstrations in the same direction, and pronounced "curses on Judaists," or Jews, for keeping the Seventh day.

Here we find the root from which has sprung all the parade about the "Pope's Sunday," and the terrible consequence of christians observing it, that thereby they received "the mark of the beast," and "the same shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God."

Prof. Stuart says, "The early christians, one and all of them, held the first day of the week to be sacred. About that there appears never to have been any question among any class of christians, so far as I have been able to discover. The zealots of the law wished the Jewish Sabbath to be observed, as well as the Lord's day. More anon.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Tuesday, Sept. 6, 1864.

☞ Torn or Mutilated Bills.—In sending Government bills or postal currency to this office, please be careful to send us bills that are not torn or mutilated, as all such are taken only at a discount, according to the size of the mutilation.

OUR SUBSCRIPTION PRICE.

The price of the World's Crisis is now $2.50 a year, if paid in advance, or $3.00 if not paid within six months, and at the same rates for a half year, or quarter. (For terms in full see last page.) This advance in price, though not so great as that of many other religious papers of less size, is rendered necessary by the present increased cost of white paper and printing, and the large number of non-paying subscribers now on our books.

OUR POOR LIST.

To whom the paper is sent free, numbers now some 660 names. To this add at least 140 more, who, though not nominally free, are in reality such, and we have an aggregate of about 800 subscribers to whom the paper is sent without pay, at an annual expense of $1600 to $2000 a year. This burden has been borne the past year by the office alone, with the exception of some $55.00, which has been paid in by the benevolent to help send the Crisis to the poor.

Can the office continue to bear this immense drain upon its resources longer? Not at present prices. If the price were $3.00 a year to all who do pay, we might afford to send 800 papers free to those who do not pay. But at $2.00 or $2.50 this cannot be done.

As the price is now fixed at $2.50 a year, it is proposed, therefore, that the churches take this matter in hand and contribute according to their ability towards paying for the papers sent to the poor within their own bounds, thus relieving the office entirely of this burden, or at least taking the larger share of it. The churches are abundantly able to do it, and, we are confident, they will be glad to do it. "Bear one another's burdens," brethren, and save us from the unpleasant necessity of cutting off the worthy poor, which we shall, otherwise, be compelled to do. Let every church, then, and the brethren in every conference, town, or State, pay for their own poor, by contributing liberally to The Poor Fund as the Lord shall prompt them to do. (A new Poor Fund is opened in another column. How much will you give?)

WILBRAHAM CAMPMEETING.

We have just finished another great feast of tabernacles at camp Wilbraham. Contrary to our expectations, it was the largest meeting we have ever had. The interest in this annual gathering increases every year, and we have reason to hope that it will till Jesus comes.

We need not say to those who have visited the lovely spot in that hill-top grove, that it is well adapted for such meetings as are there annually enjoyed. Its tall, spreading oaks, lovely shade, grassy walks, salubrious air, and the heavenly christian company assembled, filled with the spirit of Jesus, conspire to make it as near like paradise as any place we have ever found upon the earth. It is a hallowed spot to many joyful souls. There they first found the Savior precious, and shouted forth his praises from hearts bounding with joy. That hallowed spot is more precious to them than any other upon the wide earth,—than even their boyhood home. It is to them, as was Mt. Zion to Israel.

Some important improvements have been made for the accommodation of those who attend these meetings. Among others, is a large boarding house, over one hundred feet long, twenty-four feet wide, with ample room at the table for three hundred persons, which is twice as many as we have been able to feed at once in former years. Every year the ground presents new attractions to those who have the privilege of enjoying the pleasures of these great annual gatherings. There seems to be something sacred in the spot, more than we have ever felt elsewhere. Many hallowed associations are connected with these rich tabernacle feasts, that will ever be fresh in memory through life's entire pilgrimage.

We will now give some incidents connected with the meeting. On Saturday, Aug. 20th, quite a number came to erect tents and at the close of the day, we counted twenty-one habitations for the saints. On the following Sabbath quite a large congregation assembled to hear the word, and we had a feast of rich things in the Lord. We all felt it good to be there. Several resolved to begin anew in the service of the Lord.

Monday, Aug. 22nd, was a very busy day in erecting tents. A larger number of brethren and sisters arrived than we have ever seen on the ground before so early in the week. It was truly heart cheering to meet so many christian pilgrims, after a year's separation. The very sight of them was ample pay for all the trouble necessary in arranging the encampment. It was evident that many of them had gained ground in divine life during the past year. Their faith and love were stronger than when we last met. We think we have not seen the church, as a whole, stand so well for many years as at present. They are satisfied that the last days have really come, and that the time is at hand when the faithful will be gathered home. They see more clearly the necessity of a separation from the world, if they would be ready to meet the coming King. Most see that a half-hearted christianity will be of no avail in the trying hour. They are well convinced that much which bears the name of christianity is only counterfeit, and unworthy the confidence of the candid. Crossing as it may be to separate from the world, and worldly friends, they are willing to do it to please the Lord, who has done every thing for them. As a result, their grace and peace have been multiplied, faith strengthened, and love increased. We trust this good work will go on till all are ready for the day of the Lord.

Monday evening. After the busy labors of the day, an interesting prayer meeting was enjoyed, that served to cheer those privileged to be present.

Tuesday was a day of increasing interest. Every train of cars contributed largely to our numbers. Happy greetings were multiplied, and swelling songs of praise echoed all around. Bro. A. Ross preached an excellent practical discourse in the morning; Bro. H. K. Flagg in the afternoon, and Bro. A. W. Sibley in the evening.

The annual meeting of the Advent Christian Association was opened at 4 P. M. It was the most pleasant, heavenly business meeting we ever enjoyed. Several stirring hymns were sung during the progress of the meeting, and hearty shouts of praise burst from hearts warm with love for Jesus.

Wednesday, 24th. Good meetings. One of much interest was a general prayer and conference meeting in front of the preacher's stand. There was more than usual interest in the minds of our brethren and sisters for the salvation of sinners. This, we consider, is a very encouraging omen, and, if continued, will result in much good. We may here remark, that we have never known a church, or individual, to grow in grace that did not make efforts, direct and positive, for the conversion of sinners. When we have the Spirit of Christ, we are prompted to act like him, and labor to rescue the lost.

Thursday. The preaching was excellent during the day. Bro. Sam'l Curry, of New York, preached in the morning, Bro. James Hemenway, in the afternoon, and Bro. Durfee, of R. I., in the evening.

Friday. At 8.15 A. M. a conference meeting was begun in front of the preacher's stand, which continued till 11 o'clock. It was a meeting of great interest. Some thirty or forty requested prayers. The Spirit of the Lord rested upon the people. We had some more excellent preaching from Brn. H. F. Carpenter, Edwin Burnham, and H. Munger.

Saturday was a day of heavenly refreshing. Another general prayer meeting was held in front of the stand, when some thirty or more requested prayers. Several found peace by believing. Many showed anxiety to become the followers of Christ. We have rarely seen more interest manifested. Preaching by Bro. I. C. Wellcome, Sr. Mansfield of Mich., and Bro. Ralph Williams, of Ct. Sr. M. gave an able discourse on Spiritualism, showing that it is the work of the devil and his angels. It was such a discourse as every body should hear in these perilous times.

Lord's day, 28th. This was the great day of the feast. The weather was fine, and at an early hour a large number of carriages were seen coming on every road leading to the encampment. At 8 1-2 o'clock, we met for a love-feast in front of the stand. It was a most heavenly season, and will be remembered with much pleasure by those who were privileged to enjoy it. In thirty-one minutes over two hundred spoke of their love for Jesus. Every word was full of meaning, and spoke volumes. It was a very rich feast to the friends of our Redeemer. After a few had spoken, one sister who had lost her speech by a paralytic shock, arose and held up her hand. The sight caused a deep and thrilling sensation in the hearts of those who witnessed the earnest manner in which it was done. No testimony was more edifying than that. At the close of the love-feast, it was thought there were two hundred more who rose, expressing a wish to speak if there was time. A number requested prayers. We think we never enjoyed a better love-feast. It was truly a heavenly place in Christ Jesus. We have never seen a happier company than the one there assembled.

At 9 1-2 o'clock some fifteen car loads came in from Springfield, and soon after, several others from Palmer, thus swelling our numbers to some seven or eight thousand. We had good order during the day. We do not recollect of hearing an oath during the entire campmeeting, nor of seeing one drunken person upon the ground. All was quiet, and we lay down to rest at night with as little fear of disturbance as at our own homes. The people living in Wilbraham and vicinity, treated us very kindly, and took much pains to preserve order and make the meeting pleasant for all.

Bro. H. L. Hastings preached in the forenoon, and Sr. Mansfield in the afternoon. We trust a lasting impression for good was made upon many minds. In the evening we had a delightful communion season, when five hundred and four sat down to the table of the Lord. Thus closed the largest campmeeting we have ever had. There were ninety-eight tents, and more canvas spread than ever before. There were about one hundred preachers present. It was remarked by one who has had very extensive experience in campmeetings, that more good was done this year than during the meetings the two previous years. Quite a number were converted, others were reclaimed, and twenty were baptized. Praise the Lord.

Found.—The valise left in the Lynn Tent, at the Alton Bay campmeeting, can be had by writing to this office, and describing property.

DELINQUENTS.

We have on our books about 400 subscribers who owe from $4.00 to $12.00 each; in the aggregate some $2600. To all these we have sent bills, and from most of them we have not yet heard. We are sorry to say to all such, that we shall be obliged to stop their paper IN FOUR WEEKS FROM THIS TIME, unless they are previously heard from. Write to us, then, at once, and send the amount of your indebtedness, or, if not able to pay all, send what you can. We want to hear from every one, and to know whether you wish the paper continued, or not.

RENEW YOUR SUBSCRIPTION.

Now is the time to renew your subscription for the "Crisis" for the coming year. It will be seen in another notice, that fifty cents will be saved by paying in advance. The advance-pay system is much the best for those who publish, and those who receive the paper, and we earnestly request all to adopt this plan at once. You will take much more comfort in reading the paper, and we in sending it. Time is short; let us pay as we go, and thus keep out of debt. It costs much more to live on credit, than when we pay in advance. We hope every reader of "our paper" will be prompt this year.

BILLS.

We hope that all to whom we have sent bills will respond at once. If you cannot pay at present, please drop us a line, that we may know what to do. We shall be under the necessity of cutting off those who do not listen to our earnest request, and refuse to inform us whether they wish the paper continued or not. If you can't pay now, nor ever, please send us a line next week, if possible, that we may know how many we need to begin our new volume. Come, now, do not delay writing any longer. Have respect to our patience. Over $4000 are now due to the office. Do not make us lose this large sum, when it is so much needed as at present. Let each one pay his part, and all will be well.

OUR FREE SUBSCRIBERS.

We want to hear from every one of them within the next four weeks. The larger portion of them have received the paper free for years, and we want to know whether they desire its continuance. If the donations to the Poor Fund, as proposed above, should not be sufficient to meet the expenses of papers sent free, we shall be obliged, in accordance with the decision of the C. P. Society, to cut down our free list, so as not to exceed four hundred. We wish, therefore, to hear from all such at once, so that we may know who really need it and wish it continued.

NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

As the next number closes the present volume, now is a good time to obtain new subscribers. Let us make one general effort to get the light and truth before the people. If every reader will get one, then our subscription will be doubled. We think a little effort will accomplish this object. Come, let us try. If you could read the heart-cheering letters we have received from new subscribers the last year, we think all would be greatly encouraged to make earnest efforts to obtain new readers of our family paper. Now is the time. Soon it will be too late.

THE EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT.

This valuable translation is now finished, and the last number is at hand. For those of our readers who have not heard of it before we would say, that the Emphatic Diaglott is a new translation, "containing the original Greek text of the New Testament, according to the Recension of Dr. J. J. Griesbach, with an interlineary translation, in which every Greek word is literally and grammatically construed as it stands in the book: a new emphatic version, based on the literal translation, the labors of the most eminent biblical critics and translators, and the various readings of the Vatican Manuscript (No. 1209 in the Vatican library;) together with philological and exegetical foot notes, and a choice selection of references; to which is affixed an alphabetical appendix, containing all the geographical and proper names occurring in the New Testament, with different Greek words and phrases critically examined."

This valuable work is published by Benjamin Wilson, Geneva, Ill. Price, plain leather binding, $4.00. Extra leather binding, gilt edges, 4.50. Turkey morocco binding, $5.00. Postage 16 cts. Every Bible student should have a copy of this work.

EXTRAVAGANCE.

It seems as though the present generation was running crazy after fashionable extravagance, and, consequently, hastening to financial, if not moral ruin. The harder the times, the higher the prices, the more terrible the war news, the deeper people seem to plunge into the fashionable fooleries of the day. A terrible crash must come soon, if this course of living is continued; and we see no prospect of a change for the better. The principle of honesty seems to be rapidly departing from society. Selfishness and covetousness rule the hearts of the people; and of course ruin must come as the result. There is now but little ground for confidence in business men. We know not whom to trust. The extravagance of the times has been one great cause of the dishonesty of these last days.

The following, on the "dress reform" movement, from the Chicago Times, shows things in their true light:—

"The 'dress reform' movement having been inaugurated in this city a few weeks since by a convention of ladies and the important pledge being now in full operation, it is worth while to examine its bearings and learn what its results are to be.

On the day when the news of the movement among the ladies at Washington first reached New York, the sale of imported goods exceeded everything that had gone before it. Under the impulse of the moment, the tide of fashionable extravagance rushed madly on, —more madly if possible, for the check to its follies which was anticipated. Indeed, during the war, fashion and fighting, luxury and poverty, revelry and ghastly death, have seemed to vie with each other in terrible rivalship. While, on the one hand, stern necessity drove perishing thousands to the point of the bayonet, on the other was seen an eager, frenzied grasping, like the dying clutch of the miser, after life and its magnificent pleasures. The lady who sported the coronal of living flame jets, seems a fitting impersonation of the fiery frenzy that pervades society. In short, as the London Times has justly said: 'The whole life of society seems one magnificent race of neck-or-nothing.'

Where is all this to end? Will it, can it be arrested in mid-career?—or must we go on to the bitter end, and pay the full penalty of our gross and wicked improvidence? Will the taking of this or any specific 'pledge' effect the score? How many have taken it without first laying in a supply, for the season at least, of the proscribed articles? Is the repentance to be in 'sack-cloth and ashes,' or in 'purple and fine linen?'"

BOLD TALK.

In these days of infidelity, men are becoming very bold in denouncing the Bible, the God of the Bible, and all who believed the sacred record, and its Author. They seem to take pleasure in turning the whole into ridicule. They laugh at the idea of an overruling Providence, and call him weak minded who believes it. The following, from a Chicago paper, is a sample of modern wit, which is quite pleasing to the popular taste of these days:—

O! the Weather.—We beg leave to suggest to the clerk of the weather whether it isn't time to bring the 'heated term' to a summary close? It is now past the time for the mercury to get high, yet it will persist in such little irregularities, to the infinite delight of venders of soda water, who, having made a close calculation as to the amount of their profits, cannot help inwardly chuckling at the prospect of the estimates being largely exceeded. If summer continues to thus 'linger in the lap' of extreme heat, a writ of fiery facias should be sworn out, even if it does produce a little coolness. If that venerable gentleman, the clerk aforesaid, is merely ambitious of showing what he can do, we assure him that we graciously come down and acknowledge his transcendant powers, and if it will make any great difference, we will make the acknowledgment with much warmth. Gentlemen of a practical turn of mind assure us that such weather is good for corn. Right glad are we that it is good for something. We acknowledge the corn."

QUITE SENSIBLE.

We clipped the following sensible item from the Chicago Tribune, issued while the Spiritual National Convention was in session in that city:—

"The Herald of Progress, a Spiritualist newspaper, and the most widely circulated of the papers devoted to Spiritualism, has been forced to succumb to the high price of paper and is dead. With the powers of divination claimed by our erratic friends now in session at Bryan Hall, it is astonishing some of them did not foresee the rise of paper, and advise through spiritual mediums, the publishers of the unfortunate sheet to lay in a stock."

For the World's Crisis.

THE ITALIAN MISSION.

Dear Bro. Grant and all Christian friends:—I am very happy to send you another report, beginning the 8th of July and closing with the month. We are all through the mercy of God in health, and disposed to serve him cheerfully in this large and very important field of christian labor. The ministers in this vicinity received us kindly, but with much caution, fearing that the new light which we presented to them would disturb in some way their "established order and usages." For this reason it was impossible to obtain any public place in which to lecture; and it not being customary in this country to hold meetings in the open air, we were told it would be an injury to us to commence our public labors, as we often do in the United States, in a field or grove. Therefore we have done what we could by visiting the people privately to a considerable extent, and conversing with the best and most influential christians of this vicinity; and thereby have been much encouraged to prosecute our labors here by lectures as well as conversation.

The leaders of the sect called "Darbystes," Brn. Comb and Benech, seem much interested in our mission. We have held several private meetings of prayer and explanation of our views of prophecy in our house, and been listened to with much attention, and the spirit of God has been with us. But the people being anxious to hear us publicly, the "Consistory" at last decided to give us an opportunity to speak, and last week we were visited by two Elders of the church as delegates, who informed us of this decision, and also that notice would be given Sunday morning (July 31st) for us to lecture at five o'clock P. M. Last Sunday, accordingly, we lectured in the oldest church in this vicinity, in the village of "La Tour," at five o'clock P. M. The pastor of the place, Mr. Malan, assisted, and all the professors of the college, most of whom are finely educated ministers of the gospel, and one English clergyman missionary, Bro. Cotter, were present. The church of the old martyrs, Waldenses, was well filled. We exhibited our large map of the United States, according to the suggestion of some who had seen it, and our prophetical chart, which excited great apparent interest.

This introductory meeting of our solemn message of the soon coming of Christ, was opened by singing in the French language a beautiful Advent hymn: "Vers Jesus elevons les yeux." I read the first six verses of the third chapter of Exodus, and showed that by the burning "bush" which was not consumed the true church of God is meant. This was fulfilled very literally in Daniel 3: 26. It was also fulfilled in regard to the true church during the Pagan and Roman Catholic persecutions in all Europe, Asia and Africa. Witness the Waldenses, Albigenses and Huguenots, the remnant of those with whose blood the soil of these valleys is enriched, who concealed themselves for safety in the caves of these mountains, and when discovered were thrust from the top of a high "peak" to the vale below, men, women and children, and dashed to pieces by the fall! Sometimes they were shamefully mutilated, even children were torn in pieces. We read in the history of the "Vodois" that the bodies of the dead were left in the dungeons where the prisoners awaited death; and we can imagine what the poor sufferers must have endured in health as well as in heart, being obliged to breathe and eat and drink, and during the heat of summer, beside the bodies of their dear friends in a state of putrefaction. Still, I have the great privilege of meeting with the remnant, which is proof that God has been with (the burning "bush") and preserved you.

So it has been with the true church of God wherever scattered; in France, in Spain, in Germany, in Bohemia, in Poland, in Sweden, in Great Britain, etc. etc. But, when all the powers of darkness were concentrated to exterminate the saints of God (Matt. 20: 23), our merciful Father opened a new land for his persecuted people, where they could dwell in safety, and enjoy that freedom of conscience that is necessary for the full development of man and the propagation of the gospel. This great country, so highly favored of heaven, which stretches from the Atlantic to the Pacific ocean, and from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico, when the time came for the seal of prophecy to be opened in 1844, was honored to receive the commission from God to preach this glorious message to all nations and languages; and, as means were necessary for such a work, the rich mines of California were discovered, so that there might be abundance of gold.

But in this also the power of the enemy has been manifested. The discovery of so great treasure was intoxicating. Even ministers left their pulpits to search for gold. Many others, about the same time, left their former religious relations and formed a new sect, having the bond of necromancy. See Isa. 8: 19, 20; Matt. 24: 23, 24; 2 Thess. 2: 9–12; 1 Tim. 4: 1; Rev. 13: 11–14; 16: 13, 14; 18: 2, etc. They preach (according to their doctor's instructions, see Gen. 3: 4) the natural immortality of man, and deny the great atonement of Christ, and have published a new Testament, corrected by mediums, for the benefit of Spiritualists. They are rich and powerful, and bitter opponents of the Bible truth. But worst of all, is the present dreadful war which has already swallowed up so many millions of the Lord's money and lives, which was begun on the wicked part of secession for the interest of human slavery, that man might buy and sell his christian brother man in market, yes, even his own children.

But while the devil works with mighty power, knowing that his time is short, the Holy Spirit works also. God has still his true church, his remnant, made up of obedient children who love him and keep his commandments. Rev. 14: 12. They have printing offices, in which are published periodicals, and many books and tracts for distribution, by which means the truths of the Bible, especially those that particularly concern the present generation, are scattered far and wide. This church, that is making all efforts to understand the words that were "closed up and sealed till the time of the end," we have examined and found it imbued with the spirit of God, and grounded in his truth.

This church, by the grace of God, has given us commission to preach the truths of God's word here, and elsewhere as God in his providence may open the way. Its members pray earnestly for you, that you may be rich in all spiritual graces; that you may, in unison with them, spread the truths of the kingdom of God in your own happy country; and as wise virgins who have oil in their vessels, be prepared to go in to the marriage when the Master shall appear. May God grant that we (also European) may be all "measured" as the true temple of God, corrected from all our infirmities, and purified, and receive the "seal of God" in our right hand and in our foreheads, and not be found in the "court" (Rev. 11: 2) without, which represents the ungodly and unprepared, etc. Amen.

The pastor of the church rose afterward and made some remarks as these: "We are happy to hear to-day such interesting developments upon the word of God from our American brother, and we are thankful to our American brethren for their prayers and kind remembrance of us. In regard to what we have heard, we will make only two remarks. First, the feelings of this brother for his English and Slavonian brethren, for whose spiritual good he is willing to die if necessary; may we imitate his zeal, and do all in our power for our own countrymen. Second, May we strive to be worthy of the good christian reputation we enjoy in other lands." He closed the meeting by solemn prayer and benediction. We left the church, happy that our first lecture, by the grace of God, was so well received, and in the hope we have that the truths we were sent here to preach will be received into many honest hearts, who will thereby be prepared for the kingdom of God.

To-day we received a visit from Eld. Comb, who encouraged us to open a series of lectures in our house. We consulted with our proprietor, who freely gave us the use of a large unoccupied room adjoining our own apartments; and while we finish this report, our family are busy preparing the room, and posting notices for the lectures, which will commence at seven o'clock this evening, and continue every evening.

Dear brethren, remember us with fervent prayer, that God may give us grace and wisdom, that we may preach the truth in all fidelity, in the demonstration of the Spirit and with power, that much good may be done and his name honored. Also, my dear brethren, be so kind as to remember that we are strangers here, and that all eyes are upon us, and that we are watched very closely. You will readily understand that in order to exert an influence in this new field of labor, we must have means to establish ourselves comfortably and respectably, and be independent of the assistance of those to whom we preach till God shall give them grace to receive the truth.

There are fifteen French Protestant churches in these valleys, and twenty-two thousand members; but owing to the bitter persecutions of the past, most of the people are quite poor. Their churches and schools are supported partly by donations from England, with some help from the Italian government. It would be very improper for us to ask assistance from government, at present. The people call for tracts, and it will be necessary as soon as possible to translate our most important tracts into the French and Italian languages. To do this we must have time and means. We are very anxious to have once more the reading of our religious periodicals, and we hope soon to receive all the numbers that have been issued since the middle of May. We have not seen an American paper since we left London.

We are happy to acknowledge the receipt of two pounds sterling from Bro. Cochrane of Barrhead, Scotland, since we came to this place. It came just in time, and was very useful to us. May God reward him abundantly. With much love we are yours, waiting for the kingdom.

Correspondence.

From Sr. M. A. Vining.

Bro. Grant:—It has been some three or four years since I first saw the Crisis or began to read it. A good Sister in Christ brought me two, and afterward sent me several. She recently sent me three of them. She also gave me Jacob Blain's pamphlet, title, "Glad Tidings," and since has given me the little book—Destiny of the Wicked, by H. L. Hastings. I have read them candidly and carefully. Next I read the New Testament through, observing and often marking passages that I thought and believed were in favor of the final destruction of the wicked after the judgment. Now I am reading Psalms, and find much there to confirm the doctrine which is promulgated in your books and papers of the destiny of the wicked.

I must search the Scriptures for myself on any new point of doctrine (unless it is so much opposed to divine revelation that it is not worthy of my time and attention, or, in other words, unless they are such plain points that the common knowledge of the Scriptures which I have will decide them in my own mind, without any further research); and if I find that it agrees with any portions of God's word then I continue my investigation until I decide on the subject according to the best of my judgment. This is the course I have pursued with this subject, and thus far I have found much more in favor of it than against it, and I have nearly decided that it must be true; yet, if I could obtain any thing that would give me more light on the subject, it would be very gladly received and well perused.

In years past the passage in Mal. 4: 1–3, has been a stumbling block to me, and I could not solve it to my own satisfaction, but supposed that devoted christians, whose education far exceeded mine, must know more about these things than I did. Thus I tried to reconcile my mind to these points, yet again and again they would come up before the mind, and I tried to lay them aside. But I thank God that he through his providence has placed these books in my hands. May God reward that Sister, through whose kindness and care they came to me, in a ten-fold proportion. I am lending them, so that others may be benefitted by them as well as myself.

I like the Crisis for two reasons; first, for so much christian experience as it contains, which is so much neglected in this present age by many of our religious newspapers. O! that men and women would awake to the interest of souls while Jesus fills the mediatorial seat, and lay aside things of far less importance. Second, because it vindicates so strongly the doctrine of holiness of heart and life. More than twenty-one years have passed since I obtained hope in Christ; and experience has taught me that if I would enjoy the presence of my Savior day by day, I must watch and pray almost continually, and strive to live as near as I can to the teachings of sacred writ, forgetting the things that are behind, and pressing toward the mark of the prize of the high calling of our blessed Lord and Master. When I thus try to live, scarcely an hour passes but I feel that I am accepted with God. Then I love my Savior and his people and his cause more than all else below the sun; yea, I love to do my Master's will, and try to lead souls unto him.

Dear christian friends, let us trust in the Most High, and go forward in our work of love, knowing that our labors in the Lord are not in vain, as the day of our redemption draweth nigh. M. A. Vining.

From Bro. D. H. Warren.

Bro. Grant:—I have been a subscriber for the Crisis a long time, and consider it the best paper in the world. Free, open, decided and good; bold and independent; just what the world needs at this time of darkness. Its columns come ladened with truths that do the heart of the child of God good. How it cheers my heart when it comes to my dwelling. It always was like the cooling stream to a thirsty soul, while surrounded by brethren in the Lord; but now, if possible, it is three-fold more to me. Bless God, our toil and trials will soon end, and then we shall change sorrow for joy, and an earth under the curse of care, pain and death, for a world of glory. My longing heart says come!

I have been long looking for this blessed hope. I started out to look for the Lord in '42, and have come up to every point and been disappointed, but not discouraged. His word is sure. He will come. "If I go away, I will come again." How the word bespeaks his coming. The word of God is fulfilled in everything we see in the earth, in the heavens, and among the people; in private conversation, and in the public print. Oh! how dark this world is getting. How sin is increasing. Surely we are living in perilous times. Amid the signs and perils, war and bloodshed, the professed church says it is an omen of good; it is purifying the church and the world; we are commencing the glorious day. Well, if this is the blessed millenium, I hope God will deliver me from going through another preparatory state. I thank God that I am not left in this darkness to believe a lie that I might be damned. O God! lead us into the truth as it is in Jesus. He will, if we will be led by him, and give up tradition. How the light shines in that mind that is open to receive it. There are many in this Western world that never heard of the coming kingdom. Brethren, you that can, and God has called to present the truth, leave your nice things and fashionable churches, and come where the people want to hear. The people demand, and God and the cause call for you to come. Make the sacrifice. Here is a large field to labor in. Thousands are perishing for want of the word. The calls are numerous for help. Come, brethren, come and sound the alarm in the West, and God will reward you with eternal life in his kingdom. The time is short, and what is done must be done quickly.

Here in Mazo Manie are one thousand inhabitants, and it wants some one that can present the subject in a gospel manner, and the people will hear and believe. Here is work and a living for all that will come with the truth and the cause of God at heart, who think more of saving men and women than ease, and silver and gold. I left the hills of Vermont and my friends, and more than all, a band of brothers of like precious faith that I loved in the Lord, to come West, hoping that I might do more here for the good of men, and I have found some warm-hearted saints, that love and long for and expect the coming Lord. Bless God for christian friends. The communion of saints is sweet.

Brethren in Cabot, I fear you do not appreciate the blessings you are surrounded with, and the gifts you have among you. Be faithful, for the time is short. Do not forsake the assembling of yourselves together, and then do your duty. I am deprived of that blessed privilege, and it is a great loss to me. God will hold you accountable for your improvement of these means of grace. The Lord is at hand, and how holy we must be to meet him. The kingdoms of earth have risen and gone down. The church has waded through a scene of blood. The signs have been seen, sun and moon darkened, the stars have fallen, the perplexity of earth, men's hearts failing them for fear, the nations are angry, the mighty men are waked up. Oh! what a scene we behold in the world through God's word. What must we expect next? My brethren, it is the coming of the Lord Jesus Christ to judge the world and to redeem his church. Seeing we look for such things, what manner of persons ought we to be in all holy conversation and godliness.

I expected to have seen Bro. Thurber out here before this time. The saints say, "Where is he? write to have him come." Bro. Samuel, the West needs your gift. God will give you souls for your labor. There is preaching enough such as it is, but oh how vain! Any brother passing through or coming to Mazo Manie, will find a poor pilgrim. Call, such as I have is yours. Brethren and sisters, pray for us. Your Brother, looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ,

D. H. WARREN.

From Sr. L. P. Hastings.

Bro. Grant, and all the dear scattered flock: Now is the time of our great annual meetings; and as I read the notices of them I would fain take wings and fly to the tented grove, that I might be cheered and refreshed as in former days; but for some wise purpose it is ordered otherwise, and I will try to be patient, and content to pray God to bless those that meet, and be thankful for the privilege of reading the reports of the wonderful works of God to his unworthy creatures. I have heard but two Advent sermons in eight years, yet I have not forgotten the faithful warnings and convincing arguments brought from the word of God by Bro. Grant, and others too numerous to mention, showing our nearness to the day of reckoning. Dear Brn. and Srs., be strong. The combat deepens. The smitten image is crumbling. Nations are distressed and perplexed. The waves roar; but soon our noble ship will anchor and land her crew safe on the immortal shore, where all will be peace.

There will be no sin nor sorrow;
There no evil for to-morrow;
There no hungry to be fed,
None to cry for daily bread;
But when these dark scenes are o'er,
Glory'll shine forevermore.

Morenci, Mich. L. P. HASTINGS.

From Sr. I. Finn.

DEAR BRN. AND SRS.:—Are we ready to meet "this same Jesus" when he comes in the clouds of heaven? "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord." O what a glorious promise is this, to be ever with Him, to be like him, and to be as the angels in heaven, immortal and incorruptible. We shall mount up as on wings of eagles, run and not be weary, walk and not faint; have right to the tree of life, and enter in through the gates into the city, the new Jerusalem, which is coming down from God out of heaven. Let us watch and pray, that we may be accounted worthy to inherit these things. Your Sister, looking for eternal life when Jesus comes,

Clark's Green, Pa. IRENE FINN.

From Sr. A. M. Barnes.

DEARLY BELOVED:—Grace, mercy, and peace, from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ, be with you all, amen. My heart was made glad while reading of the work of the Lord in Montreal, and other places. May the good Lord encourage his true servants to endure hardness, as good soldiers of the cross of Jesus Christ, that they may have many souls as seals of their ministry. I heartily coincide with the Bro. who wrote upon preaching plain truth regardless of consequences.

How I do rejoice that the Lord has a few servants who are not afraid to tell the people the truth. There is a blessing in store for such. Be encouraged, ye servants of the Most High God. Your labors and toils will soon have an end in everlasting rest, if faithful. From a lover of the truth,

Clinton, Mass. ABIGAIL M. BARNES.

From Bro. E. Cordray.

BRO. GRANT:—Words fail to express the gratitude of my heart when I read the rich articles contained in the Crisis. I thank our Heavenly Father for sending us this preacher; we have no other. We can truly say "the poor have the gospel preached unto them." Sometimes it is mislaid, and we do not get it every week, then it makes me impatient until it comes. May the Lord bless the brethren and sisters that write for it, and help them to still continue to write, for it does us so much good to hear from them.

We have a weekly prayer and social meeting, it is true, but there are few of us to meet, yet we feel strong because Jesus is our captain. I love to fight under the blood-stained banner of King Immanuel, for we are confident that we shall come off more than conquerors through Him that loved us so freely. We have strong opposition here; in fact we get about all the preaching, but it comes in misrepresenting us, hurling anathemas and epithets, calling us infidels, etc.; yet we are trying to bear up under all this. Lord, forgive those that oppose thy word.

We visited a short time ago the brethren at Buchanan, Mich., and had a good time. We live about twenty-five miles south from the above place. Bro. and Sr. Mansfield told us they would try to come to see us this fall. The Lord conduct their way here, and bless them abundantly. They have done us much good in giving us words of comfort.

But the draft bears hard upon us. Bro. Grant, could there not be something done to help those who are not able to pay their fine? Appeal to the brethren everywhere to throw in and help those who are not able. The Lord help his people in this direction. I was drafted in 1863, and Bro. J. Rupel paid my fine. The Lord bless Bro. Rupel and family, for they have done us much good. Yours waiting and praying for the glorious kingdom of God to come, E. CORDRAY.

BRO. GRANT:—Since I have taken the Crisis, I have been greatly strengthened in my faith. I am a Methodist by profession, but an Adventist in faith. I have been lending the Crisis to my neighbors. It is a new thing to all of them. They say they never saw such a paper before, and I have the promise of some that they will subscribe for it. As for myself, I esteem it above all other papers that I ever read. I believe in all the points that you advocate on future punishment, and the unconscious state of the dead, and of the immortality of the soul. Yours,

MARSHALL H. INMAN.

Obituaries.

JANE ELIZA GREENE.

Died in Plymouth, Vt., March 8th, 1864, Jane Eliza, daughter of John P. and Saphronia P. Greene, aged eleven years and thirteen days.

Her disease was diphtheria in its worst form. She was sick only seven short days. Two days before she died she aroused a little, and said, "Mother, I guess I am going to get well; I feel much better than I have done." She sank exhausted, but did not seem to murmur or complain at the change for the worse, but endured all with the greatest fortitude. Her physician remarked several times, "I never saw greater patience manifested in but few grown people." O! she has gone to the grave. How sad is the gloom which is flung around us with flowers and perfume. She bade us all be of good cheer. Said she, "I am going to be at rest." She was perfectly calm and conscious. We shall meet by and by. S. P. GREENE.

WALTER MCCLINTOCK.

Died of congestion of the brain, in Portage City, Aug. 11th, 1864, Walter McClintock, aged thirty-seven years and three months.

The deceased with his companion united with the Baptist church in 1859, in West Salem, after being buried with Christ in baptism, with which church he remained a member until his death. He was conscious a few days previous to his death that he must leave his beloved family and sleep in death until Jesus comes to bid the sleeping saints arise. The only anxiety he expressed to live was to care for and provide for his family. He bade them an affectionate farewell, and quietly fell asleep. Funeral sermon by the writer, from John 11: 25, 26.

Our brother has left a wife and seven children, a father and mother, brothers and sisters, together with a large circle of friends, to mourn his loss.

S. J. ADAMS.

MARY ANN PUTNAM.

Died in Athol, suddenly, of palsy, Aug. 13th, Mary Ann Putnam, wife of Morton Putnam, aged thirty-five years, two months, and two days.

The deceased leaves a husband and three little ones to mourn her loss. In the winter of 1863, she gave her heart to God, and gave good evidence that she died in the Lord. Mysteriously the enemy, death, now works, but Jesus will soon come, and then death will be swallowed up in victory.

Eld. Brewer preached the funeral discourse from 1 Cor. 15: 26, in which he showed plainly the Bible view of the state of the dead, and spoke words of comfort. M. E. ELLINWOOD.

HENRIETTA COWLES.

Died in Lovely Street, West Avon, Ct., Aug. 3d, Henrietta Cowles, daughter of Edward and Harriet M. Cowles, aged eleven years.

She was beloved by all who knew her. May her schoolmates be kept encircled in the Savior's arms from the evils of a fading world, and be ripened for the harvest of eternal glory. A father, mother, brother and sister are left to feel that this is a night of weeping; but may they like Henrietta be daily found at the mercy seat, that when the morning of joy shall come, they may meet their loved one again where tears will never flow, and be forever with the Lord. S. WOODRUFF.

CHAS. HEDGES.

Died in Sumpter, Wis., Aug. 12th, 1864, Bro. Charles Hedges, aged about fifty-six years.

Bro. H. was formerly a member of the Baptist church, until about five years ago, when, under my labors, in connection with Bro. Sheldon, he became a lover of the coming of Christ, and embraced the doctrine of life only through Christ, and united with the Advent church, of which he has been a faithful member until death. Funeral sermon by the writer, from Job 14: 10. G. W. BARNES.

HARRIET F. SPENCER.

Died in Natick, R. I., Aug. 17th, of whooping cough, Harriet F., only child of Edwin and Waitey A. Spencer, aged one year, eight months and three days.

Another lovely flower has faded,
Bitter tears are o'er it shed;
One more form the tomb has shaded,
One more numbered with the dead.

Funeral discourse by the writer, from Rom. 5: 14. May we all meet Harriet in Christ's kingdom.

WM. S. DEVEREUX.

Washington, Sept 2. The Herald's correspondent with the Army of the Potomac writes as follows:

"The canal at Dutch Gap will soon be ready for use. A mysterious looking, and to all appearance formidable craft, has been discovered lying in one of the creeks emptying into James river. It appears to be waiting for some monitors to pass up the James, when it will run out and cut off their retreat. The rebels are industriously engaged in erecting batteries to command our position at Dutch Gap. The rank and file of the rebel army are generally under the impression that if they desert they will be placed in our front ranks. Gen. Grant has issued an order that those who voluntarily come within our lines shall have transportation to their homes if within our lines, or to any point North that they may choose. This order will be circulated in the enemy's camps."

Propositions have been received by the Secretary of State from a prominent banker in Hamburg, offering to take a loan of one thousand millions at three per cent.,—the loan to run seventy-five years, interest payable semi-annually in coin—to be disposed of on the continent of Europe on the principle of premium loans.

☞ Twenty-five whites, including one whole family, have been murdered by the Indians near Fort Kearney. Some of the bodies were horribly mutilated.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Advices of the 17th ult.

A powerful three-funneled steamer anchored off Poynes, Ireland, on the 13th, sailed again suddenly on Saturday evening. She is supposed to be a blockade runner. A warlike party, with one of the Alabama's Lieutenants, landed. It is believed she is to carry an immense supply of clothing to the Confederates.

Saxony intends proposing the following to the German Diet: Explanations to be demanded of Austria and Prussia in reference to their having permitted the King of Denmark to cede rights to them to which the King had no title.

The Federal frigate Niagara has sailed from Lisbon. Her destination is unknown. An unexampled heat prevailed in Portugal, and crops and vines suffer exceedingly.

THREE DAYS LATER.

Liverpool, Aug. 24. Political news unimportant.

The difficulty between the American Consul and the Egyptian Government has been satisfactorily adjusted.

There has been electioneering riots and bloodshed at Geneva, Switzerland, but they have subsided.

Prince Humbert, the Crown Prince of Italy, who was on a visit to Copenhagen, was shortly expected in Paris. The Independence Belge announces a projected marriage between him and the Princess Ann Murat, and says it will strengthen the bonds between France and Italy.

London, Aug. 25. The frigate Niagara seized the rebel pirate steamer Georgia, twenty miles off Lisbon, put a prize crew on board and sent sent her to New York. The Niagara landed the captain and crew of the Georgia at Dover. The Georgia when seized was under the British flag, and her captain entered a protest against the seizure. The event excites much controversy. It was rumored that the capture was effected under the consent of the British Government.

DOMESTIC.

Fortress Monroe, Aug. 23. The Weldon Railroad is held in safety by our forces.

On Tuesday morning all was quiet with Gen. Grant's army, but another battle was expected on that day, the rebels being desirous of shaking Gen. Grant's grasp off the Weldon Railroad. The utmost confidence was felt by our forces in their ability to hold it.

Nashville, Aug. 24. Active operations in this Department await anticipated results elsewhere.

The Chattanooga Gazette of the 23d reports the rebel Gen. Wheeler at Stewart's Landing on the 20th, where he had attacked, captured, and murdered a colored garrison and nearly three hundred white laborers. He destroyed the camp and forty-four wagons, killing one white soldier and one white citizen.

New Orleans, La., Aug. 24. Fort Morgan surrendered unconditionally yesterday at 2 P. M.

By the surrender of Fort Morgan we have about 600 prisoners, 60 pieces of artillery and a large quantity of material.

In the twelve hours preceding the surrender about 3000 shells were thrown into the fort. The citadel and barracks are entirely destroyed, and the works generally much injured. Many of the guns were spiked, their carriages burned and much of their ammunition destroyed by the rebels. The loss in the army was one man killed and seven wounded.

New York, Aug. 26. The Times' Washington special dispatch says all reports attributing to the Government any movement looking to negotiations for peace are utterly unfounded.

The Times says: "The Government has not entertained or discussed the project of proposing an armistice with the rebels, nor has it any intention of sending commissioners to Richmond for the purpose of offering or soliciting terms of peace, or of negotiating with the rebel authorities on that or any other subject. Its sole and undivided purpose is to prosecute the war until the rebellion is quelled."

Washington, Sept. 1. Intelligence has been received here to-day from the West to the effect that the Indian war is of greater magnitude than has generally been supposed. A number of tribes who hitherto refused to engage in the strife have now joined hands with the hostile bands and are murdering the whites indiscriminately. Their force is estimated to be about nineteen thousand, and likely to increase.

St. Louis, Sept. 1. Late advices from Fort Reilly say Indian outrages have increased during the last ten days. On the 19th a train was attacked at Cimmerian Springs. Ten men were killed and all the stock captured. The train was abandoned.

On the 21st two hundred Indians attacked several trains, including one belonging to the Government, sixty miles west from Fort Larned. One man was killed and nearly all the stock captured.

A large band of Indians are congregating in the neighborhood of Fort Lyon, and outrages are of daily occurrence. A party coming within sight of the fort was pursued by Major Wynkoop and three or four killed. Several unprotected settlements between Fort Lyon and the base of the mountains are now receiving the attention of the Indians. Lieut. Booth of the 11th Kansas, who was sent to the relief of the citizens, reports that he saw no Indians after a scout of 160 miles. He is now encamped at Clay, the centre of the section of the country traversed by the savages, which extends from the Platte to the Arkansas river, about 400 miles.

Our present force is entirely inadequate for the work before it. Over 2000 persons have been murdered on the Platte route and 100 on the Arkansas, and $300,000 worth of property has been destroyed or captured, besides 3000 horses, and 500 mules and 2000 oxen.

A dispatch from St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 29th to the Chicago Tribune, says dispatches have been received there by Gen. Sibley from Gen. Sully, announcing a glorious and decisive victory by his forces over 1600 lodges of hostile Sioux, near little Missouri River, July 30. He destroyed immense quantities of their provisions and property. The dispatch was dated Heart River, Aug. 2, indicating that the expedition is returning to Fort Rice. Two men have been killed by the Indians near Fort Abercrombie.

One hundred thousand new troops promptly furnished are all that Gen. Grant asks for the capture of Richmond, and to give a finishing blow to the rebel armies yet in the field.

Washington, Sept. 2. Secretary Stanton received a dispatch to-day announcing the capture of Atlanta by Gen. Sherman!

The rebel Gen. Hood is in full retreat to Macon.

Since the 5th of May Sherman has been in one constant battle or skirmish.

Losses computed at 1200, with 300 rebel dead, 250 wounded and over 1500 well. Ten guns were captured.

Address orders to I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.

To all whom it may Concern.

Notice is hereby given that meetings are held in Franklin Hall, Dansville, N. Y., every Sunday, with preaching every alternate Sunday. Also prayer meetings every Thursday evening. Pilgrims are always welcome among us.

F. BURR.

Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the Second Adventists hold regular meetings in North Adams, Mass., in Cady's Hall, on Eagle street, but have no steady preaching. Will some of our preaching brethren, who have the word like fire shut up in their bones, come this way and strengthen the things that remain, which are ready to die?

A. J. MCCULLOCK, in behalf of the church.

Meetings in Chicago.

Meetings are held in Chicago, Ill., every Sabbath, at 10 1-2 and 3 o'clock, at the Hall, No. 17 Ryer Block, Dearborn Street. Entrance between Nos. 77 and 79. Ministering brethren, and others visiting Chicago, are invited to meet with us. Call upon the undersigned, on McGlashen St., between Archer Road and 22d Street.

SAMUEL L. WALTER.

A LIBERAL OFFER.

Being satisfied that time is short, and that what is done must be done quickly; and feeling anxious to do what we can to arouse a sleeping world and church, we make the following liberal offer:—

Any one who will send three or more new subscribers to the Crisis for six months or one year, with advance pay for the same, shall receive one third the value of the money sent, in any of our books and tracts they may select. For instance, if they send three dollars, they receive one dollar's worth of books or tracts; for six dollars, we send them two dollars' worth; for twelve dollars, four dollars' worth, etc.

Let every reader take hold of the work in earnest, and help scatter tracts, books and papers like autumnal leaves.

MILES GRANT, per order of Publishing Committee.

LIKENESS OF WM. MILLER, suitable for Photographic Albums. Price 25 cts.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

VALUABLE BOOKS FOR SALE.

I shall know thee in the morning,
When Jesus calls his own;
In the resurrection morning,
And heavenly joys are won;
On the right hand where they gather,
Who are fitted for the prize;
I shall know thee in the morning,
When all the saints arise.

I shall meet thee in the morning,
Where the stream of life runs fair,
Where the sunlight gilds the highlands,
And music fills the air;
Where the flower-decked arbors lavish
Their odors fresh and free,
I shall meet thee in the morning
Of a bright eternity.

I shall see thee in the morning
Of heaven's eternal light,
Where the saints of every nation
Are robed in changeless white;
With Jesus and his angels,
The glad host of the skies,
I shall see thee in the morning,
When all the saints arise.

I shall join thee in the morning,
Where partings never come,
Where those we've loved in Jesus
Forever are at home.
We'll range the plains together,
And joy in bliss untold,
I shall join thee in the morning,
Where the streets are paved with gold.

I shall greet thee in the morning,
Where sainted ones all meet;
Within those walls of jasper
We'll bow at Jesus' feet.
Where every singing seraph
His harp of glory tries,—
I shall greet thee in the morning,
When all the saints arise.

I shall know thee in the morning,
With the waking sainted dead,
Cheered by the gladsome presence
Of Christ our living Head;
Arrayed in robes of brightness,
Exultant for the prize;
I shall know thee in the morning,
When all the saints arise.

MY WESTERN TOUR.—NO. 6.

In company with my esteemed brother, H. G. McCullock, and by his conveyance, I traveled over a most beautiful country, making calls on brethren by the way, with whom I had pleasant interviews, until I came to Clinton, and put up for the night with Eld. N. W. Spencer, at whose pleasant home I felt quite contented. It is cheering to meet with those who have borne "the burden and heat of the day," and are prepared to sympathize with us in our hope. Bro. Spencer is highly esteemed by the household of faith in his vicinity. May God abundantly bless and strengthen him for his work. Be encouraged, my brother, and go forward.

Aug. 3d, in company with Bro. McCullock, visited some families, and in the evening preached to a good audience of attentive listeners upon the "blessed hope" of eternal life at "the glorious appearing" of Jesus. Trust the meeting was profitable to the cause of truth. At the close of the meeting, parted with Bro. McCullock, to whom I had become quite attached, each to go his way and preach "the gospel of the kingdom," and prepare a people for the Lord. Sojourned with Father Marsh, an old Adventist, who is deeply interested in the study and advocacy of "present truth." Was kindly cared for and helped on my way by them and others in the place.

Aug. 4th started on foot, staff in hand, for Bro. Hiram DeWolf's, in Shabbona, the place of my next appointment. The land about Shabbona Grove, which contains fourteen hundred acres of woodland, is rolling prairie, of the best kind for farming. Here are beautiful farms, where only a few years since old "Shabbony," an Indian chief of the Pottawattamie tribes, held his court in the grove within a few rods of where I now write. Some thrilling stories have been told me of Indian times; of the cruelties practised upon early settlers during the Black Hawk war, similar to the recent massacre in Minnesota, some of the sufferers in which I have seen and conversed with, having been within a few miles of the locality itself.

At eight in the evening met a small congregation at the school-house, Bro. Spencer being present, to whom I preached the word of life, and had a fair time. Cares seem to press heavily upon the farmers just now, being the busiest season of the harvest period. I received some help here, and found a christian welcome at Bro. DeWolf's, where I sojourned during the time of my stay.

Aug. 5th, passed through a most beautiful country by Paw Paw Grove, a distance of fourteen miles, to Earle, a fine village on the Burlington and Quincy R. R. Called at the residence of Bro. Kelsey, but finding the family absent, I sought other friends, and was directed to the residence of Bro. J. N. Towle, an Adventist belonging to the Methodist church, by whom I was kindly received and cared for at his home during my stay. Bro. Towle preaches some, and feeling interested in my visit, as the Good Templars were to occupy the hall that evening, he secured a tavern hall, where I preached to an interested congregation. About the time the service commenced, a troupe of Circus performers arrived from Mendota, one hundred in number, several of whom came into the hall, and others of them heard below. The cause of truth needs reviving in this place, as there is not the interest here now there has been in other days; yet there are good brethren, several of whom I visited, but they seem rather disheartened. May they be enabled to "trust in God and do good." Here I was assisted as in other places. From Earle I journeyed to Amboy on the Central R. R., by the way of Mendota, arriving at two P. M., Aug. 6th, and met Eld. D. S. Clarke at the depot, in whom I found a worthy christian brother and fellow laborer, and at whose pleasant home I received every needed comfort during the time of my stay. The cause of truth is prospering here, although its adversaries are many, and strong. By the judicious, persevering, and self-sacrificing labor of Eld. Clark and others, an interesting church has been raised up, to whom I preached three times on the Sabbath, in Goldman's Hall, a very good place, hired by the church for regular services. May they be united and persevering to the end, and ere long have a house of their own in which to worship the God of their fathers and proclaim his truth. Amboy is a beautiful city of three thousand inhabitants, and an important point in the west so far as Advent interests are concerned. This place is the present residence of Elds. Maybey and Burrington, with whom I formed a pleasing acquaintance, and of whom I heard a good report. Eld. Wm. McCulloch, and several others from his vicinity (Bureau Co., ten miles distant), were present at our meeting, and aided [illegible]. It is very pleasant to meet fellow pilgrims, but oh! the final meeting.

"And if our fellowship below
In Jesus be so sweet,
What heights of rapture shall we know
When round his throne we meet!"

Oh! I hope soon to meet with the elders and brethren of whom I have read, and with whom I have met in my journeyings, whose labors and trials I know by experience, and for whom I feel such a warm sympathy. Oh! ye battlers for the "crown of life," be faithful, and pray for me. I received a liberal contribution here, to aid in meeting the expense of travel, and left the place well satisfied with my visit.

Parted with Eld. Clark and family at noon, Aug. 8th, and went by the Central R. R. to Lasalle, but arrived too late to connect with the train on the Rock Island road, and therefore visited a coal mine near by, where they raise coal from the depth of five hundred feet, and have excavated three-fourths of a mile in one direction, and nearly that in every direction from the bottom of the shaft, some two hundred men being employed in this subterranean world. Veins of coal at different depths underlie a large part of the State of Illinois, and it is much needed, as wood is very scarce, and coal and cobs the principal fuel.

From Lasalle I journeyed by carriage to Utica, on the Illinois river, where I found a good home at Bro. Jas. Fullerton's, with whom I visited several points of interest,—as a petrified spring, where the moss becomes stone; and "Starved Rock," on the southern bank of the Illinois river, a round column of rock, its sides perhaps perpendicular, and nearly one hundred feet in height on the river side, its top comprising about an acre of soil, with only one way of access originally, up a difficult way of ascent, where many years ago a tribe of Indians, being pursued by their enemies, were driven for safety. Their pursuers took a position on another rock near by, which was as high, and rained their arrows upon them, which caused them to throw up a breastwork of earth which is plainly to be seen now. Finally, the besieging party concluded to let hunger and thirst do the work, and so guarded the passage, thus preventing their escape; cut off their cords when they would attempt to draw water from the river, and waited until they were all silent in death. Hence the name "Starved Rock" has been given, and the place is visited by hundreds every year, as inscriptions and other appearances testify.

I saw and conversed with Bro. Jas. Clarke, one of the principal farmers and business men of the place, whose farm contains twenty-five hundred acres, who told me that he had six hundred acres of corn planted this year, which looks well. The farmers are becoming wealthy, and wickedness is on the increase, of which fact I am more and more assured every day, and the love of many, yea, of the greatest number, waxes cold, while the prospect is that but few of this generation will "endure unto the end" and "be saved." How much there is to be done by those who look for Jesus, and how short the time for labor. What is done must be done quickly. Let us be in earnest. Let those whom God and his church have called to do so, "labor in word and doctrine," and all others in their capacity, and to the full extent of their ability,—by exhortation, prayer, and the power of a good example,—giving of their means to support the gospel proclamation; and when the Master comes he will say "Well done."

There are no Adventists in this place, as I can learn. The family where I find a home are Methodists, of the friendly kind, and my views of truth are new to them, yet they hear with interest. May God bless them for their christian kindness. I expect to leave here to-morrow for Lockport, if the will of God be so. CHAS. P. DOW.

For the World's Crisis.

TO THE AFFLICTED IN THE LORD.

Once more my kind and heavenly Father has permitted me to be laid on a bed of affliction. In obedience to the command I was anointed "with oil in the name of the Lord, and the prayer of faith, . . . and the Lord" has raised me up, and "in love to my soul delivered it from the pit of corruption," as he did Hezekiah of old. Blessed be His holy name who in mercy spares me. Knowing what affliction is, I would offer a few remarks of consolation to the afflicted ones in the Lord.

This is a world of sorrow and trials. One painful event succeeds another in rapid succession; but it is blessed to have faith in God's promises, and share the consolations of the gospel. I bless God, "who hath comforted me in all my tribulation," that I am able to comfort those who are in any trouble, by the comfort wherewith I myself have been comforted of God. "For as the sufferings of Christ abound in us, so our consolation aboundeth also by Christ," whereby we are enabled to rejoice in God always. "Rejoice in tribulation" is a command, and should be obeyed; and the reason given is, that it worketh patience, experience, and hope. These are graces much to be desired, for patience enables us to endure the ills and trials of life; experience is always good, for it yields hope, and hope takes hold of eternal life. And what comfort to know that these trials are soon to terminate, and then the joy will be such as never entered the heart of man to conceive. Then let us rejoice in tribulation.

God is good, and his mercy endureth forever. He doeth all things well, and does not willingly afflict his people. Let us not, then, "despise the chastening of the Lord, nor faint when we are rebuked of him; for whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth." It is well to bear in mind that the Lord does not see fit to reveal his motives in affliction. The why and wherefore are best known to himself; but that there is a needs be is at all times certain.

I have no sympathy with the thought that all affliction is chastisement from the hand of God; for although there cannot be chastisement without affliction, there may be affliction without chastisement. Hence we find (John 15) that not only the unfruitful branches were subjected to chastisement and judgment, cut off as withered and worthless for use, and therefore unfit for the place of testimony; but we find that there were other branches, fruitful branches, too, which needed purging, not because they were not fruitful, but that they might bear fruit more abundantly. "Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit."

There is nothing more common in nature than to see a husbandman pruning his trees, that the branches themselves may be kept in a healthy state. Now, it is just so, I apprehend, with our Father, the Husbandman. We may rest assured of this, that every stroke of the pruning knife will be pregnant with blessing. You know, beloved children, that we cannot as children properly lay claim to perfectness of judgment; to understand what the mind of the Lord is in every act of discipline; we will not, I am sure, if we be obedient children, ever question its propriety.

We have a Father whose heart abounds with affection. He does not use the rod at random, but knows precisely where and when to strike the blow. Yes, with a keenness of perception which baffles all the stealthiness of the adversary, and all the subtlety of our own sinful hearts, his eye detects the slightest inroad which the world makes upon our affections, and because he loves us, he is there to stop its course. At times, his ways of dealing may seem trifling; so much so, that the hearts of his children may be ready to ask, "Hath the Lord forgotten to be gracious; is his mercy clean gone for ever?" He does not sit an unmoved spectator of his children's sorrows; for as a "father pitieth his children, so the Lord hath mercy on them that fear Him;" for "he knoweth our frame, he remembereth that we are dust." Not a tear, nor throb, nor sigh, but what is seen and felt by him. His compassion would perhaps remove the suffering; but that would frustrate the very purposes of love. Our Abba will not allow one pang more than is necessary, nor permit it to remain one moment longer than needful.

The thorn in the flesh of the apostle Paul is a striking instance of discipline; it was chastisement of a preventive character; it was something thrown in by the Lord to act as a provisional check upon something which might hereafter manifest itself. Mark the word, "Lest I should be exalted above measure."

No, God chastens us not for pleasure, but always for our profit, "that we may be made partakers of his holiness." This is a great and necessary attainment; without it no man can see the Lord. In view of such blessings, shall we complain of a little affliction? Shall we murmur and repine, and feel as if the Lord were a hard Master? What! "shall we receive good at the hand of the Lord and not evil?" "Will not the Judge of all the earth do right?" Can he do wrong? Say, ye afflicted ones, can he do wrong?

Again, no affliction is for the present joyous, but grievous; "nevertheless afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruits of righteousness unto them that are exercised thereby." This is good fruit, it takes hold of the kingdom; for the righteous only are permitted to enter through the gates into the city, and have a right to the tree of life. God help us to endure, and so overcome as to receive a crown of righteousness when Christ shall appear. Yea, rejoice in tribulation, rejoice with exceeding great joy in view of the glory set before us, "though now for a season, if needs be, ye are in heaviness through manifold temptations, that the trial of your faith, being much more precious than gold that perisheth . . . might be found unto praise, and honor, and glory, at the appearing of Jesus Christ." 1 Pet. 1: 6, 7.

If now patient, in the kingdom we shall have honor. Says an elder, "Who are those arrayed in white robes?" And the answer was, "These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb."

Afflictions yield glory. Hear, ye afflicted ones, and rejoice! "These light afflictions which are but for a moment, worketh out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." Look at this promise—at its fulness of glory! See! for every sigh, pang, or groan, God lays on the other scale a weight of glory. O God! how shall we praise thee as we ought? Shall we ever murmur or repine? O, no! let us rejoice alway. What more can we ask? God is faithful, who will fulfill. Let us believe, and, believing, let us rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory; for these exceeding great and precious promises are given unto us that we may be made partakers of the divine nature. 2 Pet. 1: 4. And remember these promises are sure; they are yea and amen in Christ Jesus; they cannot fail. They were confirmed by the oath of God, "that by two immutable things, in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have strong consolation," etc. We may not wonder that the Hebrew youths could walk composed through the furnace, or the martyrs shout victory until their voices were lost in death. So let us trust in God, and in all our afflictions rejoice in him always.

But one more promise; in affliction's darkest hour it never fails; it is the fulness of the ocean of God's love to his poor afflicted people here. Hear it: "And we know that all things shall work together for good to them that love God."—Rom. 8: 28. Do you love God? Then this promise is yours, and it will never fail you. Mark! Paul says, by inspiration, "we know." Then let us try it in every circumstance in life. It cannot fail; however dark, however severe the affliction, however great the suffering, it is one of the "all things" that work together for our good. Standing by faith upon it, we may

"Smile at Satan's rage,
And face a frowning world."

Afflicted ones, what think you? With such consolations, can we not suffer joyfully, and "rejoice alway," yea, rejoice in tribulation? God in due time will deliver and give us the victory, and crown us with glory.

For the World's Crisis.

FRIENDSHIP.

The friendship of the world is vain, deceitful. Just where you need it most will it fail you. In order to our happiness we must have friends. God knows we are but human; hence he gives us help. And as the friendship of the ungodly world is fleeting, he gives us the "fellowship of saints," commanding us to "love one another." And if the church would love "as Christ hath loved us," we might derive great benefits from such fellowship.

But, ah! how uncertain, how selfish, how false is much that is called "christian love." To-day you are, "dear," "kind," "precious," "true saint"; to-morrow, with no change on your part, you are cast off as an heathen, and instead of warm greetings, holy kisses, you receive cold words, colder looks, and any amount of slander among the neighbors. Such will love you as long as you sit under their influence, listen to what they say, give all they ask for, have "all things common" so far as your baggage is concerned; but when you cease to fill up their greedy, selfish mouths, you that was once called "generous" become "covetous," "stingy," and "unchristian." And where they have called you a "saint" once, they will now call you a sinner twice. Such friendship as this I do not desire.

But the FRIENDSHIP OF JESUS! Here is true friendship. He says, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." And, true to his word, he is with us in sickness, in health, at home and abroad, pitying us, loving us, blessing us continually.

Tried, lone, weary pilgrim, be not discouraged. Though professed friends forsake thee, or cast thee off coldly, without telling you your cause of offence, remember that Jesus loves you, and will bring you home to be with him in his glory at last. Look up! Let the Devil rage; all he can do is to foam out his own shame, and all these hard speeches will be reckoned when the judgment comes.

Stand on God's promises. Learn to live independent of human sympathy. Learn to live as though you depended altogether on the love of God, as you honestly do. Oh! how blessed to lean on the arm of the Lord, to look up and receive the smiles of Jehovah, to know that "the Lord my Shepherd is"; that "I am his and he is mine." Truly, "what can I want beside?" "I WILL NOT LET THEE GO."

I will not let thee go, thou help in time of need!
Heap ill on ill,
I trust thee still;
E'en when it seems as thou would'st slay indeed!
Do as thou wilt with me,
I yet will cling to thee;
Hide thou thy face, yet help in time of need,
I will not let thee go!

I will not let thee go; should I forsake my bliss?
Lo, Lord, thou'rt mine,
And I am thine,
Thee will I hold when all things else I miss.
Though dark and sad the night,
Joy cometh with thy light,
O thou my Sun! should I forsake my bliss?
I will not let thee go!

I will not let thee go, my God, my Life, my Lord!
Not death can tear
Me from his care,
Who for my sake his soul in death outpoured.
Thou diedst for love to me,
I say in love to thee,
E'en when my heart shall break, my God, my Life, my Lord,
I will not let thee go.

For the World's Crisis.

"PHILO THEO."

BRO. GRANT:—In the Religious Telescope of June 29th, there appeared an article from the pen of one who styles himself "Philo Theo," who feels greatly grieved (and we sympathize with him), to think that a U. B. preacher has become an "Adventist." Well, in his article he remarks about "Sheldon & Co.," indicating that he was acquainted with them, and about one whose "address is J. R. Preston, Floyd, Iowa," who receives the "Crisis," "gratis, of course," and some other things, some of which he has right, and some of which he has not right. Of the real merit of these remarks we do not now propose to speak, only would remark that we wonder a dear brother manifesting such loveliness of character should be ashamed to give his own name. We know of no reason why he should withhold it, unless it is because he fears "Sheldon & Co.," in whose shade he rests (as "Philo Theo") very securely, no doubt. For one, I am quite confident that "Sheldon & Co." would not harm him if his name should be revealed. The inference is just in all such cases, that the production is like a child without a father, or whose father is ashamed to make himself known. Of the production we will not speak further at present, only to say that we have no fears of its rising higher than the source from whence it sprang, i. e., "Philo Theo" fiction. J. R. PRESTON.

GONE TO THE ADVENTISTS.

BRO. BERGER:—Did you ever look over the columns of a paper, hailing from Boston, called the World's Crisis? It is a wonderful sheet, professing to bring forth things "new and old"—as old as the days of Millerism, and as new as the conversion of a certain U. B. preacher to the "like precious faith." In our Savior's days there were men to whom he said: "Ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte, and when he is made ye make him two fold more the child of hell than yourselves." Now these silly Scribes and Pharisees are all quiet "long ago," but the proselyters are not all dead yet.

Indeed, one would think that making two-fold children of hell had become an honorable business in our day, to see how the proselyters glory in their success. But well may they glory, for they have discovered that hell is only the grave; and as Jesus promised to meet the penitent thief in Paradise on the same day that he went into the grave, therefore (carrying out Adventist logic,) hell and paradise are the same, and who would not glory in winning children to Paradise? But let us notice a case:

On the 12th of April this Advent trumpet (the Crisis) blew one loud blast to the strain of "A Convert to the Truth." Then went on to state that a "prominent United Brethren preacher had become convinced of the truth," and had "commenced to preach the Gospel of the Kingdom," and that "he felt like a babe in Christ, and desired instruction, and would like to have the Crisis sent to him;" that his address is J. R. Preston, Floyd, Iowa. To all of which the editor heartily responded, "We will send it" gratis, I suppose, of course.

Well, what do you suppose the next number of the Crisis brought forth? A communication from Rev. Mr. Preston himself, a few items of which I shall here briefly review. In the first place he states that he had "become one with the sect that is everywhere spoken against," and that he had been for three years a minister and pastor in the U. B. Church, etc. And then says, "Yet I had not learned the truth that the Bible reveals so plainly, that 'if the dead rise not, then they also that are fallen asleep in Christ are perished,' and that Christ shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and kingdom," etc., etc. Now, the question proposes itself to my mind, and probably to yours, Mr. Editor: Can it be possible that the Iowa Conference would grant preaching license to a man who is ignorant of these fundamental doctrines of orthodox theology, or shall we infer, simply, that the good brother had not viewed these glorious passages of Scripture through Advent spectacles in all these three years? My opinion favors the latter conclusion, from the fact that, a little lower down the column, he adds, "How any man can read and compare with the word of God, such works as Ghostology, by W. Sheldon"—which pamphlet, by the way, is a regular bombastic, satirical tirade against the doctrine of the immortality of the soul, and an insult to common sense, and you would probably consider it a bundle of blasphemy. But he says, "How any candid man can read" this work, and several others of a kindred spirit which he names, "and not see the truth," etc., "is greatly surprising to me." And a little lower he says, "For my part, I wonder that I did not see these things before, from simply reading the Word." Ah! indeed, there is the rub. Has it ever been known that a man has "seen these things from simply reading the Word"? But men always see these things (no-soulisms) from reading the Word in and through these wonderful no-soul tracts.

Now, I don't know this man—have never heard of him before. But I would say to all the brethren and sisters of his acquaintance and within the range of his influence, "Look before you leap" in his tracks. For, if he is a faithful disciple of Sheldon and Co., he will, as a matter of course, feel it his duty "to more thoroughly instruct the brethren in the faith." But as I do not wish to make this a local matter, but intend to write more particularly for those readers of the Telescope who do not yet understand fully what it means to become an Adventist, I proceed with the review:

Mr. Preston says, "To me, now, the Bible is a new book," and finally closes thus: "I expect at the earliest opportunity to identify myself with the christian brethren and take part in the ministry, preaching the faith which I once destroyed."

This implies, of course, that every one to whom the Bible reads now as it did ten, twenty or fifty years ago, is an old fogy, a bigot, a "blind leader, etc., and that if we ever want to get ourselves and our flocks into the "kingdom," we must at once "right face about" and begin to destroy the faith which we once preached.

Now, Mr. Editor, will you please sit down with me a few minutes, and with me look over a few items of the changes I must make in my theology, in order to become a brother and co-worker with Mr. Preston? Judging from what my own ears have heard from the lips of Mr. Sheldon and his colleagues, I must preach—

1st. That man has not more of a soul than a dog, and that the breath of life which God breathed into his nostrils, so that he became a living soul, was only a puff of wind, and when he dies he will go into the grave, soul and body, until the day of Judgment.

2d. That at the end of the world Christ will restore this earth to its Eden beauty, and will take his seat (literally) upon David's throne, and will reign over the righteous, as a literal monarch, forever and ever, and that the wicked will be called forth from their graves and will immediately be burned up, soul and body, and become ashes under the feet of the righteous.

3d. That the ten commandments are the "Old dead Schoolmaster," and that the Sabbath was not designed "for man," but for the Jew only; and therefore we, being under grace and the gospel, have no Sabbath at all, but should esteem "every day alike."

4. And, when I meet a good brother or sister who thinks that a departed bosom companion or child has gone to heaven, I must tell them that that is all "tradition," and that there never has a soul gone to Heaven, nor never will one go there.

But I am too tedious. If any of your readers wish too see the remainder of this wonderful creed, I must write again, "if the Lord wills." PHILO THEO.

Wisconsin, June 12th, 1864.

SIN AND FOLLY OF SCOLDING.

"Fret not thyself to do evil."—Ps. 37: 2.

1. It is a sin against God.—It is an evil and only evil, and that continually. David understood both human nature and the law of God. He says, "Fret not thyself in any wise to do evil." That is, never fret or scold, for it is always a sin. If you cannot speak without fretting or scolding, keep silence.

2. It destroys Affection.—No one ever did, ever can, or ever will love an habitual fretter, fault-finder, or scolder. Husbands, wives, children, relatives or domestics, have no affection for peevish, fretful fault-finders. Few tears are shed over the graves of such. Persons of high moral principle may tolerate them—may also bear with them. But they cannot love them more than the sting of nettles or the noise of mosquitoes. Many a man has been sent to the tavern and to dissipation, by a peevish wife. Many a wife has been made miserable by a peevish, fretful husband.

3. It is the bane of Domestic Happiness.—A fretful, peevish, complaining fault-finder in a family is like the continual chafing of an inflamed sore. Woe to the man, woman, or child, who is exposed to the influence of such a temper in another. Nine-tenths of all domestic trials and unhappiness spring from this source. Mrs. A. is of this temperament. She wonders her husband is not more fond of her company. That her children give her so much trouble. That domestics do not like to work for her. That she cannot secure the good will of young people. The truth is that she is peevish and fretful. Children fear her, and do not love her. She never gained the affection of a young person, nor never will till she leaves off fretting.

4. It defeats the end of Family Government.—Good family government is the blending of authority with affection, so as to secure respect and love. Indeed, it is the great secret of managing young people. Now your fretters may inspire fear, but they always make two faults where they correct one. Scolding at a child, fretting at a child, taunting a child, treating a child as though it had no feeling, inspires dread and dislike, and fosters those very dispositions, from which many of the faults of childhood proceed. Mr. G. and Mrs. F. are of this class. Their children are made to mind: but how? Mrs. F. frets and scolds her children. She is severe enough upon their faults; she sneers at them; treats them as though they had no feelings. She seldom gives them a command without a long running fault-finding commentary. When she chides it is not done in a dignified manner. She raises her voice, puts on a cross look, threatens, strikes them, pinches their ears, slaps their heads, etc. The children cry, pout, sulk, and poor Mrs. F. has to do her work over pretty often. Then she will find fault with her husband because he does not fall in with her ways, or chime with her as chorus.

5. Fretting and scolding make Hypocrites.—As a fretter never receives confidence and affection, so no one likes to tell them anything disagreeable, and thus procure for themselves a fretting. Now children conceal as much as they can from such persons. They cannot make up their minds to be frank and open hearted. So husbands conceal from their wives and wives from their husbands. For a man may brave a lion, but he likes not to come in contact with nettles and mosquitoes.

6. It destroys one's peace of Mind.—The more one frets the more he may. A fretter will always have enough to fret at, especially if he or she has the bump of order and neatness largely developed. Something will always be out of place. There will always be some dirt somewhere. Others will not eat right, look right, talk right. And fretters are generally so selfish as to have no regard for any man's comfort, but their own.

7. It is a mark of a Vulgar Disposition.—Some persons have so much gall in their disposition, are so selfish, that they have no regard to the feelings of others. All things must be done to please them. They make their husbands, wives, children, domestics, the conductors by which their spleen and ill-health are discharged. Woe to the children who are exposed to such influence. It makes them callous and unfeeling, and when they grow up pursue the same course with their own children, or those entrusted to their management, and thus the race of fretters is perpetuated. Any person who is in the habit of fretting or sneering, taunting their husbands, wives, children, or domestics, show either a bad disposition or ill-bred people that are guilty of such things.

☞ One of the surest evidences of friendship that one individual can display to another is telling him gently of his fault. If any other can excel it, it is listening to such a disclosure with gratitude, and amending the error.

Hygiene.

"This is thy your health."—Paul.

THE BODY, MIND, AND HEART.

One of the most fruitful sources of ill-health among our people is the depression or undue excitement of the vital forces by reason of unhealthful and unnatural wear and tear of mind,—wear of mind by too much care, responsibility, anxiety and fretting; and tear of it by disappointment, vexation, unhappiness, sorrow and wretchedness. There is no necessity of making an argument to prove the intimate relations of body and mind, and the influence of one upon the other, to convince any person who has lived long in the world that states of body are decidedly affected by states of mind. The mother tending her child in dangerous illness becomes worn and weary,—sick at heart and sick in body, without elasticity or energy. It is only under the strongest promptings of the will that the body can drag itself about to its duties. But let a sudden and decided change for the better come over the patient, and the physician say "your child is out of danger and will live;" and almost immediately, under this new hope, does her physical strength and energy revive! Her weariness is all gone, and she can go with lightness and gladness to any duty.

Every reader must have had many illustrations of this principle in his own exerience. Every one must have had times when he has felt his bodily powers enfeebled under depression of mind, from fear, dread, disappointment, hope deferred, or sorrow; and has witnessed how readily the bodily conditions have responded to the happier conditions of mind when the depression has been removed. A temporary depression of spirits may not appreciably affect the bodily conditions permanently, but chronic depression of spirits, a fear carried permanently in the mind, or a burden of any sort, be it of disappointment or grief, or doubt, affects the health in a very sensible manner.

A large proportion of our people use up a good share of their vitality in mere fretting; in restlessness, and unsatisfied longings. There can be no doubt that there is truth in the statement that members of the Society of Friends, who carry out their principles in their lives, are a longer lived class of persons than any other. One chief aim of their religion is to cultivate in them great calmness and equanimity of mind and temper, with peace of heart—agencies by no means less health-giving than sunshine or rain, food or clothing, air or sleep. It has become a fashion and a passion with many people to make the most of any trouble or trial that they may have. Some persons seem to think that there is virtue in being as unhappy as possible over any event which is a real affliction. If they have lost friends by death, they seem to have a sort of impression that they are to be more honored and esteemed by the community if they are heart-broken and inconsolable, than if they were to lift themselves above their sorrow and be hopeful, courageous and cheerful. The longer one grieves for a friend, the more he considers himself entitled to the sympathy and respect of the community. When persons have great responsibilities, they take credit to themselves if they allow those responsibilities to rest upon them with mountain weight, all the time, day and night. Even in the little annoyances and troubles of every day life, persons take comfort in making the most of them, not only to themselves, but to others. A woman delights in multiplying her trials by telling them to every person whom she meets. It is far better when one is surrounded by unpleasant circumstances, to think of something which is fortunate and pleasant, and to talk of that.

If, then, uneasiness, fretfulness and unhappiness are productive of ill-health; the converse of the statement is no less true, that happiness, quietness and peace of mind are health restoring. It is undeniable that these are conducive to health. Above all things should we cultivate a spirit of trust in God, and be at peace with him.—Laws of Life.

SHAPE OF LASTS, BOOTS AND SHOES.

A favorable change has lately taken place in the shape of the lasts that are employed to give form to boots and shoes. They are not only made broader at the toe than formerly, but also nearly straight on the inner side, with a right line passing through the centre of the heel and the arch to the extremity of the great toe. Such lasts correspond more nearly in form to the anatomic structure of the foot. For this reform the public are indebted to Herman Meyer, Professor of Anatomy in the University of Zurich, who published a pamphlet on the Anatomy of the Foot, in relation to the Form of Boots and Shoes, to which we directed attention on page 266, Vol. VII. (new series,) of the Scientific American. The Chinese have been ridiculed for practicing the custom of deforming the feet of their women, by subjecting them to a cramping, dwarfing operation from infancy. But nations of a more reputable civilization have for centuries been as blind to their own shortcomings respecting the feet of both sexes and all classes. Thus it has been customary to make children's and ladies' shoes of the form called straight, narrow at the toe, without regard to the form of the foot, so that they could be changed on the feet daily. It has also been customary to make men's right and left boots and shoes more narrow at the toe than the normal size of the foot. Ridiculous ideas respecting the shape of boots and shoes have occasionally been displayed in fashionable circles, and until recently correct ideas have not been entertained by any class. Deformity of the toes of the feet is quite common, more especially among men who have been accustomed to stand and walk a great deal. The smaller toes are usually cramped up and the large toe bent out of line, causing a deformed projection of its joint. These evils are due to the wearing of ill-formed boots and shoes. If we look at the form of a child's foot, we notice that the heel is narrow compared with the front part of the foot, where the toes spread out like a fan, and the large one is separated from the second by a small space, and is also in a straight line with the inner edge of the foot.

The little foot of a child is very beautiful, and very different from the same foot after having been subjected to the cramping operation of common boots and shoes for fifteen or twenty years. The ancient Greeks, so celebrated for correct ideas in matters of taste, followed nature in their works of art; hence, they have left us the most perfect models in works of sculpture. The feet of their female figures have the great toe slightly parted from the second, and straight in line with the inner edge of the foot; and fashion should conform to this standard in boots and shoes, as a departure from it exhibits an abnormal taste.

Professor Meyer says:—"All feet are perfectly alike in the principles of their mechanical construction, and the only differences in our healthy feet are those arising from varying length and breadth. In the original form of the foot we never meet with those essential differences designated by shoemaker's 'straight or bent feet,' and still less with such variations in which the great toe lies over, or with the thickness of the ball at its root." He attributes corns, bunions, gout, chilblains, unseemly protuberances and growing-in nails to the unsuitable form of the shoes in established use.

Shoemakers and last-makers have been blind to the anatomy of the foot, and the cause of toe deformity so prevalent everywhere. Advertisements, such as "lasts made here according to the shape of the foot" are quite common. In such places lasts are made from plaster casts of the feet. The idea is wrong, as boots and shoes made upon such lasts only tend to perpetuate evils. Lasts should be made according to the normal, not to the distorted, form of the feet. The chief defect in the form of lasts heretofore has been in making them too narrow at the front of the foot, and sloping them from the root to the point of the great toe. Boots and shoes made upon such models, press the great toe upon the small ones, and the joint at the metatarsal bone is thrust out of line, so that it forms a protuberance on the inner side of the foot.

The reform which has commenced in the making of boots and shoes is more in accordance with the anatomical structure of the foot, and we hope will be productive of lasting benefits. Nature, not the whims of fashion, should be consulted in the manufacture of boots and shoes.—Scientific American.

WHAT IF CLOTHES TAKE FIRE?

Perhaps three persons out of four would rush right up to the burning individual and begin to paw with their hands without any definite aim. It is useless to tell the victim to do this or that, or to call for water. In fact, it is generally best to say not a word, but tear up the carpet, or seize a blanket from the bed, or a cloak, or any woolen fabric—if none, is at hand, take any woolen material hold the corners as far apart as you can, stretch them out higher than your head, and running boldly to the person, make the motion of clasping in the arms most about the shoulders; this instantly smothers the fire and saves the face. The next instant throw the unfortunate on the floor; this is an additional safety to the face and breath, and any remnant of flame can be put out more leisurely. The next instant immerse the burned part in cold water, and pain will cease with the rapidity of lightning. Next get some common flour, remove from the water, and cover the burned parts with an inch thickness of the flour if possible. Put the patient to bed and do all that is possible to soothe, until the physician arrives. Let the flour remain until it falls off of itself, when a beautiful new skin will be found. Unless the burns are deep, no other application is needed.

The dry flour for burns is the most admirable remedy ever proposed, and the information ought to be imparted to all; the principle of its action is, that, like the water, it causes instant and perfect relief from pain by totally excluding the air from the injured parts. Dredge on the flour until no more will stick, and cover with cotton batting.

FACTS ABOUT THE BODY.

The number of bones in the frame-work of the human body is 260; 108 of which are in the feet and hands, there being in each 27.

The quantity of blood in adults is on an average about thirty pounds, which passes through the heart once in four minutes.

One tenth of the human body is solid matter. A dead body weighing 120 lbs., was dried in the oven till all moisture was expelled, and its weight was reduced to twelve pounds. Egyptian mummies are bodies thoroughly dried; they usually weigh about seven pounds.

The lungs of an adult ordinarily inhale thirty cubic inches of air at once, and if we breathe twenty times in a minute, the quantity of air consumed in that time will be eight hundred cubic inches, or 48,000 inches an hour, and 1,151,000 inches in a day, which is equal to thirty-six hogsheads.

EATING CANDIES AND SUGAR.—Sugar eaten to any extent thickens the blood, makes the complexion pale and sallow, generates maggots in the flesh, produces pimples and scrofula, lays the foundation of many dreadful and permanent diseases in the system. Candies are as bad—and colored candies are poisonous. Parents, do not allow your children to indulge in sweets or acids, if you would have thin blood flow purely and undiseased in their veins, and impart a roseate tinge of blooming health to their countenance.—Ex.

ANTIDOTE FOR POISON.—Mix two ounces of powdered chalk or magnesia, or one ounce of washing soda, with a pint of milk, and swallow at one draught, then tickle the back of the throat with a feather or finger, so as to produce vomiting. Afterwards drink freely of hot milk and water, and repeat the vomiting so as to thoroughly wash out the stomach. Any quantity of chalk or magnesia may be taken with safety, but soda in large quantities is injurious.—Ex.

CURE FOR CORNS.—Pare the corn as close as you can, then get a thin piece of India-rubber cloth, about the twentieth of an inch thick, (the pure India-rubber is best, but that made of cotton will do), and cover the corn well. By continuing the application from four to six weeks, and paring the corn as the callous skin loosens, the corn will disappear. The application of the rubber will give immediate relief to the pain.

CUTS AND WOUNDS.—The smoke of burning wool, if applied to cuts and bleeding wounds, is said to produce immediate relief and cure, by coagulating the albumen. Ulcers and cutaneous diseases are also said to experience benefit from the same treatment.

AIR.—"Marching Along."

We soon shall be home where the weary ones rest,
Safe, safe in the mansions prepared for the blest;
Though fierce be the conflict, it cannot be long,
So we'll gird on the armor and keep marching along.

CHORUS.

Marching along, we'll keep marching along,
Rejoicing in hope we are marching along;
The Bridegroom is coming! and this is our song,
So we'll gird on the armor and keep marching along.

From friends we have parted, through perils we've past;
Thank God, we are nearing the harbor at last;
The night has been dreary, the foe has been strong,
Yet CHRIST is our Leader,—we'll keep marching along.

The morning will break and the glory will come,
And saints be at rest in their blest Eden home;
We'll stand on Mount Zion with all the ransomed throng,
If we gird on the armor and keep marching along.

There's joy for the mourner, there's wealth for the poor,
And life for the dying upon the other shore;
Thank God for the promise, it makes our courage strong,
So we'll gird on the armor and keep marching along.

The report of the committee on Credentials was accepted and adopted, as was also the report of the Business Committee already given. The minutes of the A. C. A. were then read by the Secretary and approved, whereupon it was Moved, That we adjourn till to-morrow at 8 1-2 o'clock A. M. Carried.

Wednesday, Aug. 24th, 8 1-2 A. M. Bro. S. G. Mathewson, Vice President, in the Chair. Prayer was offered by Bro. H. L. Hastings, after which the committee on Credentials received other names upon which to report. The Chair appointed Brn. Geo. T. Adams, J. Hemenway, and I. C. Wellcome as nominating committee for the A. C. A.; and Brn. D. R. Mansfield, A. W. Sibley and I. Damman, as nominating committee for the C. P. S. The committee on Credentials made an additional report, which on motion was accepted, and the names reported were received as members of this meeting. [For convenience' sake these names have been included in the list already given.]

The name of Bro. R. Wendell not appearing in the above report, although given to the committee, it was

Moved, That the name of R. Wendell be accepted as a member of this Association. After some discussion the motion was withdrawn for the introduction of the following resolution, viz:

Whereas, Certain persons have associated themselves together under the name and title of "The Life and Advent Union," and have by their acts placed themselves in a position antagonistic to the purposes of this Association; Resolved, That we consider the members of such Union as having withdrawn from this body, and while connected with said Union as ineligible to membership in this body. The above resolution was passed by a full and hearty vote.

The President of the C. P. S., Bro. H. L. Hastings, then made his annual report to the Association, giving a brief view of the work accomplished during the year, calling attention to the present financial condition of the Society, and pointing out certain reforms which seemed to be demanded for the efficiency of the Society, the importance of which was impressed upon the meeting by a statement of certain alleged facts. On motion, the President's report was accepted, whereupon it was Voted, That the report of the President of the C. P. S. be submitted to a committee of three chosen by the Association, with power to call to their assistance the President and Business Agent of the C. P. S., to report what action was called for on the part of the Association in view of the statements contained in the report. The Association then nominated and elected Brn. I. C. Wellcome, H. H. Dickenson and J. S. White for said committee. At Bro. Wellcome's request he was released from this committee, and Bro. D. Mathewson chosen as Chairman of the committee in his place.

The Association now listened to the following

Report of the Secretary of the C. P. S.

Minutes of a Meeting of the Christian Publication Society, held on the Camp Ground in Wilbraham, Ms., Aug. 28th and 30th, 1863.

H. L. Hastings presiding. Prayer by Bro. A. Ross. Present the whole board. Being the first meeting of the year, there were no minutes to be read.

I. Bro. I. C. Wellcome being present, was invited to take part in our deliberations.

II. Bro. A. Ross offered his resignation, on the grounds of having been elected without his knowledge, and also of feeling incompetent to engage in the work of the Society, arising from not being acquainted with the business in which the Society is engaged. He finally withdrew the resignation at the earnest request of the Society.

III. The matter of "The Young Pilgrim" was considered with reference to editing and publishing.

a Moved, That Bro. H. L. Hastings superintend the issuing of "The Young Pilgrim" for the C. P. Society. Carried.

b Moved, That his compensation for fulfilling the above duty, shall be such as the Treasurer and Business Agent shall determine. Carried.

IV. The Society took into consideration the question: Is any thing more needed to be done to effect the enlargement of the "World's Crisis"? It was concluded that no further action is needed, the Treasurer and Business Agent having all the power needed in the matter.

V. Moved, That we raise $2000 this year for the free distribution of tracts. Carried.

VI. Moved, That the Editor be empowered to employ the present Clerk, Wm. B. Herron, to receive the monies of the Society, and pay over the same daily to the Treasurer, the Editor being held responsible for all such monies received. Carried.

VII. The matter of purchasing any or all of Bro. H. L. Hastings' books and book plates came up for consideration. Pending discussion, it was Moved, That we adjourn till four o'clock P. M. Carried.

5 o'clock P. M. Met again, one hour later than the adjournment, several members having been called to attend a meeting of the preachers, to attend to a matter of special interest to the campmeeting. H. L. Hastings presided. Prayer by Bro. S. S. Brewer. Present the whole board except Bro. H. F. Carpenter.

I. Resumed the consideration of the matter of purchasing Bro. H. L. Hastings' books. Bro. Hastings made what was esteemed by some of the board a very liberal offer to sell out to the Society; yet the majority were afraid to embark, lest some unlooked-for reverse should embarrass our action, and the present large outlay in enlarging the "Crisis," publishing a hymn book, etc., was urged as a cautionary argument.

The Secretary admitted the force of these reasons, yet claimed that the state of the Treasury was good enough to warrant the purchase, and there was vitality in the book business to support itself. If we could publish a book "for the times" cheap enough, it would sell, and we can certainly sell cheaper than Bro. Hastings can afford to, as we have his knowledge to help, without his expenses to hinder us; and he earnestly urged that we accept this opportunity to commence the publishing of books, without fail, believing not to do so would be a mistake. But the matter was finally deemed best to be left for further consideration, and dropped for the present.

II. The attention of the Editorial committee was called to the tracts of the "Cincinnati Reform Book and Tract Society," as being, many of them, eminently "tracts for the times," with a view to consider whether we may not advance the cause of truth by helping to scatter some of them.

III. Moved, That the Treasurer be instructed to pay the Secretary of the C. P. Society ten dollars ($10.) for his past services in writing the minutes of the Society. Carried.

IV. Moved, That we adjourn sine die. Carried. JOS. D. BROWN, Sec. C. P. S.

Camp Ground, Wilbraham, Aug. 30, 1863. 8 o'clock P. M. Met in Bro. S. Hovey's tent, at the call of the President, who was present and filled the Chair. Present, J. D. Brown, G. T. Adams, D. T. Taylor, S. Hovey, S. S. Brewer, and J. G. Hamblin.

I. Moved, A vote of thanks to Bro. Wm. B. Herron, for the energy, skill, taste and earnestness which he has displayed in starting and pushing forward the Child's Paper, "The Young Pilgrim." Carried.

II. Moved, That we remunerate Bro. Herron for his labors on "The Young Pilgrim" thus far, in the sum of $20.00. Carried.

III. A Sister desired to loan the C. P. Society the sum of $33.00 on condition that, if she should ever need, she could draw part or the whole again.

a Moved, That we accept the offer, binding our successors to these terms. Carried.

IV. Moved, That we adjourn sine die. Carried. JOS. D. BROWN, Sec. C. P. S.

VIII. The Editorial committee presented a S. S. Question Book,—prepared by Bro. H. F. Carpenter,—for publication by the Society.

a Moved, That we publish the book immediately. Carried.

b Moved, That Bro. H. F. Carpenter be charged with the duty of publishing an edition of this Question Book, and present the bills to the C. P. Society. Carried.

c Moved, That we give Bro. Carpenter 400 copies of the book for his copy-right. Carried.

IX. The Hymn Book matter came up, and it was found that the committee had done almost nothing on the matter.

a Moved, That the committee be earnestly requested to get out the Hymn and Tune Book, so that we may have it ready as soon as possible. Laid on the table, that it might be

b Moved, That H. L. Hastings be relieved of his duties as Tract Agent, and that the Business Agent and his assistants in the office be required to do this work. Carried.

The previous motion was taken up. Carried.

X. Moved, That all sums amounting to $1.00 or more, received for "The Young Pilgrim," be acknowledged in the Pilgrim, if practicable. Carried.

GEO. T. ADAMS, Treasurer C. P. S.

CRISIS OFFICE, BOSTON, Aug. 19, 1864.

We the subscribers have examined the accounts of the Treasurer, and find them systematically kept, correctly cast, and properly vouched, and a balance in cash on hand of five hundred and fifty dollars and fifty-four cents.

HENRY V. DAVIS, SOLOMON HOVEY, } Auditing Committee.

The Treasurer's Report was accepted and adopted. The Association then received from Bro. Grant the following Business Agent's Report.

Brethren of the Christian Publication Society:—As your Agent and Business Executive, I have the honor to submit the following Report:—

The business of the society, and the consequent means of usefulness, the past year, have been greatly enlarged. In view of this enlargement and the general prosperity which has attended our operations thus far, we are called upon to render thanks to the kind Providence which has so abundantly blessed our labors.

We began the year with a nett capital (as per last year's report) of $6,842.88. We close it, with a capital of 8,410.39, as follows:—

Property on hand,	$5039.85
Cash in the Treasury,	550.54
Due on Crisis account $4300, valued at	2500.00
Due on book account, $452.70 " "	320.00
Total,	$8410.39

The receipts for the year past have been as follows:—

For books and tracts sold,	$2204.21
" World's Crisis,	9002.15
" Young Pilgrim,	1903.42
" Tract Fund,	1252.20
" S. S. Fund,	205.93
Total receipts,		$14567.91
" expenditures,		16461.54
Excess of expenditures over receipts,		$1893.63

The increase of resources and business done may be seen by comparing the receipts and expenditures of the past year with the receipts and expenditures of the two years previous, as follows:—

RECEIPTS.	EXPENDITURES.
1862—$5,493.99	$4,543.23
1863—11,390.17	8,955.00
1864—14,567.91	16,461.54

The following statements will show what has been done the past year in the several departments of our business, and the present condition of each:—

THE BOOK CONCERN.

Books and tracts on hand, Aug. 21, 1863,	$585.11
Books and tracts made and purchased during the year,	2873.91
Incidental expenses,	552.50
Total expenditures, etc.,		$4111.52
Received for books and tracts sold,	$2204.21
" tracts granted for distribution,	1069.43
Books and tracts on hand, Aug. 19, 1864,	1419.29
Due on book account, $452.70, valued at	320.00
Total receipts, etc.,		$5012.93
Nett gain on book sales,		901.41

Our issue of the Society's tracts, the past year, has been much greater than the year previous. The number of pages issued in 1863, in tracts of four to thirty-six pages, was 2,040,700. This year we have issued 2,670,000.

THE cost of tracts manufactured since April 1st, 1864, at which time, by vote of the Society, the Business Agent took charge of that department, is one dollar for two thousand three hundred pages. The average cost for the eight months previous was one dollar for two thousand seven hundred pages. Counting the price of white paper, and the cost of printing the same as in Jan. 1864, and the binding one sixth less than now,—the cost since April would have been only one dollar for two thousand eight hundred pages;—whereas, the lot manufactured at that time, (Jan. 1864,) cost one dollar for two thousand four hundred pages. Counting white paper the same as in the summer of 1863, and printing and binding the same as in Jan. last,—the cost of tracts made since April would have been only one dollar for three thousand six hundred and fifty pages;—so that, should paper and labor return to old rates, we hope to make tracts cheaper than ever.

THE TRACT FUND.

The tract-fund interest has received a new impetus the past year, and donations have come in more liberally and largely than ever before. $1252.20 have been contributed by the benevolent to this good cause; with which, we have scattered freely through all parts of the land north of rebeldom, and in hospitals and camps, among the soldiers of the Federal armies, about eleven hundred dollars' worth ($1069.43)—leaving $182.77 of the Fund yet unexpended.

These little messengers of truth and righteousness are received gladly, and are doing much good wherever they go; thus affording encouragement to the kind and liberal donors, who, through the agency of this society, are doing what they can to enlighten and save a benighted and perishing world.

THE S. S. FUND.

This fund was started mainly to aid the Young Pilgrim in its infancy, in case its subscription monies should be insufficient to meet its current expenses, and to lend a helping hand, if need be, until it could go alone. But thanks to the interest and enthusiasm with which the Young Pilgrim enterprise was taken hold of everywhere, it has paid its way from its own resources, without calling for aid from the fund. Another object of the fund was to aid in the publication of Sunday School books, etc. The whole amount of the fund at this time (the most of which is paid) is $479.90, ($205.93 of which was received during the fiscal year just closed.) With this money a Sunday School Question Book has been published the expenses of which were $385.64, leaving $94.26 of the fund yet in the treasury.

THE YOUNG PILGRIM.

At the close of the first volume of the Pilgrim (in June,) it had reached a circulation of about 7000 copies. This number has not been made good on the second volume. We have received an addition of some thousand new subscribers, which exceeds the stoppages by more than one half. But there are some two or three thousand old subscribers not yet heard from. We are consequently now sending out about that number of copies less than we did two months ago.

The receipts and expenditures have been as follows:—

Total receipts,	$1903.42
" expenditures,	1490.69
Excess of receipts over expenditures,	$412.73

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

The large increase of new subscribers to the Crisis during the past year, is a noteworthy fact, and shows how much may be accomplished by special appeals, and special efforts. At our annual meeting in 1862, we reported about 3700 subscribers; at the annual meeting in 1863, they had increased to 5000; and now, at the close of another year, we have the pleasure of reporting a little less than 7000—showing a nett increase, over all stoppages, of about 2000 during the year.

The number of preachers, and the poor, to whom the paper has been sent free the past year, is 800.

The number of stoppages, without payment of arrearages, has been 190; owing in the aggregate, $310.00.

The receipts and expenditures for the Crisis, for the year, have been as follows:—

Total receipts,	$9545.69
" expenditures,	9092.15
Excess of expenditures over receipts,	$543.54

While other departments of our business have more than paid expenses, it will be seen that the Crisis has been running behind. This is owing to the fact that the subscription price has not been advanced in proportion to the advance in the cost of paper and other expenses of publication.

To enable the Crisis to meet expenses, an advance in price should have been made at the beginning of the present volume or before; but the necessity for that was not so apparent then as it is now. Should the cost of paper and other expenses of publication remain the same through the year as they are at this time, the total expenditures for the Crisis will probably not fall much short of $14,000.

To save ourselves from loss, the receipts for the year should equal that amount, and to carry on the business with profit, they should exceed it. But 7000 subscribers, if all were paying ones, would not cover the expenses. We have 800 on the free list. Deducting then for the poor, $1600, and for bad debts about $2400,—and we shall have but about $10,000 of receipts with which to meet an expense of $14,000.

It will appear, then, that, continuing the Crisis at the old subscription price of $2.00, we shall be running behind at the rate of about $4000 a year. An advance in price is therefore imperative. I would therefore recommend for your consideration the immediate necessity of raising the subscription price of the World's Crisis to either $2.50, or $3.00 a year, to take effect at the beginning of the next volume.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

MILES GRANT, Business Agent of Christian Publication Society.

Boston, Aug. 18th, 1864.

The meeting then adjourned to meet again to-morrow (Thursday), at 8 1-2 A. M.

Thursday, 8 1-2 A. M. Prayer by Bro. I. C. Wellcome. The minutes of the meeting were read by the Secretary and accepted by the Association.

Moved, That we take from the table the resolutions of the committee on the President's report. Carried. The first resolution was read and on motion passed. The second resolution was read, and, after some discussion and various fruitless attempts at amendment, passed as at first presented. The third resolution was read and amended so as to read,

Resolved, That the price of the World's Crisis be raised to such a sum per copy, not exceeding three dollars per year, as in the judgment of the C. P. S. will cover the expense of its publication. The resolution as amended was then passed. Bro. D. Mathewson then introduced the following resolution, viz:

Resolved, That the C. P. S. be instructed to charge for all advertisements to the pecuniary advantage of private individuals. On motion, the above resolution was adopted, but by a subsequent vote it was rescinded. The nominating committee for the C. P. S. reported the following nominations, viz:—For President, H. L. Hastings; for Secretary, J. D. Brown; for Treasurer, Geo. T. Adams; for Editorial committee, S. G. Mathewson, I. C. Wellcome, H. F. Carpenter; for Publishing committee, C. F. Hudson, H. V. Davis, S. S. Brewer, J. G. Hamblin, D. Mathewson. Their report being accepted, Brn. Dickenson, Hovey, and Fenn, were appointed by the Chair to receive and count votes for the C. P. S. Ballots for officers of the C. P. S. were deposited at the call of the roll, after which the meeting adjourned until 2 o'clock P. M. [redacted] Secretary. Geo. T. Adams, Treasurer. S. G. Mathewson, I. C. Wellcome, H. F. Carpenter, Editorial committee. C. F. Hudson, H. V. Davis, S. S. Brewer, J. G. Hamblin, D. Mathewson, Publishing committee.

Bro. H. H. Dickenson then read, at the permission of the meeting, an anonymous letter [the author of which was soon learned to be Bro. C. F. Hudson] ably written concerning the object of campmeetings, the wisest management of these and other public religious meetings so as to secure the object sought, and the best course to be pursued in reference to those who appear to be more fond of controversy at these meetings than of worship. On motion, the letter was received, and Brn. H. H. Dickenson and H. K. Flagg were appointed a committee to act with Bro. Hudson in arranging the matter treated upon in the letter for the adoption of the Association.

Moved, That the Chair appoint a nominating committee of three to nominate and recommend a campmeeting committee of five to the campmeeting for its election to serve the ensuing year. Carried.

Moved, That the nominations of the above committee be placed in the hands of the present campmeeting committee to lay before the campmeeting for its acceptance or rejection.

Bro. Geo. T. Adams reported a balance of $14.20 in his hands from the Preachers' Aid Society, formed some years ago, but inoperative since the organization of this Association, which he desired to pass over to this Society, in accordance with a vote of the P. A. S.; whereupon it was Voted, That we accept the money referred to and devote it to the Tract Fund. The following resolution was then introduced, viz:

Whereas, the Conscription law requires that those who desire to take the benefit of the provisions of said act, in favor of those who are conscientiously opposed to bearing arms, should show that they are not only non-resistants themselves, but that they are connected with a people of the same faith and practice;

Resolved, That [redacted]mittee of three be [redacted] printed for the [redacted] as may be drafted [redacted] indicate the fact that [redacted] ination are non-re[redacted] that they are connected with us in faith and fellowship. After some discussion, the resolution being found impracticable, it was indefinitely postponed.

The Chair appointed Brn. S. Hovey, I. C. Wellcome, and I. Damman, as nominating committee for the campmeeting to recommend its managers for the ensuing year.

The meeting then adjourned till to-morrow at 8 1-2 A. M.

Friday, 8 1-2 A. M., Aug. 26th. Prayer was offered by Bro. I. C. Wellcome. The Secretary's minutes were read and accepted. The committee upon Bro. Hudson's letter reported for the adoption of the Association the following preamble, circular letter, and recommendation:—

Preamble.

It is well understood that for one or two years past there has appeared a difference of opinion on the Wilbraham campmeeting ground, and in other ways, respecting the preaching of a certain doctrine on the stand and in the tents of this campmeeting. The harmony of this campmeeting has been more or less disturbed; and as the limits of free discussion and promulgation of controverted doctrines are not yet settled between the two parties,—those who affirm and those who deny the resurrection of the wicked,—it is proper [illegible]

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

For the World's Crisis.

WE SOON SHALL BE HOME.

AIR.—"Marching Along."

We soon shall be home where the weary ones rest,
Safe, safe in the mansions prepared for the blest;
Though fierce be the conflict, it cannot be long,
So we'll gird on the armor and keep marching along.

CHORUS.

Marching along, we'll keep marching along,
Rejoicing in hope we are marching along;
The Bridegroom is coming! and this is our song,
So we'll gird on the armor and keep marching along.

From friends we have parted, through perils we've past;
Thank God, we are nearing the harbor at last;
The night has been dreary, the foe has been strong,
Yet CHRIST is our Leader,—we'll keep marching along.

The morning will break and the glory will come,
And saints be at rest in their blest Eden home;
We'll stand on Mount Zion with all the ransomed throng,
If we gird on the armor and keep marching along.

There's joy for the mourner, there's wealth for the poor,
And life for the dying upon the other shore;
Thank God for the promise, it makes our courage strong,
So we'll gird on the armor and keep marching along.

Moved, That we adjourn till to-morrow at 8 1-2 o'clock A. M. Carried.

Wednesday, Aug. 24th, 8 1-2 A. M. Bro. S. G. Mathewson, Vice President, in the Chair. Prayer was offered by Bro. H. L. Hastings, after which the committee on Credentials received other names upon which to report. The Chair appointed Brn. Geo. T. Adams, J. Hemenway, and I. C. Wellcome as nominating committee for the A. C. A.; and Brn. D. R. Mansfield, A. W. Sibley and I. Damman, as nominating committee for the C. P. S. The committee on Credentials made an additional report, which on motion was accepted, and the names reported were received as members of this meeting. [For convenience' sake these names have been included in the list already given.]

The name of Bro. R. Wendell not appearing in the above report, although given to the committee, it was

Moved, That the name of R. Wendell be accepted as a member of this Association. After some discussion the motion was withdrawn for the introduction of the following resolution, viz:

Whereas, Certain persons have associated themselves together under the name and title of "The Life and Advent Union," and have by their acts placed themselves in a position antagonistic to the purposes of this Association; Resolved, That we consider the members of such Union as having withdrawn from this body, and while connected with said Union as ineligible to membership in this body. The above resolution was passed by a full and hearty vote.

The President of the C. P. S., Bro. H. L. Hastings, then made his annual report to the Association, giving a brief view of the work accomplished during the year, calling attention to the present financial condition of the Society, and pointing out certain reforms which seemed to be demanded for the efficiency of the Society, the importance of which was impressed upon the meeting by a statement of certain alleged facts. On motion, the President's report was accepted, whereupon it was Voted, That the report of the President of the C. P. S. be submitted to a committee of three chosen by the Association, with power to call to their assistance the President and Business Agent of the C. P. S., to report what action was called for on the part of the Association in view of the statements contained in the report. The Association then nominated and elected Brn. I. C. Wellcome, H. H. Dickenson and J. S. White for said committee. At Bro. Wellcome's request he was released from this committee, and Bro. D. Mathewson chosen as Chairman of the committee in his place.

The Association now listened to the following

Report of the Secretary of the C. P. S.

Minutes of a Meeting of the Christian Publication Society, held on the Camp Ground in Wilbraham, Ms., Aug. 28th and 30th, 1863.

H. L. Hastings presiding. Prayer by Bro. A. Ross. Present the whole board. Being the first meeting of the year, there were no minutes to be read.

I. Bro. I. C. Wellcome being present, was invited to take part in our deliberations.

II. Bro. A. Ross offered his resignation, on the grounds of having been elected without his knowledge, and also of feeling incompetent to engage in the work of the Society, arising from not being acquainted with the business in which the Society is engaged. He finally withdrew the resignation at the earnest request of the Society.

III. The matter of "The Young Pilgrim" was considered with reference to editing and publishing.

a Moved, That Bro. H. L. Hastings superintend the issuing of "The Young Pilgrim" for the C. P. Society. Carried.

b Moved, That his compensation for fulfilling the above duty, shall be such as the Treasurer and Business Agent shall determine. Carried.

IV. The Society took into consideration the question: Is any thing more needed to be done to effect the enlargement of the "World's Crisis"? It was concluded that no further action is needed, the Treasurer and Business Agent having all the power needed in the matter.

V. Moved, That we raise $2000 this year for the free distribution of tracts. Carried.

VI. Moved, That the Editor be empowered to employ the present Clerk, Wm. B. Herron, to receive the monies of the Society, and pay over the same daily to the Treasurer, the Editor being held responsible for all such monies received. Carried.

VII. The matter of purchasing any or all of Bro. H. L. Hastings' books and book plates came up for consideration. Pending discussion, it was Moved, That we adjourn till four o'clock P. M. Carried.

5 o'clock P. M. Met again, one hour later than the adjournment, several members having been called to attend a meeting of the preachers, to attend to a matter of special interest to the campmeeting. H. L. Hastings presided. Prayer by Bro. S. S. Brewer. Present the whole board except Bro. H. F. Carpenter.

I. Resumed the consideration of the matter of purchasing Bro. H. L. Hastings' books. Bro. Hastings made what was esteemed by some of the board a very liberal offer to sell out to the Society; yet the majority were afraid to embark, lest some unlooked-for reverse should embarrass our action, and the present large outlay in enlarging the "Crisis," publishing a hymn book, etc., was urged as a cautionary argument.

The Secretary admitted the force of these reasons, yet claimed that the state of the Treasury was good enough to warrant the purchase, and there was vitality in the book business to support itself. If we could publish a book "for the times" cheap enough, it would sell, and we can certainly sell cheaper than Bro. Hastings can afford to, as we have his knowledge to help, without his expenses to hinder us; and he earnestly urged that we accept this opportunity to commence the publishing of books, without fail, believing not to do so would be a mistake. But the matter was finally deemed best to be left for further consideration, and dropped for the present.

II. The attention of the Editorial committee was called to the tracts of the "Cincinnati Reform Book and Tract Society," as being, many of them, eminently "tracts for the times," with a view to consider whether we may not advance the cause of truth by helping to scatter some of them.

III. Moved, That the Treasurer be instructed to pay the Secretary of the C. P. Society ten dollars ($10.) for his past services in writing the minutes of the Society. Carried.

IV. Moved, That we adjourn sine die. Carried. JOS. D. BROWN, Sec. C. P. S.

Camp Ground, Wilbraham, Aug. 30, 1863. 8 o'clock P. M. Met in Bro. S. Hovey's tent, at the call of the President, who was present and filled the Chair. Present, J. D. Brown, G. T. Adams, D. T. Taylor, S. Hovey, S. S. Brewer, and J. G. Hamblin.

I. Moved, A vote of thanks to Bro. Wm. B. Herron, for the energy, skill, taste and earnestness which he has displayed in starting and pushing forward the Child's Paper, "The Young Pilgrim." Carried.

II. Moved, That we remunerate Bro, Herron for his labors on "The Young Pilgrim" thus far, in the sum of $20.00. Carried.

III. A Sister desired to loan the C. P. Society the sum of $33.00 on condition that, if she should ever need, she could draw part or the whole again.

a Moved, That we accept the offer, binding our successors to these terms. Carried.

IV. Moved, That we adjourn sine die. Carried. JOS. D. BROWN, Sec. C. P. S.

It was suggested that the books and some other articles of the Society were exposed to loss by fire from want of a proper safe.

a Moved, That the Treasurer be authorized to purchase a safe for us, suitable to our wants. Carried.

VIII. The Editorial committee presented a S. S. Question Book,—prepared by Bro. H. F. Carpenter,—for publication by the Society.

a Moved, That we publish the book immediately. Carried.

b Moved, That Bro. H. F. Carpenter be charged with the duty of publishing an edition of this Question Book, and present the bills to the C. P. Society. Carried.

c Moved, That we give Bro. Carpenter 400 copies of the book for his copy-right. Carried.

IX. The Hymn Book matter came up, and it was found that the committee had done almost nothing on the matter.

a Moved, That the committee be earnestly requested to get out the Hymn and Tune Book, so that we may have it ready as soon as possible. Laid on the table, that it might be

b Moved, That H. L. Hastings be relieved of his duties as Tract Agent, and that the Business Agent and his assistants in the office be required to do this work. Carried.

The previous motion was taken up. Carried.

X. Moved, That all sums amounting to $1.00 or more, received for "The Young Pilgrim," be acknowledged in the Pilgrim, if practicable. Carried.

Our issue of the Society's tracts, the past year, has been much greater than the year previous. The number of pages issued in 1863, in tracts of four to thirty-six pages, was 2,040,700. This year we have issued 2,670,000.

THE cost of tracts manufactured since April 1st, 1864, at which time, by vote of the Society, the Business Agent took charge of that department, is one dollar for two thousand three hundred pages. The average cost for the eight months previous was one dollar for two thousand seven hundred pages. Counting the price of white paper, and the cost of printing the same as in Jan. 1864, and the binding one sixth less than now,—the cost since April would have been only one dollar for two thousand eight hundred pages;—whereas, the lot manufactured at that time, (Jan. 1864,) cost one dollar for two thousand four hundred pages. Counting white paper the same as in the summer of 1863, and printing and binding the same as in Jan. last,—the cost of tracts made since April would have been only one dollar for three thousand six hundred and fifty pages;—so that, should paper and labor return to old rates, we hope to make tracts cheaper than ever.

THE TRACT FUND.

The tract-fund interest has received a new impetus the past year, and donations have come in more liberally and largely than ever before. $1252.20 have been contributed by the benevolent to this good cause; with which, we have scattered freely through all parts of the land north of rebeldom, and in hospitals and camps, among the soldiers of the Federal armies, about eleven hundred dollars' worth ($1069.43)—leaving $182.77 of the Fund yet unexpended.

These little messengers of truth and righteousness are received gladly, and are doing much good wherever they go; thus affording encouragement to the kind and liberal donors, who, through the agency of this society, are doing what they can to enlighten and save a benighted and perishing world.

THE S. S. FUND.

This fund was started mainly to aid the Young Pilgrim in its infancy, in case its subscription monies should be insufficient to meet its current expenses, and to lend a helping hand, if need be, until it could go alone. But thanks to the interest and enthusiasm with which the Young Pilgrim enterprise was taken hold of everywhere, it has paid its way from its own resources, without calling for aid from the fund. Another object of the fund was to aid in the publication of Sunday School books, etc. The whole amount of the fund at this time (the most of which is paid) is $479.90, ($205.93 of which was received during the fiscal year just closed.) With this money a Sunday School Question Book has been published the expenses of which were $385.64, leaving $94.26 of the fund yet in the treasury.

THE YOUNG PILGRIM.

At the close of the first volume of the Pilgrim (in June,) it had reached a circulation of about 7000 copies. This number has not been made good on the second volume. We have received an addition of some thousand new subscribers, which exceeds the stoppages by more than one half. But there are some two or three thousand old subscribers not yet heard from. We are consequently now sending out about that number of copies less than we did two months ago.

The receipts and expenditures have been as follows:—

Total receipts,	$1903.42
" expenditures,	1490.69
Excess of receipts over expenditures,	$412.73

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

The large increase of new subscribers to the Crisis during the past year, is a noteworthy fact, and shows how much may be accomplished by special appeals, and special efforts. At our annual meeting in 1862, we reported about 3700 subscribers; at the annual meeting in 1863, they had increased to 5000; and now, at the close of another year, we have the pleasure of reporting a little less than 7000—showing a nett increase, over all stoppages, of about 2000 during the year.

The number of preachers, and the poor, to whom the paper has been sent free the past year, is 800.

The number of stoppages, without payment of arrearages, has been 190; owing in the aggregate, $310.00.

The receipts and expenditures for the Crisis, for the year, have been as follows:—

Total receipts,	$9645.69
" expenditures,	9092.15
Excess of expenditures over receipts,	$543.54

While other departments of our business have more than paid expenses, it will be seen that the Crisis has been running behind. This is owing to the fact that the subscription price has not been advanced in proportion to the advance in the cost of paper and other expenses of publication.

To enable the Crisis to meet expenses, an advance in price should have been made at the beginning of the present volume or before; but the necessity for that was not so apparent then as it is now. Should the cost of paper and other expenses of publication remain the same through the year as they are at this time, the total expenditures for the Crisis will probably not fall much short of $14,000.

To save ourselves from loss, the receipts for the year should equal that amount, and to carry on the business with profit, they should exceed it. But 7000 subscribers, if all were paying ones, would not cover the expenses. We have 800 on the free list. Deducting then for the poor, $1600, and for bad debts about $2400,—and we shall have but about $10,000 of receipts with which to meet an expense of $14,000.

It will appear, then, that, continuing the Crisis at the old subscription price of $2.00, we shall be running behind at the rate of about $4000 a year. An advance in price is therefore imperative. I would therefore recommend for your consideration the immediate necessity of raising the subscription price of the World's Crisis to either $2.50, or $3.00 a year, to take effect at the beginning of the next volume.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

MILES GRANT, Business Agent of Christian Publication Society.

The report of the committee was accepted, and their resolutions laid on the table pro tem. Ballots were received for Officers of the A. C. A. at the call of the roll. On motion, the resolutions of the committee on the President's report of the C. P. S. were taken up one by one. The first resolution was read, laid on the table again, and the whole matter of Business Agent referred to the C. P. Society. The 2nd and 3d resolutions were taken up separately and after some discussion laid on the table. The nominating committee for the C. P. MILES GRANT, Editor of World's Crisis.

The meeting then adjourned to meet again to-morrow (Thursday), at 8 1-2 A. M.

Thursday, 8 1-2 A. M. Prayer by Bro. I. C. Wellcome. The minutes of the meeting were read by the Secretary and accepted by the Association.

Moved, That we take from the table the resolutions of the committee on the President's report. Carried. The first resolution was read and on motion passed. The second resolution was read, and, after some discussion and various fruitless attempts at amendment, passed as at first presented. The third resolution was read and amended so as to read,

Resolved, That the price of the World's Crisis be raised to such a sum per copy, not exceeding three dollars per year, as in the judgment of the C. P. S. will cover the expense of its publication. The resolution as amended was then passed. Bro. D. Mathewson then introduced the following resolution, viz:

Resolved, That the C. P. S. be instructed to charge for all advertisements to the pecuniary advantage of private individuals. On motion, the above resolution was adopted, but by a subsequent vote it was rescinded. The nominating committee for the C. P. S. reported the following nominations, viz:—For President, H. L. Hastings; for Secretary, J. D. Brown; for Treasurer, Geo. T. Adams; for Editorial committee, S. G. Mathewson, I. C. Wellcome, H. F. Carpenter; for Publishing committee, C. F. Hudson, H. V. Davis, S. S. Brewer, J. G. Hamblin, D. Mathewson. Their report being accepted, Brn. Dickenson, Hovey, and Fenn, were appointed by the Chair to receive and count votes for the C. P. S. Ballots for officers of the C. P. S. were deposited at the call of the roll, after which the meeting adjourned until 2 o'clock P. M[redacted] Secretary. Geo. T. Adams, Treasurer. S. G. Mathewson, I. C. Wellcome, H. F. Carpenter, Editorial committee. C. F. Hudson, H. V. Davis, S. S. Brewer, J. G. Hamblin, D. Mathewson, Publishing committee.

Bro. H. H. Dickenson then read, at the permission of the meeting, an anonymous letter [the author of which was soon learned to be Bro. C. F. Hudson] ably written concerning the object of campmeetings, the wisest management of these and other public religious meetings so as to secure the object sought, and the best course to be pursued in reference to those who appear to be more fond of controversy at these meetings than of worship. On motion, the letter was received, and Brn. H. H. Dickenson and H. K. Flagg were appointed a committee to act with Bro. Hudson in arranging the matter treated upon in the letter for the adoption of the Association.

Moved, That the Chair appoint a nominating committee of three to nominate and recommend a campmeeting committee of five to the campmeeting for its election to serve the ensuing year. Carried.

Moved, That the nominations of the above committee be placed in the hands of the present campmeeting committee to lay before the campmeeting for its acceptance or rejection.

Bro. Geo. T. Adams reported a balance of $14.20 in his hands from the Preachers' Aid Society, formed some years ago, but inoperative since the organization of this Association, which he desired to pass over to this Society, in accordance with a vote of the P. A. S.; whereupon it was Voted, That we accept the money referred to and devote it to the Tract Fund. The following resolution was then introduced, viz:

Whereas, the Conscription law requires that those who desire to take the benefit of the provisions of said act, in favor of those who are conscientiously opposed to bearing arms, should show that they are not only non-resistants themselves, but that they are connected with a people of the same faith and practice;

Resolved, That [redacted]mittee of three be [redacted] printed for the [redacted] as may be drafted [redacted] indicate the fact that [redacted]ination are non-re[redacted] that they are connected with us in faith and fellowship. After some discussion, the resolution being found impracticable, it was indefinitely postponed.

The Chair appointed Brn. S. Hovey, I. C. Wellcome, and I. Damman, as nominating committee for the campmeeting to recommend its managers for the ensuing year.

The meeting then adjourned till to-morrow at 8 1-2 A. M.

Friday, 8 1-2 A. M., Aug. 26th. Prayer was offered by Bro. I. C. Wellcome. The Secretary's minutes were read and accepted. The committee upon Bro. Hudson's letter reported for the adoption of the Association the following preamble, circular letter, and recommendation:—

Preamble.

It is well understood that for one or two years past there has appeared a difference of opinion on the Wilbraham campmeeting ground, and in other ways, respecting the preaching of a certain doctrine on the stand and in the tents of this campmeeting. The harmony of this campmeeting has been more or less disturbed. And as the limits of free discussion and [illegible] controverted doctrines are not yet settled between the two parties,—those who affirm and those who deny the resurrection of the wicked,—it is proper that there should be some expression of opinion on this practical question.

In every body of christians agreed in the prominent doctrines that distinguish them as a particular denomination or class of christians, minor differences are always found. And the present question is,—How far should these differences appear on a public religious occasion, such as the campmeeting is, or should be?

In every body of Christians agreed in the prominent doctrines that distinguish them as a particular denomination or class of christians, minor differences are always found. And the present question is—How far should these differences appear on a public religious occasion, such as the campmeeting is or should be?

Here we meet another question—How great and important are these minor differences? or how important are they considered by either party? This question does not of course settle the other. For, if a disputed doctrine is an important matter, some will say that it cannot be pressed forward in such a meeting as this without serious controversy, that may not be edifying. Others will say that just because the question is important, the disputed doctrine should be held forth, or the question should be freely discussed, so that the benefit of important truth may be had. On the other hand, if the question is important, some will say the difference between the two parties may appear in all its breadth without separating the parties; others will conclude it is not much worth talking about any way. We may then call the present dispute important or trivial, without deciding whether it should appear on the camp-ground. Yet there is no harm in recognizing the views of the different parties, respecting its importance.

On the one hand, the denial of the resurrection of the wicked is regarded by some as heresy, not to be fellowshiped in the christian church. Others freely and gladly confess the christian character of many who deny the resurrection in question, but think they interpret the Scriptures by very unpromising methods. Others still think some of their arguments have force, though they are constrained to reject their conclusions. On the other hand, some have denied the resurrection of the wicked in a quiet way, not strenuously, because they have not felt sure of the interpretation of some passages, though fully settled in their own opinion; or because they have not deemed the doctrine of very immense importance. Others have been ready to preach and hear it on very frequent occasions, deeming the opposite doctrine as exceedingly mischievous, and to be refuted and discountenanced by all means and with all earnestness.

As the result of this high opinion of the doctrine of this party, within a year past a Society has been formed, a weekly paper has been published, and money otherwise freely employed, largely for the promulgation of the doctrine. And by an article in their constitution, they exclude from their Society, though not from their fellowship, those who affirm the resurrection of the wicked. The adoption of such measures has led many to suppose that this party would now operate principally through their own organization, for the objects named by its Society, which, besides the doctrine in question, are sufficiently comprehensive for its general labors. It was naturally expected that if these christian friends chose or desired to co-operate with their former associates, it would be in such ways as people of two churches, or denominations, may meet, forgetting their differences, and promulgating that in which they are agreed. And such we believe will be the more deliberate conclusion of all parties in the present question. But when some of those who have created the new party interests, claim not to have withdrawn or seceded from their former associates; and when they seem ready to vote as members in another Society, with which they scarcely co-operate,—a Society which offers no other means than their own for general or common labor, and whose older and leading members are leading opponents of their special doctrine,—it is proper that a few words should be employed to help the more deliberate opinion we anticipate.

We regard the religious camp-ground, then, as not the proper arena of doctrinal controversy. In its history the campmeeting is largely a Methodist institution. Now the Methodists have been among the more decided opponents of Calvinism. Yet we think every one will say that those Methodist campmeetings have been most useful in which there has been least of distinctive controversial preaching against Calvinism. But if the preaching is such as to put the Calvinists in an attitude of defense, and to invite the unconverted to be specially anti-Calvinistic christians, we do not expect it will make many christians at all.

But the case may be put in a stronger light still. There are Calvinistic or Whitfieldian Methodists. Suppose a party of such to grow up in a circuit of Methodist churches. They need not form their separate Society, or otherwise withdraw, unless they choose. But suppose that they remain, and, by the fault [redacted] those differences all [redacted] on less special occasions, and less rarely in preaching than through the press? And if any one should plead free speech, should we not reply that it is an abuse of free speech to introduce controversy when the church would make common cause against sin in its various forms, within and without the church?

The Advent campmeeting has differed from the Methodist in being not a little devoted to the promulgation of the doctrines specially held by Adventists. Such propagandism on public occasions is apt to be done by any denomination in its early history. But even then it is better to tell what we believe in a straightforward way, with little allusion to what we do not believe, because this mode is less controversial, and more suited to such religious occasions.

But among Adventists as among other classes of christians, when differences of opinion arise, although they may not divide the body, they must limit the extent to which the parties shall co-operate. In the present case the non-resurrectionists can not preach nor say amen to that which once they held; nor can the resurrectionists so favor the doctrine they reject.

Hence, if either doctrine is specially maintained on the camp-ground, the other party will feel itself to be not at home, or not welcome as orthodox Adventists. If there is to be peace, edification, and a proper respect for the body among non-Adventists, the parties must drop their differences, or one party must sit in silence or withdraw. A profitable debate of the differences on such an occasion will be without example and in fact impossible.

And then, if either party asserts its right to be heard on such an occasion, though such a course must be damaging, the question of right is in fact a question of property. If one party has contributed far more to the history of the campmeeting than the other, and mainly holds the camp-ground stock, though this creates no right needlessly to war against the opinions of others, it certainly strengthens their right not to be controverted on such camp-ground. Such party may allow controversy or invite it, if it will; but it has a special right to forbid it. And such a party retains the right to present the views it held on disputed points before the controversy began, and to maintain those views as the religious interests of the campmeeting may seem to require.

In the present case one party may urge that its views have been attacked in unchristian and unwarranted methods by the other party. Whether this be true or not, we have no wish to screen or protect or justify any improper aggression. We simply say that if there has been such evil, this is not the place to overcome it by controversial preaching on the other side. This is not the place to resent any such injury that may be alleged, because it is not the place to fight out any theological warfare.

In conclusion, while we would by no means refuse to fellowship or co-operate in our campmeetings, conferences, and other associations, for mere difference in doctrinal opinion, we do feel warranted in not inviting the labors of persons when such invitation may introduce ultimately needless and unpleasant controversy. We fear not controversy in its due time, place, and measure. And we gladly welcome to our campmeetings all preachers who do not come thither to urge a special doctrinal interest, to which the feelings of many are known to be adverse. With such we can labor cheerfully, forgetting our differences, or allowing them to appear only as they do and must appear between christians who love Christ and the salvation of men most of all. But we believe the congregation here assembled has not met to hear theological strife or disputation; or if it has, it had better remained at home.

Circular Letter

ADDRESSED TO CHURCHES AND SAINTS SCATTERED ABROAD.

In accordance with the views above expressed, we would recommend to our ministers, committees, and brethren at large, to note, when they meet those holding new or peculiar opinions, whether they love and preach those doctrines more than they love and preach Christ; and to mark those who cause divisions and offences, contrary to the teachings of the word, and avoid them. That they stand fast in one spirit, with one mind striving together for the faith of the gospel. That they keep prominently before the church and the world that blessed hope, even the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ. That they impress upon the minds of all the importance of genuine repentance, sound conversion, true faith, and the abiding possession of the Holy Spirit, remembering that if any have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his. That they labor especially for the conversion of sinners from the error of their ways, exhorting them to repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand, that they may save souls from death, and hide a multitude of sins. That they remain steadfast in the apostolic hope that there shall be a resurrection both of the just and unjust, and herein exercise themselves to have always a conscience void of offence toward God and toward man. That they remind men that God hath appointed a day in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained, whereof he hath given assurance unto all men in that he hath raised him from the dead; and that we shall all appear before the judgment-seat of Christ, to receive according to the things done in the body, whether they be good or bad. That they so reason of righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come, that sinners shall tremble like Felix and be brought to repentance. That they exalt and honor our divine Savior and Redeemer Jesus Christ, in whom dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily, and teach the perishing sons of men to build their eternal confidence upon the gracious sacrifice of Him who bore our sins in his own body on the tree, and by whose stripes we are healed. That they present him as the author of eternal life, and the giver of immortality. That while they maintain in Scriptural purity and sanctity the ordinances of the Lord's house and church, they should also hold fast the grand truth that all forms and ordinances are useless without personal godliness and the indwelling of the Comforter; thus endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bonds of peace. That they wait for the Son of God from heaven, and love his appearing as the day which [redacted] them to their glory, their crown, their [redacted] their reward. That to those who [redacted] the truth of [redacted] building up themselves [redacted] faith, praying in the Holy Ghost, that they keep themselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life.

Recommendation.

Your committee recommend the above Preamble and Circular Letter to be offered for publication in the World's Crisis and the Voice of the West.

The report of the committee as above given was accepted and adopted by a unanimous vote.

Bro. Grant, by permission of the meeting, made some explanations of apparent differences between his and the President's report of the C. P. S.

Bro. C. F. Hudson presented the following resolution, viz:

Resolved, That preachers offering their names as members of this Association be required to bring certificates of good character from a christian church, and to show that they themselves are co-operating with this Association.

On motion, the resolution was passed by a full vote.

A motion for adjournment being made and withdrawn, the Association rescinded a resolution already given, passed Thursday A. M., and adjourned sine die at 11 A. M. Friday, Aug. 26th, 1864.

THE CLOSE OF THE VOLUME.

It will be observed that this number closes the present volume. Now is the time for all who wish to have the paper continued, to send the advance pay. We would urge all our friends to send the money at once, and also what is due on back volumes. It cannot be expected that money will be any more plenty than at the present time. Let us do our business on the cash system as far as possible.

We hope none of our patrons will leave us. We love to visit you weekly at your happy homes, and should feel grieved to be told that you do not wish to see us any more.

During the coming year, we hope to make our visits more agreeable, profitable, and interesting than ever before. Pray for us that we may not fail in our endeavors. We do not expect that all will be invariably pleased with every thing placed upon our reading table. Such a result, we think, would be impossible; but we shall do the best we can to feed the flock of God with that which will tend to make it healthy. What delights many may disgust others; and vice versa. The position of an editor of a religious paper is no enviable one; as he cannot escape bitter censure from some of those whom he would be glad to please. What is rich food to some, others dislike exceedingly. Some have no interest in a paper that does not advocate their peculiar views; while others would not have it in the house if those views were allowed a place in its columns. When there are half a dozen different classes occupying these antagonistic positions, every one can see that it is impossible to suit all. In such a case, we no of no better way than to try to please the Lord, asking for special wisdom to guide, so that he shall be glorified.

It must be evident to our readers that we need their prayers. Do not forget us. We shall often need the benefit of their forbearance. We are conscious of enjoying a large share already. This fact affords us much comfort; when, if it were otherwise, we might sink under the load. How much easier one can work when he enjoys the confidence and sympathy of those for whom he labors. We trust we shall not be left to do any thing to make that sympathy less.

May the peace of God rest upon every one who reads this; and let us try to be better christians than we have ever been, and be continually prepared for the coming of our dear Savior.

DELINQUENTS.

We have on our books about 400 subscribers who owe from $4.00 to $12.00 each; in the aggregate some $2600. To all these we have sent bills, and from most of them we have not yet heard. We are sorry to say to all such, that we shall be obliged to stop their paper IN THREE WEEKS FROM THIS TIME, unless they are previously heard from. Write to us, then, at once, and send the amount of your indebtedness, or, if not able to pay all, send what you can. We want to hear from every one, and to know whether you wish the paper continued or not.

OUR FREE SUBSCRIBERS.

We want to hear from every one of them within the next three weeks. The larger portion of them have received the paper free for years, and we want to know whether they desire its continuance. If the donations to the Poor Fund should not be sufficient to meet the expenses of papers sent free, we shall be obliged, in accordance with the decision of the C. P. Society, to cut down our free list, so as not to exceed four hundred. We wish, therefore, to hear from all such at once, so that we may know who really need it and wish it continued.

And are there not several of our readers who can afford to give liberally to send the Crisis to the poor, who will forward their gifts to the office for this object? Remember, "He that hath pity upon the poor lendeth unto the Lord; and that which he hath given will he pay him again." Who will show his faith in the promise, and lend a little?

MOSES HULL.—A few weeks since, we published an extract from the Advent Review, giving an account of Moses Hull's experience with the Spiritualists, and his partial escape from the snare of the devil. We learn that some understood that this occurred this year, and that he is now out of the snare. The article published was an account of his experience some two years ago. Since that time, he has been drawn back into Spiritualism again, where he yet remains.

WRITE PLAINLY.—It is very important that those who write for the press, should write a plain, coarse hand; but especially be particular to write all proper names, including their own signature, in a very plain style. If they observe this, it will save mistakes.

ALTON BAY CAMPMEETING.

The Alton Bay meeting was one of practical interest. It commenced Aug. 28th and closed Sept 4th. It was not our privilege to be present till Thursday noon. We found some fifty tents and houses, and a large audience upon the grounds. The location is on the banks of the Winnipiseogee lake, at the terminus of the Cocheco R. R., twenty miles from Dover. In addition to the cars from Dover, steamboats run from the campground to Wolfborough and Center Harbor, thus affording good conveniences to get to the meeting. The R. R. and steamboat companies were very accommodating towards those who came to the encampment, doing what they could to add to our comfort.

Good order prevailed during the meeting, and we were favored with pleasant weather; which, together with the good company, made the place one of special interest to the lovers of Jesus. Many warm-hearted friends met there and had heavenly communion together.

Thursday afternoon the people were entertained by preaching from Sr. Mansfield, and in the evening by Bro. Hastings. Friday morning preaching by the editor, afternoon by Bro. Burnham, and by Bro. Munger in the evening. Good prayer meetings were held in different tents, causing shouts of praise among the saints, and trembling among the backslidden and unconverted.

Saturday morning a general prayer meeting was held in front of the stand, when several requested prayers. We trust some were blessed and will endure to the end. It is difficult to reach sinners at the present day, because of the low state of religion, the great amount of infidelity, and the war and political excitement which cover our land. But we may expect a worse state of things before we have a better. The progress downward is very rapid at the present time, and we see no signs of anything better. Those who would do anything for the salvation of their friends and neighbors, should act at once, before the enemy makes them fast in his snares. It is evident that but few are aware of the perils of these times, and Satan does not intend they shall be till it is too late to escape. It is high time for every true watchman to arouse and sound the alarm. Soon we may expect to hear the trumpet that will awaken the dead, and introduce the great day of the Lord. Some are beginning to look at things as they are, and to see the importance of consecrating all to the Lord, bearing all things patiently, lest they be left at the coming of Jesus, because of "variance" with some one, "hatred," or a "grudge."

Bro. Hastings preached Saturday morning on the kingdom of God, showing most clearly that it is yet future, and that the signs of the times indicate that it will soon be set up. Preaching in the afternoon by the editor, on "Rome and Napoleon." In the evening, by Bro. L. L. Howard.

Sunday, Sept. 4th. The weather was cloudy and chilly in the forenoon, and somewhat rainy in the afternoon. At 8 1-2 o'clock, we met in front of the preacher's stand for a love-feast, and had a good one. About two hundred and thirty spoke in one hour. It was a joyful company, and they seemed to be fully decided to live to the glory of God. At the close of the love-feast about twenty came forward for prayers, and all were blessed.

At the hour of preaching, our numbers were greatly increased by the arrival of some fifteen car loads of passengers from Dover, and four steamboat loads on the lake. The ground was not large enough for the audience. The number on and about the camp ground was variously estimated from five to eight thousand. Good order prevailed during the day. Preaching in the morning by the writer, at one o'clock by Bro. I. Damman, and two o'clock by Bro. Hastings.

In the evening excellent prayer meetings were held in different tents, and quite a number decided to become the disciples of Jesus. We think many will look back to the Alton Bay campmeeting with muc[redacted] count of the good there re[redacted] baptized.

There seems to be an i[redacted] among the children of the Lord that they must consecrate all to him, if they would be ready for his coming; that the time has come when they [redacted] no longer lean upon one another, but each must learn to live right [redacted]dependently of every one else, and that he [redacted]ust cease to fret because of evil doers, and bear all things patiently. This is a very encouraging sign, and we expect to see it become more and more apparent.

There are many true-hearted brethren and sisters in N. H, who are fully determined, by the help of the Lord, to be real christians. Their hearts are in the work. Theirs is a christianity that shines forth in their everyday life, in all their social and business relations; a christianity that yields abundance of love, joy and peace, and makes the skeptic tremble before its power. Let us all exhibit the same fruits, and our reward will be great. Earth's closing day is at hand. Are we ready for the opening scenes of the world to come? Can we sing,

"All is well"?

BE SHORT.

But few are aware how much better are the results when we are short in our public prayers and exhortations, than when we are long. Everybody enjoys the meeting better than when a few make long prayers and exhortations, thus hedging up the way of the weak.

The fact that no one enjoys the long metre talks and prayers, is good evidence that the Spirit of the Lord is grieved. Leave the long prayers for the closet; and if we would have profitable prayer meetings, that will accomplish a positive good, and make people wish to come again, we must learn to be short. If we leave people hungry, we may expect to see them again at our meetings. Very few can talk five minutes in a prayer meeting to edification. One or two minutes is better, and will accomplish more good. Talk often, but not long, if you would have interesting meetings. Many prayer meetings are spoiled by some one who thinks he must "talk to edification," and consequently takes up some point of doctrine, entirely foreign to the spirit of the meeting; and one too, perhaps, about which there is more or less contention, and argues away upon it, till all wish they were at home, and may conclude to come no more; and thus the prayer meeting runs out, or becomes a kind of a debating meeting, that no one enjoys but a few combative temperaments. Many churches are ruined in this way. When will people learn wisdom?

The object of prayer meetings should be to awaken devotional feelings. During our intercourse with the world, in our daily business, we meet with much that tends to turn our minds off from the Lord, blunt our spirit of prayer, and lead us to a state of cold formality. The prayer meeting, properly conducted, is most admirably adapted to restore a devotional frame of mind, and lead us to love the Lord and his children more fervently. On this account, Jesus has instructed us to come together and exhort one another. Let us do it, and be ready to welcome our Savior when he appears.

ALARMING TOKENS.

The following extracts are from a new monthly published in London, Eng. It shows that some are opening their eyes to the sad state of things in the world:—

"'The Lord is at hand.' If this could be said considerably more than eighteen centuries since, how much more now! How prevalent is crime! Murder stalks through the land in a manner that is absolutely alarming. Human blood is shed with a reckless barbarity that could scarcely be exceeded by savages.

All this may in a large measure be attributed to the neglect and profanation of the Sabbath. It is a most deplorable circumstance, that, in this nominally christian land, a large majority of the population never enter any place of worship. In London, this has been ascertained to be the case with ninety-nine out of every hundred! Thus the bulk of the nation is found to be as destitute of any real religion as downright heathen.

Another characteristic of the times, continually obtruded on the attention, and also predicted by our Lord as denoting his being at hand, is the boldness of error. Heedless of all exposures, it keeps marching on, determined to succeed by cool effrontery and obstinate perseverance.

The monstrously wicked characters brought upon the stage, though they repel, excite no surprise. We seem, in truth, to have been going down for the last few years, even into a literary Gehenna."

The writer then goes on to say that the great question will soon be, "Is christianity to be or not to be? Such is the progress of these last days; and yet many professed watchmen are so blinded by church fables, that they endeavor to persuade the people that the world is growing better; which is what the demons are trying to make the world believe, according to the instruction given through their mediums.

Let us awake to the perils that surround us before it is too late.

FOUND ON THE CAMP-GROUND.—A small woolen shawl, plaid. A purple shawl. A gentleman's collar. A black sun-umbrella. Two brown veils. A memorandum book. A shirt. A scarf. A Testament. A hand-saw. Several pairs of gloves. A trunk key. A black dress. Several yards of muslin. A large, peculiarly shaped key. A large umbrella.

For the World's Crisis.

THE ALTON BAY CAMPMEETING.

Our meeting at Alton Bay of eight days is just finished. The weather was good, the gathering large, the meeting as a whole excellent. The seats with backs made all that were seated comfortable. The new buildings for tents were a great improvement for meetings and sleeping, so that the comforts of the meeting greatly excelled those of last [redacted] and could not fail to impress the hearer with the importance of a speedy preparation for the coming of our Lord to reward every man according to his deeds.

The prayer and conference meetings in the tents I am not so well able to report, as I was unable to attend many of them, but I do know that some of them were blessed meetings, and many found special blessings by being reclaimed, and converted to Christ and the truth. The Spirit of the Lord was truly with us, and good was done. To him be all the glory.

It was a great meeting of those of like precious faith. Love and harmony prevailed, and all left, breathing blessings upon one another. A multitude of people attended, and heard attentively the delineation of our doctrine; and it was supposed by some that, on the last day, ten thousand people were on the ground. The best order prevailed; no disturbance through the meeting. All was quiet when the meetings were done. No fear to sleep in the woods under tents.

Mr. Kimball, superintendent of the railroad, with his employees, did all he could for the success and comfort of the meeting. The boarding table was satisfactory, while many, as in earlier times, had a table of their own, enjoying the blessings of domestic life in camp.

The expenses of the meeting, though large, were generously met, so that we could help the preacher on his way after a godly sort, pay all our bills, and leave the ground ready for a meeting next year, if time continues.

In the clearing up, there was found an overcoat, one black shawl, and three small parasols; all of which can be had by applying to Bro. J. G. Smith, Durham Ridge, N. H.

God bless the children, and help them to carry their good resolutions made at the meeting into daily practice, thus perfecting the work of God and preparing them to shine as the sun in the kingdom of their Father forever.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Christian Publication Society begin operations this year under circumstances more encouraging than ever. The affairs of the office are in a better position for energetic management, I think, than ever before. With years comes experience and that wisdom which is profitable to direct.

Last year we raised some $1200 to furnish tracts free. Tracts to nearly the whole amount have been given away far and near, and more are ready to be scattered. We ought to have done more than this the past year. We mean to do more than this for the year to come.

The Society have concluded to call for $2000 this year, to be used in manufacturing tracts, to be given to all who need them. Each dollar given, notwithstanding the high prices of paper, will send 1300 pages of tracts postpaid to any part of the country, or will furnish 1800 pages delivered at the office.

Here is a chance for all to preach. A cent will buy four tracts, and who can tell how much good they may do? Let all come to this work. The Society can make tracts as cheaply as any one. Their tracts cost them less than private individuals can afford to make them for, and then all the profits, if there are any, will be kept in the office to issue more books and tracts, or to distribute other tracts to those that have need.

The officers of the Society have no pecuniary interest in the concern. They are only paid for the work they do, and sometimes not for that. They do not own a penny of the profits of the concern. Hence they can ask you for means, and pledge you that to the extent of their judgment and ability it shall be judiciously and faithfully appropriated.

Come, then, brethren, to this work. Raise this two thousand dollars as soon as you can, and I pledge my word, if the Lord will, to ask for as much more as soon as practicable after this is paid in. Direct letters, with pledges and the money, to Miles Grant, Boston, Mass.

In behalf of the Christian Publication Society, H. L. HASTINGS, President.

For the World's Crisis.

EXODUS 20: 12.

I listened to a sermon recently on these words. The command was satisfactorily explained and enforced, but the annexed promise but casually dwelt upon. I did not wonder that with his views it was difficult to harmonize the promise given by a God that cannot lie with the evident nonfulfillment to many who are bright examples of filial duty, yet cut down in the morning of their day,—so frequently indeed that it has become a proverb—

"Death leaves a shining mark."

Our minister tried to get round the difficulty by saying that disobedience often exposed [redacted] our benefit in the Crisis? M. PARRY.

Correspondence.

From Sr. H. P. Van Kirk.

BRO. GRANT:—Permit me through your paper to notice an article which appeared in Aug. 9th of the Crisis, under the head of "The Abyss of Spiritualism." It was evidently written with the kindest of feeling toward me, and an earnest, honest desire to benefit me, for which I feel truly grateful to the writer. I know I am weak and ignorant, and need all the help I can get from pilgrims along the way; and I think I appreciate any effort in this direction. But I should have been glad if the Bro. or Sr. (I know not which it is) had given the name, that I might have addressed the person instead of yourself. But this mode of speaking may not be amiss, as I discover you are often the medium of such communication.

If the writer of the article above named will carefully read "the correspondence and dream," they will perceive that I did not say I thought I had escaped the abyss of Spiritualism; neither that I had been near it. I said nothing about it. Bro. Willard simply stated what he supposed to be a fact. I do not recollect that the subject of Spiritualism has ever been touched upon in all my correspondence with Bro. and Sr. Willard; and I have never met them in person. I asked that the dream might be published, not to lift myself into notice, but from a sense of duty. I believed it to be a revelation from God. I have never doubted it, nor do I now, notwithstanding my friend assures me the "identical working of the seducers" may be seen all through it.

I believe that in that dream I saw a glimpse of the world as it is, and also myself; and the influence of that knowledge upon my life has not been such as must result from demoniac influences. The friend may have had a similar vision, and it might have been from such a source; but that is no proof that my dream was of that character. But here let me state (and it costs me much to do it) that I HAVE had many revelations which seemed to be of a holy character, which I know were from the father of lies. What I wish to make apparent is this fact, that the operations of the good and bad spirit are so exactly similar many times, that we shall never be able to discern between the two, only in the proportion that we humble ourselves before God and are taught of him; and in this way shall we be led into all truth.

I am thus plain, because I feared the young and inexperienced in the way might be made to stumble by the tenor of my friend's article. One might suppose from it that we were left without chart or compass, in these days of divers spirits. But such is not the case. The word and the Spirit are ever near to help our infirmities; and we should never have received the injunction to "try the spirits," had we not at all times a very present help in time of trouble.

I might have been tempted from my friend's remarks to feel that all my experiences were an illusion, and the glow of love which fills my soul sometimes to overflowing was but the fire from off some unholy altar, did I not know for myself. I, too, have had some most startling experiences in this fatal delusion which is trying the world at the present time. I have seen it in varied forms. In the form of an angel of light, and where the cloven foot was plainly seen. I have seen and felt its fatal influence many times (even since the writing of that dream, which took place some eighteen months since). I have been beset upon every side, as it were; for it has been my sad fate to find my most subtle tempters among my dearest, most cherished friends.

I know I am in the most imminent danger; that but for the infinite mercy of God I should this hour have been beyond the reach of mercy. I feel my danger more and more, and latterly as I have seen the pure and lovely drawn aside by the sophistical reasoning of one of the most subtle of these mediums, and remember how near I came to the same vortex but a few short months ago, I am led to cry out from the very depths of my being, Lord, save, or we perish! But praise the Lord, oh my soul! I hear the precious promise even as I write—"I will never leave nor forsake thee." Then if we do not go away from our Savior, we shall not be left to ourselves; although trials and temptations must come, we shall find a way of escape through humble reliance on Christ.

Pardon the length of this letter, Bro. Grant. I have long felt that I must write some thoughts for the Crisis, but an unwillingness to infringe upon your limits, and my inability to do justice to the subjects upon my mind, have deterred me. My unknown friend has called me out upon a subject most vital to me, and one upon which I have much to say from positive experience, not because it is pleasant to do so, but because I believe I owe it to the world; yet allow me to add I have never knowingly gone near Spiritualism in any form, but I have been near it. But a still small voice has always warned me of my danger. I instinctively know it, but I have not always fled in time to escape intense suffering. I believe most emphatically it is the great delusion of these latter days, and none will be safe from its wiles until our long-looked-for Master comes to take his weary children home. Your Sister, hoping for a part in the first resurrection, H. P. VAN KIRK.

Jacksonville, Tompkins Co., N. Y.

From Bro. H. H. Brown.

To the Brethren scattered abroad:—"Grace, mercy and peace, from God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ our Saviour." Fearing that some would wonder why they did not hear of my whereabouts, as they were expecting me to hold meetings in their neighborhoods, I concluded I would say a few words through the Crisis, as I have not time to write to each one personally. Having received information from home of my needed return at once, I was obliged to return, trusting in divine strength for a future day in which the Lord and I would assail the battlements of the enemy. I am having a blessed time at this place, blowing the trumpet, and sounding an alarm to the dwellers in the city of destruction. Brethren, pray for us that the Word of the Lord may have free course and be glorified. We should be glad to have the brethren passing this way call on us. Nunda [redacted] and N. [redacted] N. Y. [redacted] Dagget [redacted] My ad- [redacted] Alleghany Co., N. Y.

Brethren, "let us not sleep as do others, but let us watch and be sober; and "let us who are of the day be sober, putting on the breastplate of faith and love; and for an helmet the hope of salvation.", And God grant that when Christ shall appear we may be found doing our duty at our post, or if we fall, let us fall at our post, that we may rise with the sleeping millions to shout the glad song of triumph through eternity. Your Brother in Christ,

HERBERT H. BROWN.

From Bro. J. M. Hamblin.

BRO. GRANT:—I have read the World's Crisis for the last two months, and have been greatly profited thereby.

There are a few thoughts on my mind, which please notice in your paper. When Christ arose from the dead, he spake to his disciples, saying, "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth."—Matt. 28: 18. I am inclined to think from this passage that Christ is a distinct being from his Father. If all power was given to him, there must have been a time when he had not all power; for to say he possessed all power, and yet had it given to him, is one of the great mysteries of God's holy Word. Upon the hypothesis that Christ is the supreme God, when was it that he did not possess all power in himself? Jesus says, "all things are delivered me of my Father." Yours in Christ,

JOSHUA M. HAMBLIN.

☞ A real life must have a worthy aim. Men are not made to float with whatever current they chance to have been cast upon. Every individual is born with a life work before him. There is some variety here, and men are variously endowed to meet this state of things. At a proper age each should choose his particular calling, and having made the election, therewith be content. To fulfill this worthily, he should devote an earnest life.

Obituaries.

Gertrude A. Pettingill.

Died in Farmington, Wis., Aug. 1st, 1864, of congestion of the brain, Gertrude A., only child of Jay and Adeline Pettingill, aged one year, three months, and twenty-nine days.

Only four weeks previous they lost their only son, and have now returned to their home lonely, weary, and sad. May these afflicted parents be comforted in this hour of sorrow, and at last be found ready with their little ones to enter into the paradise of God.

Funeral sermon by the writer, from 1 Cor. 15: 26.

Sleep, Gertrude, sleep, till Jesus wake thee
From thy cold and silent tomb;
A little while and he shall take thee
Where chill death shall never come.

Father, mother, all who loved thee,
Grieved to lay thy body here;
In thy pain they tried to soothe thee,
For thee shed affection's tear.

But she's gone, and tears and sorrow
Will not move her where she lies;
But there comes a joyful morrow,
Ending all our mourning days.

Great Redeemer, lovely Jesus,
Keep us till salvation come;
Not a moment, Savior, leave us,
Till we reach that heavenly home.

S. J. Adams.

Jennie Cora Pierce.

Died in Central Village, Coventry, R. I., Aug. 22nd, Jennie Cora Pierce, only child of Cornelius C. and Ann Sarah Pierce, and grand-daughter of Eld. B. Reynolds, aged six weeks and two days.

She tasted of life's bitter cup,
Refused to drink the portion up,
She turned her little head aside,
Dejected at the taste, and died.

Funeral discourse by the writer, from Ps. 89: 47;—"Remember how short my time is."

Eld. Wm. S. Devereux.

Hattie Dillabaugh.

The enemy, Death, has entered our family and taken our loved little Hattie. She was nineteen months old the day she died, Aug. 19th, 1864. We tried hard to save her (her disease was diarrhea and inflammation), but death had his strong hold upon her, and we had to lay her in the cold grave for a little while. On Sunday, the 21st, Sr. Henry preached her funeral sermon from Luke 8: 52, 53. Sr. H. spoke to our entire satisfaction. May she learn her weakness, and her strength, which cometh from God, and keep humble at the feet of Jesus.

Summary of News.

DOMESTIC.

New York, Sept. 7. The Tribune's dispatch from Gen. Butler's headquarters, dated 5th, says the Dutch Gap canal is so far completed that its success is beyond question. It will by no means open the river to Richmond. The rebel gunboats and Fort Drury are above it, but by it we flank Howlett's House Battery, which is almost as formidable as Drury's Bluff, and cut off six miles of the river.

The Herald's Fort Gaines correspondent, writing on the 30th ult., says our troops have effected a landing at Cedar Point, three miles above Dauphin Island, and twenty-five miles from Mobile.

The rebel Gen. John Morgan was surprised and killed on the 4th inst. at Bull's Gap.

The Times' correspondent with Gen. Sheridan, writing from near Berryville, 4th inst., says the entire army are busy digging rifle pits, intrenchments and various field works deemed so essential to success. Our present line is almost the same as occupied when falling back from Winchester, and is capable of strong resistance.

Louisville, Sept 6. Official dispatches received at Nashville state that in the late fight before Atlanta the rebels lost 3000 killed and wounded, 2000 prisoners, including a Brigadier General, 10 guns and a large amount of camp equipage. Our loss was trifling; the rebels are retreating in great haste.

Official information from the front, dated Sunday, twenty-seven miles south of Atlanta, represents that Sherman is pushing rapidly southward of Atlanta.

Gen. Granger has issued a congratulatory order to the army for the part they took in the reduction of Forts Morgan and Gaines. Not a single life was lost by our forces in the attack on Fort Morgan.

The Army of the Potomac is still before Petersburg, working hard for the reduction of that stronghold.

The Richmond Examiner of the 31st says: "If Atlanta were to fall, or Petersburg, or if Sheridan should drive Early back to Lynchburg, or if any one of these events should befall, then all the peace principles and peace Presidents of Chicago would be at the election next November where last year's snow is, and last night's moonshine."

The Richmond Sentinel says the plan of an extensive insurrection was recently discovered in Brooks county, Ga., and that several of the parties implicated had been arrested and punished.

New York, Sept. 9. The reported recapture of Victoria from the French by Cortinas is confirmed. The French were put to flight with heavy loss. Cortinas announced to the soldiers that he would soon lead them against Tampico and would be reinforced from Huastican. Capt. Mendosea ambushed a party of Imperialists, killing sixty-six and captured twenty-seven with 115 rifles and seventy-three horses.

New York, Sept. 12. A Washington dispatch to the Tribune says it is ascertained that Lee has made preparations for a grand attack on General Grant, hoping to cripple him before the army has been reinforced. Stirring events may be looked for soon.

Fort Morgan.—It is reported on good authority that the rebel garrison at Fort Morgan was starved out, as it was the practice to supply it with only two weeks' provisions at a time. Gen. Page, the garrison of some 600 men, and all the arms and munitions, the rebel papers say, fell into our hands.

A stir among the Printers.—The proprietors of the Chicago Times have discharged their entire force of male compositors, and put a force of young women in their places. The affair has caused a great sensation among the printing fraternity of that city.

Bleeding of the Nose.—Extraordinary as it may appear, says an exchange, a piece of brown paper folded and placed between the upper lip and the gum, will stop bleeding of the nose.

ITEMS.

☞ The Chicago Tribune has intelligence that extensive fires are raging in the woods of the Lake Superior country. A trader from Georgian Bay says the country for ninety miles back is in a blaze. The destruction of timber and of fur-bearing animals is very great.

☞ A robin's nest was found recently in a tree at the Oneida Community, which had interwoven in its structure twenty-nine lady's collars, all of which had been purloined by the birds from the grass plot where they had been placed after the wash.

☞ The Turkish cotton crop is said to be more than fourfold what it was last year.

☞ The finishing touches have been given to the dome of the Capitol at Washington. The eastern portico of the north wing is also completed.

☞ The Times says the proclamation forger Howard was released Aug. 25th, by order of the Secretary of War.

☞ It is claimed in Paris that eleven millions of dollars worth of silks have been exported to this country the last year.

☞ There are one mile and a half of new buildings "going up" in Chicago.

☞ It has been agreed upon by the Federal and Confederate authorities to release all prisoners of war from close confinement. This does not apply to prisoners of State.

☞ It is understood that the total number of war vessels of various classes building by the government, and under contract, exceeds one hundred.

☞ Eight thousand school-houses have been erected in Russia since the emancipation of the serfs took place.

☞ The oldest railroad in Maine is that from Bangor to Oldtown. The largest church in Maine, the Catholic Cathedral at Bangor. The largest sawmill in the world, one of those at Orono.

☞ Hartford, New Haven and other large cities and towns in Connecticut are the special prey of midnight burglars just now.

☞ Forty thousand slaves were employed to build the defenses of Atlanta.

Obituaries.

GERTRUDE A. PETTINGILL.

Died in Farmington, Wis., Aug. 1st, 1864, of congestion of the brain, Gertrude A., only child of Jay and Adeline Pettingill, aged one year, three months, and twenty-nine days.

Only four weeks previous they lost their only son, and have now returned to their home lonely, weary, and sad. May these afflicted parents be comforted in this hour of sorrow, and at last be found ready with their little ones to enter into the paradise of God.

Funeral sermon by the writer, from 1 Cor. 15: 26.

Sleep, Gertrude, sleep, till Jesus wake thee
From thy cold and silent tomb;
A little while and he shall take thee
Where chill death shall never come.

Father, mother, all who loved thee,
Grieved to lay thy body here;
In thy pain they tried to soothe thee,
For thee shed affection's tear.

But she's gone, and tears and sorrow
Will not move her where she lies;
But there comes a joyful morrow,
Ending all our mourning days.

Great Redeemer, lovely Jesus,
Keep us till salvation come;
Not a moment, Savior, leave us,
Till we reach that heavenly home.

S. J. ADAMS.

JENNIE CORA PIERCE.

Died in Central Village, Coventry, R. I., Aug. 22nd, Jennie Cora Pierce, only child of Cornelius C. and Ann Sarah Pierce, and grand-daughter of Eld. B. Reynolds, aged six weeks and two days.

She tasted of life's bitter cup,
Refused to drink the portion up,
She turned her little head aside,
Dejected at the taste, and died.

Funeral discourse by the writer, from Ps. 89: 47;—"Remember how short my time is."

ELD. WM. S. DEVEREUX.

HATTIE DILLABAUGH.

The enemy, Death, has entered our family and taken our loved little Hattie. She was nineteen months old the day she died, Aug. 19th, 1864. We tried hard to save her (her disease was diarrhea and inflammation), but death had his strong hold upon her, and we had to lay her in the cold grave for a little while. On Sunday, the 21st, Sr. Henry preached her funeral sermon from Luke 8: 52, 53. Sr. H. spoke to our entire satisfaction. May she learn her weakness, and her strength, which cometh from God, and keep humble at the feet of Jesus.

G. DILLABAUGH.

Summary of News.

DOMESTIC.

New York, Sept. 7. The Tribune's dispatch from Gen. Butler's headquarters, dated 5th, says the Dutch Gap canal is so far completed that its success is beyond question. It will by no means open the river to Richmond. The rebel gunboats and Fort Drury are above it, but by it we flank Howlett's House Battery, which is almost as formidable as Drury's Bluff, and cut off six miles of the river.

The Herald's Fort Gaines correspondent, writing on the 30th ult., says our troops have effected a landing at Cedar Point, three miles above Dauphin Island, and twenty-five miles from Mobile.

The rebel Gen. John Morgan was surprised and killed on the 4th inst. at Bull's Gap.

The Times' correspondent with Gen. Sheridan, writing from near Berryville, 4th inst., says the entire army are busy digging rifle pits, intrenchments and various field works deemed so essential to success. Our present line is almost the same as occupied when falling back from Winchester, and is capable of strong resistance.

Louisville, Sept 6. Official dispatches received at Nashville state that in the late fight before Atlanta the rebels lost 3000 killed and wounded, 2000 prisoners, including a Brigadier General, 10 guns and a large amount of camp equipage. Our loss was trifling; the rebels are retreating in great haste.

Official information from the front, dated Sunday, twenty-seven miles south of Atlanta, represents that Sherman is pushing rapidly southward of Atlanta.

Gen. Granger has issued a congratulatory order to the army for the part they took in the reduction of Forts Morgan and Gaines. Not a single life was lost by our forces in the attack on Fort Morgan.

The Army of the Potomac is still before Petersburg, working hard for the reduction of that stronghold.

The Richmond Examiner of the 31st says: "If Atlanta were to fall, or Petersburg, or if Sheridan should drive Early back to Lynchburg, or if any one of these events should befall, then all the peace principles and peace Presidents of Chicago would be at the election next November where last year's snow is, and last night's moonshine."

The Richmond Sentinel says the plan of an extensive insurrection was recently discovered in Brooks county, Ga., and that several of the parties implicated had been arrested and punished.

New York, Sept. 9. The reported recapture of Victoria from the French by Cortinas is confirmed. The French were put to flight with heavy loss. Cortinas announced to the soldiers that he would soon lead them against Tampico and would be reinforced from Huastican. Capt. Mendosea ambushed a party of Imperialists, killing sixty-six and captured twenty-seven with 115 rifles and seventy-three horses.

New York, Sept. 12. A Washington dispatch to the Tribune says it is ascertained that Lee has made preparations for a grand attack on General Grant, hoping to cripple him before the army has been reinforced. Stirring events may be looked for soon.

FORT MORGAN.—It is reported on good authority that the rebel garrison at Fort Morgan was starved out, as it was the practice to supply it with only two weeks' provisions at a time. Gen. Page, the garrison of some 600 men, and all the arms and munitions, the rebel papers say, fell into our hands.

A STIR AMONG THE PRINTERS.—The proprietors of the Chicago Times have discharged their entire force of male compositors, and put a force of young women in their places. The affair has caused a great sensation among the printing fraternity of that city.

BLEEDING OF THE NOSE.—Extraordinary as it may appear, says an exchange, a piece of brown paper folded and placed between the upper lip and the gum, will stop bleeding of the nose.

ITEMS.

☞ The Chicago Tribune has intelligence that extensive fires are raging in the woods of the Lake Superior country. A trader from Georgian Bay says the country for ninety miles back is in a blaze. The destruction of timber and of fur-bearing animals is very great.

☞ A robin's nest was found recently in a tree at the Oneida Community, which had interwoven in its structure twenty-nine lady's collars, all of which had been purloined by the birds from the grass plot where they had been placed after the wash.

☞ The Turkish cotton crop is said to be more than fourfold what it was last year.

☞ The finishing touches have been given to the dome of the Capitol at Washington. The eastern portico of the north wing is also completed.

☞ The Times says the proclamation forger Howard was released Aug. 25th, by order of the Secretary of War.

☞ It is claimed in Paris that eleven millions of dollars worth of silks have been exported to this country the last year.

☞ There are one mile and a half of new buildings "going up" in Chicago.

☞ It has been agreed upon by the Federal and Confederate authorities to release all prisoners of war from close confinement. This does not apply to prisoners of State.

☞ It is understood that the total number of war vessels of various classes building by the government, and under contract, exceeds one hundred.

☞ Eight thousand school-houses have been erected in Russia since the emancipation of the serfs took place.

☞ The oldest railroad in Maine is that from Bangor to Oldtown. The largest church in Maine, the Catholic Cathedral at Bangor. The largest sawmill in the world, one of those at Orono.

☞ Hartford, New Haven and other large cities and towns in Connecticut are the special prey of midnight burglars just now.

☞ Forty thousand slaves were employed to build the defenses of Atlanta.

For the World's Crisis.

CHRISTIAN MARINER.

BY VESTA N. CUDWORTH.

AIR—"Bury me not in the deep, deep sea."

Mariner, haste! there's a threat'ning gale—
In the darkness list! there's a faint, sad wail;
Keep out the life-boat till day is o'er,
Anchor thy boat on the other shore.

Mariner, haste! for the tide waits not,
Tear from its mooring thy fragile barque;
Hoist every sail! for the breakers roar,
Anchor thy boat on the other shore.

Mariner, haste! for a 'witching song
Has reached thy ear from the giddy throng;
Fame leaves a sting when her song is o'er—
Anchor thy boat on the other shore.

Mariner, haste from the shades of pride!
Gomorrah and Sodom sleep side by side,
And earth's probation is almost o'er,—
Anchor thy boat on the other shore.

Mariner, haste from the love of gain!
Its vot'ries writhe in its golden chain,
And earth is mad with the shining ore,—
Anchor thy boat on the other shore.

Mariner, haste! thou art weary now,
Shadows of suff'ring are on thy brow;
Fainting and weak, grasp the dipping oar—
Anchor thy boat on the other shore.

Seek'st thou peace where the storm comes not—
Home, where sorrows are all forgot—
Friends that will love thee and change no more—
Anchor thy boat on the other shore.

Mariner, haste! there's no time to sleep,
Push out thy barque where the dark waters leap;
Toil bravely on, though the wild breakers roar,
Anchor thy boat on the other shore.

For the World's Crisis.

THE SEVEN HEADS.—NO. 2.

"And I stood upon the sand of the sea, and I saw a beast rise up out of the sea, having seven heads and ten horns, and upon his horns ten crowns, and upon his heads the name (names, margin) of blasphemy."—Rev. 13: 1.

Having made the above remarks, I will proceed to show as briefly as possible which dynasties were regularly elected to the imperial throne of Germany, and consequently the ones symbolized by the remaining six of the seven heads. As I have shown in a former article that Charlemagne, king of the Franks, became the first Roman German Emperor, the Carlovingian dynasty of France became the first of the German heads, and the second head of the seven spoken of in the prophecy, at the coronation of Charlemange in A. D. 800. This dynasty was uninterrupted in its reign, and finally became extinct in A. C. 911. See Cyclopedia of Europe, page 299, Kholrausch's History of Germany, and Blair's Chronological Tables, page 304. The next regularly elected line of kings to the imperial throne was of the Saxon house, although for six years, from 911 to 918, Conrad First, of the house of Franconia, occupied the imperial throne, by the recommendation of Henry the First of the house of Saxony. Henry the First of Saxony was elected in A. D. 918, and was the first sovereign of the second line of the Roman German Emperors and the third of the seven heads spoken of in the prophecy. This line was uninterrupted in its reign, and finally the house of Saxony became extinct with Henry II. in A. D. 1024. See the above named histories.

I wish the reader to notice that Henry I. of the house of Saxony was not crowned at all by the Pope; and also that Otho the First, his successor in the Saxon line, who ascended the imperial throne at the death of Henry, in A. D. 936, was not crowned by the Pope till A. D. 962; yet I think no one will doubt that the house of Saxony became the third head at the election of Henry the First in A. D. 918.

From the above it will be seen there were forty-four years, during which time the third head had not been crowned by the Pope. Another instance like the above occurs after the election of the fourth head. And finally the historian says, Frederick III. was the last elected German king, crowned Emperor at Rome, which occurred in A. D. 1452. See Cyclopedia of Europe. Neither was Justinian, who was the first Emperor of the first head, crowned by the Pope. I mention these facts to show the opinion that has been so prevalent among us, that each head as it becomes the dominant power must be crowned by the Pope, in order to be recognized as being connected with the Papacy, is incorrect; but that they were, or were not crowned by the Pope, as the parties might agree, or dictate, or as it might suit their convenience.

The next regularly elected line of kings to the throne was of the Ducal house of Franconia. Conrad II. of this house was elected in A. D. 1024, and thus became the first sovereign of the third line of Roman German Emperors, and the fourth head of the seven spoken of in the prophecy.

During a great portion of the time of the imperial reign of this dynasty, anarchy and strife prevailed to such an alarming extent, that the empire became for several years the scene of devastation, robbery, and murder. The principal cause of this trouble was the struggle between several of the most powerful houses and their adherents for the ascendancy in power; consequently there were interruptions and changes made during the imperial reign of this dynasty, which we need be careful to trace out, in order to ascertain when it finally became extinct. But I will only briefly refer to some of the principal points.

First, while Henry V. of this line of kings was occupying the imperial throne, the troubles of the empire became so great, he made a friend of the bold and ambitious Count Frederick of Buren, by presenting to him his daughter Agnes, together with the Duchy of Swabia. Count Frederick now removed his seat from the village of Buren, and fixed it upon the pinnacle of the Staufen mountain, where he built the castle Hohenstaufens. Thus was laid the foundation of the powerful house of Hohenstaufens. At the death of Henry V., the Duchy of Franconia, together with most of his possessions, passed over to his nephews, the Dukes Frederick and Conrad of Hohenstaufens, and ever after the Hohenstaufens dukes were called the dukes of Franconia, under whose sway was also the Duchy of Swabia.

Again, after the death of Henry V. of the house of Franconia, Lothaire of Saxony was compelled against his will to mount the imperial throne of Germany. He remained there but thirteen years, during which time the fearful struggle between the so-called Guelphs and Ghibelines occurred. At his death, Conrad III. of Hohenstaufens, (mentioned above) was elected to the imperial throne. Yet he was called the duke of Franconia, by virtue of his having become possessed of the Duchy of Franconia, after the death of Henry V. Thus it will be seen all the interests of these two houses had become one, and that still the house of Franconia was involved with that of Hohenstaufens in the imperial government of Germany; consequently the house of Franconia could not said to have become extinct until that also of the Hohenstaufens disappears.

During the remainder of the time of the imperial reign of this house, the condition of Germany was continually growing worse, on account of the waste and destruction caused by the contending parties, so that it was with difficulty any prince could long maintain the imperial government. But with one or two interruptions, this house maintained the imperial government until the death of Conrad IV. in A. D. 1254, with whom the last of this race became extinct. Thus ended the fourth head. For the above facts see Kohlrausch's History of Germany, and the Cyclopedia of Europe.

After this house had become extinct, a period of nearly twenty years ensued, which in German history is known by the name of Interreign, or the grand Interregnum. During this time the sword law exercised its barbarous sway uncontrolled throughout Germany. Consequently no German prince was under existing circumstances willing to accept the imperial crown. See Cyclopedia of Europe, page 300; also Kohlrausch's History of Germany.

As there are some who think Naples, during the reign of Charles of Anjou, was the fourth head, I wish to digress a little from my subject, to give one or two reasons why I think it cannot be so. First, those that take this view agree with me that the Saxon house was the third head, and I have already shown the Saxon line of imperial Emperors became extinct in A. D. 1024; while Charles of Anjou did not even become king of Sicily until A. D. 1266. See Bower, vol. III. p. 11; also Blair's Chronological Tables, page 389. Therefore it will be seen that there had two hundred and forty-two years elapsed, after the ending of the third head, before the fourth head could have been recognized, or have come on to the stage of action, if Naples was the fourth head.

Again, I think we learn from the prophecy, that the seventh head was to continue the shortest space of time of either of the seven; but if Naples was the fourth head, then that head continued the shortest space of time; for immediately after Charles had become king of the two Sicilies, he aspired to the same authority over all Italy, which the German emperors had formerly enjoyed. The conduct of Charles so excited the jealousy of Pope Gregory, that he at once exhorted the German electors to give an efficient head to the empire. (This was during the twenty years interregnum mentioned above). The electors followed the advice of the Pontiff, and bestowed the imperial sceptre upon Rodolph, Count of Hapsburg, in Switzerland, in A. D. 1273. Their choice was immediately approved by the Pope, after receiving a promise from the new emperor to respect the ecclesiastical privileges, to confirm the pretensions of the holy see over its temporal domains, and to leave Charles of Anjou undisturbed in the possession of the Sicilies. See Proctor's History of Italy. Therefore it will be seen that the Pope did not recognize Charles as the imperial head of the Roman empire; and also that whatever pretensions Charles might have made towards obtaining the imperial power, he was entirely superseded in A. D. 1273, which would leave but seven years from the time he was first crowned king of the Sicilies, for the duration of the fourth head, if Naples under the reign of Charles of Anjou was the fourth; but I think all will see it could not have been. Charles never was crowned king of Rome or of Italy, but simply king of the two Sicilies. Much more might be said upon this point, but this must suffice.

I will now return to the subject. After the interregnum had continued for about twenty years, the historian says (See Cyclopedia of Europe),—"It finally became evident to all, that the continuance of such a state of things would lead to common ruin; even the Pope insisted energetically upon the election of a new sovereign of all Germany. And so Rodolph First, Count of Hapsburg in Switzerland, was elected." Consequently, Rodolph First, of the house of Hapsburg in Switzerland, became the first sovereign of the fourth line of Roman German emperors, and the fifth of the seven heads spoken of in the prophecy. The king of Bohemia, and sovereign of nearly all the German provinces of Austria, at that time refusing to acknowledge Rodolph as emperor, was declared outlawed, and being defeated in two decisive battles, with the exception of Bohemia and Moravia, deprived of his possessions. Rodolph the emperor then invested his two sons with the provinces of Austria, and thus laid the foundation of the domestic power of the house of Hapsburg in Austria. This reigning house was frequently interrupted by different parties electing princes from different houses to the imperial throne.

The strife for the ascendency in power finally became so hotly contested among the different parties, that two emperors were elected at the same time; and finally in the beginning of the 15th century, there were for a short period three German emperors at once. At last the princes of the Hapsburg house became victorious, and for the space of about one hundred years maintained possession of the imperial crown. At the death of Maximilian I. A. D. 1519, the German line of the house of Hapsburg became extinct, consequently the imperial throne was left vacant. See Blair's Chronological Tables, p. 508, Cyclopedia of Europe, p. 302; also Taylor's Manual of History, and Kohlrausch's History of Germany.

The next regularly elected line of kings to the imperial throne was of the Spanish line of the house of Hapsburg, in A. D. 519. This house was founded as follows: Maximilian First, of Austria, with whom the line of German emperors became extinct, married Mary of Burgundy, daughter and heiress of Charles the Bold, duke of Burgundy. The fruit of this marriage was one son, Philip the Fair. He in process of time became united to Joanna, of Spain, daughter of Ferdinand and Isabella. The fruit of Philip's marriage with Joanna was two sons, Charles and Ferdinand; and Charles, the elder of these, at the age of sixteen inherited the crown of Spain and its colonies. At the death of Maximilian, the Austrian territories and the other domains of the house of Hapsburg were transmitted to Charles, and the German electors chose him to fill the vacant throne of the German empire. In the beginning of his reign he resigned his hereditary dominions in Germany to his brother Ferdinand, who afterwards succeeded him in the imperial government of the German empire, and became the founder of the second Austrian line of Emperors, which ended with Charles VI, in A. D. 1740. See Taylor's Manual of History, and Kohlrausch's History of Germany.

Thus it will be seen that with Charles the First of Spain, or Ferdinand his brother, commenced the fifth regularly elected line of Roman German emperors, and the sixth of the seven heads spoken of in the prophecy. This line was uninterrupted in its reign, and finally at the death of Charles the Sixth, in A. D. 1740, the second male line of the house of Hapsburg became extinct. At the death of Charles he had bequeathed all his patrimonial dominions (comprising the present Austrian monarchy, with the exception of the Polish provinces, and of the former Venitian territories), to his only daughter, the celebrated Maria Theresa, who was married to Francis Stephen, duke of Loraine; from which cause the house of Hapsburg has since been styled the Hapsburg Loraine Dynasty. See Cyclopedia of Europe, p. 303. Maria Theresa's consort (Francis Stephen) was elected emperor of the holy Roman German empire in A. D. 1745, by the name of Francis I. Consequently Francis I., of the Hapsburg Loraine dynasty, became the first sovereign of the sixth line of Roman German emperors, and the seventh of the seven heads spoken of in the prophecy.

Francis I. died in A. D. 1765, and was succeeded in the same year by his eldest son, Joseph II. During the imperial reign of this prince great reforms were inaugurated in Germany, which were calculated to weaken the power of the Papacy. Concerning the results of these reforms the historian says, (see Bower, vol. III., p. 398):—

"Finally, to give the last finishing blow to the papal supremacy, Joseph demanded of Pius VI., by the congress of Ems, the convocation of an ecumenical council, which the Popes had been promising for two hundred years. This congress was assembled in A. D. 1786. See Blair's Chronological Tables, page 681. Joseph in this same year gave a new code of laws to his subjects, in which the punishment of death was almost abrogated, and he also orders the German language to be used instead of the Latin, in the services of the church; he also passed a decree concerning the papal nuncios, reducing them to the level of common ambassadors.

Thus it will be seen the connection which had existed between the German imperial emperors and the popes, since the days of Charlemagne, had now in A. D. 1786 become nearly, if not quite, dissolved. This, however, may not mark the exact year in which the 1260 days must end; for there were frequently intermissions of several years from the time of the extinction of a head, or dynasty, until the election of the next in succession to the imperial throne; and further, this head had not become extinct, but was simply making efforts which resulted in the overthrow of the Papal supremacy in Germany.

But if we can ascertain the date when the next leading power in Europe comes on to the stage of action, as brought to view in the prophecy, and symbolized by the eighth beast, then we may be sure that the seventh head has accomplished its work, and is in the past; for no two heads are recognized in the prophecy as existing and doing their work at one and the same time.

I will now refer the reader to articles recently published in the Crisis, wherein I think I have clearly shown that the beast that ascends out of the bottomless pit (see eighth verse of the 17th chapter), is the eighth beast (see eleventh verse of the 17th chapter), and also that this same eighth beast that ascends out of the bottomless pit is the one that makes war against the two witnesses and kills them, as brought to view in the seventh verse of the eleventh chapter; and further, that the two witnesses were slain in A. D. 1791. If this date is correct (and I have no doubt that it is), then the eighth beast must have been upon the stage of action as early as at the above date.

Therefore if the premises I have laid down are in harmony with the prophecy, that is, that no two of these heads or beasts are upon the stage of action at the same time; then the seventh head must have ceased to act with the apostate church for the overthrow of the children of God, and also the 1260 years must have ended as early as at the above date, 1791, and perhaps earlier.

STRANGE WAY TO GET OUT OF IT.

A gentleman a few evenings past, in delivering a lecture, made use of these words: "It makes a man feel that he is something, and the necessity of taking care of himself, to know that he has something like God in him. We have immortal souls in us, and we know it." An Adventist in the assembly made the inquiry, "How do we know it? The Scriptures do not teach that we are immortal"

Laying aside the immortality of the soul for which he was called in question, he replied, "We have not time to discuss the question now, but we know it. If an individual has got a soul, he knows it. Those who have no souls, of course do not know any thing about it. I think there are people so low, so mean, and so beastly, they have not got any souls." According to that statement, it would seem that God made some with souls, and some without. Those that believe that they are in possession of immortality now, have souls; those who do not believe it, cannot have any. Hence they know nothing about immortality.

When a man makes a statement that there is no truth in, and no Scripture to prove it, and there is no way for him to get out of it, and he allows himself to get mad and kick it out, we do not think he proves that man has got something like God in him, but rather that he has got something very much unlike God in him.

It seems to me that Satan's lie is firmly believed to be true. God told man in consequence of disobedience he should surely die. Satan told him he should not surely die. God tells us "the soul that sinneth it shall die." Ezek. 18: 4. Man predicates his faith on Satan's lie, and tells us the soul can never die. The Word tells us that God only hath immortality. 1 Tim. 6: 16. Man tells us that he has an immortal soul, and he knows it; that when the body dies the soul still continues to live. Hence, a man can be dead and alive at the same time, and in accordance with their faith they sing—

"Then in a nobler, sweeter song,
I'll sing thy power to save,
When this poor, lisping, stammering tongue
Lies silent in the grave."

Scripture tells us the dead praise not God, neither any that go down into silence. But if we die and go down to a state of unconscious silence in the grave, how long shall we rest there? Until Jesus comes. He is the only life-giver.

It is my prayer daily that my sins may be all washed away in his blood, and that I with the entire church of Christ may be kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation, and be counted worthy to attain unto that world and a resurrection out from among the dead.

CHRIST AMONG THE DOCTORS.

He sat among those sages old,
A fair and lovely boy;
He, who to Adam's fallen race
Would be the light and joy.

And wonder filled each listener's heart,
As converse long they held;
Deemed they that in that meek-eyed boy
The Shiloh they beheld?

Ah! no, they only saw in him
The carpenter's poor son;
They thought that their expected King
In royal state would come.

Had they but understood the word
Read to them every day,
And by tradition not made void
The record of the way;

They would have recognized in him,
The fair boy sitting there,
The scion of a princely stock,
King David's royal heir.

Ah! what a lesson this should be
To all the learned divines
Who mystify God's holy word,
Nor heed the promised signs;

Who will not enter in themselves,
Nor suffer those who would;
Blind leaders of the blind, they rush
Swift on destruction's road.

And when the righteous Judge shall come,—
Nor will he long delay,—
Oh, what a dread account to give
In that great reckoning day!

GOD'S EVERLASTING KINGDOM.

"For who hath despised the day of small things?"—Zech. 4: 10.

Look at man in his infancy! Who would suppose that the power to wield kingdoms and to sway empires was latent in that impotent arm? Who would suppose that the eloquence of a Demosthenes would ever flow in graceful cadences from those lips? Who would suppose that the wisdom of a Solomon was latent there, or the counselship of an Abithophel?

Who would have supposed the ability to out-general the world was hidden in that little roll of baby blanket and napkins once called Alexander?

Who would have dreamed, as they looked upon the little Corsican on his mother's lap, that the future Napoleon, before whom combined royalty trembled and fled away, was in embryo there?

Who supposed, when the little Persian was brought forth and named Cyrus by his unsuspecting parents, that this was the individual of whom Jehovah of armies had said a century before, "Thus saith the Lord to his anointed, to Cyrus, whose right hand I have holden, to subdue nations before him; and I will loose the loins of kings, to open before him the two-leaved gates; and the gates shall not be shut," etc.?

Who would suppose that the centuried oak was once spanned by the tiny infant's hand? or the broad Amazon was once the latent spring, or the puny rivulet? In view of these things, who will despise the day of small things? Yea, behold the babe in swaddling clothes and laid in a manger! Who would have supposed "the Prince of the kings of the earth" was there? In Him we reach the climax of contrast, and here we love to rest, to gaze, and admire; but the height is too great for a long tarry, so we descend a long step from the King to the kingdom, and ask if the same admirable contrast will not exist there?

For eighteen years we have seen men as trees walking in this direction; and now feel called upon to re-examine the matter. But before doing so we feel like Moses to put off our shoes from off our feet, for the ground is holy. And believing that our dear brethren and sisters are at our side in this holy work, we are cheered with the hope that the rays from the "lamp" will soon be converging in "our paper," and we shall be able to decide for ourselves what the "Thus saith the Lord" is on this subject as well as upon so many others that have been made plain to us through this medium. Jesus said to his disciples, "Unto you it is given to know the mysteries of the kingdom of God"; therefore we may search in hope. As we have said, for eighteen years we have been questioning if, when the kingdom of God was introduced, it would not challenge faith to see it. Therefore we desire light on this point. Jesus said, "The kingdom of God cometh not with observation" (or outward show—Margin.)

He asks again, "Unto what is the kingdom of God like? and whereunto shall I resemble it?" The phrase, "kingdom of God," we here understand to be used in its primary sense—the kingdom set up in the days of these kings; not the gospel preparation for it, as is taught in many parables, such as—"A sower went forth to sow,"—"a net cast into the sea," etc.; but the actual manner of the introduction of this kingdom upon the earth.

Now comes the comparison—the answer to the question, What is the kingdom of God like? "The kingdom of heaven is like a grain of mustard-seed, which a man took and sowed in his field; which indeed is the least of all seeds; but when it is grown it is the greatest among herbs, and becometh a tree, so that the birds of the air come to lodge in the branches thereof." This can teach nothing less than, as the mustard-seed is the least of all seeds, yet when planted produces the greatest tree; so, in like manner, will it be in the introduction of the kingdom of God upon the earth,—it will be the least in its beginnings of all other kingdoms, but, ultimately, the greatest of all kingdoms. "And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever."

We understand the mustard-seed form of the kingdom of God, and the stone cut out of the mountain, to be synchronous; and it seems increasingly certain, and of necessity, that this kingdom assume a distinctness and a perfectness of organization co-existent with "these kingdoms," as it is made the instrument of destruction to all these kingdoms, as Israel was made the instrument of destruction to the nations of Canaan. After this "it"—the stone—becomes a great mountain and fills the whole earth, agreeing to the mustard-tree when the fowls of heaven come and lodge in its branches.

Then again we read of "the times of restitution." What do these mean?—times of restitution! Do these not relate to the same period when the God of heaven is re-establishing his government upon the earth? when "the meek" will inherit the earth, and have dominion under the second Adam, as Adam the first had dominion at the hand of his Creator; Eden restored—"Paradise regained"? Your sister, confidently looking for light,

Hammonton, N. J. E. S. WILLARD.

P. S.—"Nevertheless, when the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?"—Luke 18: 8. "Give us of your oil, for our lamps are gone out.... Not so, lest there be not enough for us and you," etc.—Matt. 25: 8, 9. Why this great scarcity of faith, as indicated above, if there be not something more to try it than merely to stand ready, as we now do, for the coming of our Lord as a thief? What is the greatest trial of faith to God's people? Is it not to have something develop, in God's providence, that is contrary to their preconceived views of the fulfillment of Scripture? This is the rock on which Israel split at the first advent. "Let us labor therefore to enter into that rest, lest any man fall after the same example of unbelief."—Heb. 4: 11.

THE MARK OF THE BEAST.

There is fearful judgment awaiting all who have the mark of the beast. This is most clearly stated, and no other argument need be used to any conscientious christian to dissuade him from a practice, than to make him believe that the mark of the beast is set upon him by such practice. But to show by evidence what the mark of the beast is, is quite different from asserting what it is.

The teachers of the seventh-day theory assert in books, papers, tracts, charts, visions and pulpits, that the keeping of the first day of the week incurs "the mark of the beast," and its terrible results. Let us take the mask off from this assertion and see how it looks.

1st. The beast whose mark is to be dreaded and shunned is admitted by all parties to have been brought into existence as late as three hundred years after Christ, and he could not have a mark before he existed.

2nd. It is certain that all christians kept the first day of the week for three hundred years before there was any such mark to receive. On this point we give proof:—

Ignatius, Bishop of Antioch, A. D. 101, who lived in the same time of John the apostle, says: "Let us (christians) no more Sabbatize, but let us keep the Lord's day. Let every one that loves Christ keep holy the Lord's day—the queen of days, the resurrection day, the highest of all days." This he wrote because some of the Jewish christians were zealous to keep the seventh-day once more.

Irenæus, Bishop of Lyons, a disciple of Polycarp, who had associated with the apostles, says, A. D. 167,—"On the Lord's day every one of us christians keeps the Sabbath, meditating on the law, and rejoicing in the works of God."

Dionysius, in writing to the Romans, A. D. 170, says: "We celebrate the Lord's day, keeping the Lord's day holy."

Clement, of Alexandria, A. D. 192, says: "A christian, according to the command of the gospel, observes the Lord's day, thereby glorifying the resurrection of the Lord."

Tertullian, living in the same time, says: "The Lord's day is the holy day of the christian church. We have nothing to do with the (Jewish) Sabbath. The Lord's day is the christian's solemnity."

Barnabas, who lived with the apostles, says, "We (christians) keep the eighth day"—first day of the week—"as a joyful holy day; on which day, also, Jesus rose from the dead."

The above quotations are made to show that christians observed the first day of the week, from the establishment of christianity, and long before there was a "Pope" or a "beast" to put his mark upon christians. There is much more of such history.

Mosheim says, "In the first century all christians were unanimous in setting apart the first day of the week, on which the Savior arose from the dead, for the solemn celebration of public worship. This pious custom, which was derived from the church in Jerusalem, was founded upon the express appointment of the apostles, who themselves consecrated that day to the same sacred purpose; and it was observed universally, as appears from the united testimony of the most credible writers."—Eccl. Hist., p. 45.

GIVE GOD THE PRAISE.

Do we always do it? Do we, when we have done a good deed, give God all the praise, or do we reserve a part for ourselves? I fear there are many who love to take to themselves a share of that praise which belongs to God; who love to tell their good deeds, but are never willing to own their faults.

Do you suppose that God will have such a people as this to reign with him in his kingdom? Nay, for these are the very people he denounces in his word as hypocrites, and says that except our righteousness exceed theirs, we shall in no wise enter into the kingdom of heaven. God's people are an humble, contrite people, who do not strive to build up themselves, but the cause of Christ.

Let us strive, then, to honor and glorify God in all we say and do, that we may be accounted worthy to enter the coming kingdom.

REPORT OF THE EASTERN MAINE CONFERENCE.

This conference met at North Searsport, Thursday, Aug. 18th, at five o'clock P. M. Prayer and social meeting. Friday, at nine o'clock P. M., prayer and conference meeting. At ten, preaching by Bro. C. H. Leverton. Text, Hab. 3: 2. At two, preaching by Bro. A. Baker. Text, Rev. 21: 4. At seven, preaching by Bro. C. H. Leverton. Text, Jude 3. Saturday morning, at nine, meeting for business. Chose Bro. John Morrill chairman. After discussion, the following resolution was earnestly and unanimously adopted.

Resolved, That whereas the word of God and the signs of the timns indicate that we are living in perilous times, when evil influences abound, and strenuous effort on the part of the church for the salvation of our fellow men is necessary, Therefore the preachers and lay-members within the limits of this conference should make every effort to be present at each quarterly meeting.

At ten P. M., preaching by Bro. N. F. Nason. Text, Tim. 6: 3–6. At seven, preaching by Bro. C. H. Leverton. Text, Mal. 4: 1. Sunday, at nine P. M., social meeting, and at ten preaching by Bro. John Morrill. Text, John 3: 1. At two, sermon by Bro. C. H. Leverton. Text, Rev. 8: 20, after which a generous collection was taken up. Thence proceeded and partook of the Lord's Supper. Preaching at seven, by Bro. Thomas Smith.

The meetings of the conference were useful, by prompting to more individual effort. The social and prayer meetings increased in interest as the meeting progressed. Many of us returned home intent on visiting our closets constantly, believing it God's requirement, and without which we cannot expect his open reward.

THE RESURRECTION.

How cheering to the weary heart
Doth the resurrection sound,
When all those loved ones will come forth
Now slumb'ring in the ground.

Then we shall meet our friends so dear,
In that glorious Eden home,
Where all is joy, and peace, and love,
And partings will not come.

May God in heaven me prepare
To sit before his throne,
And share at last eternal life
With all that happy throng.

WICKED BOYS.

A wicked boy or girl cannot be wicked long without being known. "Be sure your sin will find you out." Guilt shows itself in every thought, word, and deed, and is sure to bring disgrace, shame, and misery.

Boys and girls are known by their looks and the company they keep. One bad boy makes another bad boy. One sickly sheep infects the whole flock. "One sinner destroyeth much good." Trust a bad boy? Who will trust a boy that plays truant, breaks the Sabbath, tells falsehoods, disobeys his parents, lounges about, smokes or chews the poisonous weed? Trust such a boy? What merchant, what printer, what mechanic, what cobbler? No wonder such chaps can find no one to employ them. No wonder they are ready to perish. The truth is, everybody is afraid to trust them.

Boys, do you want to be trusted, respected, and loved by all good people—to find a good place in some store, printing-office, or mechanic's shop? Wake up, stir about, keep good company, speak truth, attend the Sabbath-school and the Bible class, and the house of God. Obey your parents, keep away from the street school, grog-shops, lounger's corner, and more still, keep a clean mouth and a clean heart, and our word for it, you will find business enough, and good enough, more than you can do. "Take away the dross from the silver, and there shall come forth a vessel for the finer."

Young friends, do you know how soon you are rated by elder people? Every boy in the neighborhood is known—opinions are formed of him, and he has a character, favorable or unfavorable. A boy of whom the master can say, "I can trust him; he never failed me," will never want employment. The fidelity, promptness, and industry which he has shown at school and at home, are prized everywhere. He who is faithful in little will be faithful in much.

It is an evil and bitter thing to sin against God, to break any of his commandments, and especially to raise the puny arm of rebellion against a kind father or mother. "Honor thy father and thy mother, that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee." "He that smiteth his father or his mother, shall surely be put to death!"—Ex. 21: 12.

Deut. 21: 18—"If a man have a stubborn and rebellious son, which will not obey the voice of his father or mother, and that when they have chastened him, will not hearken unto them; all the men of the city shall stone him with stones, that he die, so shalt thou put evil away from among you."

"Have we not heard what dreadful plagues
Are threatened by the Lord,
To him who breaks his father's law,
Or mocks his mother's word?"

FRANK'S SHILLING.

"Why, my dear Frank, where have you been? Your face is as red, and your hands are quite black with coal dust. From your appearance I should think you had been shovelling coal!"

"Well, dear mother, I have," answered Frank, smiling; "Mrs Bliss was disappointed in getting her coal put in. The man did not come as he promised. She told Eddie Wells and me that she would give us each a shilling, if we would shovel it in. So we went to work, and, for the first time, dear mother, I earned some money."

"I dare say you think more of that shilling than of two or three that I might give you. What do you intend to do with it?"

At this question Frank blushed, and held down his head, and was silent. Frank had already disposed of his shilling. His mother looked surprised and troubled, as he did not answer, and said,

"My son, I hope you are not ashamed to tell me how you have disposed of your earnings. You of course were at liberty to lay them out as you pleased; but I trust you did nothing wrong."

The blushing boy jumped from his seat, and hiding his head on her shoulder, said in a low tone,

"I bought with the money eleven cents' worth of oranges, and gave them to poor old Mrs. Moore. You know," exclaimed he more eagerly, "she never gets any nice things; and I thought they would taste so good to her. And with the other penny I bought a corn-ball for myself."

Tears were in his mother's eyes, as she clasped her boy closely to her bosom, and she thought, surely, if my son thus early remembers the poor, God will remember him.

It is indeed a beautiful thing to witness this forgetting of self in a young child; and I trust there are many dear children who take pity on their needy neighbors.—Children's Magazine.

FRED'S CHOICE.

BY LOTTIE LINNWOOD.

It was a clear, cold morning; the sun shone very brightly, it is true, but the breezes which came rushing over the white-robed hills were very keen. Up the street, towards the village school-house, came a slender, blue-eyed child. Her faded hood was much too small, and her short, well-patched dress afforded poor protection to her cold and aching limbs.

"Hallo, Patchey!" cried a troop of boys, who were playing before the school-house. "Where're you bound?" called they, rushing to meet her.

"Came to America in the last steamer, didn't you?" cried Dick Clark, as she began to quicken her steps.

"Look out, lady! if you go too fast, your grandpa's shoes will pinch your toes, and down you'll go," chimed Charlie Fisher.

The child drew her thin cotton shawl closer around her shivering shoulders, and regardless of the good advice which the boys had thoughtlessly given her, began to run. Alas! her great clumsy shoes were very unmanageable, and she fell heavily upon the ice and snow.

Fred stooped to raise her; but her knit brow and flowing tears told him more plainly than words that she could not stand, if he did.

"Poor child!" he said; "I will run and get some of the boys to come, and then we will carry you home; but first you must tell me your name, and where you live."

"My name is Lucy Dean, and mother lives in the old hut by the brook."

Fred did not wait to hear any more, but ran back to the boys; and in a moment returned with two or three others, to assist him.

"Now, Lucy," said he, "if you will be very still, we boys will try to carry you without giving you much pain." So saying, they raised her, and started on their "charity journey," as Fred afterwards called it.

Fred and the others did all they could to assist the feeble mother and make Lucy comfortable; but they knew they should be late at school, if they tarried longer, so they hurried away, first offering to send a physician.

Mrs. Dean thought she would bind up the sprained ankle herself, and would not consent to Fred's offers of aid. After Fred was seated before his desk, and his books spread out before him, he tried to forget the dreary hut and poor little Lucy, but somehow he could not fix his mind upon his lesson; there would come a vision of the suffering child and her sick mother, while above and around this sad vision flitted a pair of bright new skates. Poor Fred! his lessons seemed hard and long, and he was heartily glad when noontime came.

"I'll just run over to Mrs. Dean's," thought he; "perhaps I shall feel better if I do."

And so he did, but when afternoon came, and with it its duties, his mind was far away; ever and anon going down to the brook where the hut stood.

"Father," said Fred, after tea that evening, "I have concluded to take the three dollars, and not have the skates you promised me for a New Year's present."

"Not have the new skates? Why, they are very fine, and cheap too, for the quality."

"Yes, father, I know they are beauties, and I should enjoy them very much, but I can get along tip-top without them. I would a great deal rather have the money to use as I please."

"Well, I don't care; only I can't afford to give you both;" and Mr. Rice handed Fred a bright new greenback.

Fred took it with a flushed face, and placed it in his pocket-book; then with a smile he added: "One thing more, father; I wish you would give me the job of carrying in your coal; I can do it as well as Tom."

Mr. Rice smiled. "I am willing, but who will split all the wood and pile it up nicely?"

"I can do it, only give me time," replied Fred quickly.

"Well, I'll agree to it, but I think it is a long, hard job for a boy like you." So saying, Mr. Rice left the room.

Fred carried the new "greenback" to little Lucy, and by it many comforts were added to their scanty store. For many weeks Lucy was confined to her low bed, but Fred found time to call every day. When she again visited the school-yard Fred held her hand; and as his eye rested upon her neat dress and hat, he felt repaid a dozen times for the many hours he had spent splitting and piling his father's wood.

There was still another place they used to visit; and there they loved dearly to be. Lucy learned the rule by which Fred was governed, and she also learned to love the Savior, while she strove most earnestly to do as he commands us.—Zion's Herald.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

ASPIRATIONS.

Father! a weary and a broken heart
Now comes to thee—
To thee for rest;
Oh! do thou comfort and sweet peace impart,
And bid me flee
To thy fond breast.

Why should I hover round the things of time,
That but deceive?
Oh! how the chain
Of earthly baubles doth my heart entwine!
I would believe
Thee mine again.

Yes, mine; to call thee Father—Savior—Friend—
Thy child to be
In hours of shine;
Or when the clouds of grief a storm portend,
To look to thee,
My will resign.

When wilt thou call me from this earth away,
To joys on high?
My weary feet
Shall mark few footsteps on the soften'd clay,
For I draw nigh
Thy judgment-seat.

Great God! a worm to stand before thee there!
Oh shelter me
Beneath thy wing!
When I shall in thy heavenly courts appear,
Sorrow shall be
An unknown thing.

WILL GOD RAISE THE WICKED DEAD TO LIFE?

As I formerly believed that the wicked would not be raised to life, the question is often asked, What are your reasons for changing your views?

To harmonize John 5: 28, 29, I admitted that all would come forth from their graves without life, and that was a resurrection; but that only the righteous would be made alive. After holding that belief for some time, an article from the pen of Bro. Wendell, in the Bible Examiner of May, 1863, convinced me that the act of bringing forth from the grave was not a resurrection. This article was a criticism on "Retribution." It is headed, "Do the dead come forth alive?" He says that "Lazarus came forth dead, and was raised from the dead. Afterward is rendered certain, as it seems to us by the record given by the evangelist in John 12: 17. The coming forth of Lazarus is presented as a distinct thing from his resurrection."

After examining a number of critics on the word resurrection, I became satisfied it meant re-standing. Bush, on the word "anastasis," says, "It is derived from the verb to rise, to rise again, to stand up, bring again, resurgence, resurrection, re-rising, or revivisence. This is the import of the word—a future existence in a physical sense. A future life, future living again after death." This interpretation agrees with all translators on this subject that I have examined.

God has said in John 5: 28, 29, "All that are in the grave shall hear his voice and shall come forth; they that have done good unto the resurrection of life, and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation." That God would do so simple a thing as to raise men and cause them to stand on their feet without giving them life, and leave them unconscious of the condemnation that awaited them, and cast them dead into gehenna, was more than I could believe. Yet I was unwilling to give up a doctrine so pleasing, as much so as the doctrine of "Universal salvation" is to those that believe all men will be saved. I for the first time began to try to harmonize those texts which seemed to me to teach that there is to be no future life in any sense for the unjust.

John 3: 36 was always the first text in order. "They shall not see life, but the wrath of God abideth on them." After examining other versions of this text, I was convinced that the true idea was given by Wicklif. He translates it, "He that believeth not the Son shall not not see eternal life, but the wrath of God awaiteth him." Other translators give the same idea, or nearly so. This is evidently the true sense of the word, as eternal life is the subject here spoken of.

There was no other text but was easily understood. Yet the question came, "How can the dead be raised unless they have the Spirit of Christ dwelling in them?" This question I soon settled by the words of Jesus in Luke 11: 30–32;—"The queen of the south shall rise up in the judgment with the men of this generation, and condemn them: for she came from the uttermost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon, and behold, a greater than Solomon is here," etc.; read the next verse. Here is a positive declaration that the men that said, "Away with him, away with him," will come up as surely as Christ was raised from the dead after three days.

I know that some claim this was a national affair, but Jesus makes it personal. Some try to make us believe that the Jews as a nation underwent this judgment at the time that Jerusalem was destroyed. They quote Luke 21: 22 as proof. "For these be the days of vengeance, that all things which are written may be fulfilled." I should like to know what kind of a resurrection or "rising up," the Jews had at that time? If I mistake not, it was their death as a nation instead of their resurrection; and if the queen of the south and the Ninevites had their "rising up" at that time, where are they? If God has said that they shall rise, it is our business to believe, and not to ask how he can raise them. At one time Jesus said that he could make stone into the seed of Abraham; surely they had not the Spirit of Christ in them.

The next question, "What does God want to raise the wicked for? It cannot benefit the saved, or those that are destroyed. It makes God a tyrant instead of a God of love." This kind of talk I know from experience has a tendency to work upon the feelings, and oftentimes gets the better of our reason. Suppose I ask this question—"Why do men in this state of things condemn men to death for committing murder?" It certainly cannot affect those that have been murdered, nor benefit those that are to suffer the penalty. Why not say of those that hang men for violating a law [sanctioned by God in the days of Noah], "they are worse than tyrants"? Do not those that talk this way misunderstand the object of the law of God and man? Is not the law intended to be a "terror to evil doers"?

Suppose that a man should enter his neighbor's house and wilfully beat and kill some of the family, and that he being arraigned before the Judge and proved guilty beyond a doubt, and the Judge refuse to carry out the sentence of the law; who would be the tyrant in that case? Would he not be called an unjust judge? And suppose all the judges in the country were of the same stamp; would not all men who valued their lives flee to a government where punishment would be meted out to the lawless?

So you see that the executing of the law is to deter those that are living from doing harm to their fellow creatures. Are not the powers which are ordained of God acting on the same principle that God acts? Is it not for the benefit of his creatures that he has threatened an horrible death to the wicked in a "judgment to come," and not for the purpose of tormenting them like a "tyrant"?

Has God no commands to be obeyed? Paul says God has "commanded all men to repent," because he hath "appointed a day in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained." A command without a penalty for its disobedience would not have any force. Although eternal life is a free gift, yet we are commanded to repent and obey. Paul says (2 Thess. 1: 6–8), "Seeing it is a righteous thing with God to recompense tribulation to them that trouble you; and to you who are troubled, rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ."

We see by this language that it was a "righteous" thing to punish them that troubled the church in Paul's day, and likewise those that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. Why make God unrighteous by saying that after they die the death common to all men, that is the end of them? That is not the doctrine Paul taught Felix. He "reasoned of righteousness, temperance, and a judgment to come." "Felix trembled"! If Paul had told Felix that all the judgment to come was that he should die, and that would be the end of him, would he have trembled? Would he not have said to Paul, That is "borrowed," for that was the belief of all intelligent Romans. (See Gibbon, fifteenth chapter, and Pliny, book 7, chap. 56.)

I understand that the Almighty would not have done justice to his creatures if he had not made it understood that "Vengeance is mine, and I will repay, saith the Lord"; so that wicked men who escape from justice in this life should understand that they cannot escape in the "judgment to come." "For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father, with his angels, and then he shall reward every man according to his works." If a wicked man is to know nothing after he dies the death common to all men, there is no propriety or common sense in saying he is rewarded when Christ comes in the glory of his Father.

Again. As a proof that men are not alive when they are cast into hell, some quote Luke 12: 5,—"But I will forewarn you whom ye shall fear; fear him which after he hath killed hath power to cast into hell." After who has killed? Jesus, or he that can kill the body and hath no more that he can do? The corresponding text in Matt. 10: 28 reads, "Fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul (or life); but rather fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell." According to Matthew, the body goes alive into gehenna, which proves a resurrection of the body; so that it can be made alive to receive its awful doom. The idea of casting a dead body into hell as a punishment is ridiculous in the extreme.

Again. It is said that the apostles nowhere say that God will raise the unjust. God did not tell Abraham that he would raise him from the dead, but he made certain promises to him which could not be fulfilled in this life, and through those promises he knew that God would raise him from the dead. The same when God appeared to Moses in the bush and told him that he was the "God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob." Moses knew that God was not the God of the dead, and that they must be raised from the dead, that the words of God might be true.

We see it is not necessary to say in so many words that God will raise the unjust to life. Paul did not tell Felix in so many words that God would raise him from the dead, but he told him of a "judgment to come," and that involved his resurrection, and he was agitated in consequence of it.

Again says Paul, Heb. 10: 28, "He that despised Moses' law died without mercy under two or three witnesses; of how much sorer punishment suppose ye shall he be thought worthy who has trodden under foot the Son of God, and has counted the blood of the covenant wherewith he was sanctified an unholy thing, and has done despite unto the Spirit of grace?" "For we know Him that hath said, Vengeance belongeth to me, I will recompense, saith the Lord." "It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God." Men were stoned to death under the law. Do you think it is a "sorer" punishment to die the death common to all men than to be stoned to death? If not, then there must be a sorer punishment in the future for that class surely. This text needs no comment. It cannot be figured away on the old Jews, who are made the pack-horse for all texts that stand in the way of certain ideas which we adopt, but like Balaam's dumb ass the Jew will speak. "Which they themselves allow, that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust."

Again, 2 Pet. 2: 9,—"The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation, and to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished." To get around, or flank this text, it is said that it refers to the Sodomites and Ninevites, which had their day of judgment some time ago; but the twelvth verse sets this all right. "But these as natural brute beasts, made to be taken and destroyed, speak evil of the things that they understand not, and shall utterly perish in their own corruption." This verse teaches that this judgment is still in the future, and their destruction likewise.

In a discussion at the Cooper Institute with Bro. Wendell and others, they were requested over and over again to give some opinion of these texts, but they have never done it. Bro. Wendell promised to do it the next week, and many went expecting to hear him, but he never touched one of them. There are many other texts of the like import.

The evidence I have set forth in these few lines I consider sufficient to show why I have changed my views on this important subject.

THE CHURCH AND THE WORLD; OR, CHRIST AND BELIAL.

"While men slept the enemy came and sowed tares among the wheat and went his way."—MATT. 13: 25.

TESTIMONIALS.

We select a few among many. We could fill volumes; "but in the mouth of two or three witnesses, every word shall be established."

TESTIMONIAL No. 1.—From a devoted Bro. in Christ, at Saratoga Springs, N. Y.

DEAR FRIEND:—Nearly all our churches this winter have been holding fairs, festivals, oyster suppers and the like, in their respective church edifices, for divers religious purposes, and I have been zealously laboring against this custom of desecrating the sanctuary. Knowing you to occupy about the same ground as myself on this question, I ask you, as a friend and brother in Christ, to assist me, if in your power at this time to do so. I hope you may find time soon to write a tract on the evils of this worldly conformity, quoting Scripture, meanwhile, to sustain your position. Should the Lord incline you to this work of love, do not forget to touch tea and strawberry parties, for now the winter campaign is nearly ended, and it will not be many months before the summer festivities will be called for by dressy and "fun loving" brethren and sisters.

I meet with considerable opposition among all orthodox church members, but I have not gone to the right or left of what I consider the path of duty.

Yours for purity and consistency.

TESTIMONIAL No. 2.—"The Golden Rule." The editor of the Golden Rule has raised his voice and cried aloud against the evil under consideration for more than thirty years. He objects to these festivals. 1. Because they are wrong in principle, unscriptural, contrary to gospel purity and sobriety; consequently detrimental to piety. "To the law and the testimony, if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." Isa. 8: 20. 2. On account of the foolish talking and jesting which more or less accompany these scenes of hilarity. Nothing is more contrary to the spirit of godliness than levity. This building up churches, Sabbath Schools and the like on wit and humor is not gospel. This method may succeed for a time, but rest assured by and by God will blow upon it.

"'Tis not for man to trifle. Life is brief,
And sin is here;
Our age is but the falling of a leaf—
A dropping tear.
We have no time to sport away the hours:
All must be earnest in a world like ours."

"For every idle word that men shall speak they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment." "For by thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned."—Matt. 12: 36, 37.

3. They are stumbling blocks to the world.—Sinners are eagle-eyed; they see and know these festivals are gotten up for selfish purposes; that their chief object is money making and not soul saving. Consequently they lose confidence in religious professors, and become more given up to the service of sin and Satan. When worldly men see, as they do see, and must see the crooked walk of very many professing christians, their pride, covetousness, oppression, their love of gain, pleasure and applause, more than their love of God and his cause, their conniving at sins heaven-daring,—why should they desire such a religion? Exhort sinners to faith, repentance and newness of life; they point us directly to these dark spots, beguiling unstable souls, sporting themselves with their own deceivings! They tell us they do not want this kind of religion that has no power in it, no lovely, joyful, transforming, purifying influences.

This is the apology of millions on millions for neglecting their soul's salvation, now on the road to ruin, to the pit of wo. This excuse for living in impenitence, in open rebellion against God, avails them not; they have light enough to convince them of the truth of God, though all men are liars; light enough to convince them of sin, of righteousness, and of a judgment to come, and yet multitudes are stumbling over these "whited sepulchres" into hell! Impenitent sinners, instead of looking to the Bible, to the Lord Jesus Christ for the truth, for the religion of purity and love, as they ought to, and as God commands them to do, they look upon ungodly church members, and judge of religion as they see it embodied in these dry bones, in those having a name to live and are dead, having a form of godliness, but, by wicked works, denying the power thereof! Thus the world is reeling on, like a drunken man, to dark damnation!

Objection 4th. He objects to them because they are stumbling blocks to young converts, the lambs of the flock; one special cause of their backsliding, losing their first love. How can it be otherwise? A fearful woe is pronounced against those who offend or cause God's "little ones" to stumble. (See Matt. 18: 6.)

Objection 5th. They wound the hearts of God's chosen people. The most consistent, consecrated, humble, devoted disciples of Jesus are always grieved at this method of raising money for religious objects. They see and know with sorrow the evil effects on the church and the world. Soul saving is out of the question, so long as these fairs or festivals are on the docket. And when these upheavings are over, the undue excitement for weeks in the preparation of luxuries, fancy articles of little or no value—the late hours, the gluttony, the surfeitings, the foolish talkings and jestings,—who is prepared for prayer, praise, or to labor in a revival, to urge sinners to repentance, temperance and holy living? Samson is shorn of his locks.

What says Paul? "If meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend." "Give none offence, neither to the Jews nor to the Gentiles, nor to the church of God." "Even as I please all men," says Paul, "in all things, not seeking mine own profit, but the profit of many, that they may be saved." "Whether, therefore, ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God."—1 Cor. 10: 31–33.

Objection 6th. The editor of the Golden Rule objects to them on account of their violation of civil law. A secular paper alluding to this religious gambling says: "We are glad to see it announced that the grand jury of Oswego, N. Y., have published a card, notifying managers of fairs and festivals, held by church societies, that the practice of disposing of their goods by lottery is contrary to the statute, and must not be persisted in." Good.

TESTIMONIAL No. 3.—The New York Recorder speaks thus: "Passing by the envies and evil speakings, the unkind recollections, the erroneous ideas of benevolence engendered; they place the church of Christ in a false position before the world. No pecuniary profit can compensate for the injury done by this false position."

TESTIMONIAL No. 4.—From the Earnest Christian:

"Pleasure rules the hour. It is fearful to witness the inroads which worldly pleasure is making upon Christianity. With the avowed design of keeping the young people under the influence of the church, the weekly sociable is instituted, and fun and frolic prevail. To pay the preacher, a donation party is held, and old and young, professor and worldling, devotes the evening to feasting and merriment. Festivals, picnics and excursions, oyster suppers and lotteries are resorted to, for the purpose of replenishing the funds, or reviving the flagging interest—not religious—in the prosperity of the church. We object to one and all of these various expedients to promote the cause of Christ.

1. They are directly contrary to all the examples given us by Christ and the Apostles.

2. They practically educate the people in impiety. Pure religion requires not merely right actions but right feelings. It would seem as if Satan has so contrived it, that the church is systematically trained to perform her most pious acts from selfish motives. The punctuality of the children in the Sabbath school is rewarded by a picnic or festival. The lessons are learned, not that the scholars may be made wise unto salvation, but that they may win a prize, and receive public commendation. Church pride, family pride and personal vanity are strongly appealed to, to swell the contributions for the missionary cause.

Revivals are sometimes sought to be promoted, that the pecuniary burdens of those who sustain the church may be lessened.

3. They seek to unite Christ and Belial. They would join together, in loving harmony, what God has put forever asunder. They obliterate the distinction between the church and the world. Their avowed object is to bring worldlings under the influence of christianity. To accomplish this end, christians spread a banquet, which the veriest libertine can enjoy, and sit down with him, with apparent gratification, to the sumptuous repast. To attempt to lead men, in this way, to "deny themselves, and take up their cross and follow Christ," is as would be the effort to reform a drunkard by giving him wine. Boys are not trained to habits of sobriety by feeding them sugar, saturated with brandy. The appetite thus created, or revived, will soon demand stimulants of a stronger character. As long as theatrical performances are countenanced in the Sabbath school, professing christians will quite likely attend the full grown theatre. If Christ has no concord with Belial, why then this persistent effort to keep up an unhallowed alliance between the children of God and the sons of Belial?

4. They grieve the Spirit of God. Where that dwells, there is solemnity. Many a conviction has been dissipated by the levity prevailing at the social gatherings of the church. Many a hopeful convert has taken the first step towards backsliding, in the donation which followed the revival in which he was converted. You cannot have the Spirit of God and feast and frolic with the world.

5. They practically deny Christ. Has he not said to his true disciples, Lo I am with you always even unto the end of the world? If Christ is with his church, will he not, if his followers are faithful, so assist them that they will not need to go to the world for help? Christ's church is dear to him. He bought it with his own blood. He cares for all its interests, and it grieves him that the church should throw off all dependence upon him, and "go down to Egypt for help." She is his bride; and what would a bridegroom think of his betrothed, if she should, when his aid was freely proffered, go to his enemies for assistance? Look at the spiritual death that prevails, and see how large a share the practices complained of, have had in producing it. See how many ministers—once mighty men of God—have been shorn of their locks, and have lost their power in the lap of this modern Delilah, and are now sightless giants, toiling upon the tread-mill of lifeless ceremonies! See how wide is the departure from apostolic usage; how the young and old are educated to be lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; how Christ is dishonored and denied, and the Holy Spirit grieved!

Never countenance them with your presence. Let not love for your pastor, nor desire for pleasing your brethren, nor dread of singularity induce you to assist in attempting to force Christ into an alliance with the world which he utterly abhors.

"We are living, we are dwelling,
In a grand and awful time.
In an age, on ages telling,
To be living, is sublime!"

(To be concluded.)

For the World's Crisis.

SANCTIFICATION.

The prayer which was offered by our Savior for his disciples that they might be sanctified, is answered, sooner or later, to every heir of salvation. There is no such being in existence as an unsanctified saint, though there are without doubt many professing to be such, who are unsanctified. The word saint signifies holy one, and to be holy is to be sanctified by the Holy Spirit.

Entire sanctification can only be obtained by a sincere humiliation, a renunciation of all pride and fleshly lusts, and continual watchfulness and fervent prayer.

The result of sanctification is the placing of the individual in a state of momentary readiness for the judgment. One in this state has the first fruits of the Spirit, love, joy, faith, etc. He is "filled with the Spirit," hence, as says the Word, he "thinketh no evil," he is "dead to sin," and he "CANNOT SIN." This may seem strange to the double-minded man, but as both the Bible and the experience of devout men in all ages testify, it is no more than is required by the God of all grace.

The position occupied by the saint may be compared to that of a certain traveller who stood on a peak of the Himalaya mountains during a thunder storm. The clouds were below him, the topmost of them only damping his feet, while he remained an undisturbed beholder of the tempest's fury. Clouds which obscure the horizon of the worldly-minded man, are fit opportunities for the saint to rejoice in the enlivening rays of the Sun of Righteousness. Thunder bolts which bring fear to the heart of the sinner, only serve to establish the hopes of the saint. Lightnings which are so many flaming cimeters to the sinner, threatening his destruction, do but strengthen the saint's confidence, and drive him nearer to his Refuge. Glory to God for this soul-exalting religion! Praise the Lord, O, my soul!

Sanctified! how can he be otherwise who duly realizes that in a few more years at the farthest, he must bid a last adieu to this world, and stand in the presence of an all-seeing, all-powerful and impartial Judge? "Holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection."

Christian warrior, beware how you fall asleep in the arms of that modern Delilah—formality. "Abstain from all appearance of evil. And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." A. L. FORRESTER.

For the World's Crisis.

GOD'S MERCY TO MAN.

Dear brethren and sisters of the Advent faith, I wrote a letter to you some time ago on the love of God to man; and now I would write a few lines on the subject of the great mercy of God to man. And I must say with the Psalmist, "Praise the Lord; for his mercy endureth forever."

But is God merciful at all times, and under all circumstances, to both saints and sinners? Yes. But, says one, how can that be? In the first place, we must all concede that in all the dealings of God with mankind, there are four great principles by which our Father in heaven is governed; they are justice, mercy, truth and love. With regard to the sinner, justice demands his eternal or second death; for the holy law of God, which is founded in truth, condemns the stubborn sinner to death. "For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."

But hold, says mercy, spare the poor sinner a little longer, and see if we cannot persuade him to take refuge in the great salvation which is provided for him. And now the sweet and plaintive voice of love cries out; What more could I have done than I have already done in my vineyard? I have provided a ransom for the sinner, and the dear son of God has died for his salvation, and the Holy Spirit has been sent to reprove the sinner, and to hold up to his view the [illegible] ties of a dear Savior.

Now, dear reader, what shall be done to the wilful sinner who turns a deaf ear to all the kind invitations of love and mercy? Shall he be kept alive in endless woe? This would not be an act of mercy, but of cruelty, and cannot be true in relation to the punishment of the sinner in a future state; for the real punishment for sin, after or at the day of judgment, is death; and that death cannot be the first or literal death, which is the same as the righteous pass through, but must be the second death, which is a positive cessation of life, and therefore cannot be a preservation of life in misery; for every place in the Bible that speaks of the punishment of the wicked in a future state, represents it to be death, second death, destruction, to be consumed, to be burned up root and branch; and to be burned up as tares, and as chaff, and to be as though they had not been.

Now when mercy is obliged to give the sinner up to the demands of justice, I think the very cry of mercy is, put the sinner out of his misery as soon as possible, and let him cease to exist, or be as though he had not been. What else could be done with the sinner? Certainly, mercy nor love could consent to have the wretched creature put into heaven, for he would still be miserable there among holy beings; and also, it would be destroying the attrbiute of justice, which now has full demand on the stubborn sinner; as mercy and love could not save him, God would be merciful in putting the sinner out of existence.

But in the act of putting the sinner out of existence, the attribute of justice must have its full demand on the sinner by punishing him in his final destruction, according to what he hath done here on earth; and hence is brought to view the real necessity of the resurrection of the sinner, as well as the saint. But the beautiful picture of love and mercy is brought to view, in the resurrection to life eternal of that great company who will hear the voice of the Son of God, and come forth, and be clothed with immortality, and enter the kingdom as triumphant conquerors through Christ over death, hell, and the grave; and cry, O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?

Dear brethren and sisters, pray for your unworthy brother, and may the good Lord prepare us for his soon coming and kingdom.

Brattleboro, Vt. B. PERHAM.

JEPHTHAH AND HIS DAUGHTER.

This most remarkable narrative in the sacred volume, has often been "a stone of stumbling and a rock of offence" to those who critically investigated the Scriptures, not with the earnest desire to know the truth, but with a stubborn determination to find out faults and discrepancies, which should serve as a pretence and a plausible reason for their unbelief. They say, "If this event is true, how could the great Creator accept of a human sacrifice, without rebuking him, at least, who committed so horrible a deed, and this, too, in his name, and in the belief of serving him? It is not true, therefore, that God has ever condescended to speak to, or through any mortal being." Another class of wicked men often draw inferences from this passage, which in many cases became fatal to poor, dispersed and trodden-down Israel. On occasions like that which not many years since occurred in Damascus, and more recently in a city on the shores of the Danube, and in Smyrna, when the unhappy Jews were accused of having murdered christian children, in order to use their blood at the feast of Passover, this passage was alluded to, in order to prove that human sacrifices are a Jewish institution, from times immemorial, though it was, with the exception of this one case, practised secretly.

We do not intend, in writing this article, to defend our brethren according to the flesh, against that horrible and entirely groundless accusation; for every honest Bible reader, though he understands that Jephthah indeed sacrificed his only child as a "whole offering" upon the altar of Jehovah, will rather conclude that this was the only case in the history of Israel, and that the foolish act of one who, from the lowest position of an outcast, rose to the chieftancy of a numerous people, proves not that this inhuman service was a national institution. Again, he—the honest Bible reader—will infer that, though God did not reproabh Jephthah for his folly, he did by no means approve of it; but, knowing that the intention of that chieftain was to honor him, he passed it in silence.

Our intention in writing this, is to inform our readers of the fact, that it was by no means a general belief among ancient or modern Hebrew commentators, that Jephthah really sacrificed his daughter as a burnt offering, nor even that he ever intended to do so, when he uttered this vow unto Jehovah. It is surprising that the Talmud, and some later commentators, were of the opinion that Jephthah slaughtered his daughter, and offered her upon the altar of Jehovah. But, if this had been the case, God would not have been silent at that horrible deed, as he had specified the animals which should be offered upon his altar. These men were misled by the letter vau, which in most cases is translated and. The English translators must have been of the same opinion, because they translated the vow of Jephthah as follows: "And Jephthah vowed a vow unto the Lord, and said, If thou shalt without fail deliver the children of Ammon into mine hands, then it shall be, that whatsoever cometh forth of the doors of my house to meet me, when I return in peace from the children of Ammon, shall surely be the Lord's, and I will offer it up for a burnt offering." The [illegible] passage, made the difficulty [illegible] because, according to this [illegible] vowed to sacrifice the first [illegible] should come forth from his house to [illegible] him, as a burnt offering. And, as [illegible] afterwards, in verse 39, that "he did to [illegible] according to his vow," consequently Jephthah's daughter must have died upon the altar. [illegible] escaped their attention, however, that [illegible] letter vau signifies often but, and in [illegible] cases, or; and the latter is the case in [illegible] passage under consideration.

The celebrated commentator, Rabbi D[illegible] Kimchi, and others of the Spanish Hebrews, as also Rabbi Moses Landau, of Prague, [illegible] of opinion that the virgin daughter of Jephthah was not offered upon the altar, as Jephthah's vow was not to that effect; but she [illegible] destined to remain a virgin, and to be secluded from all human association, thus devoting her life entirely to the Lord. In short, [illegible] was, perhaps, the first nun. The translation of the verse alluded to is, according to [illegible] learned Hebrews—and we fully endorse [illegible] translation and view of the subject—as follows: "Then it shall be, that whatsoever cometh forth of my house to meet me, when I return in peace from the children of Ammon, shall be the Lord's, or I will offer it up as a burnt offering." The meaning of [illegible] whole verse is this: should the object which comes out of his house to meet him, be [illegible] such a nature that it is not fit for a sacrifice, it shall be the Lord's, devoted in some way to his service, or, if it is of those kinds of animals that are appointed for the altar, [illegible] will bring it up as a burnt offering.

The sequel of the history perfectly harmonizes with the latter view. When Jephthah saw his only child coming first to meet him, he felt grieved that he was thus cut off from ever seeing children from his beloved daughter; but she, in perfect resignation, said that she was willing to devote her life to God, according to her father's vow. She requested, however, that before she should be entirely secluded from intercourse with the human race, she should be allowed to live two months in the solitude of the mountains with some of her friends, in order to accustom herself to a solitary life. It was granted to her; and, when she returned, it was done unto her according to her father's vow; [illegible] was entirely separated from the rest of the human family. She then became a memorial in Israel—not as the common version translates it: "and it was a custom in Israel," because the Hebrew word does not admit [illegible] translation and it was, but, and she became. The record concludes with the fact, that four days every year the daughters of Israel went to the daughter of Jephthah, to bewail her solitary life; and, we suppose, at the same time, to console and encourage her. Our readers will perceive that the English translators, in order to give sense to their translation of the preceding verse: "and it became a custom in Israel," were obliged to interpolate in the following verse the word "that," which is not in the original, and which is not necessary according to the correct view of the whole.—Israelite Indeed.

PRAY FOR YOUR PREACHERS.

"The preacher that we had last Sunday did not preach very well."

Why? did not he use good language? did not he tell the truth?

"O! yes, what he said was good enough, but it did not come with any force and power. I really do not know what was the matter with him. I have heard him at other times, and in other places, and he did first rate."

"Did you pray for him before you went to meeting? and at meeting did you lift your heart in prayer to God for his aid at the time?"

"No, I do not know that I did especially. I was watching him to see what he was going to say."

That is the trouble. When a preacher stands up before a congregation, he can and will feel the influence there is in the meeting. If his hearers (a portion of them at least) hearts are lifted up in prayer to Almighty God, he will feel that he is carried up in their arms of faith, and it will be easy work for him to speak, and easy for you to hear, and he is enabled to bring from the storehouse treasures new and old; and you will be fed, and go away and say, "What a good meeting we have had; how well he did talk!" Now you see that the fault was not so much in the preacher as it was in his hearers.

Brethren and sisters, when a preacher comes among you, pray for him; and if he is tinctured with error, or has a hobby to ride, you can keep him right if you pray. Pray often for yourselves, and others around you, and do not forget to pray for the preachers.

THE END.

The world is coming to an end in 186[illegible] Prof. Newmayer of Munich, says so. He adds that a comet will run against the earth and absorb it, as one drop of mercury absorbs another. So much for man's calculation; [illegible] may nevertheless prove true. No doubt there is something in reserve for this earth, which will result in its destruction at no very distant period of time. God has his agencies, and will take his own time and way. There is a dreadful day coming, according to the apostle Peter,—when the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up.

ASPIRATIONS.

Father! a weary and a broken heart
Now comes to thee—
To thee for rest;
Oh! do thou comfort and sweet peace impart,
And bid me flee
To thy fond breast.

Why should I hover round the things of time,
That but deceive?
Oh! how the chain
Of earthly baubles doth my heart entwine!
I would believe
Thee mine again.

Yes, mine; to call thee Father—Savior—Friend—
Thy child to be
In hours of shine;
Or when the clouds of grief a storm portend,
To look to thee,
My will resign.

When wilt thou call me from this earth away,
To joys on high?
My weary feet
Shall mark few footsteps on the soften'd clay,
For I draw nigh
Thy judgment-seat.

Great God! a worm to stand before thee there!
Oh shelter me
Beneath thy wing!
When I shall in thy heavenly courts appear,
Sorrow shall be
An unknown thing.

WILL GOD RAISE THE WICKED DEAD TO LIFE?

As I formerly believed that the wicked would not be raised to life, the question is often asked, What are your reasons for changing your views?

To harmonize John 5: 28, 29, I admitted that all would come forth from their graves without life, and that was a resurrection; but that only the righteous would be made alive. After holding that belief for some time, an article from the pen of Bro. Wendell, in the Bible Examiner of May, 1863, convinced me that the act of bringing forth from the grave was not a resurrection. This article was a criticism on "Retribution." It is headed, "Do the dead come forth alive?" He says that "Lazarus came forth dead, and was raised from the dead. Afterward is rendered certain, as it seems to us by the record given by the evangelist in John 12: 17. The coming forth of Lazarus is presented as a distinct thing from his resurrection."

After examining a number of critics on the word resurrection, I became satisfied it meant re-standing. Bush, on the word "anastasis," says, "It is derived from the verb to rise, to rise again, to stand up, bring again, resurgence, resurrection, re-rising, or revivisence. This is the import of the word—a future existence in a physical sense. A future life, future living again after death." This interpretation agrees with all translators on this subject that I have examined.

God has said in John 5: 28, 29, "All that are in the grave shall hear his voice and shall come forth; they that have done good unto the resurrection of life, and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation." That God would do so simple a thing as to raise men and cause them to stand on their feet without giving them life, and leave them unconscious of the condemnation that awaited them, and cast them dead into gehenna, was more than I could believe. Yet I was unwilling to give up a doctrine so pleasing, as much so as the doctrine of "Universal salvation" is to those that believe all men will be saved. I for the first time began to try to harmonize those texts which seemed to me to teach that there is to be no future life in any sense for the unjust.

John 3: 36 was always the first text in order. "They shall not see life, but the wrath of God abideth on them." After examining other versions of this text, I was convinced that the true idea was given by Wicklif. He translates it, "He that believeth not the Son shall not see eternal life, but the wrath of God awaiteth him." Other translators give the same idea, or nearly so. This is evidently the true sense of the word, as eternal life is the subject here spoken of.

There was no other text but was easily understood. Yet the question came, "How can the dead be raised unless they have the Spirit of Christ dwelling in them?" This question I soon settled by the words of Jesus in Luke 11: 30–32,—"The queen of the south shall rise up in the judgment with the men of this generation, and condemn them: for she came from the uttermost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon, and behold, a greater than Solomon is here," etc.; read the next verse. Here is a positive declaration that the men that said, "Away with him, away with him," will come up as surely as Christ was raised from the dead after three days.

I know that some claim this was a national affair, but Jesus makes it personal. Some try to make us believe that the Jews as a nation underwent this judgment at the time that Jerusalem was destroyed. They quote Luke 21: 22 as proof. "For these be the days of vengeance, that all things which are written may be fulfilled." I should like to know what kind of a resurrection or "rising up" the Jews had at that time? If I mistake not, it was their death as a nation instead of their resurrection; and if the queen of the south and the Ninevites had their "rising up" at that time, where are they? If God has said that they shall rise, it is our business to believe, and not to ask how he can raise them. At one time Jesus said that he could make stone into the seed of Abraham; surely they had not the Spirit of Christ in them.

The next question, "What does God want to raise the wicked for? It cannot benefit the saved, or those that are destroyed. It makes God a tyrant instead of a God of love." This kind of talk I know from experience has a tendency to work upon the feelings, and oftentimes gets the better of our reason. Suppose I ask this question—"Why do men in this state of things condemn men to death for committing murder?" It certainly cannot affect those that have been murdered, nor benefit those that are to suffer the penalty. Why not say of those that hang men for violating a law [sanctioned by God in the days of Noah], "they are worse than tyrants"? Do not those that talk this way misunderstand the object of the law of God and man? Is not the law intended to be a "terror to evil doers"?

Suppose that a man should enter his neighbor's house and wilfully beat and kill some of the family, and that he being arraigned before the Judge and proved guilty beyond a doubt, and the Judge refuse to carry out the sentence of the law; who would be the tyrant in that case? Would he not be called an unjust judge? And suppose all the judges in the country were of the same stamp; would not all men who valued their lives flee to a government where punishment would be meted out to the lawless?

So you see that the executing of the law is to deter those that are living from doing harm to their fellow creatures. Are not the powers which are ordained of God acting on the same principle that God acts? Is it not for the benefit of his creatures that he has threatened an horrible death to the wicked in a "judgment to come," and not for the purpose of tormenting them like a "tyrant"?

Has God no commands to be obeyed? Paul says God has "commanded all men to repent," because he hath "appointed a day in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained." A command without a penalty for its disobedience would not have any force. Although eternal life is a free gift, yet we are commanded to repent and obey. Paul says (2 Thess. 1: 6–8), "Seeing it is a righteous thing with God to recompense tribulation to them that trouble you; and to you who are troubled, rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ."

We see by this language that it was a "righteous" thing to punish them that troubled the church in Paul's day, and likewise those that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. Why make God unrighteous by saying that after they die the death common to all men, that is the end of them? That is not the doctrine Paul taught Felix. He "reasoned of righteousness, temperance, and a judgment to come." "Felix trembled"! If Paul had told Felix that all the judgment to come was that he should die, and that would be the end of him, would he have trembled? Would he not have said to Paul, That is "borrowed," for that was the belief of all intelligent Romans. (See Gibbon, fifteenth chapter, and Pliny, book 7, chap. 56.)

I understand that the Almighty would not have done justice to his creatures if he had not made it understood that "Vengeance is mine, and I will repay, saith the Lord"; so that wicked men who escape from justice in this life should understand that they cannot escape in the "judgment to come." "For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father, with his angels, and then he shall reward every man according to his works." If a wicked man is to know nothing after he dies the death common to all men, there is no propriety or common sense in saying he is rewarded when Christ comes in the glory of his Father.

Again. As a proof that men are not alive when they are cast into hell, some quote Luke 12: 5,—"But I will forewarn you whom ye shall fear; fear him which after he hath killed hath power to cast into hell." After who has killed? Jesus, or he that can kill the body and hath no more that he can do? The corresponding text in Matt. 10: 28 reads, "Fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul (or life); but rather fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell." According to Matthew, the body goes alive into gehenna, which proves a resurrection of the body; so that it can be made alive to receive its awful doom. The idea of casting a dead body into hell as a punishment is ridiculous in the extreme.

Again. It is said that the apostles nowhere say that God will raise the unjust. God did not tell Abraham that he would raise him from the dead, but he made certain promises to him which could not be fulfilled in this life, and through those promises he knew that God would raise him from the dead. The same when God appeared to Moses in the bush and told him that he was the "God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob." Moses knew that God was not the God of the dead, and that they must be raised from the dead, that the words of God might be true.

We see it is not necessary to say in so many words that God will raise the unjust to life. Paul did not tell Felix in so many words that God would raise him from the dead, but he told him of a "judgment to come," and that involved his resurrection, and he was agitated in consequence of it.

Again says Paul, Heb. 10: 28, "He that despised Moses' law died without mercy under two or three witnesses; of how much sorer punishment suppose ye shall he be thought worthy who has trodden under foot the Son of God, and has counted the blood of the covenant wherewith he was sanctified an unholy thing, and has done despite unto the Spirit of grace?" "For we know Him that hath said, Vengeance belongeth to me, I will recompense, saith the Lord." "It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God." Men were stoned to death under the law. Do you think it is a "sorer" punishment to die the death common to all men than to be stoned to death? If not, then there must be a sorer punishment in the future for that class surely. This text needs no comment. It cannot be figured away on the old Jews, who are made the pack-horse for all texts that stand in the way of certain ideas which we adopt, but like Balaam's dumb ass the Jew will speak. "Which they themselves allow, that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust."

Again, 2 Pet. 2: 9,—"The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation, and to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished." To get around, or flank this text, it is said that it refers to the Sodomites and Ninevites, which had their day of judgment some time ago; but the twelvth verse sets this all right. "But these as natural brute beasts, made to be taken and destroyed, speak evil of the things that they understand not, and shall utterly perish in their own corruption." This verse teaches that this judgment is still in the future, and their destruction likewise.

In a discussion at the Cooper Institute with Bro. Wendell and others, they were requested over and over again to give some opinion of these texts, but they have never done it. Bro. Wendell promised to do it the next week, and many went expecting to hear him, but he never touched one of them. There are many other texts of the like import.

The evidence I have set forth in these few lines I consider sufficient to show why I have changed my views on this important subject.

THE CHURCH AND THE WORLD; OR, CHRIST AND BELIAL.

"While men slept the enemy came and sowed tares among the wheat and went his way."—MATT. 13: 25.

TESTIMONIALS.

We select a few among many. We could fill volumes; "but in the mouth of two or three witnesses, every word shall be established."

TESTIMONIAL No. 1.—From a devoted Bro. in Christ, at Saratoga Springs, N. Y.

DEAR FRIEND:—Nearly all our churches this winter have been holding fairs, festivals, oyster suppers and the like, in their respective church edifices, for divers religious purposes, and I have been zealously laboring against this custom of desecrating the sanctuary. Knowing you to occupy about the same ground as myself on this question, I ask you, as a friend and brother in Christ, to assist me, if in your power at this time to do so. I hope you may find time soon to write a tract on the evils of this worldly conformity, quoting Scripture, meanwhile, to sustain your position. Should the Lord incline you to this work of love, do not forget to touch tea and strawberry parties, for now the winter campaign is nearly ended, and it will not be many months before the summer festivities will be called for by dressy and "fun loving" brethren and sisters.

I meet with considerable opposition among all orthodox church members, but I have not gone to the right or left of what I consider the path of duty.

Yours for purity and consistency.

TESTIMONIAL No. 2.—"The Golden Rule." The editor of the Golden Rule has raised his voice and cried aloud against the evil under consideration for more than thirty years. He objects to these festivals. 1. Because they are wrong in principle, unscriptural, contrary to gospel purity and sobriety; consequently detrimental to piety. "To the law and the testimony, if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." Isa. 8: 20. 2. On account of the foolish talking and jesting which more or less accompany these scenes of hilarity. Nothing is more contrary to the spirit of godliness than levity. This building up churches, Sabbath Schools and the like on wit and humor is not gospel. This method may succeed for a time, but rest assured by and by God will blow upon it.

"'Tis not for man to trifle. Life is brief,
And sin is here;
Our age is but the falling of a leaf—
A dropping tear.
We have no time to sport away the hours:
All must be earnest in a world like ours."

"For every idle word that men shall speak they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment." "For by thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned."—Matt. 12: 36, 37.

3. They are stumbling blocks to the world.—Sinners are eagle-eyed; they see and know these festivals are gotten up for selfish purposes; that their chief object is money making and not soul saving. Consequently they lose confidence in religious professors, and become more given up to the service of sin and Satan. When worldly men see, as they do see, and must see the crooked walk of very many professing christians, their pride, covetousness, oppression, their love of gain, pleasure and applause, more than their love of God and his cause, their conniving at sins heaven-daring,—why should they desire such a religion? Exhort sinners to faith, repentance and newness of life; they point us directly to these dark spots, beguiling unstable souls, sporting themselves with their own deceivings! They tell us they do not want this kind of religion that has no power in it, no lovely, joyful, transforming, purifying influences.

This is the apology of millions on millions for neglecting their soul's salvation, now on the road to ruin, to the pit of wo. This excuse for living in impenitence, in open rebellion against God, avails them not; they have light enough to convince them of the truth of God, though all men are liars; light enough to convince them of sin, of righteousness, and of a judgment to come, and yet multitudes are stumbling over these "whited sepulchres" into hell! Impenitent sinners, instead of looking to the Bible, to the Lord Jesus Christ for the truth, for the religion of purity and love, as they ought to, and as God commands them to do, they look upon ungodly church members, and judge of religion as they see it embodied in these dry bones, in those having a name to live and are dead, having a form of godliness, but, by wicked works, denying the power thereof! Thus the world is reeling on, like a drunken man, to dark damnation!

Objection 4th. He objects to them because they are stumbling blocks to young converts, the lambs of the flock; one special cause of their backsliding, losing their first love. How can it be otherwise? A fearful woe is pronounced against those who offend or cause God's "little ones" to stumble. (See Matt. 18: 6.)

Objection 5th. They wound the hearts of God's chosen people. The most consistent, consecrated, humble, devoted disciples of Jesus are always grieved at this method of raising money for religious objects. They see and know with sorrow the evil effects on the church and the world. Soul saving is out of the question, so long as these fairs or festivals are on the docket. And when these upheavings are over, the undue excitement for weeks in the preparation of luxuries, fancy articles of little or no value—the late hours, the gluttony, the surfeitings, the foolish talkings and jestings,—who is prepared for prayer, praise, or to labor in a revival, to urge sinners to repentance, temperance and holy living? Samson is shorn of his locks.

What says Paul? "If meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend." "Give none offence, neither to the Jews nor to the Gentiles, nor to the church of God." "Even as I please all men," says Paul, "in all things, not seeking mine own profit, but the profit of many, that they may be saved." "Whether, therefore, ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God."—1 Cor. 10: 31–33.

Objection 6th. The editor of the Golden Rule objects to them on account of their violation of civil law. A secular paper alluding to this religious gambling says: "We are glad to see it announced that the grand jury of Oswego, N. Y., have published a card, notifying managers of fairs and festivals, held by church societies, that the practice of disposing of their goods by lottery is contrary to the statute, and must not be persisted in." Good.

TESTIMONIAL No. 3.—The New York Recorder speaks thus: "Passing by the envies and evil speakings, the unkind recollections, the erroneous ideas of benevolence engendered; they place the church of Christ in a false position before the world. No pecuniary profit can compensate for the injury done by this false position."

TESTIMONIAL No. 4.—From the Earnest Christian:

"Pleasure rules the hour. It is fearful to witness the inroads which worldly pleasure is making upon Christianity. With the avowed design of keeping the young people under the influence of the church, the weekly sociable is instituted, and fun and frolic prevail. To pay the preacher, a donation party is held, and old and young, professor and worldling, devotes the evening to feasting and merriment. Festivals, picnics and excursions, oyster suppers and lotteries are resorted to, for the purpose of replenishing the funds, or reviving the flagging interest—not religious—in the prosperity of the church. We object to one and all of these various expedients to promote the cause of Christ.

1. They are directly contrary to all the examples given us by Christ and the Apostles.

2. They practically educate the people in impiety. Pure religion requires not merely right actions but right feelings. It would seem as if Satan has so contrived it, that the church is systematically trained to perform her most pious acts from selfish motives. The punctuality of the children in the Sabbath school is rewarded by a picnic or festival. The lessons are learned, not that the scholars may be made wise unto salvation, but that they may win a prize, and receive public commendation. Church pride, family pride and personal vanity are strongly appealed to, to swell the contributions for the missionary cause.

Revivals are sometimes sought to be promoted, that the pecuniary burdens of those who sustain the church may be lessened.

3. They seek to unite Christ and Belial. They would join together, in loving harmony, what God has put forever asunder. They obliterate the distinction between the church and the world. Their avowed object is to bring worldlings under the influence of christianity. To accomplish this end, christians spread a banquet, which the veriest libertine can enjoy, and sit down with him, with apparent gratification, to the sumptuous repast. To attempt to lead men, in this way, to "deny themselves, and take up their cross and follow Christ," is as would be the effort to reform a drunkard by giving him wine. Boys are not trained to habits of sobriety by feeding them sugar, saturated with brandy. The appetite thus created, or revived, will soon demand stimulants of a stronger character. As long as theatrical performances are countenanced in the Sabbath school, professing christians will quite likely attend the full grown theatre. If Christ has no concord with Belial, why then this persistent effort to keep up an unhallowed alliance between the children of God and the sons of Belial?

4. They grieve the Spirit of God. Where that dwells, there is solemnity. Many a conviction has been dissipated by the levity prevailing at the social gatherings of the church. Many a hopeful convert has taken the first step towards backsliding, in the donation which followed the revival in which he was converted. You cannot have the Spirit of God and feast and frolic with the world.

5. They practically deny Christ. Has he not said to his true disciples, Lo I am with you always even unto the end of the world? If Christ is with his church, will he not, if his followers are faithful, so assist them that they will not need to go to the world for help? Christ's church is dear to him. He bought it with his own blood. He cares for all its interests, and it grieves him that the church should throw off all dependence upon him, and "go down to Egypt for help." She is his bride; and what would a bridegroom think of his betrothed, if she should, when his aid was freely proffered, go to his enemies for assistance? Look at the spiritual death that prevails, and see how large a share the practices complained of, have had in producing it. See how many ministers—once mighty men of God—have been shorn of their locks, and have lost their power in the lap of this modern Delilah, and are now sightless giants, toiling upon the tread-mill of lifeless ceremonies! See how wide is the departure from apostolic usage; how the young and old are educated to be lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; how Christ is dishonored and denied, and the Holy Spirit grieved!

Never countenance them with your presence. Let not love for your pastor, nor desire for pleasing your brethren, nor dread of singularity induce you to assist in attempting to force Christ into an alliance with the world which he utterly abhors.

"We are living, we are dwelling,
In a grand and awful time.
In an age, on ages telling,
To be living, is sublime!"

(To be concluded.)

For the World's Crisis.

SANCTIFICATION.

The prayer which was offered by our Savior for his disciples that they might be sanctified, is answered, sooner or later, to every heir of salvation. There is no such being in existence as an unsanctified saint, though there are without doubt many professing to be such, who are unsanctified. The word saint signifies holy one, and to be holy is to be sanctified by the Holy Spirit.

Entire sanctification can only be obtained by a sincere humiliation, a renunciation of all pride and fleshly lusts, and continual watchfulness and fervent prayer.

The result of sanctification is the placing of the individual in a state of momentary readiness for the judgment. One in this state has the first fruits of the Spirit, love, joy, faith, etc. He is "filled with the Spirit," hence, as says the Word, he "thinketh no evil," he is "dead to sin," and he "CANNOT SIN." This may seem strange to the double-minded man, but as both the Bible and the experience of devout men in all ages testify, it is no more than is required by the God of all grace.

The position occupied by the saint may be compared to that of a certain traveller who stood on a peak of the Himalaya mountains during a thunder storm. The clouds were below him, the topmost of them only damping his feet, while he remained an undisturbed beholder of the tempest's fury. Clouds which obscure the horizon of the worldly-minded man, are fit opportunities for the saint to rejoice in the enlivening rays of the Sun of Righteousness. Thunder bolts which bring fear to the heart of the sinner, only serve to establish the hopes of the saint. Lightnings which are so many flaming cimeters to the sinner, threatening his destruction, do but strengthen the saint's confidence, and drive him nearer to his Refuge. Glory to God for this soul-exalting religion! Praise the Lord, O, my soul!

Sanctified! how can he be otherwise who duly realizes that in a few more years at the farthest, he must bid a last adieu to this world, and stand in the presence of an all-seeing, all-powerful and impartial Judge? "Holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection."

Christian warrior, beware how you fall asleep in the arms of that modern Delilah—formality. "Abstain from all appearance of evil. And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." A. L. FORRESTER.

GOD'S MERCY TO MAN.

Dear brethren and sisters of the Advent faith, I wrote a letter to you some time ago on the love of God to man; and now I would write a few lines on the subject of the great mercy of God to man. And I must say with the Psalmist, "Praise the Lord; for his mercy endureth forever."

But is God merciful at all times, and under all circumstances, to both saints and sinners? Yes. But, says one, how can that be? In the first place, we must all concede that in all the dealings of God with mankind, there are four great principles by which our Father in heaven is governed; they are justice, mercy, truth and love. With regard to the sinner, justice demands his eternal or second death; for the holy law of God, which is founded in truth, condemns the stubborn sinner to death. "For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."

But hold, says mercy, spare the poor sinner a little longer, and see if we cannot persuade him to take refuge in the great salvation which is provided for him. And now the sweet and plaintive voice of love cries out; What more could I have done than I have already done in my vineyard? I have provided a ransom for the sinner, and the dear son of God has died for his salvation, and the Holy Spirit has been sent to reprove the sinner, and to hold up to his view the [illegible]ges of a dear Savior.

Now, dear reader, what shall be done to the wilful sinner who turns a deaf ear to all the kind invitations of love and mercy? Shall he be kept alive in endless woe? This would not be an act of mercy, but of cruelty, and cannot be true in relation to the punishment of this sinner in a future state; for the real punishment for sin, after or at the day of judgment, is death; and that death cannot be the first or literal death, which is the same as the righteous pass through, but must be the second death, which is a positive cessation of life, and therefore cannot be a preservation of life in misery; for every place in the Bible that speaks of the punishment of the wicked in a future state, represents it to be death, second death, destruction, to be consumed, to be burned up root and branch; and to be burned up as tares, and as chaff, and to be as though they had not been.

Now when mercy is obliged to give the sinner up to the demands of justice, I think the very cry of mercy is, put the sinner out of his misery as soon as possible, and let him cease to exist, or be as though he had not been. What else could be done with the sinner? Certainly, mercy nor love could consent to have the wretched creature put into heaven, for he would still be miserable there among holy beings; and also, it would be destroying the attrbiute of justice, which now has full demand on the stubborn sinner; as mercy and love could not save him, God would be merciful in putting the sinner out of existence.

But in the act of putting the sinner out of existence, the attribute of justice must have its full demand on the sinner by punishing him in his final destruction, according to what he hath done here on earth; and hence is brought to view the real necessity of the resurrection of the sinner, as well as the saint. But the beautiful picture of love and mercy is brought to view, in the resurrection to life eternal of that great company who will hear the voice of the Son of God, and come forth, and be clothed with immortality, and enter the kingdom as triumphant conquerors through Christ over death, hell, and the grave; and cry, O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?

Dear brethren and sisters, pray for your unworthy brother, and may the good Lord prepare us for his soon coming and kingdom.

JEPHTHAH AND HIS DAUGHTER.

This most remarkable narrative in the sacred volume, has often been "a stone of stumbling and a rock of offence" to those who critically investigated the Scriptures, not with the earnest desire to know the truth, but with a stubborn determination to find out faults and discrepancies, which should serve as a pretence and a plausible reason for their unbelief. They say, "If this event is true, how could the great Creator accept of a human sacrifice, without rebuking him, at least, who committed so horrible a deed, and this, too, in his name, and in the belief of serving him? It is not true, therefore, that God has ever condescended to speak to, or through any mortal being." Another class of wicked men often draw inferences from this passage, which in many cases became fatal to poor, dispersed and trodden-down Israel. On occasions like that which not many years since occurred in Damascus, and more recently in a city on the shores of the Danube, and in Smyrna, when the unhappy Jews were accused of having murdered christian children, in order to use their blood at the feast of Passover, this passage was alluded to, in order to prove that human sacrifices are a Jewish institution, from times immemorial, though it was, with the exception of this one case, practised secretly.

We do not intend, in writing this article, to defend our brethren according to the flesh, against that horrible and entirely groundless accusation; for every honest Bible reader, though he understands that Jephthah indeed sacrificed his only child as a "whole offering" upon the altar of Jehovah, will rather conclude that this was the only case in the history of Israel, and that the foolish act of one who, from the lowest position of an outcast, rose to the chieftancy of a numerous people, proves not that this inhuman service was a national institution. Again, he—the honest Bible reader—will infer that, though God did not reproabh Jephthah for his folly, he did by no means approve of it; but, knowing that the intention of that chieftain was to honor him, he passed it in silence.

Our intention in writing this, is to inform our readers of the fact, that it was by no means a general belief among ancient or modern Hebrew commentators, that Jephthah really sacrificed his daughter as a burnt offering, nor even that he ever intended to do so, when he uttered this vow unto Jehovah. It is surprising that the Talmud, and some later commentators, were of the opinion that Jephthah slaughtered his daughter, and offered her upon the altar of Jehovah. But, if this had been the case, God would not have been silent at that horrible deed, as he had specified the animals which should be offered upon his altar. These men were misled by the letter vau, which in most cases is translated and. The English translators must have been of the same opinion, because they translated the vow of Jephthah as follows; "And Jephthah vowed a vow unto the Lord, and said, If thou shalt without fail deliver the children of Ammon into mine hands, then it shall be, that whatsoever cometh forth of the doors of my house to meet me, when I return in peace from the children of Ammon, shall surely be the Lord's, and I will offer it up for a burnt offering." The italicized word and in this passage, made the difficulty with these men; because, according to this language, Jephthah vowed to sacrifice the first object which should come forth from his house to meet him, as a burnt offering. And, as it said afterwards, in verse 39, that "he did to her according to his vow," consequently Jephthah's daughter must have died upon the altar. It escaped their attention, however, that the letter vau signifies often but, and in many cases, or; and the latter is the case in the passage under consideration.

The celebrated commentator, Rabbi David Kimchi, and others of the Spanish Hebrews, as also Rabbi Moses Landau, of Prague, are of opinion that the virgin daughter of Jephtha was not offered upon the altar, as Jephtha's vow was not to that effect; but she was destined to remain a virgin, and to be secluded from all human association, thus devoting her life entirely to the Lord. In short, she was, perhaps, the first nun. The translation of the verse alluded to is, according to these learned Hebrews—and we fully endorse their translation and view of the subject—as follows: "Then it shall be, that whatsoever cometh forth of my house to meet me, when I return in peace from the children of Ammon, shall be the Lord's, or I will offer it up as a burnt offering." The meaning of the whole verse is this: should the object which comes out of his house to meet him, be of such a nature that it is not fit for a sacrifice, it shall be the Lord's, devoted in some way to his service, or, if it is of those kind of animals that are appointed for the altar, he will bring it up as a burnt offering.

The sequel of the history perfectly harmonizes with the latter view. When Jephthah saw his only child coming first to meet him, he felt grieved that he was thus cut off from ever seeing children from his beloved daughter; but she, in perfect resignation, said that she was willing to devote her life to God, according to her father's vow. She requested, however, that before she should be entirely secluded from intercourse with the human race, she should be allowed to live for two months in the solitude of the mountains, with some of her friends, in order to accustom herself to a solitary life. It was granted to her; and, when she returned, it was done unto her according to her father's vow; she was entirely separated from the rest of the human family. She then became a memorial in Israel—not as the common version translates it: "and it was a custom in Israel," because the Hebrew word does not admit the translation and it was, but, and she became. The record concludes with the fact, that four days every year the daughters of Israel went to the daughter of Jephthah, to bewail her solitary life; and, we suppose, at the same time, to console and encourage her. Our readers will perceive that the English translators, in order to give sense to their translation of the preceding verse: "and it became a custom in Israel," were obliged to interpolate in the following verse the word "that," which is not in the original, and which is not necessary according to the correct view of the whole.—Israelite Indeed.

PRAY FOR YOUR PREACHERS.

"The preacher that we had last Sunday did not preach very well."

Why? did not he use good language? did not he tell the truth?

"O! yes, what he said was good enough, but it did not come with any force and power. I really do not know what was the matter with him. I have heard him at other times, and in other places, and he did first rate."

"Did you pray for him before you went to meeting? and at meeting did you lift your heart in prayer to God for his aid at that time?"

"No, I do not know that I did especially; I was watching him to see what he was going to say."

That is the trouble. When a preacher stands up before a congregation, he can and will feel the influence there is in the meeting. If his hearers (a portion of them at least) hearts are lifted up in prayer to Almighty God, he will feel that he is carried up on their arms of faith, and it will be easy work for him to speak, and easy for you to hear; and he is enabled to bring from the storehouse treasures new and old; and you will be fed, and go away and say, "What a good meeting we have had; how well he did talk." Now you see that the fault was not so much in the preacher as it was in his hearers.

Brethren and sisters, when a preacher comes among you, pray for him; and if he is tinctured with error, or has a hobby to ride, you can keep him right if you pray. Pray often for yourselves, and others around you, and do not forget to pray for the preachers.

THE END.

The world is coming to an end in 1865. Prof. Newmayer of Munich says so. He adds that a comet will run against the earth and absorb it, as one drop of mercury absorbs another. So much for man's calculation; it may nevertheless prove true. No doubt there is something in reserve for this earth, which will result in its destruction at no very distant period of time. God has his agencies, and will take his own time and way. There is a dreadful day coming, according to the apostle Peter,—when the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up.

ASPIRATIONS.

Father! a weary and a broken heart
Now comes to thee—
To thee for rest;
Oh! do thou comfort and sweet peace impart,
And bid me flee
To thy fond breast.

Why should I hover round the things of time,
That but deceive?
Oh! how the chain
Of earthly baubles doth my heart entwine!
I would believe
Thee mine again.

Yes, mine; to call thee Father—Savior—Friend—
Thy child to be
In hours of shine;
Or when the clouds of grief a storm portend,
To look to thee,
My will resign.

When wilt thou call me from this earth away,
To joys on high?
My weary feet
Shall mark few footsteps on the soften'd clay,
For I draw nigh
Thy judgment-seat.

Great God! a worm to stand before thee there!
Oh shelter me
Beneath thy wing!
When I shall in thy heavenly courts appear,
Sorrow shall be
An unknown thing.

WILL GOD RAISE THE WICKED DEAD TO LIFE?

As I formerly believed that the wicked would not be raised to life, the question is often asked, What are your reasons for changing your views?

To harmonize John 5: 28, 29, I admitted that all would come forth from their graves without life, and that was a resurrection; but that only the righteous would be made alive. After holding that belief for some time, an article from the pen of Bro. Wendell, in the Bible Examiner of May, 1863, convinced me that the act of bringing forth from the grave was not a resurrection. This article was a criticism on "Retribution." It is headed, "Do the dead come forth alive?" He says that "Lazarus came forth dead, and was raised from the dead. Afterward is rendered certain, as it seems to us by the record given by the evangelist in John 12: 17. The coming forth of Lazarus is presented as a distinct thing from his resurrection."

After examining a number of critics on the word resurrection, I became satisfied it meant re-standing. Bush, on the word "anastasis," says, "It is derived from the verb to rise, to rise again, to stand up, bring again, resurgence, resurrection, re-rising, or reviviscence. This is the import of the word—a future existence in a physical sense. A future life, future living again after death." This interpretation agrees with all translators on this subject that I have examined.

God has said in John 5: 28, 29, "All that are in the grave shall hear his voice and shall come forth; they that have done good unto the resurrection of life, and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation." That God would do so simple a thing as to raise men and cause them to stand on their feet without giving them life, and leave them unconscious of the condemnation that awaited them, and cast them dead into gehenna, was more than I could believe. Yet I was unwilling to give up a doctrine so pleasing, as much so as the doctrine of "Universal salvation" is to those that believe all men will be saved. I for the first time began to try to harmonize those texts which seemed to me to teach that there is to be no future life in any sense for the unjust.

John 3: 36 was always the first text in order. "They shall not see life, but the wrath of God abideth on them." After examining other versions of this text, I was convinced that the true idea was given by Wicklif. He translates it, "He that believeth not the Son shall not not see eternal life, but the wrath of God awaiteth him." Other translators give the same idea, or nearly so. This is evidently the true sense of the word, as eternal life is the subject here spoken of.

There was no other text but was easily understood. Yet the question came, "How can the dead be raised unless they have the Spirit of Christ dwelling in them?" This question I soon settled by the words of Jesus in Luke 11: 30-32;—"The queen of the south shall rise up in the judgment with the men of this generation, and condemn them: for she came from the uttermost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon, and behold, a greater than Solomon is here," etc.; read the next verse. Here is a positive declaration that the men that said, "Away with him, away with him," will come up as surely as Christ was raised from the dead after three days.

I know that some claim this was a national affair, but Jesus makes it personal. Some try to make us believe that the Jews as a nation underwent this judgment at the time that Jerusalem was destroyed. They quote Luke 21: 22 as proof, "For these be the days of vengeance, that all things which are written may be fulfilled." I should like to know what kind of a resurrection or "rising up" the Jews had at that time? If I mistake not, it was their death as a nation instead of their resurrection; and if the queen of the south and the Ninevites had their "rising up" at that time, where are they? If God has said that they shall rise, it is our business to believe, and not to ask how he can raise them. At one time Jesus said that he could make stone into the seed of Abraham; surely they had not the Spirit of Christ in them.

The next question, "What does God want to raise the wicked for? It cannot benefit the saved, or those that are destroyed. It makes God a tyrant instead of a God of love." This kind of talk I know from experience has a tendency to work upon the feelings, and oftentimes gets the better of our reason. Suppose I ask this question—"Why do men in this state of things condemn men to death for committing murder?" It certainly cannot affect those that have been murdered, nor benefit those that are to suffer the penalty. Why not say of those that hang men for violating a law [sanctioned by God in the days of Noah], "they are worse than tyrants"? Do not those that talk this way misunderstand the object of the law of God and man? Is not the law intended to be a "terror to evil doers"?

Suppose that a man should enter his neighbor's house and wilfully beat and kill some of the family, and that he being arraigned before the Judge and proved guilty beyond a doubt, and the Judge refuse to carry out the sentence of the law; who would be the tyrant in that case? Would he not be called an unjust judge? And suppose all the judges in the country were of the same stamp; would not all men who valued their lives flee to a government where punishment would be meted out to the lawless?

So you see that the executing of the law is to deter those that are living from doing harm to their fellow creatures. Are not the powers which are ordained of God acting on the same principle that God acts? Is it not for the benefit of his creatures that he has threatened an horrible death to the wicked in a "judgment to come," and not for the purpose of tormenting them like a "tyrant"?

Has God no commands to be obeyed? Paul says God has "commanded all men to repent," because he hath "appointed a day in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained." A command without a penalty for its disobedience would not have any force. Although eternal life is a free gift, yet we are commanded to repent and obey. Paul says (2 Thess. 1: 6-8), "Seeing it is a righteous thing with God to recompense tribulation to them that trouble you; and to you who are troubled, rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ."

We see by this language that it was a "righteous" thing to punish them that troubled the church in Paul's day, and likewise those that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. Why make God unrighteous by saying that after they die the death common to all men, that is the end of them? That is not the doctrine Paul taught Felix. He "reasoned of righteousness, temperance, and a judgment to come." "Felix trembled"! If Paul had told Felix that all the judgment to come was that he should die, and that would be the end of him, would he have trembled? Would he not have said to Paul, That is "borrowed," for that was the belief of all intelligent Romans. (See Gibbon, fifteenth chapter, and Pliny, book 7, chap. 56.)

I understand that the Almighty would not have done justice to his creatures if he had not made it understood that "Vengeance is mine, and I will repay, saith the Lord"; so that wicked men who escape from justice in this life should understand that they cannot escape in the "judgment to come." "For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father, with his angels, and then he shall reward every man according to his works." If a wicked man is to know nothing after he dies the death common to all men, there is no propriety or common sense in saying he is rewarded when Christ comes in the glory of his Father.

Again. As a proof that men are not alive when they are cast into hell, some quote Luke 12: 5,—"But I will forewarn you whom ye shall fear; fear him which after he hath killed hath power to cast into hell." After who has killed? Jesus, or he that can kill the body and hath no more that he can do? The corresponding text in Matt. 10: 28 reads, "Fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul (or life); but rather fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell." According to Matthew, the body goes alive into gehenna, which proves a resurrection of the body; so that it can be made alive to receive its awful doom. The idea of casting a dead body into hell as a punishment is ridiculous in the extreme.

Again. It is said that the apostles nowhere say that God will raise the unjust. God did not tell Abraham that he would raise him from the dead, but he made certain promises to him which could not be fulfilled in this life, and through those promises he knew that God would raise him from the dead. The same when God appeared to Moses in the bush and told him that he was the "God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob." Moses knew that God was not the God of the dead, and that they must be raised from the dead, that the words of God might be true.

We see it is not necessary to say in so many words that God will raise the unjust to life. Paul did not tell Felix in so many words that God would raise him from the dead, but he told him of a "judgment to come," and that involved his resurrection, and he was agitated in consequence of it.

Again says Paul, Heb. 10: 28, "He that despised Moses' law died without mercy under two or three witnesses; of how much sorer punishment suppose ye shall he be thought worthy who has trodden under foot the Son of God, and has counted the blood of the covenant wherewith he was sanctified an unholy thing, and has done despite unto the Spirit of grace?" "For we know Him that hath said, Vengeance belongeth to me, I will recompense, saith the Lord." "It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God." Men were stoned to death under the law. Do you think it is a "sorer" punishment to die the death common to all men than to be stoned to death? If not, then there must be a sorer punishment in the future for that class surely. This text needs no comment. It cannot be figured away on the old Jews, who are made the pack-horse for all texts that stand in the way of certain ideas which we adopt, but like Balaam's dumb ass the Jew will speak. "Which they themselves allow, that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust."

Again, 2 Pet. 2: 9,—"The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation, and to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished." To get around, or flank this text, it is said that it refers to the Sodomites and Ninevites, which had their day of judgment some time ago; but the twelvth verse sets this all right. "But these as natural brute beasts, made to be taken and destroyed, speak evil of the things that they understand not, and shall utterly perish in their own corruption." This verse teaches that this judgment is still in the future, and their destruction likewise.

In a discussion at the Cooper Institute with Bro. Wendell and others, they were requested over and over again to give some opinion of these texts, but they have never done it. Bro. Wendell promised to do it the next week, and many went expecting to hear him, but he never touched one of them. There are many other texts of the like import.

The evidence I have set forth in these few lines I consider sufficient to show why I have changed my views on this important subject.

THE CHURCH AND THE WORLD; OR, CHRIST AND BELIAL.

"While men slept the enemy came and sowed tares among the wheat and went his way."—MATT. 13: 25.

TESTIMONIALS.

We select a few among many. We could fill volumes; "but in the mouth of two or three witnesses, every word shall be established."

TESTIMONIAL No. 1.—From a devoted Bro. in Christ, at Saratoga Springs, N. Y.

DEAR FRIEND:—Nearly all our churches this winter have been holding fairs, festivals, oyster suppers and the like, in their respective church edifices, for divers religious purposes, and I have been zealously laboring against this custom of desecrating the sanctuary. Knowing you to occupy about the same ground as myself on this question, I ask you, as a friend and brother in Christ, to assist me, if in your power at this time to do so. I hope you may find time soon to write a tract on the evils of this worldly conformity, quoting Scripture, meanwhile, to sustain your position. Should the Lord incline you to this work of love, do not forget to touch tea and strawberry parties, for now the winter campaign is nearly ended, and it will not be many months before the summer festivities will be called for by dressy and "fun loving" brethren and sisters.

I meet with considerable opposition among all orthodox church members, but I have not gone to the right or left of what I consider the path of duty.

Yours for purity and consistency.

TESTIMONIAL No. 2.—"The Golden Rule." The editor of the Golden Rule has raised his voice and cried aloud against the evil under consideration for more than thirty years. He objects to these festivals. 1. Because they are wrong in principle, unscriptural, contrary to gospel purity and sobriety; consequently detrimental to piety. "To the law and the testimony, if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." Isa. 8: 20. 2. On account of the foolish talking and jesting which more or less accompany these scenes of hilarity. Nothing is more contrary to the spirit of godliness than levity. This building up churches, Sabbath Schools and the like on wit and humor is not gospel. This method may succeed for a time, but rest assured by and by God will blow upon it.

"'Tis not for man to trifle. Life is brief,
And sin is here;
Our age is but the falling of a leaf—
A dropping tear.
We have no time to sport away the hours:
All must be earnest in a world like ours."

"For every idle word that men shall speak they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment." "For by thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned."—Matt. 12: 36, 37.

3. They are stumbling blocks to the world.—Sinners are eagle-eyed; they see and know these festivals are gotten up for selfish purposes; that their chief object is money making and not soul saving. Consequently they lose confidence in religious professors, and become more given up to the service of sin and Satan. When worldly men see, as they do see, and must see the crooked walk of very many professing christians, their pride, covetousness, oppression, their love of gain, pleasure and applause, more than their love of God and his cause, their conniving at sins heaven-daring,—why should they desire such a religion? Exhort sinners to faith, repentance and newness of life; they point us directly to these dark spots, beguiling unstable souls, sporting themselves with their own deceivings! They tell us they do not want this kind of religion that has no power in it, no lovely, joyful, transforming, purifying influences.

This is the apology of millions on millions for neglecting their soul's salvation, now on the road to ruin, to the pit of wo. This excuse for living in impenitence, in open rebellion against God, avails them not; they have light enough to convince them of the truth of God, though all men are liars; light enough to convince them of sin, of righteousness, and of a judgment to come, and yet multitudes are stumbling over these "whited sepulchres" into hell! Impenitent sinners, instead of looking to the Bible, to the Lord Jesus Christ for the truth, for the religion of purity and love, as they ought to, and as God commands them to do, they look upon ungodly church members, and judge of religion as they see it embodied in these dry bones, in those having a name to live and are dead, having a form of godliness, but, by wicked works, denying the power thereof! Thus the world is reeling on, like a drunken man, to dark damnation!

Objection 4th. He objects to them because they are stumbling blocks to young converts, the lambs of the flock; one special cause of their backsliding, losing their first love. How can it be otherwise? A fearful woe is pronounced against those who offend or cause God's "little ones" to stumble. (See Matt. 18: 6.)

Objection 5th. They wound the hearts of God's chosen people. The most consistent, consecrated, humble, devoted disciples of Jesus are always grieved at this method of raising money for religious objects. They see and know with sorrow the evil effects on the church and the world. Soul saving is out of the question, so long as these fairs or festivals are on the docket. And when these upheavings are over, the undue excitement for weeks in the preparation of luxuries, fancy articles of little or no value—the late hours, the gluttony, the surfeitings, the foolish talkings and jestings,—who is prepared for prayer, praise, or to labor in a revival, to urge sinners to repentance, temperance and holy living? Samson is shorn of his locks.

What says Paul? "If meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend." "Give none offence, neither to the Jews nor to the Gentiles, nor to the church of God." "Even as I please all men," says Paul, "in all things, not seeking mine own profit, but the profit of many, that they may be saved." "Whether, therefore, ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God."—1 Cor. 10: 31-33.

Objection 6th. The editor of the Golden Rule objects to them on account of their violation of civil law. A secular paper alluding to this religious gambling says: "We are glad to see it announced that the grand jury of Oswego, N. Y., have published a card, notifying managers of fairs and festivals, held by church societies, that the practice of disposing of their goods by lottery is contrary to the statute, and must not be persisted in." Good.

TESTIMONIAL No. 3.—The New York Recorder speaks thus: "Passing by the envies and evil speakings, the unkind recollections, the erroneous ideas of benevolence engendered; they place the church of Christ in a false position before the world. No pecuniary profit can compensate for the injury done by this false position."

TESTIMONIAL No. 4.—From the Earnest Christian:

"Pleasure rules the hour. It is fearful to witness the inroads which worldly pleasure is making upon Christianity. With the avowed design of keeping the young people under the influence of the church, the weekly sociable is instituted, and fun and frolic prevail. To pay the preacher, a donation party is held, and old and young, professor and worldling, devotes the evening to feasting and merriment. Festivals, picnics and excursions, oyster suppers and lotteries are resorted to, for the purpose of replenishing the funds, or reviving the flagging interest—not religious—in the prosperity of the church. We object to one and all of these various expedients to promote the cause of Christ.

1. They are directly contrary to all the examples given us by Christ and the Apostles.

2. They practically educate the people in impiety. Pure religion requires not merely right actions but right feelings. It would seem as if Satan has so contrived it, that the church is systematically trained to perform her most pious acts from selfish motives. The punctuality of the children in the Sabbath school is rewarded by a picnic or festival. The lessons are learned, not that the scholars may be made wise unto salvation, but that they may win a prize, and receive public commendation. Church pride, family pride and personal vanity are strongly appealed to, to swell the contributions for the missionary cause.

Revivals are sometimes sought to be promoted, that the pecuniary burdens of those who sustain the church may be lessened.

3. They seek to unite Christ and Belial. They would join together, in loving harmony, what God has put forever asunder. They obliterate the distinction between the church and the world. Their avowed object is to bring worldlings under the influence of christianity. To accomplish this end, christians spread a banquet, which the veriest libertine can enjoy, and sit down with him, with apparent gratification, to the sumptuous repast. To attempt to lead men, in this way, to "deny themselves, and take up their cross and follow Christ," is as would be the effort to reform a drunkard by giving him wine. Boys are not trained to habits of sobriety by feeding them sugar, saturated with brandy. The appetite thus created, or revived, will soon demand stimulants of a stronger character. As long as theatrical performances are countenanced in the Sabbath school, professing christians will quite likely attend the full grown theatre. If Christ has no concord with Belial, why then this persistent effort to keep up an unhallowed alliance between the children of God and the sons of Belial?

4. They grieve the Spirit of God. Where that dwells, there is solemnity. Many a conviction has been dissipated by the levity prevailing at the social gatherings of the church. Many a hopeful convert has taken the first step towards backsliding, in the donation which followed the revival in which he was converted. You cannot have the Spirit of God and feast and frolic with the world.

5. They practically deny Christ. Has he not said to his true disciples, Lo I am with you always even unto the end of the world? If Christ is with his church, will he not, if his followers are faithful, so assist them that they will not need to go to the world for help? Christ's church is dear to him. He bought it with his own blood. He cares for all its interests, and it grieves him that the church should throw off all dependence upon him, and "go down to Egypt for help." She is his bride; and what would a bridegroom think of his betrothed, if she should, when his aid was freely proffered, go to his enemies for assistance? Look at the spiritual death that prevails, and see how large a share the practices complained of, have had in producing it. See how many ministers—once mighty men of God—have been shorn of their locks, and have lost their power in the lap of this modern Delilah, and are now sightless giants, toiling upon the tread-mill of lifeless ceremonies! See how wide is the departure from apostolic usage; how the young and old are educated to be lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; how Christ is dishonored and denied, and the Holy Spirit grieved!

Never countenance them with your presence. Let not love for your pastor, nor desire for pleasing your brethren, nor dread of singularity induce you to assist in attempting to force Christ into an alliance with the world which he utterly abhors.

"We are living, we are dwelling,
In a grand and awful time.
In an age, on ages telling,
To be living, is sublime!"

SANCTIFICATION.

The prayer which was offered by our Savior for his disciples that they might be sanctified, is answered, sooner or later, to every heir of salvation. There is no such being in existence as an unsanctified saint, though there are without doubt many professing to be such, who are unsanctified. The word saint signifies holy one, and to be holy is to be sanctified by the Holy Spirit.

Entire sanctification can only be obtained by a sincere humiliation, a renunciation of all pride and fleshly lusts, and continual watchfulness and fervent prayer.

The result of sanctification is the placing of the individual in a state of momentary readiness for the judgment. One in this state has the first fruits of the Spirit, love, joy, faith, etc. He is "filled with the Spirit," hence, as says the Word, he "thinketh no evil," he is "dead to sin," and he "CANNOT SIN." This may seem strange to the double-minded man, but as both the Bible and the experience of devout men in all ages testify, it is no more than is required by the God of all grace.

The position occupied by the saint may be compared to that of a certain traveller who stood on a peak of the Himalaya mountains during a thunder storm. The clouds were below him, the topmost of them only dampling his feet, while he remained an undisturbed beholder of the tempest's fury. Clouds which obscure the horizon of the worldly-minded man, are fit opportunities for the saint to rejoice in the enlivening rays of the Sun of Righteousness. Thunder bolts which bring fear to the heart of the sinner, only serve to establish the hopes of the saint. Lightnings which are so many flaming cimeters to the sinner, threatening his destruction, do but strengthen the saint's confidence, and drive him nearer to his Refuge. Glory to God for this soul-exalting religion! Praise the Lord, O, my soul!

Sanctified! how can he be otherwise who duly realizes that in a few more years at the farthest, he must bid a last adieu to this world, and stand in the presence of an all-seeing, all-powerful and impartial Judge? "Holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection."

Christian warrior, beware how you fall asleep in the arms of that modern Delilah—formality. "Abstain from all appearance of evil. And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." A. L. FORRESTER.

GOD'S MERCY TO MAN.

Dear brethren and sisters of the Advent faith, I wrote a letter to you some time ago on the love of God to man; and now I would write a few lines on the subject of the great mercy of God to man. And I must say with the Psalmist, "Praise the Lord; for his mercy endureth forever."

But is God merciful at all times, and under all circumstances, to both saints and sinners? Yes. But, says one, how can that be? In the first place, we must all concede that in all the dealings of God with mankind, there are four great principles by which our Father in heaven is governed; they are justice, mercy, truth and love. With regard to the sinner, justice demands his eternal or second death; for the holy law of God, which is founded in truth, condemns the stubborn sinner to death. "For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."

But hold, says mercy, spare the poor sinner a little longer, and see if we cannot persuade him to take refuge in the great salvation which is provided for him. And now the sweet and plaintive voice of love cries out: What more could I have done than I have already done in my vineyard? I have provided a ransom for the sinner, and the dear son of God has died for his salvation; and the Holy Spirit has been sent to reprove the sinner, and to hold up to his view the [illegible] of a dear Savior.

Now, dear reader, what shall be done to the wilful sinner who turns a deaf ear to all the kind invitations of love and mercy? Shall he be kept alive in endless woe? This would not be an act of mercy, but of cruelty, and cannot be true in relation to the punishment of the sinner in a future state; for the real punishment for sin, after or at the day of judgment, is death; and that death cannot be the first or literal death, which is the same as the righteous pass through, but must be the second death, which is a positive cessation of life, and therefore cannot be a preservation of life in misery; for every place in the Bible that speaks of the punishment of the wicked in a future state, represents it to be death, second death, destruction, to be consumed, to be burned up root and branch; and to be burned up as tares, and as chaff, and to be as though they had not been.

Now when mercy is obliged to give the sinner up to the demands of justice, I think the very cry of mercy is, put the sinner out of his misery as soon as possible, and let him cease to exist, or be as though he had not been. What else could be done with the sinner? Certainly, mercy nor love could consent to have the wretched creature put into heaven, for he would still be miserable there among holy beings; and also, it would be destroying the attribute of justice, which now has full demand on the stubborn sinner; as mercy and love could not save him, God would be merciful in putting the sinner out of existence.

But in the act of putting the sinner out of existence, the attribute of justice must have its full demand on the sinner by punishing him in his final destruction, according to what he hath done here on earth; and hence is brought to view the real necessity of the resurrection of the sinner, as well as the saint. But the beautiful picture of love and mercy is brought to view, in the resurrection to life eternal of that great company who will hear the voice of the Son of God, and come forth, and be clothed with immortality, and enter the kingdom as triumphant conquerors through Christ over death, hell, and the grave; and cry, O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?

Dear brethren and sisters, pray for your unworthy brother, and may the good Lord prepare us for his soon coming and kingdom.

JEPHTHAH AND HIS DAUGHTER.

This most remarkable narrative in the sacred volume, has often been "a stone of stumbling and a rock of offence" to those who critically investigated the Scriptures, not with the earnest desire to know the truth, but with a stubborn determination to find out faults and discrepancies, which should serve as a pretence and a plausible reason for their unbelief. They say, "If this event is true, how could the great Creator accept of a human sacrifice, without rebuking him, at least, who committed so horrible a deed, and this, too, in his name, and in the belief of serving him? It is not true, therefore, that God has ever condescended to speak to, or through any mortal being." Another class of wicked men often draw inferences from this passage, which in many cases became fatal to poor, dispersed and trodden-down Israel. On occasions like that which not many years since occurred in Damascus, and more recently in a city on the shores of the Danube, and in Smyrna, when the unhappy Jews were accused of having murdered christian children, in order to use their blood at the feast of Passover, this passage was alluded to, in order to prove that human sacrifices are a Jewish institution, from times immemorial, though it was, with the exception of this one case, practised secretly.

We do not intend, in writing this article, to defend our brethren according to the flesh, against that horrible and entirely groundless accusation; for every honest Bible reader, though he understands that Jephthah indeed sacrificed his only child as a "whole offering" upon the altar of Jehovah, will rather conclude that this was the only case in the history of Israel, and that the foolish act of one who, from the lowest position of an outcast, rose to the chieftancy of a numerous people, proves not that this inhuman service was a national institution. Again, he—the honest Bible reader—will infer that, though God did not reproach Jephthah for his folly, he did by no means approve of it; but, knowing that the intention of that chieftain was to honor him, he passed it in silence.

Our intention in writing this, is to inform our readers of the fact, that it was by no means a general belief among ancient or modern Hebrew commentators, that Jephthah really sacrificed his daughter as a burnt offering, nor even that he ever intended to do so, when he uttered this vow unto Jehovah. It is surprising that the Talmud, and some later commentators, were of the opinion that Jephthah slaughtered his daughter, and offered her upon the altar of Jehovah. But, if this had been the case, God would not have been silent at that horrible deed, as he had specified the animals which should be offered upon his altar. These men were misled by the letter vav, which in most cases is translated and. The English translators must have been of the same opinion, because they translated the vow of Jephthah as follows: "And Jephthah vowed a vow unto the Lord, and said, If thou shalt without fail deliver the children of Ammon into mine hands, then it shall be, that whatsoever cometh forth of the doors of my house to meet me, when I return in peace from the children of Ammon, shall surely be the Lord's, and I will offer it up for a burnt offering." The Italicized word and in this passage, made the difficulty with translators, because according to this rendering, Jephthah vowed to sacrifice the first object which should come forth from his house to meet him, as a burnt offering. And as it is said afterwards, in verse 39, that "he did to her according to his vow," consequently Jephthah's daughter must have died upon the altar. It escaped their attention, however, that the letter vav signifies often and, and in many cases, or; and the latter is the case in the passage under consideration.

The celebrated commentator, Rabbi David Kimchi, and others of the Spanish Hebrews, as also Rabbi Moses Landau, of Prague, are of opinion that the virgin daughter of Jephthah was not offered upon the altar, as Jephthah's vow was not to that effect; but she was destined to remain a virgin, and to be secluded from all human association, thus devoting her life entirely to the Lord. In short, she was, perhaps, the first nun. The translation of the verse alluded to is, according to these learned Hebrews—and we fully endorse their translation and view of the subject—as follows: "Then it shall be, that whatsoever cometh forth of my house to meet me, when I return in peace from the children of Ammon, shall be the Lord's, or I will offer it up as a burnt offering." The meaning of the whole verse is this: should the object which comes out of his house to meet him, be of such a nature that it is not fit for a sacrifice, it shall be the Lord's, devoted in some way to his service, or, if it is of those kind of animals that are appointed for the altar, he will bring it up as a burnt offering.

The sequel of the history perfectly harmonizes with the latter view. When Jephthah saw his only child coming first to meet him, he felt grieved that he was thus cut off from ever seeing children from his beloved daughter; but she, in perfect resignation, said that she was willing to devote her life to God, according to her father's vow. She requested, however, that before she should be entirely secluded from intercourse with the human race, she should be allowed to live for two months in the solitude of the mountains, with some of her friends, in order to accustom herself to a solitary life. It was granted to her; and, when she returned, it was done unto her according to her father's vow; she was entirely separated from the rest of the human family. She then became a memorial in Israel—not as the common version translates it: "and it was a custom in Israel," because the Hebrew word does not admit the translation and it was, but, and she became. The record concludes with the fact, that four days every year the daughters of Israel went to the daughter of Jephthah, to bewail her solitary life; and, we suppose, at the same time, to console and encourage her. Our readers will perceive that the English translators, in order to give sense to their translation of the preceding verse: "and it became a custom in Israel," were obliged to interpolate in the following verse the word "that," which is not in the original, and which is not necessary according to the correct view of the whole.—Israelite Indeed.

PRAY FOR YOUR PREACHERS.

"The preacher that we had last Sunday did not preach very well."

Why? did not he use good language? did not he tell the truth?

"O! yes, what he said was good enough, but it did not come with any force and power. I really do not know what was the matter with him. I have heard him at other times, and in other places, and he did first rate."

"Did you pray for him before you went to meeting? and at meeting did you lift your heart in prayer to God for his aid at that time?"

"No, I do not know that I did especially; I was watching him to see what he was going to say."

That is the trouble. When a preacher stands up before a congregation, he can and will feel the influence there is in the meeting. If his hearers' (a portion of them at least) hearts are lifted up in prayer to Almighty God, he will feel that he is carried up on their arms of faith, and it will be easy work for him to speak, and easy for you to hear; and he is enabled to bring from the storehouse treasures new and old; and you will be fed, and go away and say, "What a good meeting we have had; how well he did talk." Now you see that the fault was not so much in the preacher as it was in his hearers.

Brethren and sisters, when a preacher comes among you, pray for him; and if he is tinctured with error, or has a hobby to ride, you can keep him right if you pray. Pray often for yourselves, and others around you, and do not forget to pray for the preachers.

THE END.

The world is coming to an end in 1865. Prof. Newmayer of Munich says so. He adds that a comet will run against the earth and absorb it, as one drop of mercury absorbs another. So much for man's calculation; it may nevertheless prove true. No doubt there is something in reserve for this earth, which will result in its destruction at no very distant period of time. God has his agencies, and will take his own time and way. There is a dreadful day coming, according to the apostle Peter,—when the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

ASPIRATIONS.

Father! a weary and a broken heart
Now comes to thee—
To thee for rest;
Oh! do thou comfort and sweet peace impart,
And bid me flee
To thy fond breast.

Why should I hover round the things of time,
That but deceive?
Oh! how the chain
Of earthly baubles doth my heart entwine!
I would believe
Thee mine again.

Yes, mine; to call thee Father—Savior—Friend—
Thy child to be
In hours of shine;
Or when the clouds of grief a storm portend,
To look to thee,
My will resign.

When wilt thou call me from this earth away,
To joys on high?
My weary feet
Shall mark few footsteps on the soften'd clay,
For I draw nigh
Thy judgment-seat.

Great God! a worm to stand before thee there!
Oh shelter me
Beneath thy wing!
When I shall in thy heavenly courts appear,
Sorrow shall be
An unknown thing.

WILL GOD RAISE THE WICKED DEAD TO LIFE?

As I formerly believed that the wicked would not be raised to life, the question is often asked, What are your reasons for changing your views?

To harmonize John 5: 28, 29, I admitted that all would come forth from their graves without life, and that was a resurrection; but that only the righteous would be made alive. After holding that belief for some time, an article from the pen of Bro. Wendell, in the Bible Examiner of May, 1863, convinced me that the act of bringing forth from the grave was not a resurrection. This article was a criticism on "Retribution." It is headed, "Do the dead come forth alive?" He says that "Lazarus came forth dead, and was raised from the dead. Afterward is rendered certain, as it seems to us by the record given by the evangelist in John 12: 17. The coming forth of Lazarus is presented as a distinct thing from his resurrection."

After examining a number of critics on the word resurrection, I became satisfied it meant re-standing. Bush, on the word "anastasis," says, "It is derived from the verb to rise, to rise again, to stand up, bring again, resurgence, resurrection, re-rising, or reviviscence. This is the import of the word—a future existence in a physical sense. A future life, future living again after death." This interpretation agrees with all translators on this subject that I have examined.

God has said in John 5: 28, 29, "All that are in the grave shall hear his voice and shall come forth; they that have done good unto the resurrection of life, and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation." That God would do so simple a thing as to raise men and cause them to stand on their feet without giving them life, and leave them unconscious of the condemnation that awaited them, and cast them dead into gehenna, was more than I could believe. Yet I was unwilling to give up a doctrine so pleasing, as much so as the doctrine of "Universal salvation" is to those that believe all men will be saved. I for the first time began to try to harmonize those texts which seemed to me to teach that there is to be no future life in any sense for the unjust.

John 3: 36 was always the first text in order. "They shall not see life, but the wrath of God abideth on them." After examining other versions of this text, I was convinced that the true idea was given by Wicklif. He translates it, "He that believeth not the Son shall not not see eternal life, but the wrath of God awaiteth him." Other translators give the same idea, or nearly so. This is evidently the true sense of the word, as eternal life is the subject here spoken of.

There was no other text but was easily understood. Yet the question came, "How can the dead be raised unless they have the Spirit of Christ dwelling in them?" This question I soon settled by the words of Jesus in Luke 11: 30–32;—"The queen of the south shall rise up in the judgment with the men of this generation, and condemn them: for she came from the uttermost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon, and behold, a greater than Solomon is here," etc.; read the next verse. Here is a positive declaration that the men that said, "Away with him, away with him," will come up as surely as Christ was raised from the dead after three days.

I know that some claim this was a national affair, but Jesus makes it personal. Some try to make us believe that the Jews as a nation underwent this judgment at the time that Jerusalem was destroyed. They quote Luke 21: 22 as proof. "For these be the days of vengeance, that all things which are written may be fulfilled." I should like to know what kind of a resurrection or "rising up," the Jews had at that time? If I mistake not, it was their death as a nation instead of their resurrection; and if the queen of the south and the Ninevites had their "rising up" at that time, where are they? If God has said that they shall rise, it is our business to believe, and not to ask how he can raise them. At one time Jesus said that he could make stone into the seed of Abraham; surely they had not the Spirit of Christ in them.

The next question, "What does God want to raise the wicked for? It cannot benefit the saved, or those that are destroyed. It makes God a tyrant instead of a God of love." This kind of talk I know from experience has a tendency to work upon the feelings, and oftentimes gets the better of our reason. Suppose I ask this question—"Why do men in this state of things condemn men to death for committing murder?" It certainly cannot affect those that have been murdered, nor benefit those that are to suffer the penalty. Why not say of those that hang men for violating a law [sanctioned by God in the days of Noah], "they are worse than tyrants"? Do not those that talk this way misunderstand the object of the law of God and man? Is not the law intended to be a "terror to evil doers"?

Suppose that a man should enter his neighbor's house and wilfully beat and kill some of the family, and that he being arraigned before the Judge and proved guilty beyond a doubt, and the Judge refuse to carry out the sentence of the law; who would be the tyrant in that case? Would he not be called an unjust judge? And suppose all the judges in the country were of the same stamp; would not all men who valued their lives flee to a government where punishment would be meted out to the lawless?

So you see that the executing of the law is to deter those that are living from doing harm to their fellow creatures. Are not the powers which are ordained of God acting on the same principle that God acts? Is it not for the benefit of his creatures that he has threatened an horrible death to the wicked in a "judgment to come," and not for the purpose of tormenting them like a "tyrant"?

Has God no commands to be obeyed? Paul says God has "commanded all men to repent," because he hath "appointed a day in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained." A command without a penalty for its disobedience would not have any force. Although eternal life is a free gift, yet we are commanded to repent and obey. Paul says (2 Thess. 1: 6–8), "Seeing it is a righteous thing with God to recompense tribulation to them that trouble you; and to you who are troubled, rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ."

We see by this language that it was a "righteous" thing to punish them that troubled the church in Paul's day, and likewise those that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. Why make God unrighteous by saying that after they die the death common to all men, that is the end of them? That is not the doctrine Paul taught Felix. He "reasoned of righteousness, temperance, and a judgment to come." "Felix trembled"! If Paul had told Felix that all the judgment to come was that he should die, and that would be the end of him, would he have trembled? Would he not have said to Paul, That is "borrowed," for that was the belief of all intelligent Romans. (See Gibbon, fifteenth chapter, and Pliny, book 7, chap. 56.)

I understand that the Almighty would not have done justice to his creatures if he had not made it understood that "Vengeance is mine, and I will repay, saith the Lord"; so that wicked men who escape from justice in this life should understand that they cannot escape in the "judgment to come." "For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father, with his angels, and then he shall reward every man according to his works." If a wicked man is to know nothing after he dies the death common to all men, there is no propriety or common sense in saying he is rewarded when Christ comes in the glory of his Father.

Again. As a proof that men are not alive when they are cast into hell, some quote Luke 12: 5,—"But I will forewarn you whom ye shall fear; fear him which after he hath killed hath power to cast into hell." After who has killed? Jesus, or he that can kill the body and hath no more that he can do? The corresponding text in Matt. 10: 28 reads, "Fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul (or life); but rather fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell." According to Matthew, the body goes alive into gehenna, which proves a resurrection of the body; so that it can be made alive to receive its awful doom. The idea of casting a dead body into hell as a punishment is ridiculous in the extreme.

Again. It is said that the apostles nowhere say that God will raise the unjust. God did not tell Abraham that he would raise him from the dead, but he made certain promises to him which could not be fulfilled in this life, and through those promises he knew that God would raise him from the dead. The same when God appeared to Moses in the bush and told him that he was the "God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob." Moses knew that God was not the God of the dead, and that they must be raised from the dead, that the words of God might be true.

We see it is not necessary to say in so many words that God will raise the unjust to life. Paul did not tell Felix in so many words that God would raise him from the dead, but he told him of a "judgment to come," and that involved his resurrection, and he was agitated in consequence of it.

Again says Paul, Heb. 10: 28, "He that despised Moses' law died without mercy under two or three witnesses; of how much sorer punishment suppose ye shall he be thought worthy who has trodden under foot the Son of God, and has counted the blood of the covenant wherewith he was sanctified an unholy thing, and has done despite unto the Spirit of grace?" "For we know Him that hath said, Vengeance belongeth to me, I will recompense, saith the Lord." "It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God." Men were stoned to death under the law. Do you think it is a "sorer" punishment to die the death common to all men than to be stoned to death? If not, then there must be a sorer punishment in the future for that class surely. This text needs no comment. It cannot be figured away on the old Jews, who are made the pack-horse for all texts that stand in the way of certain ideas which we adopt, but like Balaam's dumb ass the Jew will speak. "Which they themselves allow, that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust."

Again, 2 Pet. 2: 9,—"The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation, and to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished." To get around, or flank this text, it is said that it refers to the Sodomites and Ninevites, which had their day of judgment some time ago; but the twelfth verse sets this all right. "But these as natural brute beasts, made to be taken and destroyed, speak evil of the things that they understand not, and shall utterly perish in their own corruption." This verse teaches that this judgment is still in the future, and their destruction likewise.

In a discussion at the Cooper Institute with Bro. Wendell and others, they were requested over and over again to give some opinion of these texts, but they have never done it. Bro. Wendell promised to do it the next week, and many went expecting to hear him, but he never touched one of them. There are many other texts of the like import.

The evidence I have set forth in these few lines I consider sufficient to show why I have changed my views on this important subject.

TESTIMONIAL No. 1.—From a devoted Bro. in Christ, at Saratoga Springs, N. Y.

DEAR FRIEND:—Nearly all our churches this winter have been holding fairs, festivals, oyster suppers and the like, in their respective church edifices, for divers religious purposes, and I have been zealously laboring against this custom of desecrating the sanctuary. Knowing you to occupy about the same ground as myself on this question, I ask you, as a friend and brother in Christ, to assist me, if in your power at this time to do so. I hope you may find time soon to write a tract on the evils of this worldly conformity, quoting Scripture, meanwhile, to sustain your position. Should the Lord incline you to this work of love, do not forget to touch tea and strawberry parties, for now the winter campaign is nearly ended, and it will not be many months before the summer festivities will be called for by dressy and "fun loving" brethren and sisters.

I meet with considerable opposition among all orthodox church members, but I have not gone to the right or left of what I consider the path of duty.

Yours for purity and consistency.

TESTIMONIAL No. 2.—"The Golden Rule." The editor of the Golden Rule has raised his voice and cried aloud against the evil under consideration for more than thirty years. He objects to these festivals. 1. Because they are wrong in principle, unscriptural, contrary to gospel purity and sobriety; consequently detrimental to piety. "To the law and the testimony, if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." Isa. 8: 20. 2. On account of the foolish talking and jesting which more or less accompany these scenes of hilarity. Nothing is more contrary to the spirit of godliness than levity. This building up churches, Sabbath Schools and the like on wit and humor is not gospel. This method may succeed for a time, but rest assured by and by God will blow upon it.

"'Tis not for man to trifle. Life is brief,
And sin is here;
Our age is but the falling of a leaf—
A dropping tear.
We have no time to sport away the hours:
All must be earnest in a world like ours."

"For every idle word that men shall speak they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment." "For by thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned."—Matt. 12: 36, 37.

3. They are stumbling blocks to the world.—Sinners are eagle-eyed; they see and know these festivals are gotten up for selfish purposes; that their chief object is money making and not soul saving. Consequently they lose confidence in religious professors, and become more given up to the service of sin and Satan. When worldly men see, as they do see, and must see the crooked walk of very many professing christians, their pride, covetousness, oppression, their love of gain, pleasure and applause, more than their love of God and his cause, their conniving at sins heaven-daring,—why should they desire such a religion? Exhort sinners to faith, repentance and newness of life; they point us directly to these dark spots, beguiling unstable souls, sporting themselves with their own deceivings! They tell us they do not want this kind of religion that has no power in it, no lovely, joyful, transforming, purifying influences.

This is the apology of millions on millions for neglecting their soul's salvation, now on the road to ruin, to the pit of wo. This excuse for living in impenitence, in open rebellion against God, avails them not; they have light enough to convince them of the truth of God, though all men are liars; light enough to convince them of sin, of righteousness, and of a judgment to come, and yet multitudes are stumbling over these "whited sepulchres" into hell! Impenitent sinners, instead of looking to the Bible, to the Lord Jesus Christ for the truth, for the religion of purity and love, as they ought to, and as God commands them to do, they look upon ungodly church members, and judge of religion as they see it embodied in these dry bones, in those having a name to live and are dead, having a form of godliness, but, by wicked works, denying the power thereof! Thus the world is reeling on, like a drunken man, to dark damnation!

Objection 4th. He objects to them because they are stumbling blocks to young converts, the lambs of the flock; one special cause of their backsliding, losing their first love. How can it be otherwise? A fearful woe is pronounced against those who offend or cause God's "little ones" to stumble. (See Matt. 18: 6.)

Objection 5th. They wound the hearts of God's chosen people. The most consistent, consecrated, humble, devoted disciples of Jesus are always grieved at this method of raising money for religious objects. They see and know with sorrow the evil effects on the church and the world. Soul saving is out of the question, so long as these fairs or festivals are on the docket. And when these upheavings are over, the undue excitement for weeks in the preparation of luxuries, fancy articles of little or no value—the late hours, the gluttony, the surfeitings, the foolish talkings and jestings,—who is prepared for prayer, praise, or to labor in a revival, to urge sinners to repentance, temperance and holy living? Samson is shorn of his locks.

What says Paul? "If meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend." "Give none offence, neither to the Jews nor to the Gentiles, nor to the church of God." "Even as I please all men," says Paul, "in all things, not seeking mine own profit, but the profit of many, that they may be saved." "Whether, therefore, ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God."—1 Cor. 10: 31–33.

Objection 6th. The editor of the Golden Rule objects to them on account of their violation of civil law. A secular paper alluding to this religious gambling says: "We are glad to see it announced that the grand jury of Oswego, N. Y., have published a card, notifying managers of fairs and festivals, held by church societies, that the practice of disposing of their goods by lottery is contrary to the statute, and must not be persisted in." Good.

TESTIMONIAL No. 3.—The New York Recorder speaks thus: "Passing by the envies and evil speakings, the unkind recollections, the erroneous ideas of benevolence engendered; they place the church of Christ in a false position before the world. No pecuniary profit can compensate for the injury done by this false position."

TESTIMONIAL No. 4.—From the Earnest Christian:

"Pleasure rules the hour. It is fearful to witness the inroads which worldly pleasure is making upon Christianity. With the avowed design of keeping the young people under the influence of the church, the weekly sociable is instituted, and fun and frolic prevail. To pay the preacher, a donation party is held, and old and young, professor and worldling, devotes the evening to feasting and merriment. Festivals, picnics and excursions, oyster suppers and lotteries are resorted to, for the purpose of replenishing the funds, or reviving the flagging interest—not religious—in the prosperity of the church. We object to one and all of these various expedients to promote the cause of Christ.

1. They are directly contrary to all the examples given us by Christ and the Apostles.

2. They practically educate the people in impiety. Pure religion requires not merely right actions but right feelings. It would seem as if Satan has so contrived it, that the church is systematically trained to perform her most pious acts from selfish motives. The punctuality of the children in the Sabbath school is rewarded by a picnic or festival. The lessons are learned, not that the scholars may be made wise unto salvation, but that they may win a prize, and receive public commendation. Church pride, family pride and personal vanity are strongly appealed to, to swell the contributions for the missionary cause.

Revivals are sometimes sought to be promoted, that the pecuniary burdens of those who sustain the church may be lessened.

3. They seek to unite Christ and Belial. They would join together, in loving harmony, what God has put forever asunder. They obliterate the distinction between the church and the world. Their avowed object is to bring worldlings under the influence of christianity. To accomplish this end, christians spread a banquet, which the veriest libertine can enjoy, and sit down with him, with apparent gratification, to the sumptuous repast. To attempt to lead men, in this way, to "deny themselves, and take up their cross and follow Christ," is as would be the effort to reform a drunkard by giving him wine. Boys are not trained to habits of sobriety by feeding them sugar, saturated with brandy. The appetite thus created, or revived, will soon demand stimulants of a stronger character. As long as theatrical performances are countenanced in the Sabbath school, professing christians will quite likely attend the full grown theatre. If Christ has no concord with Belial, why then this persistent effort to keep up an unhallowed alliance between the children of God and the sons of Belial?

4. They grieve the Spirit of God. Where that dwells, there is solemnity. Many a conviction has been dissipated by the levity prevailing at the social gatherings of the church. Many a hopeful convert has taken the first step towards backsliding, in the donation which followed the revival in which he was converted. You cannot have the Spirit of God and feast and frolic with the world.

5. They practically deny Christ. Has he not said to his true disciples, Lo I am with you always even unto the end of the world? If Christ is with his church, will he not, if his followers are faithful, so assist them that they will not need to go to the world for help? Christ's church is dear to him. He bought it with his own blood. He cares for all its interests, and it grieves him that the church should throw off all dependence upon him, and "go down to Egypt for help." She is his bride; and what would a bridegroom think of his betrothed, if she should, when his aid was freely proffered, go to his enemies for assistance? Look at the spiritual death that prevails, and see how large a share the practices complained of, have had in producing it. See how many ministers—once mighty men of God—have been shorn of their locks, and have lost their power in the lap of this modern Delilah, and are now sightless giants, toiling upon the tread-mill of lifeless ceremonies! See how wide is the departure from apostolic usage; how the young and old are educated to be lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; how Christ is dishonored and denied, and the Holy Spirit grieved!

Never countenance them with your presence. Let not love for your pastor, nor desire for pleasing your brethren, nor dread of singularity induce you to assist in attempting to force Christ into an alliance with the world which he utterly abhors.

"We are living, we are dwelling,
In a grand and awful time.
In an age, on ages telling,
To be living, is sublime!"

SANCTIFICATION.

The prayer which was offered by our Savior for his disciples that they might be sanctified, is answered, sooner or later, to every heir of salvation. There is no such being in existence as an unsanctified saint, though there are without doubt many professing to be such, who are unsanctified. The word saint signifies holy one, and to be holy is to be sanctified by the Holy Spirit.

Entire sanctification can only be obtained by a sincere humiliation, a renunciation of all pride and fleshly lusts, and continual watchfulness and fervent prayer.

The result of sanctification is the placing of the individual in a state of momentary readiness for the judgment. One in this state has the first fruits of the Spirit, love, joy, faith, etc. He is "filled with the Spirit," hence, as says the Word, he "thinketh no evil," he is "dead to sin," and he "CANNOT SIN." This may seem strange to the double-minded man, but as both the Bible and the experience of devout men in all ages testify, it is no more than is required by the God of all grace.

The position occupied by the saint may be compared to that of a certain traveller who stood on a peak of the Himalaya mountains during a thunder storm. The clouds were below him, the topmost of them only damping his feet, while he remained an undisturbed beholder of the tempest's fury. Clouds which obscure the horizon of the worldly-minded man, are fit opportunities for the saint to rejoice in the enlivening rays of the Sun of Righteousness. Thunder bolts which bring fear to the heart of the sinner, only serve to establish the hopes of the saint. Lightnings which are so many flaming cimeters to the sinner, threatening his destruction, do but strengthen the saint's confidence, and drive him nearer to his Refuge. Glory to God for this soul-exalting religion! Praise the Lord, O, my soul!

Sanctified! how can he be otherwise who duly realizes that in a few more years at the farthest, he must bid a last adieu to this world, and stand in the presence of an all-seeing, all-powerful and impartial Judge? "Holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection."

Christian warrior, beware how you fall asleep in the arms of that modern Delilah—formality. "Abstain from all appearance of evil. And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." A. L. FORRESTER.

GOD'S MERCY TO MAN.

Dear brethren and sisters of the Advent faith, I wrote a letter to you some time ago on the love of God to man; and now I would write a few lines on the subject of the great mercy of God to man. And I must say with the Psalmist, "Praise the Lord; for his mercy endureth forever."

But is God merciful at all times, and under all circumstances, to both saints and sinners? Yes. But, says one, how can that be? In the first place, we must all concede that in all the dealings of God with mankind, there are four great principles by which our Father in heaven is governed; they are justice, mercy, truth and love. With regard to the sinner, justice demands his eternal or second death; for the holy law of God, which is founded in truth, condemns the stubborn sinner to death. "For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."

But hold, says mercy, spare the poor sinner a little longer, and see if we cannot persuade him to take refuge in the great salvation which is provided for him. And now the sweet and plaintive voice of love, cries out: What more could I have done, than I have already done in my vineyard? I have provided a ransom for the sinner, and the dear son of God has died for his salvation; and the Holy Spirit has been sent to reprove the sinner, and to hold up to him the [illegible] ties of a dear Savior.

Now, dear reader, what shall be done to the wilful sinner who turns a deaf ear to all the kind invitations of love and mercy? Shall he be kept alive in endless woe? This would not be an act of mercy, but of cruelty, and cannot be true in relation to the punishment of the sinner in a future state; for the real punishment for sin, after or at the day of judgment, is death; and that death cannot be the first or literal death, which is the same as the righteous pass through, but must be the second death, which is a positive cessation of life, and therefore cannot be a preservation of life in misery; for every place in the Bible that speaks of the punishment of the wicked in a future state, represents it to be death, second death, destruction, to be consumed, to be burned up root and branch; and to be burned up as tares, and as chaff, and to be as though they had not been.

Now when mercy is obliged to give the sinner up to the demands of justice, I think the very cry of mercy is, put the sinner out of his misery as soon as possible, and let him cease to exist, or be as though he had not been. What else could be done with the sinner? Certainly, mercy nor love could consent to have the wretched creature put into heaven, for he would still be miserable there among holy beings; and also, it would be destroying the attribute of justice, which now has full demand on the stubborn sinner; as mercy and love could not save him, God would be merciful in putting the sinner out of existence.

But in the act of putting the sinner out of existence, the attribute of justice must have its full demand on the sinner by punishing him in his final destruction, according to what he hath done here on earth; and hence is brought to view the real necessity of the resurrection of the sinner, as well as the saint. But the beautiful picture of love and mercy is brought to view, in the resurrection to life eternal of that great company who will hear the voice of the Son of God, and come forth, and be clothed with immortality, and enter the kingdom as triumphant conquerors through Christ over death, hell, and the grave; and cry, O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?

Dear brethren and sisters, pray for your unworthy brother, and may the good Lord prepare us for his soon coming and kingdom.

JEPHTHAH AND HIS DAUGHTER.

This most remarkable narrative in the sacred volume, has often been "a stone of stumbling and a rock of offence" to those who critically investigated the Scriptures, not with the earnest desire to know the truth, but with a stubborn determination to find out faults and discrepancies, which should serve as a pretence and a plausible reason for their unbelief. They say, "If this event is true, how could the great Creator accept of a human sacrifice, without rebuking him, at least, who committed so horrible a deed, and this, too, in his name, and in the belief of serving him? It is not true, therefore, that God has ever condescended to speak to, or through any mortal being." Another class of wicked men often draw inferences from this passage, which in many cases became fatal to poor, dispersed and trodden-down Israel. On occasions like that which not many years since occurred in Damascus, and more recently in a city on the shores of the Danube, and in Smyrna, when the unhappy Jews were accused of having murdered christian children, in order to use their blood at the feast of Passover, this passage was alluded to, in order to prove that human sacrifices are a Jewish institution, from times immemorial, though it was, with the exception of this one case, practised secretly.

We do not intend, in writing this article, to defend our brethren according to the flesh, against that horrible and entirely groundless accusation; for every honest Bible reader, though he understands that Jephthah indeed sacrificed his only child as a "whole offering" upon the altar of Jehovah, will rather conclude that this was the only case in the history of Israel, and that the foolish act of one who, from the lowest position of an outcast, rose to the chieftancy of a numerous people, proves not that this inhuman service was a national institution. Again, he—the honest Bible reader—will infer that, though God did not reproach Jephthah for his folly, he did by no means approve of it; but, knowing that the intention of that chieftain was to honor him, he passed it in silence.

Our intention in writing this, is to inform our readers of the fact, that it was by no means a general belief among ancient or modern Hebrew commentators, that Jephthah really sacrificed his daughter as a burnt offering, nor even that he ever intended to do so, when he uttered this vow unto Jehovah. It is surprising that the Talmud, and some later commentators, were of the opinion that Jephthah slaughtered his daughter, and offered her upon the altar of Jehovah. But, if this had been the case, God would not have been silent at that horrible deed, as he had specified the animals which should be offered upon his altar. These men were misled by the letter vau, which in most cases is translated and. The English translators must have been of the same opinion, because they translated the vow of Jephthah as follows: "And Jephthah vowed a vow unto the Lord, and said, If thou shalt without fail deliver the children of Ammon into mine hands, then it shall be, that whatsoever cometh forth of the doors of my house to meet me, [illegible] from the children of Ammon, shall surely be the Lord's, and I will offer it up for a burnt offering." [illegible]

[illegible] Kimchi, and others of the Spanish Hebrews, as also Rabbi Moses Landau, of Prague, are of opinion that the virgin daughter of Jephtha was not offered upon the altar, as Jephtha's vow was not to that effect; but she was destined to remain a virgin, and to be secluded from all human association, thus devoting her life entirely to the Lord. In short, she was, perhaps, the first nun. The translation of the verse alluded to is, according to [illegible] learned Hebrews—and we fully endorse their translation and view of the subject—as follows: "Then it shall be, that whatsoever cometh forth of my house to meet me, when I return in peace from the children of Ammon, shall be the Lord's, or I will offer it up as a burnt offering." The meaning of the whole verse is this: should the object which comes out of his house to meet him, be of such a nature that it is not fit for a sacrifice, it shall be the Lord's, devoted in some way to his service, or, if it is of those kind of animals that are appointed for the altar, he will bring it up as a burnt offering.

The sequel of the history perfectly harmonizes with the latter view. When Jephthah saw his only child coming first to meet him, he felt grieved that he was thus cut off from ever seeing children from his beloved daughter; but she, in perfect resignation, said that she was willing to devote her life to God, according to her father's vow. She requested, however, that before she should be entirely secluded from intercourse with the human race, she should be allowed to live for two months in the solitude of the mountains, with some of her friends, in order to accustom herself to a solitary life. It was granted to her; and, when she returned, it was done unto her according to her father's vow. She was entirely separated from the rest of the human family. She then became a memorial in Israel—not as the common version translates it: "and it was a custom in Israel," because the Hebrew word does not admit the translation and it was, but, and she became. The record concludes with the fact, that four days every year the daughters of Israel went to the daughter of Jephthah, to bewail her solitary life; and, we suppose, at the same time, to console and encourage her. Our readers will perceive that the English translators, in order to give sense to their translation of the preceding verse: "and it became a custom in Israel," were obliged to interpolate in the following verse the word "that," which is not in the original, and which is not necessary according to the correct view of the whole.—Israelite Indeed.

PRAY FOR YOUR PREACHERS.

"The preacher that we had last Sunday did not preach very well."

Why? did not he use good language? did not he tell the truth?

"O! yes, what he said was good enough, but it did not come with any force and power. I really do not know what was the matter with him. I have heard him at other times, and in other places, and he did first rate."

"Did you pray for him before you went to meeting? and at meeting did you lift your heart in prayer to God for his aid at that time?"

"No, I do not know that I did especially; I was watching him to see what he was going to say."

That is the trouble. When a preacher stands up before a congregation, he can and will feel the influence there is in the meeting. If his hearers' (a portion of them at least) hearts are lifted up in prayer to Almighty God, he will feel that he is carried up in their arms of faith, and it will be easy work for him to speak, and easy for you to hear; and he is enabled to bring from the storehouse treasures new and old; and you will be fed, and go away and say, "What a good meeting we have had; how well he did talk." Now you see that the fault was not so much in the preacher as it was in his hearers.

Brethren and sisters, when a preacher comes among you, pray for him; and if he is tinctured with error, or has a hobby to ride, you can keep him right if you pray. Pray often for yourselves, and others around you, and do not forget to pray for the preachers.

THE END.

The world is coming to an end in 1865. Prof. Newmayer of Munich says so. He adds that a comet will run against the earth, and absorb it, as one drop of mercury absorbs another. So much for man's calculation. It may nevertheless prove true. No doubt there is something in reserve for this earth, which will result in its destruction at no very distant period of time. God has his appointed, and will take his own time and way. There is a dreadful day coming, according to the apostle Peter,—when the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein [illegible]

SPIRITUALISM AND THE WORD OF GOD.

Bro. Grant:—My spirit is stirred within me to say a few words on the truth and power of God against the power of Spiritualism. I feel incompetent to write, but the word of God seems like fire shut up in my bones. I know Spiritualism has a power which those who do not stand upon the truth cannot resist; they do not know what to think of it; they do not know what a dangerous doctrine it is to believe they have an immortal soul that can never die. It drives them into Spiritualism. I should think the churches would receive it faster than they do, when they believe that one dead man knows more than all the living. If they know so much, and are watching over their friends on earth (as I was taught from childhood), they surely can communicate their knowledge to them.

But what says the word of God? "The dead know not any thing." The very day the man dies his thoughts perish; and many such like passages. Now with such texts as these we can overthrow the foundation of Spiritualism. It has no foundation. It is built upon the sand.

I think if we come out firm and decided on the unconscious state of the dead and destruction of the wicked, we can defy Spiritualism. I do not believe a person who is firm on the truth will be tried by it otherwise than to be grieved that so many are duped by it. I believe some will be tried by it, but it will be those who still think they have immortality now; and I am expecting most of them will receive Spiritualism instead of taking the plain word of God; for the Scriptures say though the children of Israel are as the sand of the sea, there will be but a remnant saved; and because they receive not the truth with the love of it, God would send them strong delusion, that they might believe a lie and be damned,—the lie that Satan told in the beginning, now well established; that is, "Ye shall not surely die."

I do not believe it is possible for the elect to be deceived. If we ask God for his Spirit, will he give us Mesmerism? He has promised to give his Holy Spirit to them that ask him, and says his Spirit shall lead us into all truth. I do not believe the Spirit of God will lead into error. The Spirit and Word agree. By this we may know what spirit is wrong and what is right. If they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them.

I thank God he has a people that stand upon his word, the "sure foundation," which Satan with all his host cannot move. Before we can be overcome by Spiritualism we must renounce the Bible and all the dealings of God with us, such as direct answer to prayer in giving his Spirit, and in raising the sick, and the things of God which he has shown unto us, which it is impossible for God's children to do; for they have proved the word of God to be true. The word of God is a lamp to our feet, and a light to our pathway, which shines brighter and brighter even unto the perfect day. Then shall we not see more clearly the subtle snakes of Spiritualism that lie along the pathway, and be better prepared to escape their deadly power? I do believe we shall. Thank God! the light shines all around us. We can see behind and ahead, and at our side. But the serpent's progress will soon come to a sudden stop, and his deceptions can proceed no further. Their folly will be manifest. May God hasten the time, is the prayer of your unworthy sister,

A VISION.

Dear Brethren:—I wish to lay before you a majestic and profitable dream for your meditation.

I had wandered far from the busy scenes of the active city, and sat me down beneath a spreading oak, to feast my mind on the enchanting scenery that surrounded me. With my journey I was faint and weary; but I soon became unconscious of fatigue, for gentle sleep came stealing over me like soft zephyrs that soothe the weary traveler. I dreamed that I stood between two extensive countries stretching out as far as my eyes could reach, on my right hand and on my left. I gazed on them alternately. On my left hand the country appeared to be accessible by many paths, but they seemed to be wide and crooked. On my right the country could be entered by only one path, which I observed was straight and narrow.

I felt I must visit one of these countries, but being equally delighted with the appearance of both, I could not make a choice. The paths on my left were numerous. They seemed to run into themselves, and branch out again in various directions, which made me think that if I turned to the left I should find greater variety than on the right; then I feared I might lose myself in their labyrinths. There being but one path on the right assured me that, should I decide in favor of it, I could easily retrace my steps. But as I debated this matter, I thought that if one path would be pleasant, many would be more so. The choice hung on equipoise! At length I exclaimed—"O for a friend to guide me!"

Scarcely was this uttered when, to my joy and surprise, an elderly lady appeared and thus addressed me:

"My aged friend, I know thy perplexities. Shall I advise thee?" I bowed assent. Said she, "My name is Prudence, my dwelling Wisdom, and my age Experience.

"On thy left hand is the land of Vice. Though it is beautiful in appearance, you should know that all of those paths are infested with venomous reptiles. None can walk therein and escape their poisonous fangs. Should you walk therein you will also find those paths so intricate that, like many others, you will lose yourself in dangerous windings.

"On thy right hand is the land of Virtue. Its one road is narrow, but direct. It is free from harm of every kind, and the further you walk in it the more you will be delighted.

"The difference in the two countries is simply this: the one on your left has numerous paths and many miseries. The one on your right has many joys and no miseries."

The figure or goddess of Prudence then disappeared, and feeling grateful for her information, I tried aloud for her to accept my thanks. The effort broke the chains of slumber, and I no longer dreamed.

My dear friends, this vision has its moral, as you can readily see. Vice and misery are inseparably bound together. Virtue and happiness are always united.

The above vision I have held dear ever since [illegible] made it known to me. It has been my guiding [illegible] I have traveled the blithesome road, as [illegible] as I could, ever since. I have heard many voices crying after me with jeers and scoffs to return back and walk in the more popular fashions of the world; but my joys were so great in this heavenly path that I gave no heed to their calls. God helping me, I intend to follow on in the blithesome road until I shall reach the city of our God, the heavenly Jerusalem, that is kept in store for all the followers of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

Dear brethren, let the world scoff or say what they may, let us walk in that narrow path that leads to everlasting life. Then we shall have not only those joys that thousands and tens of thousands have been seeking for in this life, but those higher joys of fruition that will remain throughout eternity.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Tuesday, Sept. 20, 1864.

NEW VOLUME.

As this is the first number of a new volume, it is a favored time for renewed exertions to extend its circulation. Last year noble efforts were made, and blessed results followed. Many are rejoicing in the truth as the consequence. Could those who have been instrumental in persuading others to take the paper read the many letters we have received from them since they have begun to read it, they would be encouraged to do more another year. They speak of great joy at the light and truth they have seen, and cannot find language to express their gratitude to the Lord and their friends who have aided them, for the benefit already received. Shall we not double our efforts this year, and thus greatly multiply the number of happy souls? We cannot accomplish much good without persevering effort. As the salvation of our friends and neighbors is the most important of all things, our labors should correspond with the value of the object to be gained. Let us not be faint-hearted in so good a cause. Remember, we are at work for the Lord. Who is ready to throw in his whole energies?

Think of the sacrifice our Savior made for us. Shall we claim to be his disciples while we are unwilling to make any for the sake of spreading his truth? Says the Lord, "Gather my saints together unto me; those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice." Again we are told that we are "joint heirs with Christ, if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together." It may be crossing to ask your neighbor to take our paper, and tell him that Jesus is soon coming; but at the same time it may result in his salvation, cause joy among the angels, add much to your own comfort, and bring eternal glory to the Lord, and eternal bliss to your neighbor. When such great results follow so small efforts, let every one do all he can to awaken the people to the importance of the events about to transpire. "The end of all things is at hand."

OUR FREE SUBSCRIBERS.

We want to hear from every one of them within the next two weeks. The larger portion of them have received the paper free for years, and we want to know whether they desire its continuance. If the donations to the Poor Fund should not be sufficient to meet the expenses of papers sent free, we shall be obliged, in accordance with the decision of the C. P. Society, to cut down our free list, so as not to exceed four hundred. We wish, therefore, to hear from all such at once, so that we may know who really need it and wish it continued.

DELINQUENTS.

We have on our books about 400 subscribers who owe from $4.00 to $12.00 each; in the aggregate some $2600. To all these we have sent bills, and from most of them we have not yet heard. We are sorry to say to all such, that we shall be obliged to stop their paper IN TWO WEEKS FROM THIS TIME, unless they are previously heard from. Write to us, then, at once, and send the amount of your indebtedness, or, if not able to pay all, send what you can. We want to hear from every one, and to know whether you wish the paper continued or not.

WAYSIDE INCIDENTS.

Monday morning, Sept. 5th, we parted with the dear saints at Alton Bay campmeeting. Quite a host of them accompanied us to Dover, and a goodly number of them further on the way. We missed their pleasant company, when they were gone, and prized it more highly than when blessed with their society. This is the case with all blessings; we need to be deprived of them for a season to know their worth. On our way, in the cars, and at the depot in Dover, while waiting for the train, we had sweet music from Zion's pilgrims. They did not feel like the children of Israel at Babel's stream, but more as they did when on their way from captivity to Jerusalem. It could be truly said, we were a happy company, and did not feel ashamed to have all the world behold our joy in the Lord. We are glad to see our Brn. and Srs. growing bold in their faith. It is high time to lift up our heads and rejoice, for our redemption is drawing near. Our adversaries are bold, and we should be more so. None should be so firm as the defenders of the truth. Error often gets the victory by putting on a bold front, and thus frightening the weak away from their position. Never be turned by the daring bluster of Satan's emissaries. As Paul says, "Quit you like men, be strong." "Immovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord." "Put on the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil." None but decided men will stand in the coming conflict. Those who try to save a reputation will soon find themselves floating with the popular current downward to perdition. We are rejoiced to find many are opening their eyes to see things as they are, and on the watch for the wiles of the devil. He is laying snares on every side to take the unsuspecting. At this very point of time Jesus has given a special caution to watch. Let us all take heed to his words, if we expect to escape in safety.

After parting with the last of the heavenly pilgrims, we felt lonely, although surrounded by the multitude. We never feel so much alone as when with those who do not love Jesus.

We made a short, pleasant visit of a few hours at Montreal, and found the church there pressing for the prize at the end of the christian journey. Bro. D. T. Taylor preaches to them about half the time. They enjoy his labors very much. New ones are becoming interested in the "blessed hope."

After leaving there, we rode two days and two nights, and arrived in Chicago, where we found a good resting place at the Lloyd House.

While stopping a few minutes at Marshall, one hundred and seven miles west of Detroit, on the Michigan Central R. R., some gentlemen came on board to get the passengers' vote for President. We learned this was done every day, as the different trains arrive, for the purpose of learning how the traveling public feel. Most expressed their preference for Lincoln, some for McClellan, and a few foreigners had no choice. When they came to the writer, and pressed him for an answer, he replied, "the King of kings." This rather confounded the man for a few moments, but he soon rallied himself, as he was in a hurry, and said, "I don't think he will get it this time." In a few minutes the man returned and made his report about two hundred for Lincoln, about fifty for McClellan, four or five no choice, "and one for the King of kings." When passing from Chicago to Madison, Wis., the same thing happened again, and we gave the same answer, when the man inquired with astonishment, "Who is he?" We replied, "He is a special friend of ours."

Men seem almost crazy with political excitement, which is rapidly increasing. We may look for more of it than ever witnessed before, and more corruption among political parties than ever exhibited at any former political campaign.

When at Chicago, we learned from the President of the society of the Spiritualists in that city, that many of their leading lecturers are now traveling through the country making political speeches in favor of Lincoln. They appear to be wide awake in political matters, in order to get as many of their faith into power as possible.

Friday, Sept. 9th, we left Chicago for Madison, a very pleasant city, and capital of the State, arriving about 4 P. M. On our way we passed some of the best looking farms we ever saw in all our travels. The nicest of all were near Janesville, in Wis. We like Wisconsin better than any other of the western states that we have visited. The soil is rich, the climate healthy, and the land sufficiently undulating to give a pleasing variety to the scenery. It makes some of the New England farms look pretty meagre; but the best of the western land must be a poor affair when compared with the free soil of the new earth. An acre of land in the kingdom will be of more value than all the world as it now is, encumbered with the curse, sickness, sorrow, pain, and death. Dear reader, shall we be in that holy, happy land, when the King of kings reigns?

"WATCHMAN, WHAT OF THE NIGHT?"

There has been no period in the history of the christian dispensation when all things indicated the approach of some great event more clearly than at the present hour. So apparent is this, that all classes of observing men are satisfied that a grand crisis in the history of the world is at hand; and the inquiry comes with great force, "Watchman, what of the night?" Watchman, what of the night?" It seems to us that the watchman must be blind, or asleep, who cannot give a ready answer to the inquiry. The signs of the times are so plain, that we can see no room to doubt that the next great event to transpire in the history of our world is the second personal coming of Christ, for the purpose of dashing in pieces the present corrupt systems of government, and establishing his everlasting kingdom, to be enjoyed for ever by all his saints. This should be received with joy by every one; that is, all should be living so as to rejoice at this glad intelligence, as it is the best news that can be proclaimed to our world; for when Jesus comes to reign, all the sleeping saints will rise, and long-parted friends greet each other again where sorrows come no more, and pain and sickness are forever unknown. All the patriarchs, prophets, martyrs, and the holy men of all ages, will then live to die no more. Paradise is restored, peace reigns in all the world, and eternal life is begun, and Jesus is king over all. Every one must see that it should cause all to rejoice when this glorious day is near.

But instead of all being glad over this gospel, or good news, the mass of the people seem to have a real hatred against any evidence that shows the day of the Lord at hand. They would prefer that the Southern rebels should be triumphantly victorious and extend slavery over all our land, rather than have Jesus come. And what is worse, and more astounding than all the rest, a large number of church members have the same feelings; while at the same time they are nominally a portion of "the bride, the Lamb's wife." Who would wish a bride that did not love the appearing of the bridegroom? No point could be clearer than that her affections were upon some other one; hence she would be unworthy of him to whom she had been espoused. It is very evident that a large portion of the professed bride of Christ has "played the harlot," and is loving this world, seeking its honors, wealth and pleasures. For this reason she has no love for the coming of the Bridegroom. On this account she does not inquire, "Watchman, what of the night?" She has no desire to know, and and is glad to believe that nothing can be known on the subject. She is willingly ignorant of this most important truth, while she is all attentive to the forms of godliness, and the fashionable amusements of the day.

But notwithstanding all this, there are some who most anxiously inquire, "Watchman, what of the night?" To this class the faithful watchman is able to say with joyful delight, "The morning cometh." The long, weary night of watching is nearly at an end. There are sure omens of dawning light. No careless sleeping ones can prevent the increasing tokens of breaking day. The scoffers' scorn is vain as the efforts of the dog barking at the rising moon. The light still shines with stronger brightness, and those who love light more than darkness can now make their happy choice.

Events are fast approaching the grand focal point in the prophetic history of this world. We can see no way to avoid this conclusion, only to deny the Bible and the history of the past. The fulfillment of the prophecies that prove the Bible true prove at the same time that the end of the present dispensation is at hand. The evidence is overwhelming; but the people are as unaware of its approach as were the Antediluvians of the coming flood, or the Sodomites of the rain of fire and brimstone. So Jesus said it would be at his second appearing. The rapidly increasing infidelity, and wickedness of every description, must come "in the last days;" and if this sign is all yet in the future, what must be the state of things when the sign is accomplished? But few, even now, are able to stand against the swelling tide of iniquity that is rising about them. Men and women whom we thought firmly rooted and grounded in the principles of christianity, have pulled up their anchor and are floating with the infidel current. This is one of the last tokens of the last days; and only those who adhere to the sure word of prophecy can see the perils of these times.

THE WORK OF SPIRITUALISM.

At the six days' convention in Boston, commencing May 21st, 1864, several resolutions were presented, expressing the purposes of the Spiritualists. It will be seen from the following ones, what they intend to accomplish:—

Resolved, That Spiritualism adopts and republishes all that is true in the religion of the Indian, the Egyptian, the Hebrew, the Mohammedan and the Christian; and demonstrates again and anew the brotherhood of the race, the immortality of the soul, and the actuality of spirit-intercourse.

Resolved, That Science—not "Theology"—interprets the nature and constitution of the mind, the health and beauty of the body, and fittingly translates the wealth of nature, the poverty of the ages, and the best methods for making reform sure, charity practical, and civilization humane.

Resolved, That the future progress and larger usefulness of Spiritualism authorizes the construction of the 'Science of Life,' which will comprehend all known truth, religious, moral, legal, social, domestic and conjugal: and as soon as may be, that its members organize such issues as will bring every department of society up for review and reconstruction."

"Resolved, That modern Spiritualism, as understood and advocated by its representative minds, is the culmination of the Spiritualism of all ages, and with a rational interpretation accepts for their moral and historical value the religious records of Judaism, of primitive christianity, and of every age and nation, without adopting any of them as infallible and final authority.

Resolved, That we recognize in works like those of Colenso, Renan, and other theological agitators, both in Europe and America, and in the improving tone of literature in every department, signs of encouragement in the great cause of ecclesiastical freedom.

Resolved, That individual conscience, under the quickening and illuming influences of angel intelligence, is the only reliable guide of faith and life, and Spiritualists therefore ignore the authority of sects and institutions in seeking to erect arbitrary standards of creed and discipline.

Whereas, The present systems of civil polity, ecclesiasticism, trade, commerce, education, social life, science and philosophy are radically defective in ignoring the elements and principles now being unfolded in the light of the congregated intelligences of the eternal world; therefore,

Resolved, That the time has come, amid the revolutions now agitating our country, when Spiritualists, and all who can co-operate with them, should come into counsel to discuss the best methods of action or organization whereby these elements and principles may be effectually applied and carried out to the reconstruction of church, state and society in every department, and to the adoption of new systems to take the place of the 'old earth and heavens,' destined to pass away.

The foregoing speaks for itself. "The reconstruction of church and state" is a very important part of the work of Spiritualism, and preparations are in active progress for the accomplishment of this object.

Moses Hull.—On our way from Chicago Ill., to Madison, Wis., Sept. 9th, we fell in company with Eld. Hull, with whom we had a pleasant chat about the past and the prospective future. He remarked that he should have been a Seventh-Day Adventist to-day, if he had not seen so many inconsistencies among some with whom he associated. What he saw and heard led him into doubts, which continued to multiply till he has been led to take the step he has. We felt sorry for him, and have some hope that he may yet see the right way and become a humble disciple of Jesus.

He thinks the great and coming conflict will be between Spiritualists and those who hold the views we advocate. So we think.

Correction.—In the Business Agent's Report, in last week's paper, 6th column, 1st page, the figures indicating the Crisis receipts and expenditures for the year, are, by mistake of the types, transposed, each sum occupying the place of the other. They should read as follows:

Total expenditures	$9545.69
Total receipts	9002.15
Excess of expenditures over receipts	$543.54

Also, in the 5th line of the Report, read, "its consequent means of usefulness."

Also, in the "Preamble," page 2, column 2, paragraph 2, for "the question of right is in fact one of property," read, "is in part one of property."

OUR FREE LIST.

"Eight hundred papers sent to free and non-paying subscribers! at an expense to the office of $2000 a year! Is there another paper in the world with so large a free list?"

Do not think there is. There is probably none that does so much for the poor, with such limited means to do with.

"But how can the office sustain such a burden, and live?"

It cannot. It has done it thus far, and done it cheerfully, and would be glad to do it again; but, at present prices, it can do so no longer.

"What is to be done, then?"

The free list must be cut down.

"Is there no way to avoid it?"

Yes. If the churches and brethren every where, who have the Lord's money and the Lord's love for their poorer brethren, will take the burden upon themselves, or at least share the larger portion of it with the office, it may be avoided.

"But will they do it?"

We think they will. There are thousands of hearts and purses among us ever open to the wants of the Lord's poor, and ready to "bear one another's burdens" and so fulfill the law of Christ. They have but to know what needs to be done, and they will do it with their might. The poor need to have the gospel preached to them. Many of these poor are scattered and alone, without the privileges which others enjoy of association with brethren of like precious faith; they have no preacher but the Crisis. Shall want of means compel the office to stop sending the paper to them, or will you, brethren, do what you can to furnish them with it this year, as the office has in years past. It is blessed to give,—more blessed than to receive. This office is proof of that. The Lord has prospered it abundantly for its liberality to the poor. He will you. Try it. What you give to the poor you lend to the Lord, and He will see that you get paid back with interest.

A WORD ABOUT MY BOOKS.

To those who have subscribed for my Life Sketch, I would say be patient with me. Your money is safe; and I am hoping, if time continues, they will be published sometime, but cannot now say when. Friends have advised me to wait awhile longer, hoping there may be a change soon in our country, when paper and book binding may not be so high. But, if otherwise ordered by Him who doeth all things well, we may hope soon to be borne onward into the time of trouble such as never was, out of which we shall be delivered if our names are written in the book of life. So you will please excuse your Sister Abigail for the present, and patiently wait for the Lord.

Correspondence.

From Bro. O. R. Fassett.

Dear brethren and sisters of like precious faith, among whom I have preached the Kingdom of God:

I have been called in the providence of God to a new field of labor in the Lord's vineyard. It has been the order of the great Head of the church that I should labor for souls in different sections, and like my divine Master to "preach the kingdom of God to other cities also." This has not been of my own choosing, as some may have supposed: for I have preferred a permanent dwelling place and a quiet home till the Lord come. There has no one thing been more desired by me of a worldly nature than this. And yet it has not pleased the Lord to grant me this desire. If he sees best he may confer it upon me hereafter; if not, I am content to wait the coming of my heavenly home and rest.

I have often thought when I have moved to a State, or city, or town, this is my last move till I take my final one into the kingdom of God, or am called to rest in the quiet grave till the resurrection. I so felt when I went to the State of Maine. I fully determined in my own mind to locate there until the end of my labors; but a mysterious providence so ordered that my companion could not endure the severe changes of the seasons, and was almost constantly ill during our residence there, and just escaped with her life as we removed hurriedly to Massachusetts. Thus I was compelled to relinquish that field of usefulness where a wide and effectual door seemed to invite my continued labors, and where brethren in all parts of the State desired my presence as their State missionary.

And when I removed to Boston two years ago, to again take the pastoral charge of the Hudson St. church, I said to my wife, This is the last move I shall make. If I do not remain as pastor of the church, I will leave you in the city among your brethren and sisters and friends, and I will travel abroad and preach the gospel. But after all this resolve, here I am again on the move and settled in the State of New York!

While there are many unpleasant things in moving from place to place, and in parting with brethren and sisters and friends, yet there is also much that is pleasing and desirable. We form an acquaintance with many of God's elect and chosen ones whom we should have never known in this life, and with whom we should have never held sweet counsel together in this world. We have also a far more extended field of labor and influence than had our efforts been more circumscribed and limited; and we have the evidence that we are called to fill with others the mission of the angel (Rev. 14: 6, 7), and the preaching of the revived "gospel of the kingdom" to the world (Matt. 24: 14). These are truly some of the gratifying features of our pilgrim life.

For the last twenty years I have preached the gospel mostly in New England, in several of its cities, villages and towns. I have had the pastoral charge of several of the churches in the principal cities of New England from a period of six months to five years; and have traveled in the meantime extensively as an evangelist in regions beyond.

Happy has been my mission and experience in all these places, although attended with much trial and labor. I would not have this history of my life changed, or blotted out, or not to have occurred, for the world! Were I to choose my lot to a blessed old age (if I must travel as a missionary), I could not alter my course in life for a better. Praise my God for all the way he has led me!

I have found the Savior's promise fulfilled to the letter in my case, whereby I know I am a servant of his. I have found "fathers and mothers, brethren and sisters, children, and lands, with persecution," and therefore I expect in the end to receive "in the world to come eternal life." What a legacy for leaving all and forsaking all to follow Christ in this world! "Praise the Lord, O my soul."

I am now called to the eastern part of the State of New York, and am located at Sandy Hill, N. Y. This is my native State, and where I began my ministerial labors. I first preached the gospel in its western portion.

The church in this place have enjoyed the efficient labors of Eld. Mathewson for a period of five years. He and his devoted wife have done much for this people by their consistent christian course and life. They have gone to Castleton, Vt., where they are now located over the church in that place. The Lord bless them in that new field.

Now, brethren and sisters, I sincerely ask your prayers for me as I commence and continue my labors here in this distant field from you. Remember me often at the throne of grace, as you ask mercy of the Lord Jesus for yourselves. Pray that I may be faithful unto the flock of God, and to my fellow men, and to my own soul, unto the end, and meet you all in the land of immortality and glory when our Redeemer shall come to reign. Amen.

O. R. Fassett.

Sandy Hill, N. Y., Sept. 5th, 1864.

From Bro. D. M. Kinter.

Bro. Grant:—Since last writing to you, I have been laboring considerable in the cause of my Master. There never was a time when I had as many calls to preach as now, and as I am teaching school, and there being no Advent preachers to assist me in this locality, I have quite an interesting time. Last Lord's day, one who had formerly been a Methodist, came forward and confessed Christ, and was "buried with him by baptism into death," and arose to walk in newness of life. Quite a crowd of spectators assembled at the water to witness the solemn scene, where the writer addressed them on the design of baptism. It is to be hoped that much seed was sown in good ground, that will, in due time, bring forth fruit to the glory of God. Upon the whole we had a "refreshing season," and the brethren present were made to rejoice in the hope of the glory soon to be revealed to the saints through the coming of our Lord the Christ.

The Advent doctrine is being much inquired after in this section, and had we some able minister here to help proclaim the glorious truth of the speedy coming of Christ, I believe much good would be accomplished. Men are beginning to see the instability of earthly governments and the uncertainty of peace, and desire to lay hold of something more permanent. We thought a few weeks ago that we were going to have a repetition of the bloody acts of the past, but it is all quiet again.

Those tracts you sent me have been distributed over a considerable extent of territory and the demand is still great. I believe they are doing a mighty work, and I enclose you a small amount for another lot, and desire you to send liberally. I have a large field here to operate in alone, and if I cannot have any of the preaching brethren to help me I desire to do what I can in the way of tract preaching as well as by my own feeble efforts. I have severed myself entirely from the political world, as will be seen by the following, which I presented in person:

"To the President of the Kirksville U. L.: Sir,—I hereby tender my resignation as V. P. of the Kirksville U. L., praying the acceptance of the same, and also to withdraw as a member of the League; and for the satisfaction of my friends would submit the following reasons for so doing; viz.:

1st. I believe it a duty I owe to my God as a minister of the gospel to separate myself from every thing unclean, and to come out from the world and to be separated therefrom.

2nd. All political parties are more or less corrupt and composed of corrupt men and office-seekers, and are therefore unclean and cannot receive the support of God's people.

3rd. Believing that the time of the second advent is close at hand and that Christ will not receive those identified with this world, I desire to be separated therefrom.

4th. I believe it will increase my facilities for doing good, and as I have no desire for worldly honors, I do desire to be accepted of God.

5th. Having become confirmed in the faith that no christian can consistently "bear arms," and under any circumstances engage in bloodshed, I wish to place myself in that position before the world and to be free from any obligations to render to Cæsar what God has forbidden.

6th. The people of God are "strangers and pilgrims on the earth," and are under no obligations to support, or to assist in administering, the governments of this present evil world until the time comes for the saints to possess the kingdom.

7th. I believe it the duty of every christian to rebuke sin, whether in Church or State, party or sect, and to withdraw from every one that walketh disorderly.

I submit these, Mr. President, as my reasons in chief for withdrawing from this League and from the political arena; and let men attribute my motives to what they may, it is but a little matter to me with what judgment men judge me. My political career is this day and for ever closed, and my conscience eased of what has for some time been a grievous burden. Henceforth I shall labor only for the good of humanity and the cause of my Master, and though men disapprove he applauds.

I expect to be persecuted, and let it come. I expect to be made the laughing-stock and byword of politicians, but God forgive them. A clear and approving conscience, and a pure heart before God the Father, is, to me, worth more than the false praises and treacherous smiles of men—men who would sell their birthright, yea more, their hopes of eternal life, for a petty office. From all such God deliver me.

And now in conclusion allow me to say that as my fellow-men you have my kindest wishes and feelings, and let others do and say what they may, I trust that hereafter, God being my helper, you will find my walk and conversation in accordance with that religion which I profess, and of which I am proud, and I hope always to meet you as a friend, but never as a politician; and my heart's desire and prayer to God is, that you, and not only you, but all my fellow-men may embrace that same religion, and that we may all be members of that holy brotherhood which shall meet where nothing that defileth can enter.

Respectfully Submitted,

D. M. Kinter."

May not some brother in like circumstances who reads this be constrained to "go and do likewise"? Brethren and Sisters, pray for me, that I may continue faithful to the end, and meet you, whom I love, though I have not seen, at the coming of our Lord. Yours, in hope of the speedy coming of Christ,

D. M. Kinter.

Kirksville, Mo., Aug. 17th.

From Bro. B. Spaulding.

Bro. Grant:—I want to say to the Brethren through the World's Crisis, that I have been very sick, but God has rebuked the disease, and I am able to sit up half the time and write a little. I have felt much as Hezekiah did, and the language of my prayer has been, O Lord, let me live to praise thee and declare thy truth. Death cannot praise thee, they which go down to the grave cannot celebrate thee, or declare thy truth. No. The living, the living, he shall praise thee, as I do to-day. I do not desire to live to enjoy the pleasures, honors or riches of this world. Durable riches and righteousness, honors that come from God, and pleasures arising from doing duty, is what I want to live for. I do not consider death as a friend, but as an enemy; the last enemy that will be destroyed. It will yet be destroyed. I do not consider death the gate of endless joy; but the gate to the land of silence and darkness. I know Jesus has the keys of the grave, and when he comes he will unlock that dark prison-house, and let its victims go free. Then will they sing, O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?

My appointments have passed, and it has been as great a disappointment to me as to any. I had anticipated much joy in this tour. And now, brethren, pray for me. I am very weak, and have some unfavorable symptoms about me, showing the machinery of Nature is not in its proper state. Yet I believe God is able to raise me up, and I believe in the prayer of faith saving the sick. I have been impressed for months back that I was doing up my last work. Perhaps it will prove so. I would like to live and do a little more in the cause, if it were the will of God. I hear the Macedonian cry from every quarter, Come over and help us! and I would gladly do it; nothing but strength is wanted.

I look over my past life, and see much to humble me, see much time run to waste, because of depression and discouragement. But it has not been wholly lost on me; it has kept me humble, taught me my dependence, prepared me to counsel and comfort the many I find in the same unhappy state of mind.

It has been my lot ever since 1842 to be a traveling pioneer in the back country, and among the highways and hedges, among the poor and neglected, where few would go; and I have traveled over a large extent of country, visiting especially the poor families, and have generally been received with great kindness and hospitality. I have sat at the humble tables of the poor, spread without a cloth, and with broken-handled knives and forks, and iron spoons, and broken tea dishes and plates, sitting on boxes, trunks and stools, and blocks of wood, for chairs were minus, and I never felt more like giving thanks than under such circumstances. My heart would go out in gratitude. The poor love to have me come. Their children enjoy my visits. They give me all the privileges to give exhortation and pray, and to counsel, instruct and enlighten the minds of their children, and there are generally a good many of these "poor man's blessings." The children remember me in after years, and when they see me coming run in before me shouting, "Mother! Mother! Bro. Spaulding is coming!" They bring forward their little books I gave them, and expect more. They tell the stories I told them, and expect me to tell them more.

It affords me pleasure that I have been able to do a little. Oh! for strength to do more. But at sixty-four years of age, with the infirmities of a man of seventy, what can I expect? Nothing but the power of God can strengthen me for the work. Let me say again, Pray for me. The prayer of faith can work wonders.

Now, brethren, while you are in health, while the Spirit strives, while Jesus is Mediator, while the Spirit and Bride are saying, Come, exercise your powers for God, and cease not to work while the day lasts. There are many who are well qualified to enter the work. They want a little more grace, boldness and faithfulness, and they would be a Boanerges in the cause. Your Brother in the gospel, B. SPAULDING.

Chelmsford, Mass.

From Sr. S. P. Green.

Bro. and Srs. in Christ:—The Crisis, our dear family paper, is a welcome visitor to us; hope its weekly visits will be granted while time lasts. My lot is cast where there are no gatherings of the saints, and the "Watchmen" come not. I would say to the preachers, I wish some of you would come to this place and hold a few meetings. I know there is great need of something being done. Pure religion is at a very low ebb. The tide of sin and misery runs very high. Ah! how swift and bold does the current of SPIRITUALISM run through this part of the world! This "doctrine of the devil" is progressing at a rapid rate. The youth especially, are exposed to its deception.

Every christian ought to awake, arise, and come out boldly on the Lord's side, "put on the whole armor of God," and "stand up for Jesus," instead of the hushed, silent, mental prayer (if praying is thought of at all). Let our children, our friends and neighbors behold our good works and be led to glorify our Father which is in Heaven. Let us look into the volume of Inspiration. It will teach us how to walk daily and hourly. We must be humble, meek and quiet, "patient in tribulation." We are as mariners on the ocean. Never let us cease to labor till we gain the harbor on the other shore. And now that we are in view of the City, let all our thoughts, words and actions be imbued with the Spirit of Christ.

Remember me and my family in your prayers before the "mercy seat". I fear we are not sheltered from the storm of God's wrath, that is to be poured upon the impenitent at the last great day. May something be done in the name of Christ our Redeemer, for poor, precious souls in this place. I cannot give them up, to remain in their present state till the day of grace is over. There are some that my soul yearns over in an especial manner. I wait with anxiety to hear from some of God's servants, who are giving his creatures "meat in due season."

SOPHRONIA P. GREENE.

Plymouth, Vt.

From Bro. J. E. Ainsworth.

BRO. GRANT:—For a long time I have felt that I wanted to write out a few thoughts that have borne with some weight upon my mind. As I weekly peruse the spicy epistles of your paper, and the accounts given of the Lord's working in some places, I wish I could be present with the brethren. Once it was so in this place, when we numbered from twenty-five to thirty. The servants of the Lord came among us, and we enjoyed the preaching of the gospel of the kingdom. It is not so now. The enemy has been among us. Some have been lain away in their quiet resting places, whilst others have left the place, and thus the number has dwindled down perhaps to less than one tenth, and those that are left appear to be strangers to each other.

Now to cut my letter short, I would inquire, Where are those servants that used to labor in word and doctrine among us? Is there not a Luther, a Wilson, a Henry, or some one that would like to dig among the rubbish and get out a little gold? For I do think there may be a little that has not entirely lost its lustre. My house is open and free for a scouring place, but could not promise that their pockets would be very much lined with the shining stuff. Furthermore, I would say if there is any one that would like to visit Brimfield, let him insert it in the Crisis. "In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thy hand; for thou knowest not which shall prosper, this or that." Yours hoping and praying for deliverance,

Brimfield, Mass. JOHN E. AINSWORTH.

From Bro. P. A. Smith.

BRO. GRANT:—I have just returned for one week's labor in a new field, where the whole people almost without a dissenting voice are interested in hearing on the "gospel of the kingdom"; a sight which I believe makes angels rejoice, for it does my poor heart. I have the Baptist meeting-house, and the last evening I was there they unanimously expressed a wish that in two weeks I should return and go into a regular investigation of the whole matter. I expect to have a glorious time, if I have a right to expect from what I heard and saw. In fact, it is an exception to any place I ever preached in in twenty years. Pray for me, that the Lord may fill me with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven to proclaim his word. P. A. SMITH.

From Bro. C. H. Sweet.

BRO. AND SRS.:—It is with a heart filled with gratitude to God for the numerous blessings which he has bestowed upon me, that I write you these few lines. Although the dread hand of disease is laid upon me, and I feel myself slowly wasting away beneath its icy touch, yet I am blest; for when the hand of affliction is laid upon us, it tends to wean us from the world and bring us into closer communion with God. We can then more fully realize our entire dependence upon him, and form a better estimate of our own weakness.

I have received many letters from the brethren and sisters during the past few weeks, and your kind and brotherly exhortations and encouragements contained therein are faithfully appreciated. Keep praying for me, that I may be dead to sin, awake to duty, and finally be made a participator with you in the eternal joys of our Lord. Yours looking for the speedy termination of Gentile rule,

Natick, R. I. C. H. SWEET.

Obituaries.

DR. GEO. PIERCE.

It has become my painful duty to record the death of my husband, Dr. George Pierce. He died suddenly at his residence, Lowell, Mass., Aug. 20th, aged sixty-eight years.

In early life he felt called of God to the work of the ministry, and labored several years among the Christian Baptists in that capacity. He embraced the coming of Christ in the early part of its proclamation, as taught by William Miller and his coadjutors. He was very happy in the belief that Jesus was so soon coming, and with us all was sadly disappointed, yet did not give up his hope, but believed, as all consistent Adventists do, that our Savior must be very near. Those that knew him best will bear me witness he was naturally humane, generous and kind, but for the last few years of his life he suffered from partial derangement of mind. I feel satisfied now that for much at least he was not accountable.

Two days before he died he appeared much more calm, and I began to hope with trembling that the shadows would be altogether swept from his mind, and I should yet be happy with him. He talked much about Jennie, our only child, who died nearly one year since. The night but one before he died a good sister stopped with us. In the morning he requested me to read. I read the forty-eighth Psalm. After making remarks on a number of verses, which showed his mind was very clear and collected, he prayed very earnestly, so that we all wept together. At four o'clock next morning he was attacked with hemorrhage of the bowels, lived only eight hours in great distress until one hour before his death, when he closed his eyes and breathed his life away without a struggle or a groan.

Thus husband and child are sleeping in the grave, but I expect they will soon come up in the morning of the resurrection, all glorious, to die no more. Yours in that "blessed hope," but in deep affliction.

J. W. CLARK.

Died, in Kennebunk, May 27th, 1864, Jacob W. Clark, of Alfred, Me., aged twenty-seven years.

Jacob was an intelligent, thoughtful young man, although he did not give his heart to God till a few weeks before his death, when he regretted that long before he had not been Jesus' disciple. He did not expect death would so soon terminate his mortal career, and while confined to his room (with scirrhus, which was the cause of his death), would frequently speak of recovering to serve the Lord the remnant of his days; but death had marked him for his victim, and despite all the efforts of human skill through the valley of death he must go; yet, thank God, he went not down to the grave without hope, and soon will a stronger than death come to release him from the cold lap of earth, where he now pillows his head. He leaves behind a weeping widow, parents, brothers and sisters, to mourn his loss. May the blessing of God rest on the mourning friends, and their affections be fully set on things above, and not on things on the earth. W. H. MITCHELL.

HELLEN ESTENA GILLESPIE.

Died in Hartford, Ct., Sept. 2d, of whooping cough, Hellen E., daughter of George and Rachel W. Gillespie, aged four weeks.

Not even sweet innocence is exempt from the pains of disease and the pangs of death; but we anticipate beholding our darling babe in the kingdom of God, glowing with immortality.

> Our darling babe has gone
> To slumber in the tomb,
> But when our Lord returns,
> She will in beauty bloom.

G. & R. W. GILLESPIE.

DAVID LEIGHTON.

Died at Ossipee, N. H., Aug. 24th, 1864, Mr. David Leighton, aged twenty-four years and six months.

The subject of this notice never made a public profession of religion, but was a young man of rare moral character. He lived beloved and died lamented. He leaves an aged father and mother, and one sister to mourn the loss of a dutiful son. Sermon by the writer. N. HARTSHORN.

MARK PIERSON.

Died in Central Village, Coventry, R. I., Sept. 6th, of dysentery, Mark, youngest child of John and Harriet Pierson, aged one year and ten months.

> "This life is as a vapor thin,
> Soon vanishing away;
> The brightest and the fairest seem
> To bloom but to decay."

WM. S. DEVEREUX.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Liverpool 3d, Queenstown 4th.

The Paris correspondent of the London Standard writing on the evening of the 1st inst., says: "The report of the Emperor's indisposition is not devoid of foundation. His Majesty was cupped before he left for Chalons. Letters from the camp say he followed the maneuvers of the sham fight in a carriage, mounting his horse only toward the close of the proceedings."

SWITZERLAND.

The excitement continues at Geneva, and the Federal Council has sent a third battalion of troops to the scene. Arrests continue to be made, including M. Fontanie, late a State Councillor.

AUSTRIA.

A Vienna journal announces that Austria intends forming ten new infantry regiments immediately after the conclusion of peace.

It is asserted that active negotiations are going on between Paris and Turin for the evacuation of Rome.

SYRIA.

There have been serious disturbances in Syria. Armed bands in the mountains have stopped intercourse between Alexandrette and the interior.

DOMESTIC.

Near Berryville, Sept. 14. This morning I sent Gen. Getty's division of the 6th Corps with two brigades of cavalry to the crossing of Summit Point and Winchester road, over the Opequan creek. Rhodes', Rawson's, Gordon's and Wharton's divisions were found on the west bank.

At the same time Gens. Wilson and McIntosh's brigades of cavalry dashed up the Winchester pike and drove the rebel cavalry at a run, came in contact with Kershaw's division, charged it and captured the 8th South Carolina regiment—sixteen officers and 145 men—its battle flag and Col. Henegan, commanding a brigade, with the loss of only two men killed and three wounded. Great credit is due Wilson and McIntosh, and the 3d New Jersey and 2d Ohio regiment. The charge was a gallant one. A portion of the 2d Massachusetts, Reserve Brigade, made a charge on the right of the line and captured an officer and eleven men of Gordon's division of infantry.

Our loss in the reconnoissance was very light.

(Signed) P. H. SHERIDAN, Major General.

New York, Sept. 14. Charleston (S. C.) papers of the 1st inst. mention an explosion of a mammoth Yankee torpedo near the south-west angle of Fort Sumter. It exploded too far from the fort to do any material damage, although it shook the structure heavily.

The rebel powder works at Augusta, Ga., exploded lately, destroying thirty thousand pounds of powder and killing nine operatives.

New York, Sept. 15. A gentleman who left Richmond on the 5th informs the Herald that the condition of the rebels in that city must certainly be distressing, owing to the scarcity of provisions. He also says water communication via James river is unobstructed, except by a single line of torpedoes opposite Drury's Bluff, and a couple of iron-clads, heavily armed. The whole rebel army is less than 200,000, including guerrillas, and Lee has under his direction about 75,000 of that number. The ranks are filled up with old men sixty years of age, and boys of fifteen, and the army is too feeble either to attack Grant or to hold together much longer.

New York, Sept. 15. Texas advices of the 21st ult. state that an order has been issued by Kirby Smith to enroll all male negroes for army service.

A Shreveport correspondent says Polignac's and Walker's divisions crossed the Mississippi and are said to have gone to Mobile.

A destructive fire occurred at Galveston on the 16th. Brownsville is reported almost entirely deserted. The Federals have fortified Brazos Santiago and will probably remain there, close the port and then blockade again.

New York, Sept. 15. Elias Smith, the correspondent of the Tribune at Atlanta, states that Gen. Sherman has ordered that all families, whose male representatives are in the rebel service, or who have gone South, shall also go South; also all citizens not connected with the army, who have not a permit from Gen. Thomas himself, shall go North at once. All persons failing to comply will be imprisoned. No person on any pretext will be allowed to go nearer Atlanta than Chattanooga.

Gen. Sherman's army fell back from Jonesboro' to Atlanta, and is disposed so as to command all the approaches.

New York, Sept. 15. The Herald's Mobile Bay correspondent, writing on the 4th inst., says the sunken rebel iron-clad Baltic still effectually blockades the main channel across Dog Liver Bar, but the double turreted monitor Winnebago has found a passage through the obstructions to a point where she can drop shell into the city.

The Metacomet, Sebago and Kennebec are also at the same place in line of battle, ready to shell the city at a signal from Admiral Farragut. Mobile is entirely at our mercy and can be leveled with the ground any time. The rebel rams and gunboats are in sight but make no demonstration.

The largest one of the three rebel launches hovering around the Mississippi Sound has been captured.

Gen. Granger's troops have constructed splendid fortifications at Cedar Point and other places, so if Hood's whole army should reinforce Mobile and attack our position, with the assistance of the gunboats we could easily keep them at bay.

An Army of the Potomac correspondent says our pickets and the rebels are only thirty feet apart. The utmost vigilance and ceaseless firing is displayed on both sides.

New York, Sept. 16. The World's correspondent at Gen. Grant's headquarters, 15th inst., says there is every reason to believe that the rebels have in contemplation and are already preparing for the evacuation of Petersburg and retiring their army within the defenses of Richmond.

An officer lately under fire at Charleston brings the report that Fort Sumter is rapidly sinking and the water will soon enter the lower tier of embrasures. It is supposed that our shells have disturbed the foundation, as the fort is built on a thin strata of sand which covers a soft pulpy mass of debris.

It is estimated that at least one-third of the slave element of the South has now been converted into the Federal service, military and civil, and that this element now constitutes nearly one-third of the Federal force employed, directly and indirectly, in the suppression of the rebellion. The colored element in our armies, particularly in the labor department, can hardly be realized outside of the army limits.

Denver, Sept 16. No Indians have been seen on the overland route for weeks. Stages will begin to run over it immediately.

ARKANSAS.—A Little Rock correspondent of the Chicago Tribune represents military affairs in Arkansas as in a very unsatisfactory condition. Gen. Steele's army of 30,000 is doing little or nothing, and the rebels are swarming everywhere. It is unsafe to go outside of any post.

Intelligence from Fort Smith, Ark., apprises us of an unfortunate affair that occurred near Van Buren on the 12th. A mail party of thirty-five men, under Lieut. Anderson of the 6th Kansas, were attacked at the Devil's Pass by three hundred rebels under Col. Adair, the mail captured and ten of our men killed. It is believed that several of them were shot after surrendering, as some are known to have surrendered who were afterward found dead.

A portion of Gen. A. J. Smith's forces from Memphis are making an expedition of great importance, with cavalry, infantry and artillery, into the White River region of Arkansas.

Bursting of Clouds.

A sad disaster recently occurred in Nevada Territory on the eastern slope of the Sierra range of mountains, near the line of California. A party consisting of Mr A. W. Glen, his wife and three children, his father, Mr. P. H. Medley and wife, and Mr. George Weston, left the town of Aurora on the 26th of July, for a trip to Bridgport, where they expected to arrive at 5 P. M., and where a portion of the party were to attend a ball in the evening. They started in a wagon drawn by four horses. The morning was fair and beautiful, but rain commenced falling. At three o'clock the team was traveling up a gorge or gulch in the hills about twelve miles from Aurora. At this moment a cloud burst at the head of the gorge and emptied itself into it, filling it to the depth of fifteen feet almost instantly.

When the party saw the deluge coming, they jumped out of the wagon and attempted to escape, the vehicle being covered delaying them some. Mr. Glen, Senior, succeeded in reaching the side of the hill and clung to some bushes until the torrent passed by, which was in about half an hour, leaving no water in the gulch. Mr. Medley threw his left arm around his wife and supported her until the resistless torrent tore her from his grasp, and her body was afterward found lodged in a tree six feet from the ground. Mr. Glen held up his little girls, five and eight years old, until he was dashed against a mass of rocks and stones, when both were lost and Glen narrowly escaped. Mrs. Glen was the last to leave the wagon. She jumped for the side of the hill, having a child eighteen months old in her arms. Weston, who was at that point, seized her and attempted to drag her up, but her dress giving way she was swept away and drowned with her child. The body of the mother was found near the spot, but the children were swept a mile down below. The impetuous torrent bore along in its course large trees and rocks weighing a ton. The wagon was dashed into small pieces and the four horses killed or drowned.

The locality of this occurrence is from five to seven thousand feet above the level of the sea, and the papers from which this account is condensed express the opinion that the cloud which burst, either came in collision with another cloud or with the top of the hill. At sea, when there is danger of their engulphing a ship, they are burst by means of a cannon. A similar case occurred a year or two since in the coast range of mountains near Los Angelos, California, when two or three persons perished. The historians of that State make frequent mention of clouds bursting. In Wilson's beautiful sketch entitled "The Baptism," in Lights and Shadows of Scottish Life, an occurrence of this kind is noticed, where some brutal soldiery who had come to arrest or murder the Covenanters were swept away.—Journal.

NARROW ESCAPE.—A Chicago correspondent of the Philadelphia Inquirer relates the following thrilling incident as occurring on Lake Michigan:

"The propeller Ontonagon, on her downward passage, while off Beaver Island, broke her shaft, and the huge mass of iron came crushing down through the timbers and stove a large hole through the bottom, through which the water rushed with fearful rapidity. The captain announced to the passengers, of whom there were about one hundred and fifty on board, that the boat would go down in ten minutes. A terrible scene of confusion and despair ensued. A boat was launched; it immediately filled and sunk, being worthless, as too many boats are found to be on such occasions. Another was lowered—the only remaining one—and the women and children put on board, with three men to row and steer it. Those remaining on the propeller having no means of escape quietly awaited coming events, looking around for whatever might buoy them up in the water. The vessel had been headed for the island, and when within about five miles began to surge and sink. She went down to her main deck, when, unexpectedly to all, she struck upon a bar of whose existence no one knew, and there she lay until help came and all the passengers were rescued."

☞ A correspondent of the Richmond Enquirer, in a description of the present condition of Charleston says: "In one of the widest and handsomest thoroughfares, a space just wide enough for the cart wheels is all that can be seen of the paving stones; all else is covered by tall grass and weeds, reminding you of a pathway through an old field in the country."

☞ In 1848, one-eighth of the whole population of England were paupers, and so relieved by Government.

ITEMS.

☞ Jeff. Davis' salary is nominally $25,000 a year; but by the depreciation of the confederate money, it is equal to but $1500; and on this practically he has to live, for the Federals have overtaken and destroyed nearly all his private property.

☞ There lives in Canada an old Dutch woman who received at her marriage from her husband a paper of pins. All of these with the exception of one or two she has preserved for thirty years, using them constantly all the while.

☞ A man died of intemperance in Philadelphia last week, and a post mortem examination revealed the fact that the membrane lining the stomach had been eaten through by the direct action of the poisoned liquor that caused his death.

☞ The rebels are said to be mining our works at Petersburg. A prisoner, recently captured, mentioned two points where they were engaged night and day undermining our works, and that countermining was going on at another place.

☞ Twenty thousand dollars in gold, belonging to the rebel government, was melted by a fire which burned an express car on the Danville road. The Petersburg Express says they have no mint to recoin it.

☞ There is a hospital for the insane of the Army and Navy at Washington, which contains two hundred and fifty persons from the Army and twenty from the Navy.

☞ It is reported that about fifteen thousand men are constantly working on the machinery of the hundred or more new vessels—wooden and iron-clad—now constructing for the Navy Department.

☞ The draft is ordered to commence in all States and districts, where the quota is not filled by volunteers, on Monday, the 19th, and will go on until completed.

☞ A telegram from Petersburg says that in view of the threatened condition of that city, last Tuesday was observed as a day of fasting, humiliation and prayer.

☞ Through rebel sources confirmation is received that four of our gunboats now command Mobile city.

☞ Washington Territory is now in direct telegraphic communication with Washington.

☞ Another iron-clad French frigate, the Magnanime, has been launched at Brest.

☞ The tobacco crop in the Connecticut valley is the largest ever raised.

☞ An American newspaper has been started in Constantinople.

humble tables of the poor, spread without a cloth, and with broken-handled knives and forks, and iron spoons, and broken tea dishes and plates, sitting on boxes, trunks and stools, and blocks of wood, for chairs were minus, and I never felt more like giving thanks than under such circumstances. My heart would go out in gratitude. The poor love to have me come. Their children enjoy my visits. They give me all the privileges to give exhortation and pray, and to counsel, instruct and enlighten the minds of their children, and there are generally a good many of these "poor man's blessings." The children remember me in after years, and when they see me coming run in before me shouting, "Mother! Mother! Bro. Spaulding is coming!" They bring forward their little books I gave them, and expect more. They tell the stories I told them, and expect me to tell them more.

It affords me pleasure that I have been able to do a little. Oh! for strength to do more. But at sixty-four years of age, with the infirmities of a man of seventy, what can I expect? Nothing but the power of God can strengthen me for the work. Let me say again, Pray for me. The prayer of faith can work wonders.

Now, brethren, while you are in health, while the Spirit strives, while Jesus is Mediator, while the Spirit and Bride are saying, Come, exercise your powers for God, and cease not to work while the day lasts. There are many who are well qualified to enter the work. They want a little more grace, boldness and faithfulness, and they would be a Boanerges in the cause. Your Brother in the gospel, B. SPAULDING.

Chelmsford, Mass.

From Sr. S. P. Green.

Brn. and Srs. in Christ:—The Crisis, our dear family paper, is a welcome visitor to us; hope its weekly visits will be granted while time lasts. My lot is cast where there are no gatherings of the saints, and the "Watchmen" come not. I would say to the preachers, I wish some of you would come to this place and hold a few meetings. I know there is great need of something being done. Pure religion is at a very low ebb. The tide of sin and misery runs very high. Ah! how swift and bold does the current of SPIRITUALISM run through this part of the world! This "doctrine of the devil" is progressing at a rapid rate. The youth especially, are exposed to its deception.

Every christian ought to awake, arise, and come out boldly on the Lord's side, "put on the whole armor of God," and "stand up for Jesus," instead of the hushed, silent, mental prayer (if praying is thought of at all). Let our children, our friends and neighbors behold our good works and be led to glorify our Father which is in Heaven. Let us look into the volume of Inspiration. It will teach us how to walk daily and hourly. We must be humble, meek and quiet, "patient in tribulation." We are as mariners on the ocean. Never let us cease to labor till we gain the harbor on the other shore. And now that we are in view of the City, let all our thoughts, words and actions be imbued with the Spirit of Christ.

Remember me and my family in your prayers before the "mercy seat". I fear we are not sheltered from the storm of God's wrath, that is to be poured upon the impenitent at the last great day. May something be done in the name of Christ our Redeemer, for poor, precious souls in this place. I cannot give them up, to remain in their present state till the day of grace is over. There are some that my soul yearns over in an especial manner. I wait with anxiety to hear from some of God's servants, who are giving his creatures "meat in due season."

SOPHRONIA P. GREENE.

Plymouth, Vt.

From Bro. J. E. Ainsworth.

BRO. GRANT:—For a long time I have felt that I wanted to write out a few thoughts that have borne with some weight upon my mind. As I weekly peruse the spicy epistles of your paper, and the accounts given of the Lord's working in some places, I wish I could be present with the brethren. Once it was so in this place, when we numbered from twenty-five to thirty. The servants of the Lord came among us, and we enjoyed the preaching of the gospel of the kingdom. It is not so now. The enemy has been among us. Some have been lain away in their quiet resting places, whilst others have left the place, and thus the number has dwindled down perhaps to less than one tenth, and those that are left appear to be strangers to each other.

Now to cut my letter short, I would inquire, Where are those servants that used to labor in word and doctrine among us? Is there not a Luther, a Wilson, a Henry, or some one that would like to dig among the rubbish and get out a little gold? For I do think there may be a little that has not entirely lost its lustre. My house is open and free for a scouring place, but could not promise that their pockets would be very much lined with the shining stuff. Furthermore, I would say if there is any one that would like to visit Brimfield, let him insert it in the Crisis. "In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thy hand; for thou knowest not which shall prosper, this or that." Yours hoping and praying for deliverance,

Brimfield, Mass. JOHN E. AINSWORTH.

From Bro. P. A. Smith.

BRO. GRANT:—I have just returned for one week's labor in a new field, where the whole people almost without a dissenting voice are interested in hearing on the "gospel of the kingdom"; a sight which I believe makes angels rejoice, for it does my poor heart. I have the Baptist meeting-house, and the last evening I was there they unanimously expressed a wish that in two weeks I should return and go into a regular investigation of the whole matter. I expect to have a glorious time, if I have a right to expect from what I heard and saw. In fact, it is an exception to any place I ever preached in in twenty years. Pray for me, that the Lord may fill me with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven to proclaim his word. P. A. SMITH.

From Bro. C. H. Sweet.

BRN. AND SRS.:—It is with a heart filled with gratitude to God for the numerous blessings which he has bestowed upon me, that I write you these few lines. Although the dread hand of disease is laid upon me, and I feel myself slowly wasting away beneath its icy touch, yet I am blest; for when the hand of affliction is laid upon us, it tends to wean us from the world and bring us into closer communion with God. We can then more fully realize our entire dependence upon him, and form a better estimate of our own weakness.

I have received many letters from the brethren and sisters during the past few weeks, and your kind and brotherly exhortations and encouragements contained therein are faithfully appreciated. Keep praying for me, that I may be dead to sin, awake to duty, and finally be made a participator with you in the eternal joys of our Lord. Yours looking for the speedy termination of Gentile rule,

Natick, R. I. C. H. SWEET.

Obituaries.

DR. GEO. PIERCE.

It has become my painful duty to record the death of my husband, Dr. George Pierce. He died suddenly at his residence, Lowell, Mass., Aug. 20th, aged sixty-eight years.

In early life he felt called of God to the work of the ministry, and labored several years among the Christian Baptists in that capacity. He embraced the coming of Christ in the early part of its proclamation, as taught by William Miller and his coadjutors. He was very happy in the belief that Jesus was so soon coming, and with us all was sadly disappointed, yet did not give up his hope, but believed, as all consistent Adventists do, that our Savior must be very near. Those that knew him best will bear me witness he was naturally humane, generous and kind, but for the last few years of his life he suffered from partial derangement of mind. I feel satisfied now that for much at least he was not accountable.

Two days before he died he appeared much more calm, and I began to hope with trembling that the shadows would be altogether swept from his mind, and I should yet be happy with him. He talked much about Jennie, our only child, who died nearly one year since. The night but one before he died a good sister stopped with us. In the morning he requested me to read. I read the forty-eighth Psalm. After making remarks on a number of verses, which showed his mind was very clear and collected, he prayed very earnestly, so that we all wept together. At four o'clock next morning he was attacked with hemorrhage of the bowels, lived only eight hours in great distress until one hour before his death, when he closed his eyes and breathed his life away without a struggle or a groan.

Thus husband and child are sleeping in the grave, but I expect they will soon come up in the morning of the resurrection, all glorious, to die no more. Yours in that "blessed hope," but in deep affliction.

J. W. CLARK.

Died, in Kennebunk, May 27th, 1864, Jacob W. Clark, of Alfred, Me., aged twenty-seven years.

Jacob was an intelligent, thoughtful young man, although he did not give his heart to God till a few weeks before his death, when he regretted that long before he had not been Jesus' disciple. He did not expect death would so soon terminate his mortal career, and while confined to his room (with scirrhus, which was the cause of his death), would frequently speak of recovering to serve the Lord the remnant of his days, but death had marked him for his victim, and despite all the efforts of human skill through the valley of death he must go; yet, thank God, he went not down to the grave without hope, and soon will a stronger than death come to release him from the cold lap of earth, where he now pillows his head. He leaves behind a weeping widow, parents, brothers and sisters, to mourn his loss. May the blessing of God rest on the mourning friends, and their affections be fully set on things above, and not on things on the earth. W. H. MITCHELL.

HELLEN ESTENA GILLESPIE.

Died in Hartford, Ct., Sept. 2d, of whooping cough, Hellen E., daughter of George and Rachel W. Gillespie, aged four weeks.

Not even sweet innocence is exempt from the pains of disease and the pangs of death; but we anticipate beholding our darling babe in the kingdom of God, glowing with immortality.

Our darling babe has gone
To slumber in the tomb,
But when our Lord returns,
She will in beauty bloom.

DAVID LEIGHTON.

Died at Ossipee, N. H., Aug. 24th, 1864, Mr. David Leighton, aged twenty-four years and six months.

The subject of this notice never made a public profession of religion, but was a young man of rare moral character. He lived beloved and died lamented. He leaves an aged father and mother, and one sister to mourn the loss of a dutiful son. Sermon by the writer. N. HARTSHORN.

MARK PIERSON.

Died in Central Village, Coventry, R. I., Sept. 6th, of dysentery, Mark, youngest child of John and Harriet Pierson, aged one year and ten months.

"This life is as a vapor thin,
Soon vanishing away;
The brightest and the fairest seem
To bloom but to decay."

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Liverpool 3d, Queenstown 4th.

The Paris correspondent of the London Standard writing on the evening of the 1st inst., says: "The report of the Emperor's indisposition is not devoid of foundation. His Majesty was cupped before he left for Chalons. Letters from the camp say he followed the maneuvers of the sham fight in a carriage, mounting his horse only toward the close of the proceedings."

SWITZERLAND.

The excitement continues at Geneva, and the Federal Council has sent a third battalion of troops to the scene. Arrests continue to be made, including M. Fontanie, late a State Councillor.

AUSTRIA.

A Vienna journal announces that Austria intends forming ten new infantry regiments immediately after the conclusion of peace.

It is asserted that active negotiations are going on between Paris and Turin for the evacuation of Rome.

SYRIA.

There have been serious disturbances in Syria. Armed bands in the mountains have stopped intercourse between Alexandrette and the interior.

DOMESTIC.

Near Berryville, Sept. 14. This morning I sent Gen. Getty's division of the 6th Corps with two brigades of cavalry to the crossing of Summit Point and Winchester road, over the Opequan creek. Rhodes', Rawson's, Gordon's and Wharton's divisions were found on the west bank.

At the same time Gens. Wilson and McIntosh's brigades of cavalry dashed up the Winchester pike and drove the rebel cavalry at a run, came in contact with Kershaw's division, charged it and captured the 8th South Carolina regiment—sixteen officers and 145 men—its battle flag and Col. Henegan, commanding a brigade, with the loss of only two men killed and three wounded. Great credit is due Wilson and McIntosh, and the 3d New Jersey and 2d Ohio regiment. The charge was a gallant one. A portion of the 2d Massachusetts, Reserve Brigade, made a charge on the right of the line and captured an officer and eleven men of Gordon's division of infantry.

Our loss in the reconnoissance was very light.

(Signed) P. H. SHERIDAN, Major General.

New York, Sept. 14. Charleston (S. C.) papers of the 1st inst. mention an explosion of a mammoth Yankee torpedo near the south-west angle of Fort Sumter. It exploded too far from the fort to do any material damage, although it shook the structure heavily.

The rebel powder works at Augusta, Ga., exploded lately, destroying thirty thousand pounds of powder and killing nine operatives.

New York, Sept. 15. A gentleman who left Richmond on the 5th informs the Herald that the condition of the rebels in that city must certainly be distressing, owing to the scarcity of provisions. He also says water communication via James river is unobstructed, except by a single line of torpedoes opposite Drury's Bluff, and a couple of iron-clads, heavily armed. The whole rebel army is less than 200,000, including guerrillas, and Lee has under his direction about 75,000 of that number. The ranks are filled up with old men sixty years of age, and boys of fifteen, and the army is too feeble either to attack Grant or to hold together much longer.

New York, Sept. 15. Texas advices of the 21st ult. state that an order has been issued by Kirby Smith to enroll all male negroes for army service.

A Shreveport correspondent says Polignac's and Walker's divisions crossed the Mississippi and are said to have gone to Mobile.

A destructive fire occurred at Galveston on the 16th. Brownsville is reported almost entirely deserted. The Federals have fortified Brazos Santiago and will probably remain there, close the port and then blockade again.
